When the trumpet sounds, if a person doesn't respond and he gets wiped out, it's his own fault. If he does respond, however, he'll save his life.

Ezekiel 33:6, 7 (a)
But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel . . .

At the outset of this section dealing with the coming glory of the kingdom, we see Ezekiel recommissioned. "Son of man," the Lord says, "you're a watchman with the important task of blowing the trumpet and warning the people. If the people don't listen and they die, it's their own fault. But if you don't blow the trumpet and they're carried away captive, I will require their blood at your hand because you didn't sound the warning."

In Acts 20:27, Paul uses this same imagery. "I'm free from the blood of all men because I have not shunned to declare to you the full counsel of God," he declares. Like Ezekiel and Paul, we are watchmen. We can't convert anyone—only the Holy Spirit can do that. But we are responsible to blow the trumpet, to share the message we've been given about the reality of heaven and hell and the beauty of Jesus Christ.

Ezekiel 33:7 (b)
. . . therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me.

Notice that Ezekiel was to hear first and then warn. We are only able to share with others that which we have first received. Of Jesus, Isaiah prophesied, "The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned" (50:4). Jesus was able to give the right word at the right time in the right way because He woke early day by day to receive instruction from His Father. How much more must we.

Ezekiel 33:8–11
When I say unto the wicked, O wicked man, thou shalt surely die; if thou dost not speak to warn the wicked from his way, that wicked man shall die in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at thine hand. Nevertheless, if thou warn the wicked of his way to turn from it; if he do not turn from his way, he shall die in his iniquity; but thou hast delivered thy soul. Therefore, O thou son of man, speak unto the house of Israel; Thus ye speak, saying, If our transgressions and our sins be upon us, and we pine away in them, how should we then live? Say unto them, As I live, saith the Lord GOD, I have no pleasure in the death of the wicked; but that the wicked turn from his way and live: turn ye, turn ye from your evil ways; for why will ye die, O house of Israel?

"I don't have any pleasure in seeing you wiped out," the Lord says. "So turn and live." Here's our glorious Father, a mighty Creator, a superior Being in every sense of the word, pleading with puny man.

Ezekiel 33:12–20
Therefore, thou son of man, say unto the children of thy people, The righteousness of the righteous shall not deliver him in the day of his transgression: as for the wickedness of the wicked, he shall not fall thereby in the day that he turneth from his wickedness; neither shall the righteous be able to live for his righteousness in the day that he sinneth. When I shall say to the righteous, that he shall surely live; if he trust to his own righteousness, and commit iniquity, all his righteousnesses shall not be remem bered; but for his iniquity that he hath committed, he shall die for it. Again, when I say unto the wicked, Thou shalt surely die; if he turn from his sin, and do that which is lawful and right; If the wicked restore the pledge, give again that he had robbed, walk in the statutes of life, without committing iniquity; he shall surely live, he shall not die. None of his sins that he hath committed shall be mentioned unto him: he hath done that which is lawful and right; he shall surely live. Yet the children of thy people say, The way of the Lord is not equal: but as for them, their way is not equal. When the righteous turneth from his righteousness, and committeth iniquity, he shall even die thereby. But if the wicked turn from his wickedness, and do that which is lawful and right, he shall live thereby. Yet ye say, The way of the Lord is not equal. O ye house of Israel, I will judge you every one after his ways.

“Turn and live,” God pleads.

“God’s not fair,” the people respond.

We hear that today. “How can God judge people who haven’t heard the gospel?” the skeptic says. Yet God simply says He will judge every man according to his own ways, that He will be fair.

And that’s exactly what angels say of Him in heaven. “Lord God Almighty, true and righteous are Thy judgments” (Revelation 16:7), they proclaim.

I don’t know how God will judge those who haven’t heard about Him. But I do know how He will judge us—according to the knowledge we have. And we have a lot. We’ve heard the gospel. We’ve had opportunity to learn of Jesus Christ, to encounter Him. The only question for us, is what have we done with what we’ve been given?

Ezekiel 33:21

And it came to pass in the twelfth year of our captivity, in the tenth month, in the fifth day of the month, that one that had escaped out of Jerusalem came unto me, saying, The city is smitten.

Tragically, one finally came to Babylon from Jerusalem, saying, “It’s happening. Destruction is taking place.”

Ezekiel 33:22–25

Now the hand of the LORD was upon me in the evening, afore he that was escaped came; and had opened my mouth, until he came to me in the morning; and my mouth was opened, and I was no more dumb. Then the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, they that inhabit those wastes of the land of Israel speak, saying, Abraham was one, and he inherited the land: but we are many; the land is given us for inheritance. Wherefore say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Ye eat with the blood, and lift up your eyes toward your idols, and shed blood: and shall ye possess the land?

After his final message concerning Jerusalem, Ezekiel was to speak about Jerusalem no more until the city was destroyed (24:27). So when he was told to speak again to Israel, he knew what it meant.

Hearing that Jerusalem had fallen, the people said, "The land was given to Abraham. We're his descendants. Therefore, the land is ours." Like buzzards, they wanted to stake out their territory. They weren't repenting to God. They were reacting in greed.

Ezekiel 33:26–29

Ye stand upon your sword, ye work abomination, and ye defile every one his neighbour's wife: and shall ye possess the land? Say thou thus unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; As I live, surely they that are in the wastes shall fall by the sword, and him that is in the open field will I give to the beasts to be devoured, and they that be in the forts and in the caves shall die of the pestilence. For I will lay the land most desolate, and the pomp of her strength shall cease; and the mountains of Israel shall be desolate, that none shall pass through. Then shall they know that I am the LORD, when I have laid the land most desolate because of all their abominations which they have committed.

Ezekiel was to tell those who thought they were entitled to the land that, because of their sin, they were only entitled to destruction.

Ezekiel 33:30–33

Also, thou son of man, the children of thy people still are talking against thee by the walls and in the doors of the houses, and speak one to another, every one to his brother, saying, Come, I pray you, and hear what is the word that cometh forth from the LORD. And they come unto thee as the people cometh, and they sit before thee as my people, and they hear thy words, but they will not do them: for with their mouth they shew much love, but their heart goeth after their covetousness. And, lo, thou art unto them as a very lovely song of one that hath a pleasant voice, and can play well on an instrument: for they hear thy words, but they do them not. And when this cometh to pass, (lo, it will come,) then shall they know that a prophet hath been among them.

Suddenly, Ezekiel was in demand. Those who had scorned him previously now flocked to him because his prophecies had come to pass.

As ministers, we are to comfort the afflicted. But we are also to afflict the comfortable. Therefore, if everyone speaks well of you, it can indicate that they're hearing your words but not heeding your message. That is why the Lord told Ezekiel not to take his newfound popularity very seriously.

If people reject you, that's okay (Luke 6:26). What you have to watch out for is when everyone speaks well of you because very frequently that means that you're either not delivering the truth or that people are not responding to it. Beware of the desire to want to be liked. If I really love someone, I will care more about his walk with the Lord than about how he views me.

34 Chapter 34 is a denunciation of the shepherds of Israel. Primarily, the shepherds refer to Israel's kings and political leaders. Secondarily, it speaks to any of us who are shepherding people—as pastors, elders, employers, or parents.

Ezekiel 34:1–4

And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, prophesy against the shepherds of Israel, prophesy, and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD unto the shepherds; Woe be to the shepherds of Israel that do feed themselves! should not the shepherds feed the flocks? Ye eat the fat, and ye clothe you with the wool, ye kill them that are fed: but ye feed not the flock. The diseased have ye not strengthened, neither have ye healed that which was sick, neither have ye bound up that which was broken, neither have ye brought again that which was driven away, neither have ye sought that which was lost; but with force and with cruelty have ye ruled them.

In Acts 20:28, we read that Paul said to the elders of the church at Ephesus, "Take heed therefore unto yourselves, and to all the flock, over the which the Holy Ghost hath made you overseers, to feed the church of God, which he hath purchased with his own blood." The overseers of Israel were neither feeding nor caring for her but were instead leading her astray.

Ezekiel 34:5, 6
And they were scattered, because there is no shepherd: and they became meat to all the beasts of the field, when they were scattered. My sheep wandered through all the mountains, and upon every high hill: yea, my flock was scattered upon all the face of the earth, and none did search or seek after them.

When the sheep scattered, they became prey to wolves. This is not surprising, for whenever a sheep is in isolation, he is vulnerable to annihilation. That's why we, as sheep, need each other.

Ezekiel 34:7–10
Therefore, ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD; As I live, saith the Lord GOD, surely because my flock became a prey, and my flock became meat to every beast of the field, because there was no shepherd, neither did my shepherds search for my flock, but the shepherds fed themselves, and fed not my flock; Therefore, O ye shepherds, hear the word of the LORD; Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against the shepherds; and I will require my flock at their hand, and cause them to cease from feeding the flock; neither shall the shepherds feed themselves any more; for I will deliver my flock from their mouth, that they may not be meat for them.

Just as God would hold Ezekiel responsible if he didn't warn the people (33:6, 7), He would hold the leaders of Jerusalem responsible for not caring for them.

Ezekiel 34:11, 12

For thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day.

In contrast to the false and failing shepherds, we see the true and loving Shepherd, Jesus Christ. I love this because we see Jesus going after those who are scattered—not to condemn them but to restore them. Parents, employers, elders, and pastors, this needs to be our heart. We must find those who have wandered off not to come down on them but to encourage, bless, and build them.

In Acts 2:14, we read that, when Peter preached on the Day of Pentecost, the eleven other disciples stood with him. Only a few days earlier, Peter had denied Jesus. He was at rock bottom. Yet, recognizing there was an anointing on Peter's life and that his heart was right with the Lord, the disciples stood behind him.

We must do just that. We must find people others have pushed away or set aside. Jesus Christ, our Shepherd, our Example, gathers those who are scattered not to condemn them but to restore them—and we must do the same.

Ezekiel 34:13–15
And I will bring them out from the people, and gather them from the countries, and will bring them to their own land, and feed them upon the mountains of Israel by the rivers, and in all the inhabited places of the country. I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high mountains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel. I will feed my flock, and I will cause them to lie down, saith the Lord GOD.

"Come to Me," the good Shepherd said, "all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light" (Matthew 11:28–30). Most of the time, the majority of Christians feel like they're not doing enough. Jesus, on the other hand, constantly invites us to lie down in green pastures, to come apart to a desert place, to rest, to enjoy Him.

Ezekiel 34:16–21
I will seek that which was lost, and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick: but I will destroy the fat and the strong; I will feed them with judgment. And as for you, O my flock, thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I judge between cattle and cattle, between the rams and the he goats. Seemeth it a small thing unto you to have eaten up the good pasture, but ye must tread down with your feet the residue of your pastures? and to have drunk of the deep waters, but ye must foul the residue with your feet? And as for my flock, they eat that which ye have trodden with your feet; and they drink that which ye have fouled with your feet. Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD unto them; Behold, I, even I, will judge between the fat cattle and between the lean cattle. Because ye have thrust with side and with shoulder, and pushed all the diseased with your horns, till ye have scattered them abroad;

Having addressed the shepherds, God now addresses the sheep themselves, saying that He would deal with those who, because of their size and strength—or, in human terms, money and position—took advantage of the weaker of their brothers.

Therefore will I save my flock, and they shall no more be a prey; and I will judge between cattle and cattle. And I will set up one shepherd over them, and he shall feed them, even my servant David; he shall feed them, and he shall be their shepherd. And I the LORD will be their God, and my servant David a prince among them; I the LORD have spoken it.

David had been off the scene for many years. Therefore, this speaks of the Son of David, Jesus Christ—the good Shepherd who gives His life for His sheep (John 10:11), the great Shepherd who constantly intercedes for us (Hebrews 13:20), the chief Shepherd who is coming back for us (1 Peter 5:4).

Ezekiel 34:25–31
And I will make with them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing. And the tree of the field shall yield her fruit, and the earth shall yield her increase, and they shall be safe in their land, and shall know that I am the LORD, when I have broken the bands of their yoke, and delivered them out of the hand of those that served themselves of them. And they shall no more be a prey to the heathen, neither shall the beast of the land devour them; but they shall dwell safely, and none shall make them afraid. And I will raise up for them a plant of renown, and they shall be no more consumed with hunger in the land, neither bear the shame of the heathen any more. Thus shall they know that I the LORD their God am with them, and that they, even the house of Israel, are my people, saith the Lord GOD. And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord GOD.

A promise is given to Israel nationally that applies to us spiritually. These people at this time were idolatrous and rebellious. Yet the Lord says "You're My people. I love you. I will set up a Shepherd over you who will tend to you properly."

We've already seen Israel regathered. One day, we'll see them reborn.

35 In chapter 34, we saw the denunciation of the shepherds. Here in chapter 35, we see the doom of Edom. The Edomites were the descendants of Esau who was a pork-eating, soup-sipping sinner. "Jacob have I loved," the Lord declared, "but Esau have I hated" because He knew the path Esau would choose would be one of carnality and rebellion (Romans 9:13).

Ezekiel 35:1, 2
Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against mount Seir, and prophesy against it,

The Edomites settled in an area south of the Dead Sea.

Ezekiel 35:3–5
And say unto it, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, O mount Seir, I am against thee, and I will stretch out mine hand against thee, and I will make thee most desolate. I will lay thy cities waste, and thou shalt be desolate, and thou shalt know that I am the LORD. Because thou hast had a perpetual hatred, and hast shed the blood of the children of Israel by the force of the sword in the time of their calamity, in the time that their iniquity had an end:

"Remember, O LORD," the psalmist cried, "the children of Edom in the day of Jerusalem; who said, Raze it, raze it, even to the foundation thereof" (Psalm 137:7). Obadiah goes on to say that in the day the people of Jerusalem were carried away captive, the people of Edom rejoiced and joined in the plunder of the city (Obadiah 11–14).

Ezekiel 35:6–9
Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will prepare thee unto blood, and blood shall pursue thee: sith thou hast not hated blood, even blood shall pursue thee. Thus will I make mount Seir most desolate, and cut off from it him that passeth out and him that returneth. And I will fill his mountains with his slain men: in thy hills, and in thy valleys, and in all thy rivers, shall they fall that are slain with the sword. I will make thee perpetual desolations, and thy cities shall not return: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

Because the Edomites were a perpetual problem to the people of God, they would be perpetually desolate.

Ezekiel 35:10, 11
Because thou hast said, These two nations and these two countries shall be mine, and we will possess it; whereas the LORD was there: Therefore, as I live, saith the Lord GOD, I will even do according to thine anger, and according to thine envy which thou hast used out of thy hatred against them; and I will make myself known among them, when I have judged thee.

The Edomites thought that when Israel and Judah fell, they could claim the land for themselves. What they failed to figure in to the equation, however, was that although God's people may have been carried away, God was still there.

Ezekiel 35:12–14
And thou shalt know that I am the LORD, and that I have heard all thy blasphemies which thou hast spoken against the mountains of Israel, saying, They are laid desolate, they are given us to consume. Thus with your mouth ye have boasted against me, and have multiplied your words against me: I have heard them. Thus saith the Lord GOD; When the whole earth rejoiceth, I will make thee desolate.

This speaks of the Millennium. When the whole earth is rejoicing, when the trees of the field are clapping their lands, when the mountains are singing, when the lion is lying down by the lamb, Edom won't be around to join the celebration.

Ezekiel 35:15
As thou didst rejoice at the inheritance of the house of Israel, because it was desolate, so will I do unto thee: thou shalt be desolate, O mount Seir, and all Idumea, even all of it: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

Of Israel, the Lord said, "I will bless them that bless thee and curse them that curse thee" (Genesis 12). The Edomites were a curse to the people of Israel. Now they would be cursed themselves.

36 Chapter 36 is a message of comfort to the land of Israel. It says two things: that Israel would return to her land physically and that she would be revived spiritually. God wouldn't do this glorious work because they were worthy but because His name was upon them and He wanted the surrounding nations to see how He dealt with His own.

Ezekiel 36:1 (a)
Also, thou son of man, prophesy unto the mountains of Israel . . .

Although the Babylonians had been able to carry the people of Israel away, the mountains were still standing. Just as Ezekiel was to speak to the mountains, throughout Scripture, we see God speaking from the mountains—from Mount Moriah in Genesis 22, from Mount Sinai in Exodus 20, from Mount Carmel in 1 Kings 18, and from Mount Hermon in Matthew 17. But nowhere did He speak more clearly than He did when He said, "It is finished," on Mount Calvary.

Ezekiel 36:1 (b)–9 (a)
. . . and say, Ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the LORD: Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because the enemy hath said against you, Aha, even the ancient high places are ours in possession: Therefore prophesy and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because they have made you desolate, and swallowed you up on every side, that ye might be a possession unto the residue of the heathen, and ye are taken up in the lips of talkers, and are an infamy of the people: Therefore, ye mountains of Israel, hear the word of the Lord GOD; Thus saith the Lord GOD to the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, to the desolate wastes, and to the cities that are forsaken, which became a prey and derision to the residue of the heathen that are round about; Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Surely in the fire of my jealousy have I spoken against the residue of the heathen, and against all Idumea, which have appointed my land into their possession with the joy of all their heart, with despiteful minds, to cast it out for a prey. Prophesy therefore concerning the land of Israel, and say unto the mountains, and to the hills, to the rivers, and to the valleys, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I have spoken in my jealousy and in my fury, because ye have borne the shame of the heathen: Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; I have lifted up mine hand, Surely the heathen that are about you, they shall bear their shame. But ye, O mountains of Israel, ye shall shoot forth your branches, and yield your fruit to my people of Israel; for they are at hand to come. For, behold, I am for you . . .

"I am for you," God declares. Could there have been any music sweeter to the ears of His people than these words? Maybe, like them, you feel you are held captive, far from where you should be because of sin and rebellion. Take heart, dear brother, God is for you, just as He was for His people—and if God be for you, none can stand against you (Romans 8:31).

Ezekiel 36:9 (b)
. . . and I will turn unto you . . .

Eighteen times in this chapter God says, "I will." That's always the way it is. God does the work. All that's left for His people to do is to respond.

I remember when my daughter, Mary Elizabeth, was about one and a half years old. She came to me with a pink balloon not yet inflated. I blew it up for her until it was about as tall as she was. As I handed it to her, I cautioned her to be careful. With a smile on her face, she grabbed the balloon and toddled off. But she wasn't gone two minutes before she came back, blowing into a pink piece of plastic hanging from her mouth. The balloon had popped. The warning was not heeded. I see the same thing happen to a lot of us. Something blows up. Something pops. The bubble bursts. And what do we attempt to do? We blow and blow in our own strength. We try to put the marriage back together, raise the child, meet the need ourselves. But we get nowhere. Here, the Lord is saying something wonderful to Israel—and to any of us who are aware of a burst bubble, a popped balloon.

Ezekiel 36:9 (c)–11 (a)
. . . and ye shall be tilled and sown: And I will multiply men upon you, all the house of Israel, even all of it: and the cities shall be inhabited, and the wastes shall be builded: And I will multiply upon you man and beast; and they shall increase and bring fruit: and I will settle you after your old estates . . .

After seventy years of rest while the people of Judah were in Babylon, the land would be especially fruitful.

Ezekiel 36:11 (b)
. . . and will do better unto you than at your beginnings: and ye shall know that I am the LORD.

"Most men serve the best wine first, but you have saved the best for last," the governor of the feast said to the bridegroom at Cana (John 2:10). Isn't that always the way of the Lord—to take us from glory to even greater glory? (2 Corinthians 3:18).

Ezekiel 36:12–15
Yea, I will cause men to walk upon you, even my people Israel; and they shall possess thee, and thou shalt be their inheritance, and thou shalt no more henceforth bereave them of men. Thus saith the Lord GOD; Because they say unto you, Thou land devourest up men, and hast bereaved thy nations; Therefore thou shalt devour men no more, neither bereave thy nations any more, saith the Lord GOD. Neither will I cause men to hear in thee the shame of the heathen any more, neither shalt thou bear the reproach of the people any more, neither shalt thou cause thy nations to fall any more, saith the Lord GOD.

By the grace of God, when Israel returned to the land, she would no longer bear the reproach of the people.

Ezekiel 36:16–22
Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt in their own land, they defiled it by their own way and by their doings: their way was before me as the uncleanness of a removed woman. Wherefore I poured my fury upon them for the blood that they had shed upon the land, and for their idols wherewith they had polluted it: And I scattered them among the heathen, and they were dispersed through the countries: according to their way and according to their doings I judged them. And when they entered unto the heathen, whither they went, they profaned my holy name, when they said to them, These are the people of the LORD, and are gone forth out of his land. But I had pity for mine holy name, which the house of Israel had profaned among the heathen, whither they went. Therefore say unto the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; I do not this for your sakes, O house of Israel, but for mine holy name's sake, which ye have profaned among the heathen, whither ye went.

The Lord would return and revive His people not due to any effort on their part. He would do it to remove any doubt in the minds of the people of the surrounding nations that He is the only true God, that He is the One to whom they should turn.

Ezekiel 36:23–28
And I will sanctify my great name, which was profaned among the heathen, which ye have profaned in the midst of them; and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, saith the Lord GOD, when I shall be sanctified in you before their eyes. For I will take you from among the heathen, and gather you out of all countries, and will bring you into your own land. Then will I sprinkle clean water upon you, and ye shall be clean: from all your filthiness, and from all your idols, will I cleanse you. A new heart also will I give you, and a new spirit will I put within you: and I will take away the stony heart out of your flesh, and I will give you an heart of flesh. And I will put my spirit within you, and cause you to walk in my statutes, and ye shall keep my judgments, and do them. And ye shall dwell in the land that I gave to your fathers; and ye shall be my people, and I will be your God.

"I will put my law in their inward parts, and write it in their hearts; and will be their God, and they shall be my people," the Lord declared in Jeremiah 31:33. Here, we see Him making the same glorious statement through Ezekiel.

Ezekiel 36:29–32
I will also save you from all your uncleannesses: and I will call for the corn, and will increase it, and lay no famine upon you. And I will multiply the fruit of the tree, and the increase of the field, that ye shall receive no more reproach of famine among the heathen. Then shall ye remember your own evil ways, and your doings that were not good, and shall lothe yourselves in your own sight for your iniquities and for your abominations. Not for your sakes do I this, saith the Lord GOD, be it known unto you: be ashamed and confounded for your own ways, O house of Israel.

Even as sin destroyed Jerusalem, so it will destroy our own lives, leaving desolation and waste in its wake. But, just as God promised to cleanse Jerusalem, He has promised to cleanse us from all unrighteousness if we confess our sin, if we acknowledge that we are unclean (1 John 1:9).

Ezekiel 36:33–36
Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the day that I shall have cleansed you from all your iniquities I will also cause you to dwell in the cities, and the wastes shall be builded. And the desolate land shall be tilled, whereas it lay desolate in the sight of all that passed by. And they shall say, This land that was desolate is become like the garden of Eden; and the waste and desolate and ruined cities are become fenced, and are inhabited. Then the heathen that are left round about you shall know that I the LORD build the ruined places, and plant that that was desolate: I the LORD have spoken it, and I will do it.

When things looked the worst, the Lord said to His people, "I'm going to regather you from out of the countries in which you've been scattered. I'm going to bless your land. The cities that have been wasted are going to be rebuilt. The land that is unproductive shall be tilled again and shall become so prolific that people will compare it to the Garden of Eden."

Ezekiel 36:37, 38
Thus saith the Lord GOD; I will yet for this be inquired of by the house of Israel, to do it for them; I will increase them with men like a flock. As the holy flock, as the flock of Jerusalem in her solemn feasts; so shall the waste cities be filled with flocks of men: and they shall know that I am the LORD.

The Lord promises to restore and revive, and yet there is a price—but it's a joyous one. "I want you to inquire of Me, to ask that I will do it," He says. "You don't need to impress Me with your spirituality or motivate Me with your intensity. All I ask is that you come to Me and ask." Why does God say this? Because He wants us to partner with Him in what He's doing.

Prayer is the one part we play in this restoration process. Jesus told us to ask, seek, and knock (Matthew 7:7). James declared that we have not simply because we ask not (4:2).

I think of Elisabeth. Week after week, year by year, no doubt she and her husband, Zacharias, prayed for a child. They believed the Lord and claimed the Word in prayer—yet nothing happened. But when Zacharias was an old man, serving in the temple, an angel came to him and told him that his prayer had been heard. And indeed a baby was born to them—one that would grow up to be John the Baptist (Luke 1). But it took time.

"I will rebuild," the Lord says to us today. "I will revive. I will freely give you all things (Romans 8:32). And all I ask of you is, 'Will you be like Elisabeth and Zacharias? Will you pray?' "

37 In chapter 37 we see the continuation of the promise to restore and rebuild Israel, illustrated in a most unforgettable way . . .

Ezekiel 37:1–4
The hand of the LORD was upon me, and carried me out in the spirit of the LORD, and set me down in the midst of the valley which was full of bones, And caused me to pass by them round about: and, behold, there were very many in the open valley; and, lo, they were very dry. And he said unto me, Son of man, can these bones live? And I answered, O Lord GOD, thou knowest. Again he said unto me, Prophesy upon these bones, and say unto them, O ye dry bones, hear the word of the LORD.

After prophesying to the mountains in chapter 36, Ezekiel was told to prophesy to dry bones here in chapter 37 . . .

Ezekiel 37:5–8
Thus saith the Lord GOD unto these bones; Behold, I will cause breath to enter into you, and ye shall live: And I will lay sinews upon you, and will bring up flesh upon you, and cover you with skin, and put breath in you, and ye shall live; and ye shall know that I am the LORD. So I prophesied as I was commanded: and as I prophesied, there was a noise, and behold a shaking, and the bones came together, bone to his bone. And when I beheld, lo, the sinews and the flesh came up upon them, and the skin covered them above: but there was no breath in them.

As Ezekiel prophesied, the bones came together, but there was no breath in them. Although the bones came together, Ezekiel wisely didn't mistake commotion for regeneration. Even today, the flesh can generate activity, but true revival can't take place without the Spirit.

Ezekiel 37:9, 10

Then said he unto me, Prophesy unto the wind, prophesy, son of man, and say to the wind, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live. So I prophesied as he commanded me, and the breath came into them, and they lived, and stood up upon their feet, an exceeding great army.

The Hebrew word, ruach, means "wind," "breath," or "spirit." Thus, Ezekiel said, "Come, Spirit." And, suddenly, the zombie-like creatures stood up and became a great army.

Ezekiel 37:11–14
Then he said unto me, Son of man, these bones are the whole house of Israel: behold, they say, Our bones are dried, and our hope is lost: we are cut off for our parts. Therefore prophesy and say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, O my people, I will open your graves, and cause you to come up out of your graves, and bring you into the land of Israel. And ye shall know that I am the LORD, when I have opened your graves, O my people, and brought you up out of your graves, And shall put my spirit in you, and ye shall live, and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the LORD have spoken it, and performed it, saith the LORD.

Here we see a prophecy concerning what the Lord is going to do with the people of Israel as He brings them back to their land. This happened literally following the days of World War II. You've seen the pictures in history books of the open graves where six million Jews were slaughtered in the Holocaust. But out of that, the Lord began to work. The heart of the world became sympathetic toward the Jews and a homeland was carved out of the Middle East. Spiritually, the Jews remain in a "zombie-like" state because the Spirit has not yet moved in Israel the way He one day will.

When will that happen? After the Rapture of the church.

When the church is taken to heaven, the Holy Spirit will begin to move in Israel in a powerful way and the entire nation shall be saved (Romans 11:26). Oh, what a day that will be!

Maybe you think your family or the people around you are dry bones who will never be able to live. But, as He did to Ezekiel, the Lord would say to you, "Prophesy to them." As often as you can, share a verse with those who seem dead. If you think that seems silly, think of Ezekiel and be glad you don't have to preach to bones! "My Word shall not return unto Me void," the Lord declares (Isaiah 55:11). In other words, it will never fail to make an impact.

Ezekiel 37:15–22

The word of the LORD came again unto me, saying, Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, For Judah, and for the children of Israel his companions: then take another stick, and write upon it, For Joseph, the stick of Ephraim, and for all the house of Israel his companions: And join them one to another into one stick; and they shall become one in thine hand. And when the children of thy people shall speak unto thee, saying, Wilt thou not shew us what thou meanest by these? Say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hand of Ephraim, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand. And the sticks whereon thou writest shall be in thine hand before their eyes. And say unto them, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I will take the children of Israel from among the heathen, whither they be gone, and will gather them on every side, and bring them into their own land: And I will make them one nation in the land upon the mountains of Israel; and one king shall be king to them all: and they shall be no more two nations, neither shall they be divided into two kingdoms any more at all.

The two sticks in the hand of Ezekiel illustrated the unity of Israel and Judah in the hand of God. Upon their release from captivity, no longer would they be at odds with each other, but would stand together in unity.

"Let them be one, Father, even as We are one," Jesus would pray (see John 17:22). Unity is so important in God's economy that Jesus would teach that it is our love for each other that identifies us as His disciples (John 13:35).

Ezekiel 37:23
Neither shall they defile themselves any more with their idols, nor with their detestable things, nor with any of their transgressions: but I will save them out of all their dwellingplaces, wherein they have sinned, and will cleanse them: so shall they be my people, and I will be their God.

Not only would captivity result in unity, but it would put an end to idolatry.

Ezekiel 37:24–26
And David my servant shall be king over them; and they all shall have one shepherd: they shall also walk in my judgments, and observe my statutes, and do them. And they shall dwell in the land that I have given unto Jacob my servant, wherein your fathers have dwelt; and they shall dwell therein, even they, and their children, and their children's children for ever: and my servant David shall be their prince for ever. Moreover I will make a covenant of peace with them; it shall be an everlasting covenant with them: and I will place them, and multiply them, and will set my sanctuary in the midst of them for evermore.

For these scattered sheep, a shepherd-king was ideal. David was such a king. The Son of David—the Good Shepherd and the King of kings—Jesus Christ, will be the King in the Millennium yet to come.

Ezekiel 37:27, 28
My tabernacle also shall be with them: yea, I will be their God, and they shall be my people. And the heathen shall know that I the LORD do sanctify Israel, when my sanctuary shall be in the midst of them for evermore.

"My tabernacle also shall be with them," God declares through Ezekiel.

"The Word was made flesh and dwelt—or literally tabernacled—among us," John declares concerning Jesus (1:14).

The rebuilding and restoring of Israel will climax when God again dwells among His people.

38 Ezekiel was a prophet who not only witnessed tumultuous times as he saw the Babylonians invade Jerusalem and destroy the holy city, but his prophecies sweep far beyond his own tumultuous period into another period called the Tribulation. Ezekiel 36 and 37 speak of the rebirthing of Israel nationally. Ezekiel 40 through 48 speak of the rebirth spiritually. In between the national and spiritual rebirth of Israel, she will be invaded by Russia.

The invasion of Russia into the Middle East is spoken of in chapters 38 and 39 with uncanny accuracy. We'll look at the background, the buildup and finally the battle.

Ezekiel 38:1, 2 (a)
And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Son of man, set thy face against Gog, the land of Magog . . .

The prophecy begins with a word of warning to Gog and Magog. The word, Gog, simply means "ruler." Who is the ruler of the land of Magog? In 500 B.C., Greek historian, Herodotus, identified the land of Magog as that of the Scythians, ancestors of the Russians. Roman historian, Flavius Josephus, who lived shortly after the time of Christ, identified Magog as the land we know today as Russia. Throughout the centuries, scholars have identified Magog as Russia, due north of Israel. Even the Encyclopedia Britannica associates Russia with this land.

Ezekiel 38:2 (b)–3
. . . the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal, and prophesy against him, And say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal:

The prince of Meshech is literally the prince of Rosh, from which we get the word "Russia." Meshech is the ancient name for Moscow; Tubal the ancient name for Tubalsk, both key cities in the history of Russia.

Ezekiel 38:4 (a)
And I will turn thee back, and put hooks into thy jaws . . .

"I will put a hook in your jaw and bring you down to Israel," the Lord declares to Russia. How will He do this? First, through oil. Oil is necessary for any economic power. Second, in the Dead Sea is three trillion dollars' worth of unextracted potash, a chemical used for fertilizer and the making of weapons—two things Russia needs in great supply. Third, we know the Middle East is the place that will control the power point of the world for it is the gateway to three continents: Africa, Asia, and Europe. In A.D. 300, Alexander the Great declared that whoever controls the Middle East will control the world. Napoleon said virtually the same thing as did Adolf Hitler. Add to the above three reasons, the fact that war is historically a unifying factor for any nation and the hook is complete.

Ezekiel 38:4 (b)
. . . and I will bring thee forth, and all thine army, horses and horsemen, all of them clothed with all sorts of armour, even a great company with bucklers and shields, all of them handling swords:

After seeing the background of the coming battle, we see the buildup. Our text tells us that Russia will use horses. While this may be a symbolic reference, it could also be literal as we will see in the following verses.

Ezekiel 38:5
Persia, Ethiopia, and Libya with them; all of them with shield and helmet:

Persia, or Iran, as well as Ethiopia and Libya will march with Russia.

Ezekiel 38:6

Gomer, and all his bands; the house of Togarmah of the north quarters, and all his bands: and many people with thee.

Gomer refers to Eastern Europe, specifically the Germanic peoples. Togarmah refers to modern-day Turkey. Turkey will fall and will march with Russia.

The build-up: Verse 4 says the Russians will use horses. There is only one army in the world today that has a significant cavalry: the Russians. What value would horses be? They would be valuable if there is technology dealing with laser beams that would nullify our sophisticated weapons. It would be significant if the crisis in the Middle East makes oil impossible. It would be significant if the passages in the Middle East, like Petra, are so narrow that a man would only be able to get through on horseback. I don't know if this means horses will literally be used or if it is a symbolic reference. Either way, it's intriguing that Russia has a potent cavalry to this day.

Ezekiel 38:7–9
Be thou prepared, and prepare for thyself, thou, and all thy company that are assembled unto thee, and be thou a guard unto them. After many days thou shalt be visited: in the latter years thou shalt come into the land that is brought back from the sword, and is gathered out of many people, against the mountains of Israel, which have been always waste: but it is brought forth out of the nations, and they shall dwell safely all of them. Thou shalt ascend and come like a storm, thou shalt be like a cloud to cover the land, thou, and all thy bands, and many people with thee.

Even while talking peace, present-day Russia continues to build arms. It is important to note that no nation in history has ever armed herself without utilizing her weapons at some point. According to Ezekiel's prophecy, with her allies in tow, Russia will descend upon Israel like a storm.

Ezekiel 38:10, 11
Thus saith the Lord GOD; It shall also come to pass, that at the same time shall things come into thy mind, and thou shalt think an evil thought: And thou shalt say, I will go up to the land of unwalled villages; I will go to them that are at rest, that dwell safely, all of them dwelling without walls, and having neither bars nor gates,

When will Russia come? When walls and defenses are down. In other words, she will come in a time of peace.

Ezekiel 38:12
To take a spoil, and to take a prey; to turn thine hand upon the desolate places that are now inhabited, and upon the people that are gathered out of the nations, which have gotten cattle and goods, that dwell in the midst of the land.

What is the spoil Russia will take? Oil.

Ezekiel 38:13, 14
Sheba, and Dedan, and the merchants of Tarshish, with all the young lions thereof, shall say unto thee, Art thou come to take a spoil? hast thou gathered thy company to take a prey? to carry away silver and gold, to take away cattle and goods, to take a great spoil? Therefore, son of man, prophesy and say unto Gog, Thus saith the Lord GOD; In that day when my people of Israel dwelleth safely, shalt thou not know it?

Sheba is present-day Saudi Arabia and Dedan is the area of north Yemen. Most conservative Bible scholars believe that the merchants of Tarshish refer to the ancient Phoenician settlements of Tarshish which is present-day England. The English have always been players in Middle East affairs. The young lions could be her offspring, or America.

Ezekiel 38:15, 16
And thou shalt come from thy place out of the north parts, thou, and many people with thee, all of them riding upon horses, a great company, and a mighty army: And thou shalt come up against my people of Israel, as a cloud to cover the land; it shall be in the latter days, and I will bring thee against my land, that the heathen may know me, when I shall be sanctified in thee, O Gog, before their eyes.

As recently as the Korean War, Russia has utilized her cavalry because they were not able to be detected by UN reconnaissance planes flying over the area. Today, in rough, mountainous terrain, the most reliable carriers of troops is still horses. We are told that, because they are within a thousand miles of Israel's border, within twelve hours three and one-half million Russian troops could be on the hills of Israel.

Ezekiel 38:17–20
Thus saith the Lord GOD; Art thou he of whom I have spoken in old time by my servants the prophets of Israel, which prophesied in those days many years that I would bring thee against them? And it shall come to pass at the same time when Gog shall come against the land of Israel, saith the Lord GOD, that my fury shall come up in my face. For in my jealousy and in the fire of my wrath have I spoken, Surely in that day there shall be a great shaking in the land of Israel; So that the fishes of the sea, and the fowls of the heaven, and the beasts of the field, and all creeping things that creep upon the earth, and all the men that are upon the face of the earth, shall shake at my presence, and the mountains shall be thrown down, and the steep places shall fall, and every wall shall fall to the ground.

When Russia invades Israel, the Lord will shake that region. Geologists say there is increased seismic activity in the region because the tectonic plates located in the mountains of Israel are at a very unstable point.

Ezekiel 38:21
And I will call for a sword against him throughout all my mountains, saith the Lord GOD: every man's sword shall be against his brother.

Not only will there be a shaking of the earth, but there will be a shaking of Russia's allies as civil war breaks out among the participants of the invasion. This is not surprising when you consider the myriad of differences represented in this alliance.

Ezekiel 38:22, 23
And I will plead against him with pestilence and with blood; and I will rain upon him, and upon his bands, and upon the many people that are with him, an overflowing rain, and great hailstones, fire, and brimstone. Thus will I magnify myself, and sanctify myself; and I will be known in the eyes of many nations, and they shall know that I am the LORD.

In verse 9, we read that Russia, thinking she is invincible will come like a storm upon Israel. To remind her that she's not, the Lord will unleash a storm upon her.

39 Ezekiel 39:1–8

Therefore, thou son of man, prophesy against Gog, and say, Thus saith the Lord GOD; Behold, I am against thee, O Gog, the chief prince of Meshech and Tubal: And I will turn thee back, and leave but the sixth part of thee, and will cause thee to come up from the north parts, and will bring thee upon the mountains of Israel: And I will smite thy bow out of thy left hand, and will cause thine arrows to fall out of thy right hand. Thou shalt fall upon the mountains of Israel, thou, and all thy bands, and the people that is with thee: I will give thee unto the ravenous birds of every sort, and to the beasts of the field to be devoured. Thou shalt fall upon the open field: for I have spoken it, saith the Lord GOD. And I will send a fire on Magog, and among them that dwell carelessly in the isles: and they shall know that I am the LORD. So will I make my holy name known in the midst of my people Israel; and I will not let them pollute my holy name any more: and the heathen shall know that I am the LORD, the Holy One in Israel. Behold, it is come, and it is done, saith the Lord GOD; this is the day whereof I have spoken.

Here we see the greatest upset in military history. When Russia comes down, the earth shakes, civil war takes place within the invading armies, and five-sixths of the invading army will be destroyed on the mountains of Israel.

> Ezekiel 39:9–16
> And they that dwell in the cities of Israel shall go forth, and shall set on fire and burn the weapons, both the shields and the bucklers, the bows and the arrows, and the handstaves, and the spears, and they shall burn them with fire seven years: So that they shall take no wood out of the field, neither cut down any out of the forests; for they shall burn the weapons with fire: and they shall spoil those that spoiled them, and rob those that robbed them, saith the Lord GOD. And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will give unto Gog a place there of graves in Israel, the valley of the passengers on the east of the sea: and it shall stop the noses of the passengers: and there shall they bury Gog and all his multitude: and they shall call it The valley of Hamon-gog. And seven months shall the house of Israel be burying of them, that they may cleanse the land. Yea, all the people of the land shall bury them; and it shall be to them a renown the day that I shall be glorified, saith the Lord GOD. And they shall sever out men of continual employment, passing through the land to bury with the passengers those that remain upon the face of the earth, to cleanse it: after the end of seven months shall they search. And the passengers that pass through the land, when any seeth a man's bone, then shall he set up a sign by it, till the buriers have buried it in the valley of Hamon-gog. And also the name of the city shall be Hamonah. Thus shall they cleanse the land.

It will take seven months to bury the bodies of the Russian army left behind on the mountains of Israel. But only professional men will bury them. If Israel detonates a neutron bomb, this would make sense because radioactive bodies could not be touched. Zechariah 14 says of the same battle that men's tongues will cleave to the roof of their mouths, that their eyes will melt and run down their cheeks, that their skin will turn black—all indications of heavy radiation.

Ezekiel 39:17–21
And, thou son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; Speak unto every feathered fowl, and to every beast of the field, Assemble yourselves, and come; gather yourselves on every side to my sacrifice that I do sacrifice for you, even a great sacrifice upon the mountains of Israel, that ye may eat flesh, and drink blood. Ye shall eat the flesh of the mighty, and drink the blood of the princes of the earth, of rams, of lambs, and of goats, of bullocks, all of them fatlings of Bashan. And ye shall eat fat till ye be full, and drink blood till ye be drunken, of my sacrifice which I have sacrificed for you. Thus ye shall be filled at my table with horses and chariots, with mighty men, and with all men of war, saith the Lord GOD. And I will set my glory among the heathen, and all the heathen shall see my judgment that I have executed, and my hand that I have laid upon them.

The "feast" spoken of is not for man, but for birds and beasts. In other words, the carnage of the battle will be so great, the carcasses so numerous that "the fowls shall summer upon them, and all the beasts of the earth shall winter upon them" (Isaiah 18:6).

Ezekiel 39:22–28
So the house of Israel shall know that I am the LORD their God from that day and forward. And the heathen shall know that the house of Israel went into captivity for their iniquity: because they trespassed against me, therefore hid I my face from them, and gave them into the hand of their enemies: so fell they all by the sword. According to their uncleanness and according to their transgressions have I done unto them, and hid my face from them. Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; Now will I bring again the captivity of Jacob, and have mercy upon the whole house of Israel, and will be jealous for my holy name; After that they have borne their shame, and all their trespasses whereby they have trespassed against me, when they dwelt safely in their land, and none made them afraid. When I have brought them again from the people, and gathered them out of their enemies' lands, and am sanctified in them in the sight of many nations; Then shall they know that I am the LORD their God, which cause them to be led into captivity among the heathen: but I have gathered them unto their own land, and have left none of them any more there.

By God's incredible victory over Russia and her allies, both Israel and the surrounding nations would know that God's people went into captivity not because their God was unable to protect them, but rather because they chose to rebel against Him and thereby remove themselves from His protection.

Ezekiel 39:29
Neither will I hide my face any more from them: for I have poured out my spirit upon the house of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

When will God pour out His Spirit upon the house of Israel? Romans 11:25 says that Israel will be blind until the fullness of the Gentiles has come. Israel is spiritually blind. But when Russia comes down, when God begins to shake the earth, when the troops are defeated, Israel will realize that God is in heaven and that He is watching over her—and she'll be blind no longer. When is the Spirit of God poured out? When the age of the Gentiles is over—when the church is raptured.

If you're not saved, realize you might be the very one the Lord is waiting for. You might be the final person to complete His church. So do us a favor and don't keep us waiting any longer! Accept Jesus today—and we'll all move on to the glorious age to come.

40 In chapter 40, we come to the millennial age. Once the Tribulation is over—the seven-year period when the world is judged—the Lord will come back to earth and everything will be made right.

The final eight chapters of the Book of Ezekiel deal primarily with the temple that will be built during the Millennium. We see the description of the temple in chapters 40 through 43, worship in the temple in chapters 44 through 46, and the land around the temple in chapters 47 and 48.

Ezekiel 40:1, 2
In the five and twentieth year of our captivity, in the beginning of the year, in the tenth day of the month, in the fourteenth year after that the city was smitten, in the selfsame day the hand of the LORD was upon me, and brought me thither. In the visions of God brought he me into the land of Israel, and set me upon a very high mountain, by which was as the frame of a city on the south.

After Jerusalem fell to the Babylonians, Ezekiel found himself caught up once again and placed on a high mountain where he will have a tremendous vision. It doesn't surprise me that Ezekiel is on a high mountain to receive this vision of the millennial temple because it was on Mount Sinai that Moses received instructions for building the first "temple"—the tabernacle. "Make sure you make all things according to pattern," the Lord told him (Exodus 25:9). And, as he came down from the mountain, Moses did just that.

The year was approximately 1500 B.C. And the portable temple that moved with them as they moved through the wilderness served God's people until about 1000 B.C. At that time, feeling it wasn't right that the Lord should dwell in a tent while he lived in a palace, David decided to build the Lord a glorious temple. But, because he was a warrior, the Lord forbade David to do this, so he gathered the materials and drew the plans but left the actual construction to his son, Solomon. It was this temple that was destroyed by the Babylonians in Ezekiel's day.

In 516 B.C., a new temple was erected by Zerubbabel upon the Jews' return to Israel. Approximately five hundred years later, Herod came on the scene in the days preceding Jesus' birth. Wanting to ingratiate himself to the Jews, Herod remodeled the temple built by Zerubbabel.

Jesus referred to His own body as a temple in John 2:19. Paul spoke of the body of believers corporately as a temple in Ephesians 2:21 as well as our own bodies individually as temples in 1 Corinthians 3:16.

In Revelation 11, we read that when antichrist comes on the scene, he'll broker a deal whereby the Jews will be able to rebuild their temple in Jerusalem. But the final temple is the one described in our text—the temple the Lord will erect when He comes back.

Ezekiel 40:3
And he brought me thither, and, behold, there was a man, whose appearance was like the appearance of brass, with a line of flax in his hand, and a measuring reed; and he stood in the gate.

This "measuring man" appears not only throughout this section, but also in Zechariah 2 and Revelation 21.

Ezekiel 40:4
And the man said unto me, Son of man, behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears, and set thine heart upon all that I shall shew thee; for to the intent that I might shew them unto thee art thou brought hither: declare all that thou seest to the house of Israel.

The measuring man said to Ezekiel, "Hear with your ears and behold with your eyes and open your heart." That's the way the Lord wants us to learn: with ears, eyes, and heart. "I'm going to give you revelation in order that you might declare all you see to the entire nation. Revelation is often directly linked to communication. If you want the Lord to give you more revelation, be faithful to share what you already understand.

Talk to people about what the Lord is showing you, what He's already taught you, what He's done for you. Those who are faithful to give out will be given yet more. If you want to know more, share more because if you keep sharing, you'll keep receiving.

In verses 5–37, we see measurements for the gates, the porch, and the inner and outer courts. Reading about all of these statistics and measurements, we are prone to wonder who would care about them. But the captives in Babylon would have studied them diligently and gladly after hearing that the temple that had been the heart and soul of their nation had been destroyed. They had neglected the temple previously through disobedience and iniquity. But now that they were in Babylon, their heart toward it had changed.

That's often the way it is. We take the Bible for granted. We take fellowship and Bible studies for granted. We take relationships for granted. And, like the people of Judah, it's not until they're lost that we realize our stupidity.

In verse 38, we come to the section wherein a description is given for of the tables used to offer sacrifices . . .

Ezekiel 40:38–43
And the chambers and the entries thereof were by the posts of the gates, where they washed the burnt offering. And in the porch of the gate were two tables on this side, and two tables on that side, to slay thereon the burnt offering and the sin offering and the trespass offering. And at the side without, as one goeth up to the entry of the north gate, were two tables; and on the other side, which was at the porch of the gate, were two tables. Four tables were on this side, and four tables on that side, by the side of the gate; eight tables, whereupon they slew their sacrifices. And the four tables were of hewn stone for the burnt offering, of a cubit and an half long, and a cubit and an half broad, and one cubit high: whereupon also they laid the instruments wherewith they slew the burnt offering and the sacrifice. And within were hooks, an hand broad, fastened round about: and upon the tables was the flesh of the offering.

The Old Testament offerings are going to be reinstituted in this millennial temple. "Wait a minute," you say. "Didn't Jesus' death on the Cross nullify the need for animal sacrifices? If they were simply pictures pointing to the Lamb of God, why would they need to be offered again?"

I suggest two reasons sacrifices will be offered in the millennial temple. First, sacrifices in the Millennium will serve as an illustration of the price

Jesus paid on the Cross of Calvary for our salvation. Just as people living in Old Testament days looked ahead to the coming of Christ, people in the Millennium will look back at that event.

Sacrifices in the Millennium will serve as an example of the holiness of God. You see, those who survive the Tribulation will be ushered in to the Millennium, but they will still have human bodies. And, because they will live to be a thousand years old, they'll have lots of kids. The kids who grow up will not have gone through the Tribulation period. So how will they know about sin and the need for salvation if they're living in the glory of the Millennium—when everything on this planet will be right at last? They will see an illustration of the repercussions of sin as they observe animals being slaughtered for sacrifice. And many will be saved as a result.

Ezekiel 40:44–49

And without the inner gate were the chambers of the singers in the inner court, which was at the side of the north gate; and their prospect was toward the south: one at the side of the east gate having the prospect toward the north. And he said unto me, This chamber, whose prospect is toward the south, is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the house. And the chamber whose prospect is toward the north is for the priests, the keepers of the charge of the altar: these are the sons of Zadok among the sons of Levi, which come near to the LORD to minister unto him. So he measured the court, an hundred cubits long, and an hundred cubits broad, foursquare; and the altar that was before the house. And he brought me to the porch of the house, and measured each post of the porch, five cubits on this side, and five cubits on that side: and the breadth of the gate was three cubits on this side, and three cubits on that side. The length of the porch was twenty cubits, and the breadth eleven cubits; and he brought me by the steps whereby they went up to it: and there were pillars by the posts, one on this side, and another on that side.

The office of the priest was to stand before the people on behalf of God and to stand before God on behalf of the people. As we will see in chapter 44, however, the sons of Zadok were priests with an even higher calling, for they ministered exclusively to the Lord.

Peter tells us that we are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood (1 Peter 2:9). Therefore, let us be faithful in ministering to people on behalf of the Lord and in interceding for people in prayer. But, above all, let us be like the sons of Zadok, people who minister not only for the Lord but directly to Him in worship and praise.

41 Chapters 41 and 42 continue the description of the temple. Notice a few things. First, the omissions. There is no veil in this millennial temple because when Jesus Christ died, the veil was rent as a sign that the way was open to come into His presence. Previously, in Old Testament times, that veil separated the people from moving into the presence of God and experiencing His glory. Only on the Day of Atonement, Yom Kippur, could the high priest go through the veil into the Holy of Holies and there see and experience the visible glory of God. But if he wasn't completely cleansed, he could die in God's presence. Only one day a year could one person go in—and then only if he was properly cleansed. But when Jesus died, the veil was rent from top to bottom as a sign that all were welcome. The price was paid. Sins past, present, and future were gone, forgiven. There were no more barriers.

There is also no table of showbread in the millennial temple because Jesus Christ, the Bread of Life, will be in Jerusalem as well at that time. There is no golden candlestick because we are told in Ezekiel that His glory will fill the whole world. The whole place will glow, so there will be no need for artificial light. And there is no ark of the covenant. The glory of the Lord that had dwelt over the ark will fill the whole earth, not limited to that little space.

Whatever we are building—whether we're building families or ministries, relationships, occupations, make it according to pattern. The Lord doesn't say, "Just do whatever you want." He gives specific instructions about how things are to be done—very detailed. It's my job to search the Scriptures regarding any project I undertake, saying, "Lord, I need to know every detail of what You say that it might be done right." Make all things according to pattern. Don't cut corners. So these measurements are given very exactingly.

42 In chapter 42, we see a continuation of the measurements of the millennial temple. I call your attention to verses 13 and 14 . . .

Ezekiel 42:13, 14
Then said he unto me, The north chambers and the south chambers, which are before the separate place, they be holy chambers, where the priests that approach unto the LORD shall eat the most holy things: there shall they lay the most holy things, and the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; for the place is holy. When the priests enter therein, then shall they not go out of the holy place into the utter court, but there they shall lay their garments wherein they minister; for they are holy; and shall put on other garments, and shall approach to those things which are for the people.

Here, we see that the priests were not to wear their holy garments among the people. I believe this speaks of the humility we see no more clearly than in our Great High Priest, Jesus Christ, who humbled Himself and took upon Himself the form of a Man (Philippians 2).

Man is so prone to judge by the outward appearance that it is tempting to flaunt our spirituality in any way we can. But the true priest understands that the garments we are to wear are not those of religious authority. Rather, we are to put on mercy, kindness, humility, meekness, and longsuffering (Colossians 3:12).

43 Ezekiel 43:1, 2
Afterward he brought me to the gate, even the gate that looketh to ward the east: And, behold, the glory of the God of Israel came from the way of the east: and his voice was like a noise of many waters: and the earth shined with his glory.

In Matthew 24, Jesus told us that even as the sun rises in the east and goes to the west, so shall the coming of the Son of Man be. In Revelation 1, we read that His voice is like many waters. Therefore, with the glory of God coming from the east and with a voice like the noise of many waters, this vision speaks of Jesus.

> And it was according to the appearance of the vision which I saw, even according to the vision that I saw when I came to destroy the city: and the visions were like the vision that I saw by the river Chebar; and I fell upon my face. And the glory of the LORD came into the house by the way of the gate whose prospect is toward the east.

When the Turks controlled Jerusalem, evidently aware of this prophecy, they knew the Jews were expecting their Messiah to enter Jerusalem through the eastern gate. To prevent this, they not only sealed the gate, but they put a graveyard in front. As we will see in chapter 44, however, little did they know that, rather than preventing prophecy, they were fulfilling it.

> So the spirit took me up, and brought me into the inner court; and, behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house.

What is the glory of God? The Hebrew word translated "glory" is chabod, which means "heaviness" or "weight." The glory of God is what you and I truly crave. We think what we want is a nicer car or a bigger house, but Jesus said that whoever drinks of that water will thirst again (John 4:13). In other words, all they will do is whet our appetite for more.

When God's glory departed from the Garden of Eden, Adam and Eve felt naked and ashamed. They understood that they had lost something. So they went to the mall and got the latest fig leaves—and mankind has been scrambling to cover himself ever since.

Ezekiel 43:6–10

And I heard him speaking unto me out of the house; and the man stood by me. And he said unto me, Son of man, the place of my throne, and the place of the soles of my feet, where I will dwell in the midst of the children of Israel for ever, and my holy name, shall the house of Israel no more defile, neither they, nor their kings, by their whoredom, nor by the carcases of their kings in their high places. In their setting of their threshold by my thresholds, and their post by my posts, and the wall between me and them, they have even defiled my holy name by their abominations that they have committed: wherefore I have consumed them in mine anger. Now let them put away their whoredom, and the carcases of their kings, far from me, and I will dwell in the midst of them for ever. Thou son of man, shew the house to the house of Israel, that they may be ashamed of their iniquities: and let them measure the pattern.

"Let them measure the pattern." Whether we're building families or ministries, relationships or occupations, we, too, must "measure the pattern." That is, the Lord gives specific instructions about how things are to be done. Therefore, wise is the man or woman who searches the Scriptures regarding any project they undertake, saying, "Lord, I don't want to just get by. I don't want to cut corners. I want to do what You have me do because Your way has proven to always be best."

And if they be ashamed of all that they have done, shew them the form of the house, and the fashion thereof, and the goings out thereof, and the comings in thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and all the forms thereof, and all the laws thereof: and write it in their sight, that they may keep the whole form thereof, and all the ordinances thereof, and do them.

It is as we're ashamed of our sin and our own efforts that God will show us the next step in the pattern He has for our lives.

Ezekiel 43:12, 13
This is the law of the house; Upon the top of the mountain the whole limit thereof round about shall be most holy. Behold, this is the law of the house. And these are the measures of the altar after the cubits: The cubit is a cubit and an hand breadth; even the bottom shall be a cubit, and the breadth a cubit, and the border thereof by the edge thereof round about shall be a span: and this shall be the higher place of the altar.

Here we see the altar as the cure for the shame spoken of in verse 11. In light of the depth of the riches of the wisdom of God, Paul declares that it is only logical for us to present our bodies as living sacrifices to Him (Romans 11:33; 12:1).

Ezekiel 43:14–19
And from the bottom upon the ground even to the lower settle shall be two cubits, and the breadth one cubit; and from the lesser settle even to the greater settle shall be four cubits, and the breadth one cubit. So the altar shall be four cubits; and from the altar and upward shall be four horns. And the altar shall be twelve cubits long, twelve broad, square in the four squares thereof. And the settle shall be fourteen cubits long and fourteen broad in the four squares thereof; and the border about it shall be half a cubit; and the bottom thereof shall be a cubit about; and his stairs shall look toward the east. And he said unto me, Son of man, thus saith the Lord GOD; These are the ordinances of the altar in the day when they shall make it, to offer burnt offerings thereon, and to sprinkle blood thereon. And thou shalt give to the priests the Levites that be of the seed of Zadok, which approach unto me, to min ister unto me, saith the Lord GOD, a young bullock for a sin offering.

Again, in the midst of the measurements for the altar, we see mention of the sons of Zadok, the privileged priests who ministered directly to God.

Ezekiel 43:20–24

And thou shalt take of the blood thereof, and put it on the four horns of it, and on the four corners of the settle, and upon the border round about: thus shalt thou cleanse and purge it. Thou shalt take the bullock also of the sin offering, and he shall burn it in the appointed place of the house, without the sanctuary. And on the second day thou shalt offer a kid of the goats without blemish for a sin offering; and they shall cleanse the altar, as they did cleanse it with the bullock. When thou hast made an end of cleansing it, thou shalt offer a young bullock without blemish, and a ram out of the flock without blemish. And thou shalt offer them before the LORD, and the priests shall cast salt upon them, and they shall offer them up for a burnt offering unto the LORD.

Just as the sacrifices will be salted, our speech—especially to the unbeliever—must be seasoned with the salt of grace (Colossians 4:5, 6). That is, we must speak not of our own togetherness, of our own spiritual attainments, of our own efforts to please God, but only of His work on our behalf, His faithfulness, His grace.

Seven days shalt thou prepare every day a goat for a sin offering: they shall also prepare a young bullock, and a ram out of the flock, without blemish. Seven days shall they purge the altar and purify it; and they shall consecrate themselves. And when these days are expired, it shall be, that upon the eighth day, and so forward, the priests shall make your burnt offerings upon the altar, and your peace offerings; and I will accept you, saith the Lord GOD.

After the altar is built according to God's pattern, after it is cleansed according to God's specification, after burnt offerings and peace offerings are made according to God's instruction, the Lord will accept the worship of His people. On the other hand, if we present ourselves as sacrifices to Him, even though we are flawed and frail, even though we miss His specifications by a mile, we are, by His miraculous grace, acceptable to Him (Romans 12:1).

Then he brought me back the way of the gate of the outward sanctuary which looketh toward the east; and it was shut. Then said the LORD unto me; This gate shall be shut, it shall not be opened, and no man shall enter in by it; because the LORD, the God of Israel, hath entered in by it, therefore it shall be shut. It is for the prince; the prince, he shall sit in it to eat bread before the LORD; he shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate, and shall go out by the way of the same.

In the year 1517, when the Turks sealed the eastern gate to prevent fulfillment of the prophecy that Messiah would enter through it (Ezekiel 43:5), they unknowingly fulfilled the prophecy seen here in chapter 44 that it would remain shut until the coming of the Prince of Peace. Centuries later, in the 1967 war, Arab tanks were pointed toward the eastern gate. But for reasons still unknown, the order to fire was never given. The Jews recaptured the city and the east gate remains sealed to this day.

Ezekiel 44:4–8

Then brought he me the way of the north gate before the house: and I looked, and, behold, the glory of the LORD filled the house of the LORD: and I fell upon my face. And the LORD said unto me, Son of man, mark well, and behold with thine eyes, and hear with thine ears all that I say unto thee concerning all the ordinances of the house of the LORD, and all the laws thereof; and mark well the entering in of the house, with every going forth of the sanctuary. And thou shalt say to the rebellious, even to the house of Israel, Thus saith the Lord GOD; O ye house of Israel, let it suffice you of all your abominations, In that ye have brought into my sanctuary strangers, uncircumcised in heart, and uncircumcised in flesh, to be in my sanctuary, to pollute it, even my house, when ye offer my bread, the fat and the blood, and they have broken my covenant because of all your abominations.

And ye have not kept the charge of mine holy things: but ye have set keepers of my charge in my sanctuary for yourselves.

Seeing the glory of the Lord, Ezekiel falls on his face yet again (1:28; 3:23; 9:8; 11:13). Twenty years earlier, Ezekiel saw a vision of the destruction of Jerusalem. Here, twenty years later, he's caught up in a vision to Jerusalem again. This time, however, he's not gloomily prophesying the destruction of the city but joyfully proclaiming the construction of the temple.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; No stranger, uncircumcised in heart, nor uncircumcised in flesh, shall enter into my sanctuary, of any stranger that is among the children of Israel.

Spiritually, Scripture speaks of three parts that need to be circumcised: our hearts, our tongues, and our ears. They all need to be dealt with by the sword of the Word as it cuts away the tendency of the flesh to make us insensitive to the things of the Lord.

In the days of the early church, there were those who told new believers that, if they really wanted to be spiritual, they needed to be physically circumcised. Paul, however, said, "We are the circumcision of God who worship God in the spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and have no confidence in our flesh" (Philippians 3:3). Who are the "true circumcision," the ones who are truly spiritual? Not those who go through some outward demonstration, but those who worship God in the Spirit, rejoice in Christ Jesus, and don't put any stock in their own abilities.

Ezekiel 44:10–12
And the Levites that are gone away far from me, when Israel went astray, which went astray away from me after their idols; they shall even bear their iniquity. Yet they shall be ministers in my sanctuary, having charge at the gates of the house, and ministering to the house: they shall slay the burnt offering and the sacrifice for the people, and they shall stand before them to minister unto them. Because they ministered unto them before their idols, and caused the house of Israel to fall into iniquity; therefore have I lifted up mine hand against them, saith the Lord GOD, and they shall bear their iniquity.

This passage used to confuse me greatly because it says that the Levites who followed Israel into idolatry would bear their iniquity by ministering to the people. I wondered how offering sacrifices on behalf of people could be punishment. It seemed like a privilege. But My confusion cleared in verse 15 . . .

Ezekiel 44:13–16
And they shall not come near unto me, to do the office of a priest unto me, nor to come near to any of my holy things, in the most holy place: but they shall bear their shame, and their abominations which they have committed. But I will make them keepers of the charge of the house, for all the service thereof, and for all that shall be done therein. But the priests the Levites, the sons of Zadok, that kept the charge of my sanctuary when the children of Israel went astray from me, they shall come near to me to minister unto me, and they shall stand before me to offer unto me the fat and the blood, saith the Lord GOD: They shall enter into my sanctuary, and they shall come near to my table, to minister unto me, and they shall keep my charge.

Here, the Lord says that standing before the people is punishment compared to the true ministry of standing before Him. This means our ministry to the Lord is much more important than our ministry for His people. How do we minister to the Lord? The Book of Hebrews says, "By Him, therefore, let us continually offer the sacrifice of praise, the fruit of our lips giving thanks to His name." The most important ministry is not busily serving in the kitchen as Martha did, but sitting at His feet, adoring Him as Mary did (Luke 10:42).

Worship not only brings pleasure to God, but it makes us aware of God. Haven't you found that, when you're really caught up in worship, you're aware of the Lord's presence in a unique way? This is because, as David tells us, He inhabits the praises of His people (Psalm 22:3). "The Father is seeking those who will worship Him in spirit and in truth," Jesus declared (John 4:23). The Father zeros in on worshipers. Therefore, ministry to the Lord is always a priority over ministry for Him.

It was after the believers in the Upper Room prayed and worshiped with intensity that Peter preached the sermon in which 3,000 were saved (Acts 2:41). In Acts 13, we read that it was as Paul and Barnabas ministered to the Lord that they were called to minister for Him. Worship the Lord and minister to Him personally—and from that, you'll be able to minister corporately.

Ezekiel 44:17, 18
And it shall come to pass, that when they enter in at the gates of the inner court, they shall be clothed with linen garments; and no wool shall come upon them, whiles they minister in the gates of the inner court, and within. They shall have linen bonnets upon their heads, and shall have linen breeches upon their loins; they shall not gird themselves with any thing that causeth sweat.

Perspiration is often indicative of a lack of inspiration, for Jesus said His yoke is easy, His burden light (Matthew 11:30).

For topical study of Ezekiel 44:17, 18 entitled "No Sweat!" turn to page* 685.

Ezekiel 44:19
And when they go forth into the utter court, even into the utter court to the people, they shall put off their garments wherein they ministered, and lay them in the holy chambers, and they shall put on other garments; and they shall not sanctify the people with their garments.

Keep in mind that all these regulations for the millennial priests have application to us for Peter tells us we are a chosen generation, a royal priesthood (1 Peter 2:9). When the priests were going out among the people, they were to take off their holy garments and not wear them among the people. This speaks of humility. Somehow there is perversion in our personality that wants people to think we're more spiritual than we really are. So we'll wear our holy garments and say, "As I was praying for you today at three in the morning . . ." to let people know how spiritual we are. The injunction here is important. Don't parade around in your holy garments, trying to impress people with where you've been.

Neither shall they shave their heads, nor suffer their locks to grow long; they shall only poll their heads.

The priests were to neither have shaved heads nor long hair. The idea here is one of moderation. Sometimes people like to impress people with how radical they look. They like to take pride in how different they are from other believers. Be careful. "Let your moderation be known unto all men," Paul wrote to the Philippians (4:5). This is more than a dress code. It's a principle for life.

Neither shall any priest drink wine, when they enter into the inner court.

When you're truly seeking the Lord in the inner court, wine just doesn't have a place.

> It is not for kings, O Lemuel, it is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink: Lest they drink, and forget the law, and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted.
> Proverbs 31:4, 5

If you want to be a leader, a minister, an effective servant in the kingdom, you can't afford to be "buzzed" on alcohol or high on drugs lest your ability to remember and apply the Word is decreased. That is why, even in the New Testament age of grace, Paul said that elders are not to be given to wine (Titus 1:7).

Ezekiel 44:22
Neither shall they take for their wives a widow, nor her that is put away: but they shall take maidens of the seed of the house of Israel, or a widow that had a priest before.

In marriage, there was to be purity. Again, the same holds true for us because Peter says that if husbands aren't loving their wives, even their prayers will be hindered (1 Peter 3:7).

Ezekiel 44:23
And they shall teach my people the difference between the holy and profane, and cause them to discern between the unclean and the clean.

The calling of priests, leaders, and servants is to teach the difference between right and wrong and to help people discern between the two. In other words, they are not necessarily to teach people what to think but to teach them how to think.

Ezekiel 44:24
And in controversy they shall stand in judgment; and they shall judge it according to my judgments: and they shall keep my laws and my statutes in all mine assemblies; and they shall hallow my sabbaths.

When controversy arises, true ministers always minister according to the Word. When you give counsel or get counsel, make sure it's biblical. We don't need peoples' advice. We need to know what the Word says.

Ezekiel 44:25–27
And they shall come at no dead person to defile themselves: but for father, or for mother, or for son, or for daughter, for brother, or for sister that hath had no husband, they may defile themselves. And after he is cleansed, they shall reckon unto him seven days. And in the day that he goeth into the sanctuary, unto the inner court, to minister in the sanctuary, he shall offer his sin offering, saith the Lord GOD.

Priests, servants, ministers, leaders—that's all of us—are not to hang out with people who are spiritually dead unless it's to reach out to them to bring them into the family of faith.

Ezekiel 44:28
And it shall be unto them for an inheritance: I am their inheritance: and ye shall give them no possession in Israel: I am their possession.

Of the priests, the Lord says, "I am their inheritance." To Abraham, He said, "I am your shield and thy exceeding great reward" (Genesis 15:1). So too, if you give yourself to the service of the Lord, He will become so real to you that your reward will not be something He gives to you, but who He Himself is for you.

Ezekiel 44:29–31
They shall eat the meat offering, and the sin offering, and the trespass offering; and every dedicated thing in Israel shall be theirs. And the first of all the firstfruits of all things, and every oblation of all, of every sort of your oblations, shall be the priest's: ye shall also give unto the priest the first of your dough, that he may cause the blessing to rest in thine house. The priests shall not eat of any thing that is dead of itself, or torn, whether it be fowl or beast.

The priests were to live off the sacrifices offered to the Lord. And, because only healthy animals were to be offered as sacrifices, the priests wouldn't be reduced to subsisting on leftovers or castoffs. This remains a good word for both pastors and parishioners to consider today.

NO SWEAT!

A Topical Study of
EZEKIEL 44:17, 18

As believers, each of us is part of a royal priesthood, sharing with people the good news of God's love and forgiveness, His grace and mercy (1 Peter 2:9). Therefore, here in chapter 44, I want us to note specifically that the priests were told by the Lord that, as they ministered, they were to wear nothing that caused them to sweat. I believe an understanding of what this means affects our walk, our worship, and our work in a radical, impacting way.

Our Walk with the Lord

There is something inside of man that makes us think it is supposed to be difficult to walk with the Lord. Virtually all religions of the world are based upon this premise—that one must exert a lot of energy and expend a lot of effort if he is going to establish a relationship with God. He must follow the eight steps to Nirvana, the six pillars of faith, or even the Ten Commandments. Every religion in the world and throughout history has been based upon the supposition that man must consistently work, struggle, strive, and do something difficult if he truly desires to establish a relationship with God.

When asked what men must do to do the works of God, Jesus said, "This is the work of God—it's one thing—that you believe on Him whom the Father hath sent" (see John 6:28, 29). In other words, it's not the works of man but the singular work of God that matters.

Understanding this takes the sweat, the strain, the pressure off me. And that is exactly what Jesus is after.

> Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.
> Matthew 11:28–30

"You neither have to sweat to come into My presence nor strain to stay there," Jesus declares. "I'm meek. I'm lowly. I'm approachable and available, compassionate and sympathetic."

Why is it that, at the moment of salvation, we embrace the fact that Jesus paid the price for our sin—but once we are saved, we fall into the subtle trap of feeling that although we were saved by grace, we must prove to God how serious we are in order to retain our salvation? We get up at five in the morning and pray for three hours, thinking that we'll impress God. We give eighty percent of our income, witness to seven people every day, read fourteen chapters and memorize ten verses every night—all because we mistakenly think we must do something to maintain our walk with the Lord.

The Lord, however, sees all of our efforts as wool—which He expressly forbids His priests to wear.

> As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him:

How did you receive Jesus? When you were broken, when you could do nothing, when you realized He did it all, you said, "Lord, I'm not making it. You've got to do it." Immediately, you felt His embrace, experienced His touch, and you were born again. Even as you received Him, walk in Him. Keep going with that same simplicity. Say, "Lord, I'm coming to You today about this electric bill or this problem at work not because I've been so devoted and committed but because You are gracious and I am weary, because you are loving and I am needy, because You have finished the work and I'm in need of Your blessing."

Am I saying you don't have to have devotions anymore? Yes—because once you realize how gracious and glorious the Lord is, you will want to meet with Him in the morning, the afternoon, the evening. Your entire relationship will change from one of responsibility to one of response as you say, "Lord, You're so good, I can't wait to talk with You." The sweat stops and your walk takes on a whole new vitality.

Our Worship of the Lord

Once I realize that my walk is based upon what Jesus did on Calvary rather than what I do to try to prove my spirituality, I become a worshiper. People who are sweating aren't singing. People who are working aren't worshiping. They're too busy struggling and straining. But those who realize the work is complete, that the Lord is their salvation, that there's nothing more they can do to earn His blessing or merit His favor, find themselves worshiping. Those who realize that it's nothing we've done, are doing, or can do that will bring God's blessings, find themselves lifting their hands, bowing their knees, and opening their hearts to their gracious, wonderful, kind, and glorious Father.

Yet even worship can begin to be covered in wool.

> For the land, whither thou goest in to possess it, is not as the land of Egypt, from whence ye came out, where thou sowedst thy seed, and wateredst it with thy foot, as a garden of herbs: But the land, whither ye go to possess it, is a land of hills and valleys, and drinketh water of the rain of heaven: . . . That I will give you the rain of your land in his due season, the first rain and the latter rain, that thou mayest gather in thy corn, and thy wine, and thine oil.
> Deuteronomy 11:10–14

"I'm taking you into a new land," God said to His people. "It will be prolific and productive not because you'll bring water up from the Nile by pumping on treadmills as you did in Egypt, but because I will water it with the first and latter rains."

When we come into the inner court to worship the Lord, we don't have to "pump up" our emotions. We can allow ourselves to rest in His presence. In other words, sitting silently before the Lord is every bit as acceptable as standing boldly before Him. If you are emotional by nature, express that to the Lord. If you tend to be more contemplative and quiet, you, too, can be who you are in Him. Whatever you do, just don't put on wool when you come into His presence.

Our Work for the Lord

Too many pastors are held hostage by committees, organizational flow charts, and programs. We're here to meet with the Lord, not get involved in programs. Therefore, we must not put on wool and start organizing. The Lord Himself will inspire people to do what He would have them do. Our job as a church is simply to support them in prayer and financially when necessary. It's glorious to watch the Lord stir peoples' hearts.

Whenever I am straining, whenever I am tired and frustrated, I know I'm not moving in the things God has called me to do because He says His burden is easy and His load is light. Don't wear wool, gang. Everything you do should be supernaturally natural and restful. The work of the Lord is so enjoyable if you're doing what you were uniquely created to do. If you love to play football, get some guys together and play football to the glory of God. If you love working on cars, you could help those in the body who don't know the difference between a radio and a radiator. If you love to coach, coach a YMCA team and tell the kids about Jesus.

You're ministers wherever you go. Just make sure that what you do is linen, not wool.

45 In chapter 44, the priests were told how to live. Here, in chapter 45, they're told where to live . . .

Ezekiel 45:1
Moreover, when ye shall divide by lot the land for inheritance, ye shall offer an oblation unto the LORD, an holy portion of the land: the length shall be the length of five and twenty thousand reeds, and the breadth shall be ten thousand. This shall be holy in all the borders thereof round about.

When they came back into the land historically, as well as when the kingdom age is ushered in prophetically, a section of land was to be set aside as holy territory. As to its size, Bible scholars are mostly divided into two camps. Some say it was a square eight and one-third miles by eight and one-third miles. Others consider it to be sixty miles by sixty miles.

Ezekiel 45:2–7
Of this there shall be for the sanctuary five hundred in length, with five hundred in breadth, square round about; and fifty cubits round about for the suburbs thereof. And of this measure shalt thou measure the length of five and twenty thousand, and the breadth of ten thousand: and in it shall be the sanctuary and the most holy place. The holy portion of the land shall be for the priests the ministers of the sanctuary, which shall come near to minister unto the LORD: and it shall be a place for their houses, and an holy place for the sanctuary. And the five and twenty thousand of length, and the ten thousand of breadth, shall also the Levites, the ministers of the house, have for themselves, for a possession for twenty chambers. And ye shall appoint the possession of the city five thousand broad, and five and twenty thousand long, over against the oblation of the holy portion: it shall be for the whole house of Israel. And a portion shall be for the prince on the one side and on the other side of the oblation of the holy portion, and of the possession of the city, before the oblation of the holy portion, and before the possession of the city, from the west side westward, and from the east side eastward: and the length shall be over against one of the portions, from the west border unto the east border.

In the middle of the kingdom, we see a square of land, divided into three sections. In the middle section sits the temple itself. Living around the temple are the priests because those who serve the Lord will always be closest to Him. That's why serving is so important. Whether you're working in the church nursery or witnessing to a neighbor, if you are serving the Lord, you will find yourself experiencing more of Him.

One-third of this dedicated land was where the Levites lived. The final third contained the city of Jerusalem itself.

On either side of the square, the land continues on, going east to the Jordan and west to the Mediterranean Sea. We see the two strips of land running from Jerusalem to the Jordan and the Mediterranean given specifically and exclusively to the Prince—the Lord Jesus Himself.

Ezekiel 45:8
In the land shall be his possession in Israel: and my princes shall no more oppress my people; and the rest of the land shall they give to the house of Israel according to their tribes.

Along with the Prince, there will be other princes ruling and reigning for Him and with Him. Of them, God will demand absolute honesty.

Ezekiel 45:9, 10
Thus saith the Lord GOD; Let it suffice you, O princes of Israel: remove violence and spoil, and execute judgment and justice, take away your exactions from my people, saith the Lord GOD. Ye shall have just balances, and a just ephah, and a just bath.

These units of measurement speak of justice. That is, unlike what happens in the world today, everything the princes do will be done with equity.

Ezekiel 45:11–17
The ephah and the bath shall be of one measure, that the bath may contain the tenth part of an homer, and the ephah the tenth part of an homer: the measure thereof shall be after the homer. And the shekel shall be twenty gerahs: twenty shekels, five and twenty shekels, fifteen shekels, shall be your maneh. This is the oblation that ye shall offer; the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of wheat, and ye shall give the sixth part of an ephah of an homer of barley: Concerning the ordinance of oil, the bath of oil, ye shall offer the tenth part of a bath out of the cor, which is an homer of ten baths; for ten baths are an homer: And one lamb out of the flock, out of two hundred, out of the fat pastures of Israel; for a meat offering, and for a burnt offering, and for peace offerings, to make reconciliation for them, saith the Lord GOD.

All the people of the land shall give this oblation for the prince in Israel. And it shall be the prince's part to give burnt offerings, and meat offerings, and drink offerings, in the feasts, and in the new moons, and in the sabbaths, in all solemnities of the house of Israel: he shall prepare the sin offering, and the meat offering, and the burnt offering, and the peace offerings, to make reconciliation for the house of Israel.

Here, we see the Prince Himself offering sacrifices. Why would Jesus have to do this? After all, He never sinned and, therefore, has no need to offer sacrifice to atone for sin. I suggest He does this for the same reason He was baptized—for identification. Jesus identified with us in baptism even as we identify with Him in baptism. So, I suggest He offers sacrifices with the people in order that He might be at one with them and be an example for them.

I love Jesus Christ for so many reasons—not the least of which is that He is the ultimate, perfect example. He never asks us to do anything that He Himself has not done or gone through. The Bible says He was tempted in all points as we are (Hebrews 4:15). Therefore, no matter what you're struggling with, what disappointment is before you, or what hurt is inside of you, Jesus can relate to you.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; In the first month, in the first day of the month, thou shalt take a young bullock without blemish, and cleanse the sanctuary: And the priest shall take of the blood of the sin offering, and put it upon the posts of the house, and upon the four corners of the settle of the altar, and upon the posts of the gate of the inner court. And so thou shalt do the seventh day of the month for every one that erreth, and for him that is simple: so shall ye reconcile the house. In the first month, in the fourteenth day of the month, ye shall have the passover, a feast of seven days; unleavened bread shall be eaten. And upon that day shall the prince prepare for himself and for all the people of the land a bullock for a sin offering. And seven days of the feast he shall prepare a burnt offering to the LORD, seven bullocks and seven rams without blemish daily the seven days; and a kid of the goats daily for a sin offering. And he shall prepare a meat offering of an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and an hin of oil for an ephah. In the seventh month, in the fifteenth day of the month, shall he do the like in the feast of the seven days, according to the sin offering, according to the burnt offering, and according to the meat offering, and according to the oil.

There were three major feasts all of Israel observed. Passover was in April. Fifty days later came Pentecost. In October, there was the Feast of Tabernacles. Here, the people, led by the Prince, will partake in the Feasts of Passover and Tabernacles—but not Pentecost. Why is Pentecost omitted from these kingdom celebrations?

I suggest it is because the Feasts of Passover and Tabernacles were feasts of commemoration while Pentecost was a feast of anticipation. You see, Passover commemorated God's deliverance of His people from the plague of the death of the firstborn in Egypt. It was fulfilled in Jesus, the Passover Lamb. The Feast of Tabernacles commemorated God's protection of His people as they dwelt in tents in their wilderness wanderings. It was also fulfilled in Jesus, who dwelt, or literally, "tabernacled" among them (John 1:14).

Pentecost, or the Feast of Firstfuits, however, was one of anticipation—looking forward to God's provision in the harvest yet to come. Later, it was on Pentecost that the Holy Spirit was poured out upon the one hundred twenty believers in the Upper Room (Acts 2). The Spirit, the "earnest," or down-payment of our inheritance (Ephesians 1:13, 14), also looks ahead to the day when, seeing Jesus, we will be like Him (1 John 3:2). Therefore, while the feasts of commemoration will always remind God's people of His faithfulness, the feast of anticipation will be eclipsed by His glorious presence among them in the Millennium.

46 Chapter 46 speaks of the Prince coming and offering worship.

Thus saith the Lord GOD; The gate of the inner court that looketh toward the east shall be shut the six working days; but on the sabbath it shall be opened, and in the day of the new moon it shall be opened.

The eastern gate that is presently sealed shut will be opened and reserved for the Prince to use. It will be shut six working days but on the Sabbath it will be opened. I personally believe there is a correlation between the gate being shut six days before being opened on the seventh and this world being outside of the direct rule and reign of Christ.

You see, many conservative Bible scholars believe that the world began in its recreated state (Genesis 1:2), in the year 4000 B.C. If this be so, it means we are presently in the six-thousandth year, the sixth Millennium. Six is the number of man. The age of man, it seems to many, will be completed at the end of the sixth Millennium. That brings us to the seven-thousand-year period. Seven is the number of perfection. That is why in the seventh Millennium, there will be peace, prosperity, and righteousness as Jesus reigns from Jerusalem. At the end of that time period, we're told this earth will be destroyed because it's been defiled by sin. Just as eight in Scripture is the number of new beginnings, God will create a new heaven and a new earth in the eighth Millennium.

Ezekiel 46:2–7
And the prince shall enter by the way of the porch of that gate without, and shall stand by the post of the gate, and the priests shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, and he shall worship at the threshold of the gate: then he shall go forth; but the gate shall not be shut until the evening. Likewise the people of the land shall worship at the door of this gate before the LORD in the sabbaths and in the new moons. And the burnt offering that the prince shall offer unto the LORD in the sabbath day shall be six lambs without blemish, and a ram without blemish. And the meat offering shall be an ephah for a ram, and the meat offering for the lambs as he shall be able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. And in the day of the new moon it shall be a young bullock without blemish, and six lambs, and a ram: they shall be without blemish. And he shall prepare a meat offering, an ephah for a bullock, and an ephah for a ram, and for the lambs according as his hand shall attain unto, and an hin of oil to an ephah.

There are those who say this couldn't be speaking of Jesus because, since He never sinned, He had no need to offer sacrifices. But I suggest three reasons why Jesus would indeed offer sacrifice . . .

First, He does so as an example for the people. Jesus Christ, our Lord, never asks us to do anything He Himself has not done. He went to the synagogue even though He knew more than any of the rabbis. He went to the temple even though His knowledge confounded the scribes. He went to Jerusalem for the feasts when His life was in jeopardy. Jesus is not merely a guru telling people how they should live as He's chauffeured around in a limousine. He will never ask you to do anything He Himself has not done. Therefore, in the kingdom age, as sacrifices are made, He makes them, as well.

Second, I believe He did this not only as an example for the people, but that he might become one with the people.

> But we see Jesus, who was made a little lower than the angels for the suffering of death, crowned with glory and honour; that he by the grace of God should taste death for every man. For it became him, for whom are all things, and by whom are all things, in bringing many sons unto glory, to make the captain of their salvation perfect through sufferings. For both he that sanctifieth and they who are sanctified are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, Saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.
> Hebrews 2:9–12

When we sing, "Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord, God of power and might," Jesus isn't looking down on us, saying, "Isn't that nice?" According to this passage, He's in our midst, singing right beside us. He's honoring His Father right along with us. If we understood this, I believe it would radically change how we approach worship. I think our mouths would be opened a little wider, our hands lifted a bit higher, our hearts a little warmer, our voices a little louder if we realized Jesus was truly with us.

Third, Jesus offers sacrifice as a reminder to the people. When we see the Good Shepherd sacrificing the lambs He created, I believe it will blow us away. Here is One who is so gentle and pure slaughtering lambs and bulls. Why? As a reminder to us of the seriousness of sin. I don't think it's too far to conjecture that when these sacrifices are made, perhaps a tear will roll down the cheeks of the Lord who loves the very animals He sacrifices.

Sin always causes pain. There is always blood shed. There is always life lost. There is always suffering and sadness. It's inevitable. Sin isn't bad because God forbids it. Rather, God forbids it because it's bad. "Be ye perfect and sin not," is not the stern command of a cruel God but the loving injunction of a tender Father who knows the destruction and despair that sin invariably leaves in its wake.

Infinitely more important than the sacrifices He offers is the Sacrifice Jesus Himself became when He paid the price for our sin on the Cross of Calvary. Therefore, even in the Millennium, the sacrifices offered will speak of Him.

Ezekiel 46:8–10
And when the prince shall enter, he shall go in by the way of the porch of that gate, and he shall go forth by the way thereof. But when the people of the land shall come before the LORD in the solemn feasts, he that entereth in by the way of the north gate to worship shall go out by the way of the south gate; and he that entereth by the way of the south gate shall go forth by the way of the north gate: he shall not return by the way of the gate whereby he came in, but shall go forth over against it. And the prince in the midst of them, when they go in, shall go in; and when they go forth, shall go forth.

The people are either going to go in the north gate and out the south, or in the south gate and out the north. What is the reason for this? Some might say it's for traffic flow—to keep the people moving. Perhaps part of that is true.

But I believe it's also a statement that whenever we come in to the place of worship, we never leave the same way. We're always affected, always changed. Whenever we congregate in the name of the Lord, whenever we assemble to give praise to Him, whenever we desire to learn more of Him, we come in one way but go out yet another. We're changed.

That is why the author of the Book of Hebrews said, "Do not forsake the assembling of yourselves together as is the manner of some" (Hebrews 10:25). Join us—and you'll find yourself leaving a different way than you came in. The Prince, however, comes in the east gate and leaves through the same gate (verse 8) because He has no need to change. He is altogether lovely (Song of Solomon 5:16). He is the essence of perfection—the same yesterday, today, and forever (Hebrews 13:8).

Ezekiel 46:11–18

And in the feasts and in the solemnities the meat offering shall be an ephah to a bullock, and ephah to a ram, and to the lambs as he is able to give, and an hin of oil to an ephah. Now when the prince shall prepare a voluntary burnt offering or peace offerings voluntarily unto the LORD, one shall then open him the gate that looketh toward the east, and he shall prepare his burnt offering and his peace offerings, as he did on the sabbath day: then he shall go forth; and after his going forth one shall shut the gate. Thou shalt daily prepare a burnt offering unto the LORD of a lamb of the first year without blemish: thou shalt prepare it every morning. And thou shalt prepare a meat offering for it every morning, the sixth part of an ephah, and the third part of an hin of oil, to temper with the fine flour; a meat offering continually by a perpetual ordinance unto the LORD. Thus shall they prepare the lamb, and the meat offering, and the oil, every morning for a continual burnt offering. Thus saith the Lord GOD; If the prince give a gift unto any of his sons, the inheritance thereof shall be his sons'; it shall be their possession by inheritance. But if he give a gift of his inheritance to one of his servants, then it shall be his to the year of liberty; after it shall return to the prince: but his inheritance shall be his sons' for them. Moreover the prince shall not take of the people's inheritance by oppression, to thrust them out of their possession; but he shall give his sons inheritance out of his own possession: that my people be not scattered every man from his possession.

When the Prince is on the scene, He's not going to bully the people. He will not take by force that which people possess. Rather, He will give from His own possessions.

Ezekiel 46:19–24
After he brought me through the entry, which was at the side of the gate, into the holy chambers of the priests, which looked toward the north: and, behold, there was a place on the two sides westward. Then said he unto me, This is the place where the priests shall boil the trespass offering and the sin offering, where they shall bake the meat offering; that they bear them not out into the utter court, to sanctify the people. Then he brought me forth into the utter court, and caused me to pass by the four corners of the court; and, behold, in every corner of the court there was a court. In the four corners of the court there were courts joined of forty cubits long and thirty broad: these four corners were of one measure. And there was a row of building round about in them, round about them four, and it was made with boiling places under the rows round about. Then said he unto me, These are the places of them that boil, where the ministers of the house shall boil the sacrifice of the people.

The meat of the sin offering was to be eaten only by the priests. The meat of the peace offering was made available to the people as well as to the priests. What a gracious God is ours—who is able to work all for good, who blesses His people even through sacrifice.

47 Jerusalem has just been wiped out. The Babylonians have wasted the city and destroyed the temple. The people are grieving and mourning, oppressed and discouraged. Prophetically, the Lord shows Ezekiel a better day that's coming. That day is when Jesus comes back and establishes His kingdom on earth. For a thousand years, there will be peace on this planet. When Jesus comes back, Zechariah 14 tells us He's going to set His foot on the Mount of Olives and it will split in half. At that moment, the topography of the region will go through a radical transformation. A new river will flow that will have a radical effect on that entire desert region . . .

Ezekiel 47:1 (a)
Afterward he brought me again unto the door of the house . . .

This speaks of the millennial temple.

Ezekiel 47:1 (b)
. . . and, behold, waters issued out from under the threshold of the house eastward: for the forefront of the house stood toward the east, and the waters came down from under from the right side of the house . . .

Here we see a miraculous river that flows from Jerusalem out to the wilderness. It begins as a trickle and, without any tributaries flowing into it, increases as it flows. It begins in the sanctuary, which speaks of devotion to God.

"Blessed are those who hunger and thirst after righteousness for they shall be filled," Jesus declared (Matthew 5:6).

Who is filled? Those who thirst for more of God.

If you're satisfied with where you're at, you'll never receive more. It's when you say, "I'm tired of the death, the dryness, the impotency, the inability within me. I want more of the Lord. I need more of the Lord," that the river begins to flow.

Ezekiel 47:1 (c)
. . . at the south side of the altar.

The altar speaks of death to self. In Acts 4, Peter and John had just been beaten up. What did the believers do? They prayed that the Holy Spirit might be given in order that God's servants could preach with even greater boldness. The Holy Spirit isn't given for those who simply want to feel good about themselves or to feel a little happier. No, it's for those who say, "Lord, You've done so much for me. No matter what it costs, no matter what it means, my life is Yours."

Ezekiel 47:2–5
Then brought he me out of the way of the gate northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate by the way that looketh eastward; and, behold, there ran out waters on the right side. And when the man that had the line in his hand went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters; the waters were to the ancles. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters; the waters were to the knees. Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters were to the loins. Afterward he measured a thousand; and it was a river that I could not pass over: for the waters were risen, waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over.

The river begins in the temple and ends up in the wilderness. But in between the temple and the wilderness, the "measuring man" took Ezekiel by the hand and said, "Let's go for a walk along this bank." They walked about a quarter of a mile and the man with the reed told Ezekiel to go in. Ezekiel did so and the water came up to his feet. They walked another quarter mile and the man said, "Go in again." This time the river was up to Ezekiel's knees. They walked yet another quarter mile and the water was up to his loins. They walked another quarter mile and the water was over his head.

And he said unto me, Son of man, hast thou seen this? Then he brought me, and caused me to return to the brink of the river.

“Have you seen this?” The Lord asks us the same question because that’s the order of what happens in our walk. We’re walking with Jesus and we get our feet wet up to our ankles.

“This is great,” we say. “I’m on solid ground. I’m standing in the Lord. I’m born again. My sins are forgiven. I’m on my way to heaven!”

Then the Lord says, “Let’s go a little deeper.” So He takes us down river a thousand cubits and says, “Go in again.” This time, we go up to our knees.

“I want you to learn what it means to pray—not only to stand, but now to pray because you’re aware of the challenges and problems and struggles of life.”

Then the Lord says, “We’re going deeper still.” So we walk in up to our loins—the place of reproduction. As we grow in the knowledge of God, as we stay in His Word, as we learn how to pray, we’re going to reproduce spiritually. If a congregation is healthy, it will naturally grow because healthy sheep naturally reproduce. It’s inevitable.

Then the Lord says, “There’s one more stop. This time you’re going over your head in water so deep you can swim in it. You can be refreshed by it, but you can no longer control it. You’re over your head.” Praying in the Spirit, dying to self, worshiping with consistency, walking in power—have you seen this?

Where are you? Are you up to your ankles? Have you just begun your walk with Jesus? If you have, that’s great—but move on. Get on your knees. Learn how to intercede, to pray and to be faithful in your devotional life. Are you a prayer warrior? Great, then start reproducing. Start witnessing and sharing. But if you’re still desiring more, take the plunge today. Step in deeper still to the place where you want to be used by the Lord no matter the price.

Where are you now? Where do you desire to be? The Lord will take you as far down the river as you want to go.

Ezekiel 47:7–12

Now when I had returned, behold, at the bank of the river were very many trees on the one side and on the other. Then said he unto me, These waters issue out toward the east country, and go down into the desert, and go into the sea: which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed. And it shall come to pass, that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live: and there shall be a very great multitude of fish, because these waters shall come thither: for they shall be healed; and every thing shall live whither the river cometh. And it shall come to pass, that the fishers shall stand upon it from En-gedi even unto En-eglaim; they shall be a place to spread forth nets; their fish shall be according to their kinds, as the fish of the great sea, exceeding many. But the miry places thereof and the marishes thereof shall not be healed; they shall be given to salt. And by the river upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary: and the fruit thereof shall be for meat, and the leaf thereof for medicine.

This river begins to flow toward the Dead Sea—a sea in which nothing grows today. Not one living creature is found there because it is so salty. But in that day, with this new river flowing, there will be trees on either side that are fruitful. As the water goes into the Dead Sea, the Sea itself will be healed. There will be a multitude of fish and fowl because everywhere this river touches, there will be healing and life and fruitfulness.

The areas and marshes where the river doesn't go, however, will remain dead. What is this river? It is that which Jesus spoke of in John 7 when He said, "If any man thirst, let Him come unto Me and drink. And out of His innermost being shall gush forth torrents of living water." Then John says, "This spake He of the Holy Ghost"—the river that brings healing, fruitfulness, and life.

After He died and was resurrected, right before He ascended into heaven, Jesus said to His disciples, "You shall receive power when the Holy Ghost comes upon you" (Acts 1:8). The word translated "upon" in Greek means "overflowing from."

"Tarry ye in the city of Jerusalem," Jesus told His disciples, "until ye be endued with power from on high" (Luke 24:49). In other words, "Don't try and go out and win the world in your own energy. Wait until the Holy Spirit is overflowing from you—for that is when you will see the river of life bringing healing and fruitfulness and making the desert places of peoples' lives productive and prolific."

Ezekiel 47:13–23

Thus saith the Lord GOD; This shall be the border, whereby ye shall inherit the land according to the twelve tribes of Israel: Joseph shall have two portions. And ye shall inherit it, one as well as another: concerning the which I lifted up mine hand to give it unto your fathers: and this land shall fall unto you for inheritance. And this shall be the border of the land toward the north side, from the great sea, the way of Hethlon, as men go to Zedad; Hamath, Berothah, Sibraim, which is between the border of Damascus and the border of Hamath; Hazar-hatticon, which is by the coast of Hauran. And the border from the sea shall be Hazar-enan, the border of Damascus, and the north northward, and the border of Hamath. And this is the north side. And the east side ye shall measure from Hauran, and from Damascus, and from Gilead, and from the land of Israel by Jordan, from the border unto the east sea. And this is the east side. And the south side southward, from Tamar even to the wa ters of strife in Kadesh, the river to the great sea. And this is the south side southward. The west side also shall be the great sea from the border, till a man come over against Hamath. This is the west side. So shall ye divide this land unto you according to the tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that ye shall divide it by lot for an inheritance unto you, and to the strangers that sojourn among you, which shall beget children among you: and they shall be unto you as born in the country among the children of Israel; they shall have inheritance with you among the tribes of Israel. And it shall come to pass, that in what tribe the stranger sojourneth, there shall ye give him his inheritance, saith the Lord GOD.

The land is to be divided. Each tribe would receive a certain section. These sections form rectangles. If you're a student of the Bible and have tried to follow the location of the twelve tribes in the Old Testament, it's hard to do because the boundaries are very obscure at best. In the kingdom, when Israel is redivided by tribes, each of the tribes receives equal territory, all nice rectangles.

The stranger in any of these tribes is to be given his inheritance. This real estate that few would choose God gave to the Jews. Now He's giving a word to them in kingdom context. That is, "Treat the strangers right."

48 In chapter 48, we see each tribe's allotment in the land. Who would care about these dimensions, measurements, and specifics? we wonder. Who cares about where Dan, Asher, and Naphtali were to settle? Who cares about the boundaries of their land or the size of the suburbs?

I suggest the answer lies in the last verse . . .

Ezekiel 48:35
It was round about eighteen thousand measures: and the name of the city from that day shall be, The LORD is there.

The people to whom Ezekiel prophesied were captives in a foreign land. They had heard reports that their country had been obliterated, that the temple had been destroyed. But suddenly they hear a message from God, telling them not only that the temple would be rebuilt, that the Levites would be in place, that the priests would be in attendance, that all twelve tribes would be reunited and given a portion of the land—but, above all, that the city would be named Jehovah-Shammah, or "the Lord is there."

Maybe, like the Jews in Ezekiel's day, you feel displaced or forgotten, out of touch and out of hope. If you don't know the Lord, leave the captivity of sin behind and turn to Him, for He is as near as your confession of faith in Him (Romans 10:8–10).

And if you do know Him, take heart, for all Scripture is given by inspiration of God and is profitable for instruction in righteousness—including Ezekiel 48 (2 Timothy 3:16). Through this otherwise-obscure passage, the Lord would say to you, "Fear not. I haven't left you nor forsaken you. In fact, I have something planned and all measured out for you. The kingdom is right around the corner—and the best part about it is that I will be there."

DANIEL

Background to Daniel

Daniel was both a saint and a seer. Because he was a saint, his book is extremely practical. As we study his life and those of his friends, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, we see commitment, conviction, and courage in standing up against the world system and standing for the Lord. This book is an inspirational example to us and has tremendous lessons for us about how we are to walk in the world in which we live.

But because Daniel was also a seer, the book is very prophetic. In fact, it is perhaps the most prophetic book in the entire Bible for the Book of Daniel is the key that unlocks the Book of Revelation. Without understanding Daniel, the Book of Revelation would be an enigma and a mystery.

Because much of Daniel's prophecies have already been fulfilled, his book confounds the critics. Around the year A.D. 300, a theory was introduced that the reason Daniel was so accurate was because, although he declares he wrote his book in 600 B.C., it wasn't actually written until A.D. 50. In other words, it's a fake. This heresy is often repeated by "higher" critics still today. Thus, in his own day, Daniel was placed in the lion's den —but today he's in the liar's den.

Either these men are incredibly ignorant or downright fraudulent, for all one has to do is look at the Septuagint. The Septuagint, written in 285 B.C. was the Greek translation of the Old Testament. What book is right there in the Septuagint? Daniel. So how could it have been written in A.D. 50 when it was in the Septuagint in 285 B.C.? As Alexander conquered his way to the Middle East, Josephus wrote that, when he came to the city of Jerusalem, the high priest met with him.

"Alexander," he said, "you're mentioned in the Bible." Then he proceeded to open the Book of Daniel and show him where he fit in to the prophetic picture, how three hundred years earlier he was prophesied to come.

Alexander the Great was so moved that he spared the city of Jerusalem. Secular history records this event—so I don't know how critics can claim Daniel was written in A.D. 50 when Alexander was touched by it in 322 B.C.

But the most convincing argument of all is simply that Jesus Himself called Daniel the beloved prophet and quoted extensively from Daniel (Matthew 24; Luke 21). Whether concerning evolution, prophecy, divine inspiration of Scripture, or any other topic of debate, always take the argument back to the person of Jesus Christ. When people say they can't really believe there was a literal man named Adam and a woman named Eve, don't argue evolution. Bring the argument back to Jesus. Say, "The issue is not so much what you or I think about evolution. The issue is that Jesus spoke about Adam and Eve specifically and centered a teaching about marriage on them. So either Jesus is ignorant, a deceiver, or He is right."

"We know a man couldn't be swallowed by a fish. There's something 'fishy' about that kind of 'tail,' " the cynic scoffs.

Yet Jesus used Jonah's three-day stay in the belly of the whale as a picture of His own death, burial, and resurrection (Matthew 12:40).

Jesus used some of the most controversial accounts in the Old Testament —Adam and Eve, Jonah and the whale, Daniel—as foundations for His teaching. And because His Resurrection verifies everything He said, all of His references are equally true. Whenever you're involved in controversies, always steer the discussion back to Jesus. You'll find all of the illustrations and answers you need in Him.

The Book of Daniel confounds the critics—but it comforts the Christian because it confirms our faith. When people ask how we know the prophecies in the Bible will come to pass, we can turn them to the Book of Daniel and say, "Daniel made predictions concerning the Babylonian, Medo-Persian, Greek, and Roman empires centuries before the events came to pass." Therefore, we know that what he speaks of yet to come will also come to pass.

Sometimes people think we're obsessed with prophecy. But the reason we talk about prophecy so much is because one-fourth of the Bible deals with it. And it's the only holy book that dares to do so. Prophecy has a tremendous purifying effect on our faith and on our walk. After speaking about the coming of Jesus, John said, "Whoever has this hope purifies himself " (1 John 3:3). Truly believing that Jesus could come tonight would affect what we do today.

Another reason we talk about prophecy is found in chapter 12 . . .

But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end: many shall run to and fro, and knowledge shall be increased.

Daniel 12:4

According to this prophecy, in the end times, there will be an explosion of knowledge not only intellectually, but also concerning end-time understanding. "Seal this book, Daniel," the Lord says. "You're not going to understand it, but it will make sense to those who are living in the last days." There's a great amount of teaching on prophecy today because we are living in the last days and, suddenly, so much of these prophetic mysteries are making sense to us.

Not only is the Book of Daniel important in light of prophecy, but what a blessing it is to study the life of Daniel personally. Even in his own day, Daniel was a legend. His contemporary, Ezekiel, puts him in the same category as Job and Noah (14:14). In fact, he's one of only a couple of Old Testament characters of whom no sin is mentioned. This doesn't mean he didn't sin. But it does mean his life was not given to sin.

I think there are three words that characterize Daniel's life. The first is purpose. He was a man who purposed in his heart that he would walk with God. Second, he was a man of prayer. Third, he was a man of prophecy. He was interested in prophecy and was used as a vehicle for prophecy. These three points cause me to say, "Lord, make me a man who purposes in my heart. Make me a man who prays. Make me a man of prophetic understanding that I might know the urgency of the times in which I live."

In the third year of the reign of Jehoiakim king of Judah . . .

So carnal a king was Jehoiakim that when he received a scroll of prophecy from Jeremiah, he chopped it up and threw it in the fire—as if he could invalidate the Word of God. Jeremiah simply sought the Lord for another copy. This time, the Lord added a few things that were pointed directly at Jehoiakim because of his obstinacy. Jehoiakim was told that Judah, his kingdom, would be besieged by the Babylonians and that they would be carried away captive for seventy years because of their disobedience and tendency toward idolatry (Jeremiah 36).

Daniel 1:1 (b)
. . . came Nebuchadnezzar king of Babylon unto Jerusalem, and besieged it.

The third year of Jehoiakim would put us at 605 B.C.—the year Nebuchadnezzar, king of the Babylonian empire, the most powerful potentate not only of that day but probably of all time, seeking to consolidate his power in the Middle East, besieges Jerusalem.

Daniel 1:2 (a)
And the Lord gave Jehoiakim king of Judah into his hand . . .

Nebuchadnezzar thought he was in control, but, in fact, he was just a puppet, for it was the Lord who gave Jehoiakim to Nebuchadnezzar.

Daniel 1:2 (b)–4
. . . with part of the vessels of the house of God: which he carried into the land of Shinar to the house of his god; and he brought the vessels into the treasure house of his god. And the king spake unto Ashpenaz the master of his eunuchs, that he should bring certain of the children of Israel, and of the king's seed, and of the princes; Children in whom was no blemish, but well favoured, and skilful in all wisdom, and cunning in knowledge, and understanding science, and such as had ability in them to stand in the king's palace, and whom they might teach the learning and the tongue of the Chaldeans.

In his first attack, Nebuchadnezzar didn't destroy Jerusalem. He simply took treasures from the temple as well as the cream of the crop of the young men of Jerusalem. He made them eunuchs in order that they might study without distraction. Then he educated them in the laws of science and knowledge in preparation to become administrators throughout his empire.

As seen here, sin always leads to two things. The first is blasphemy. The instruments used in the temple to worship the true and living God were now carried to Babylon and placed in the immoral, idolatrous temples of the Babylon. Sin invariably causes people to feel blasphemous toward the Lord.

Second, sin always leads to bondage. The people of God were being carried in chains to Babylon because of their sin. That's what sin does. It has a way of ensnaring and trapping us.

Daniel 1:5–8
And the king appointed them a daily provision of the king's meat, and of the wine which he drank: so nourishing them three years, that at the end thereof they might stand before the king. Now among these were of the children of Judah, Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: Unto whom the prince of the eunuchs gave names: for he gave unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar; and to Hananiah, of Shadrach; and to Mishael, of Meshach; and to Azariah, of Abed-nego. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank: therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

When offered the king's food and wine, Daniel didn't want to defile himself with meat that may have been offered to idols or with wine that would pervert his judgment (Proverbs 31:4). I'm sure God wouldn't have faulted him had he partaken of the meat or wine. But, as Paul would say concerning meat and other issues, "All things are lawful for me, but all things are not expedient" (1 Corinthians 6:12). In other words, all things aren't wise.

I used to throw the discus and I know that the rule books specifically state that any kind of attire can be worn in the discus ring. Therefore, I could have gone in the ring wearing a business suit, tie, wingtip shoes, overcoat, and hat without being disqualified. It would have been lawful—but dumb! It would hinder the job I was there to do. So, Paul says that, although all things are lawful, some things will simply slow us down and tie us up. He went on to say, "All things are lawful for me, but I will not be brought under the power of any." Paul loved his freedom too much to be enslaved.

Where did Daniel get such high standards? First, I believe they came from his parents. You see, Daniel's name literally means "God is judge." Hananiah means "The Lord is gracious." Mishael means "None is like God." Azariah means "The Lord is my help." These were all godly names given by godly parents. When Daniel was born, a revival was taking place in the land of Judah led by a king named Josiah. He was the one who remodeled the temple. When, during the remodeling process, the sole surviving copy of the Law was found, revival broke out. No doubt Daniel's parents were influenced by this, as were the parents of his friends.

"Train up your children in the way they should go and when they are old, they will not depart from it," Solomon declares (Proverbs 22:6). That's a promise. Train your kids in the Word and ways of God and they will continue to walk with God. Oh, they might take a detour, but God's promise is that if you train up your kids, they'll walk with Him as time goes on.

In addition to parents at home, Daniel had purpose in his heart. That is, he decided he wouldn't defile himself. Are you being defiled tonight in some area? Victory begins when you purpose in your heart. Make a decision. Say, "That's it. No more."

I think of Shammah, one of David's right-hand men. In 2 Samuel 23, we read that the Philistines were attacking and Shammah was given the job of guarding the beans. When the Philistines came, everyone else split and ran for their lives. Not Shammah. He said, "I'm not going anywhere. I'll stay on my post and do my job." Shammah had purpose of heart. The Spirit of God came upon him and he whipped the entire Philistine army single-handedly just because he was watching the beans faithfully. That's purpose of heart.

Maybe you might wonder why you're in the church nursery changing diapers Sunday after Sunday, or why you're visiting people in the rest home week after week. But if the Lord has called you to do those things, be faithful. As He did with Shammah, He'll honor you and meet you there.

Daniel 1:9
Now God had brought Daniel into favour and tender love with the prince of the eunuchs.

Those who suggest this was some sort of sexual love just aren't reading the text for this is speaking of eunuchs.

Daniel 1:10
And the prince of the eunuchs said unto Daniel, I fear my lord the king, who hath appointed your meat and your drink: for why should he see your faces worse liking than the children which are of your sort? then shall ye make me endanger my head to the king.

"If you don't eat the feast that's before you," the prince of the eunuchs said to Daniel and his friends, "you're not going to be as healthy looking as the others. I want to get ahead in the empire—not lose my head!"

Daniel 1:11–13
Then said Daniel to Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us pulse to eat, and water to drink. Then let our countenances be looked upon before thee, and the countenance of the children that eat of the portion of the king's meat: and as thou seest, deal with thy servants.

"Give us a test," Daniel said. "Give us only vegetables and water for ten days and then compare us with those who are eating the king's meat and drinking his wine."

Daniel 1:14–19
So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days. And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat. Thus Melzar took away the portion of their meat, and the wine that they should drink; and gave them pulse. As for these four children, God gave them knowledge and skill in all learning and wisdom: and Daniel had understanding in all visions and dreams. Now at the end of the days that the king had said he should bring them in, then the prince of the eunuchs brought them in before Nebuchadnezzar. And the king communed with them; and among them all was found none like Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah: therefore stood they before the king.

You just can't out-give God. Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego gave themselves wholeheartedly to the Lord and what happened? They found favor with both God and man. When you give God your energy, talent, money, or ability, He will not "owe you one." He'll give back to you exceedingly abundantly above all you can ask or think (Ephesians 3:20).

The disciples certainly didn't lose out by loaning their boat to use as a floating pulpit, for in return He blessed them with so many fish their boat almost sunk (Luke 5). When the little boy gave his lunch to the Lord, he was one of the 5,000 in attendance who were filled to overflowing (Mark 6). When the widow gave her last bit of meal and oil to Elijah, she never lacked again (1 Kings 17).

One of the great lies of Satan is to try and get kids to think that if they serve Him, they will be unpopular and ostracized. That's just not true. Parents, show your kids the example of Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Say, "Here's some young men who refused to give in to the pressures and pleasures of the world—and they found favor with God and with men, as well." Yes, you will experience persecution if you give your life to the Lord—but there will be a sterling quality about your life and an attractiveness that comes only from walking with God. Violate that and you'll miss out on so much that God wants to do in your life.

Daniel 1:20, 21
And in all matters of wisdom and understanding, that the king inquired of them, he found them ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers that were in all his realm. And Daniel continued even unto the first year of king Cyrus.

Daniel was probably fifteen years old at this time. He lived until he was at least eighty-five. For the entire seventy years of the Babylonian captivity, Daniel was in a place of leadership and service because God had honored him.

We have a wrong image of God the Father. We think that whoever gives himself to God will be miserable. But nothing could be farther from the truth. Jesus said, "If you being evil know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will the heavenly Father give good gifts to His?" (Matthew 7:11).

Serve God. He'll bless your life. He really will.

2 The second chapter of Daniel has been called the backbone of Bible prophecy for Daniel 2 unlocks the rest of the prophecies of the Book of Daniel, which, in turn, unlock the prophecies of the Book of Revelation. For a good handle on eschatology—the study of end times—you need to be thoroughly familiar with the Book of Daniel and of chapter 2 specifically.

And in the second year of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar Nebuchadnezzar dreamed dreams, wherewith his spirit was troubled, and his sleep brake from him.

Psychologists tell us that ninety percent of a person's free mental time—the time not devoted to a specific activity—is spent wondering about the past or worrying about the future. Nebuchadnezzar was no exception.

Daniel 2:2, 3
Then the king commanded to call the magicians, and the astrologers, and the sorcerers, and the Chaldeans, for to shew the king his dreams. So they came and stood before the king. And the king said unto them, I have dreamed a dream, and my spirit was troubled to know the dream.

Schooled in the ancient literature and writings of other cultures, the Chaldeans were the most educated men in the empire. "Tell me what my dream means," Nebuchadnezzar said.

Daniel 2:4
Then spake the Chaldeans to the king in Syriack, O king, live for ever: tell thy servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation.

"Tell us the dream," the Chaldeans said, "and we'll give you the interpretation."

Daniel 2:5, 6
The king answered and said to the Chaldeans, The thing is gone from me: if ye will not make known unto me the dream, with the interpretation thereof, ye shall be cut in pieces, and your houses shall be made a dunghill. But if ye shew the dream, and the interpretation thereof, ye shall receive of me gifts and rewards and great honour: therefore shew me the dream, and the interpretation thereof.

"If you are as wise as you say you are, you should be able to tell me not only the interpretation, but the dream itself," Nebuchadnezzar answered. "Either tell me what I dreamed, or you guys are through."

Daniel 2:7–11
They answered again and said, Let the king tell his servants the dream, and we will shew the interpretation of it. The king answered and said, I know of certainty that ye would gain the time, because ye see the thing is gone from me. But if ye will not make known unto me the dream, there is but one decree for you: for ye have prepared lying and corrupt words to speak before me, till the time be changed: therefore tell me the dream, and I shall know that ye can shew me the interpretation thereof. The Chaldeans answered before the king, and said, There is not a man upon the earth that can shew the king's matter: therefore there is no king, lord, nor ruler, that asked such things at any magician, or astrologer, or Chaldean. And it is a rare thing that the king requireth, and there is none other that can shew it before the king, except the gods, whose dwelling is not with flesh.

"There is not a man on earth that can do what you ask," the Chaldeans said.

Daniel 2:12
For this cause the king was angry and very furious, and commanded to destroy all the wise men of Babylon.

Is there anything in tarot cards, astrology, palm reading? Yes. The devil is in them and that's why we're to stay away from them. The Bible says very clearly that magic of any sort is to have no place in the life of the believer because the enemy uses it as a hook to get us involved in realms of the demonic.

Having said that, there are tremendous limitations as to what Satan can actually do. That's why these men couldn't answer Nebuchadnezzar's demand.

Daniel 2:13, 14
And the decree went forth that the wise men should be slain; and they sought Daniel and his fellows to be slain. Then Daniel answered with counsel and wisdom to Arioch the captain of the king's guard, which was gone forth to slay the wise men of Babylon:

Because of the failure of the Chaldeans to tell Nebuchadnezzar his dream, all of the wise men—including Daniel—were to be killed.

Daniel 2:15, 16
He answered and said to Arioch the king's captain, Why is the decree so hasty from the king? Then Arioch made the thing known to Daniel. Then Daniel went in, and desired of the king that he would give him time, and that he would shew the king the interpretation.

Daniel asked for permission to speak to the king. "Give me some time," he said, "and I will tell you your dream as well as the interpretation."

Daniel 2:17, 18
Then Daniel went to his house, and made the thing known to Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, his companions: That they would desire mercies of the God of heaven concerning this secret; that Daniel and his fellows should not perish with the rest of the wise men of Babylon.

Don't you know that Daniel and his friends had one powerful prayer meeting that night?! They were literally praying for their lives. They needed to have revelation. They desired it desperately and they prayed accordingly.

Nebuchadnezzar took his problems to bed. Daniel took his to God—and what a difference that makes.

Daniel 2:19
Then was the secret revealed unto Daniel in a night vision. Then Daniel blessed the God of heaven.

When Daniel received an answer, did he run out in order to save the lives of those in jeopardy? No, he stopped and blessed the God of heaven.

For topical study of Daniel 2:16–19 entitled "Learning to Listen," turn to page 704.

Daniel 2:20–23
Daniel answered and said, Blessed be the name of God for ever and ever: for wisdom and might are his: And he changeth the times and the seasons: he removeth kings, and setteth up kings: he giveth wisdom unto the wise, and knowledge to them that know understanding: He revealeth the deep and secret things: he knoweth what is in the darkness, and the light dwelleth with him. I thank thee, and praise thee, O thou God of my fathers, who hast given me wisdom and might, and hast made known unto me now what we desired of thee: for thou hast now made known unto us the king's matter.

Daniel stopped and offered praise before he went out to save lives. I think that's an invaluable lesson. So often the Lord shows us something or gives us something and we can't wait to get going. In reality, before we run out, we should slow down and look up. We should worship and give thanks.

I think of the ten lepers in Luke 12. Jesus told them to go their way and show themselves to the priest. And as they went, they were healed. All ten rejoiced—but only one came back and thanked the Lord. "You are made whole," Jesus said to him. All ten were healed—but only the one who came back and worshiped was made whole, which speaks not only of his body but his soul and spirit, as well. Are we like the nine or are we like the one?

I like Daniel because he wasn't just a prayer warrior, but a praiser and a worshiper.

"But that's not efficient. Time is running out. You don't have time to pray." That's the voice of Judas. As Mary offered the alabaster box of oil to Jesus, Judas said, "That money could have been used for something much better, for feeding the poor."

But Jesus said, "What she is doing shall be spoken of throughout the world wherever the Gospel is preached" (see Mark 14:9).

Like Daniel, Mary was a praiser, a worshiper. And the Lord commended her.

Daniel 2:24–28
Therefore Daniel went in unto Arioch, whom the king had ordained to destroy the wise men of Babylon: he went and said thus unto him; Destroy not the wise men of Babylon: bring me in before the king, and I will shew unto the king the interpretation. Then Arioch brought in Daniel before the king in haste and said thus unto him, I have found a man of the captives of Judah, that will make known unto the king the interpretation. The king answered and said to Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, Art thou able to make known unto me the dream which I have seen, and the interpretation thereof? Daniel answered in the presence of the king, and said, The secret which the king hath demanded cannot the wise men, the astrologers, the magicians, the soothsayers, shew unto the king; But there is a God in heaven that revealeth secrets, and maketh known to the king Nebuchadnezzar what shall be in the latter days. Thy dream, and the visions of thy head upon thy bed, are these;

Daniel didn't say, "I can tell you your dream." He said, "Only the Lord can give you the information and understanding you seek." I believe this was why Daniel was used from the time he was a young man all the way until he was eighty-five. He didn't take credit. The fastest way to see the work of God through your life stopped is to begin to think it's because you're special.

Daniel 2:29, 30
As for thee, O king, thy thoughts came into thy mind upon thy bed, what should come to pass hereafter: and he that revealeth secrets maketh known to thee what shall come to pass. But as for me, this secret is not revealed to me for any wisdom that I have more than any living, but for their sakes that shall make known the interpretation to the king, and that thou mightest know the thoughts of thy heart.

“The Lord is simply using me as an errand boy in order that you might have answers to those things about which you’re concerned,” Daniel said to Nebuchadnezzar.

Daniel 2:31–35
Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This great image, whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This image’s head was of fine gold, his breast and his arms of silver, his belly and his thighs of brass, His legs of iron, his feet part of iron and part of clay. Thou sawest till that a stone was cut out without hands, which smote the image upon his feet that were of iron and clay, and brake them to pieces. Then was the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver, and the gold, broken to pieces together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them away, that no place was found for them: and the stone that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

What a dream! Nebuchadnezzar saw a massive image of a man with a head of gold, chest and arms of silver, a brass belly, iron legs, and feet and toes a mixture of iron and clay. Looking at this huge statue, Nebuchadnezzar saw a stone not cut with hands come rolling down. It hit the statue in the feet and pulverized it entirely. Suddenly, the stone became a great mountain that filled the entire earth. No wonder Nebuchadnezzar was troubled!

Notice that the head, arms and chest, belly, and the legs regressed in value. That is, gold is of greater value than silver, which is of greater value than brass, which is of greater value than iron. These four metals in this single image speak of world history in its entirety as it relates to Israel from the time of Nebuchadnezzar until the coming of Christ.

Daniel 2:36–38
This is the dream; and we will tell the interpretation thereof before the king. Thou, O king, art a king of kings: for the God of heaven hath given thee a kingdom, power, and strength, and glory. And wheresoever the children of men dwell, the beasts of the field and the fowls of the heaven hath he given into thine hand, and hath made thee ruler over them all. Thou art this head of gold.

The Babylonian empire, an absolute monarchy, had a greater effect on the known world than any other empire in history. That is why it was represented by gold.

Daniel 2:39 (a)
And after thee shall arise another kingdom inferior to thee . . .

The Medes and the Persians would overthrow the Babylonians in 530 B.C. The Medes and Persians, represented by two arms of silver were a constitutional monarchy.

Daniel 2:39 (b)
. . . and another third kingdom of brass, which shall bear rule over all the earth.

The Medes and Persians would be overthrown by the Greeks in 330 B.C. Alexander had conquered the known world. Heartbroken and depressed that there were no more worlds to conquer, he died at the age of thirty-three in a drunken stupor. Contrast this with Another who died at thirty-three years of age, One who conquered sin and death, Jesus Christ. The Grecian empire was represented by brass because, as an oligarchy, it was less powerful than the Medo-Persian Empire.

Daniel 2:40
And the fourth kingdom shall be strong as iron: forasmuch as iron breaketh in pieces and subdueth all things: and as iron that breaketh all these, shall it break in pieces and bruise.

The Greeks would be unseated by the Roman empire. Although they crushed everyone into bloody submission, the Romans, represented by iron, had a limited democracy, which made it even less powerful than Greece's oligarchy.

After four empires, the succession stops because in A.D. 70, the Romans annihilated Israel. The Jews scattered and Israel was never again a sovereign nation—until 1948. Suddenly, the prophetic clock miraculously started ticking again when Israel re-emerged as an independent nation. And now we see the appearance of the last world power . . .

Daniel 2:41–43
And whereas thou sawest the feet and toes, part of potters' clay, and part of iron, the kingdom shall be divided; but there shall be in it of the strength of the iron, forasmuch as thou sawest the iron mixed with miry clay. And as the toes of the feet were part of iron, and part of clay, so the kingdom shall be partly strong, and partly broken. And whereas thou sawest iron mixed with miry clay, they shall mingle themselves with the seed of men: but they shall not cleave one to another, even as iron is not mixed with clay.

In the feet, the composition is changed. These ten toes which are part iron and part clay don't hold together. In May, 1948, Israel became a nation once again. In May, 1950, two years later, six nations came together, formed the Treaty of Rome, and instituted a new, resurrected, Roman empire. They called it the European Common Market.

Daniel 2:44, 45
And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever. Forasmuch as thou sawest that the stone was cut out of the mountain without hands, and that it brake in pieces the iron, the brass, the clay, the silver, and the gold; the great God hath made known to the king what shall come to pass hereafter: and the dream is certain, and the interpretation thereof sure.

In the time of the ten nations, a stone not cut with hands comes down and strikes the feet. The entire image is pulverized. The stone is the Rock of our salvation, Jesus Christ. Peter says that, to the Jews, He is s a stone of stumbling (1 Peter 2:8). Indeed to this day, the Jewish people, for the most part, still stumble over Jesus being the Rock. To the Jews He is a stone of stumbling, 1 Corinthians 1 declares. To the Gentiles, He's a stone of crushing. He comes and grinds them out.

> . . . Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord's doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.
> Matthew 21:42 (b)–44

Concerning Jesus, the Rock of our salvation, we either are broken before Him or will be broken by Him. The choice is ours.

There are those who say that the kingdom will be ushered in as Christians change the economic, political, and educational systems. That is, we'll bring the King back by changing America. But that is heresy. As seen in Daniel, the stone doesn't come to convert the kingdoms of the world. It comes to crush them. It comes instantaneously, explosively, cataclysmically, and all of the empires—the great image of gold, silver, brass, and iron—are wiped out in a moment.

That is not to say we shouldn't be concerned citizens, praying for our country. But if you think that by changing America, we'll bring back the kingdom of God, you are sadly mistaken. The ultimate solution is when the King Himself comes back and strikes the feet of the image. Down it will go. And in its place, Jesus Christ will rule and reign. Oh, glorious day that will be!

> Then the king Nebuchadnezzar fell upon his face, and worshipped Daniel, and commanded that they should offer an oblation and sweet odours unto him. The king answered unto Daniel, and said,

Of a truth it is, that your God is a God of gods, and a Lord of kings, and a revealer of secrets, seeing thou couldest reveal this secret. Then the king made Daniel a great man, and gave him many great gifts, and made him ruler over the whole province of Babylon, and chief of the governors over all the wise men of Babylon. Then Daniel requested of the king, and he set Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, over the affairs of the province of Babylon: but Daniel sat in the gate of the king.

Unfortunately, Nebuchadnezzar doesn't say to Daniel, "Your God is my God." He says, "Your God is pretty impressive." Nonetheless, Nebuchadnezzar is making the first of a series of steps that will eventually lead him into the kingdom of God.

LEARNING TO LISTEN

A Topical Study of DANIEL 2:16–19

People have a tendency to be either fascinated with or frightened by the future. In our country alone, billions of dollars are spent by people going to fortune tellers, astrologers, or channelers. But those who truly know something about the future are more often than not frightened by it. Economists, political scientists, and biologists have a tendency to be upset about it. The economists are concerned about the size of the national debt. The political scientists are concerned about nuclear power in the wrong hands. The biologists are concerned about the ramifications of genetic engineering.

What's happening is ominous. No wonder Americans consume three billion sleeping pills per year. We're wondering and worrying about the future.

Such was the case with Nebuchadnezzar. The most powerful king in the history of the world, he tossed and turned as he wondered about the future of his kingdom. When he finally fell asleep, he had an incredible dream that has tremendous import for any student of prophecy. When he awoke, he knew he had a dream of significance, but he couldn't remember the details. So he called his astrologers, magicians, and wise men. When they were unable to help him, he called Daniel who, in turn, called upon the Lord.

Maybe, like Nebuchadnezzar, you feel troubled. Maybe, like Daniel, you need to hear from God. The question is, does God really speak today like He spoke to Daniel? I say absolutely, unequivocally, with tremendous certainty, the answer is Yes!

Notice with me five elements seen in the life of Daniel that will unlock your ability to hear the voice of God clearly . . .

Separation

Daniel lived a separated life. Others were drinking the king's wine, eating the king's meat, but Daniel had already purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the things of the world (1:8).

God is speaking. The problem is the wax of the world has plugged our spiritual ears. In Matthew 13, Jesus said that the cares of this world and the lust for riches choke out the Word of God. God is speaking. The question is, are we listening—or are our ears so plugged with the things of this world that we can't tune in to His frequency?

> An Indian was walking down Wall Street with a fellow stockbroker. A businessman who had grown up on a reservation, he suddenly stopped and said, "Did you hear that?"
> "Hear what?" his colleague asked.
> "Listen," he said, walking a few steps to a gutter and picking up a little cricket.
> "How in the world among all these people and hustle and bustle and horns and traffic, did you hear the sound of a single cricket?" his friend asked.
> "It all depends on what your ears are tuned into. Watch this," he said, as he tossed a quarter on the sidewalk. As it hit, everyone stopped.

No one heard the cricket, but they all heard the quarter. It all depends on what you're listening for. Does God speak? Yes. But the problem is that our ears are so filled with the sounds of the world that we don't hear His voice.

"No partying for me," Daniel said. "I'm going to seek the Lord." And that's why he was in a position to hear from the Lord.

Expectation

"Give me a day," Daniel said, "and I will show you the interpretation." In other words, Daniel knew God would speak to him. When you ask the Lord for His guidance or His Word, separation is where it begins. Expectation is the next step. You've got to believe the Lord is going to speak.

> If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God, that giveth to all men liberally, and upbraideth not; and it shall be given him. But let him ask in faith, nothing wavering. For he that wavereth is like a wave of the sea driven with the wind and tossed. For let not that man think that he shall receive any thing of the Lord.
> James 1:5–7

If I really believe the Lord is going to speak to me in my morning devotions or when I'm at a Bible study, I'll always have pencil and paper ready. James says the person who doesn't believe the Lord will speak will not receive anything from Him concerning wisdom and direction. Therefore, when you have your morning devotions don't lazily and halfheartedly say, "I wonder if there's anything in the Word for me today," but come eagerly and expectantly.

Cooperation

Daniel went to his friends and said, “Let’s seek the Lord together.” Over and over in His Word, the Lord teaches us that we are not to live in isolation but to live in cooperation. If you want to hear the Lord’s voice, follow the example of Daniel who sought the Lord with his friends.

Jesus said that wherever two or three are gathered in His name, He would be in their midst (Matthew 18:20). It’s not that He’s not with us when we’re alone—it’s that there’s another dynamic that comes into play when we seek the Lord with our brothers and sisters. It’s all part of His plan to develop a body that is linked together and dependent upon one another.

Desperation

Daniel and his friends knew that if the Lord didn't give them an answer, they were dead. We don't often seek the voice of the Lord because we don't think our situation could be classified as desperate. That's how the early church initially felt. It wasn't until James was sawn in half by Herod that the church got on her face before the Lord and prayed with intensity on behalf of Peter. And, as they prayed for him with desperation, Peter was delivered miraculously (Acts 12).

We never know what lies around the corner in our lives, in our vocations, with our children. We don't know what tomorrow holds. Therefore, we can't afford to take life casually. James tells us we don't have because we don't ask (4:2). Kids get into trouble unnecessarily because parents aren't praying desperately. Divorces and separations occur tragically because, when things were going smoothly, the couples weren't praying together consistently. I'm convinced all kinds of trouble comes our way unnecessarily because we think we don't need to pray.

We need to realize that we're at war, that Satan goes about seeking whom he may devour (1 Peter 5:8). Therefore, we need to keep our guard up and our knees bent. We need to be building a wall of protection around our families and around our lives personally. If God allowed us to see the very real dangers that surround us, I guarantee we wouldn't be so casual.

Communication

Daniel was given an answer in order that he might pass it on to Nebuchadnezzar.

In Genesis 18, as the Lord and two angels moved toward Sodom and Gomorrah en route to destroy the city, the Lord said, "Shall I not show unto Abraham the things that I am going to do? For I know him that He shall command his children and make My ways known to them." God knew that His friend, Abraham, would pass on His words to his children.

Revelation from the Lord is not necessarily given to those who treat it merely as an interesting insight. It is given to those who will faithfully pass it on to others.

> God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son . . .
> Hebrews 1:1, 2 (a)

The ultimate Word concerning anything you need to know about life and eternity is found in listening to and learning of Jesus. It all starts there. Then, having been in touch with the living Word, you will be in position to receive the directive word concerning your specific situation.

Learn of Jesus. Listen for Him. Believe that He will speak to you—and I guarantee He will.

3 In chapter 3, twenty years after he said to Daniel, "Your God is the God of gods, the Lord of kings," Nebuchadnezzar does something that reveals the true state of his heart . . .

> Daniel 3:1
> Nebuchadnezzar the king made an image of gold, whose height was threescore cubits, and the breadth thereof six cubits: he set it up in the plain of Dura, in the province of Babylon.

In recent years, archaeologists have excavated in the plain of Dura a pedestal forty feet high and twenty feet wide. They are convinced it is upon this pedestal that Nebuchadnezzar's ninety-foot-high statue of pure gold stood. In chapter 2, only the golden head of the image in his dream signified his empire. In the image he constructs here in chapter 3, however, the entire image is gold as if to say, "My empire will not be followed by another. It will last forever."

Daniel 3:2–6
Then Nebuchadnezzar the king sent to gather together the princes, the governors, and the captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, to come to the dedication of the image which Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up. Then the princes, the governors, and captains, the judges, the treasurers, the counsellors, the sheriffs, and all the rulers of the provinces, were gathered together unto the dedication of the image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up; and they stood before the image that Nebuchadnezzar had set up. Then an herald cried aloud, To you it is commanded, O people, nations, and languages, That at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king hath set up: And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth shall the same hour be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace.

Nebuchadnezzar commanded that, when the music was played, everyone would bow down to this ninety-foot-high image. Failure to do so would result in death.

Daniel 3:7
Therefore at that time, when all the people heard the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and all kinds of musick, all the people, the nations, and the languages, fell down and worshipped the golden image that Nebuchadnezzar the king had set up.

Music remains a powerful tool that can be used by both the kingdom of light and the kingdom of darkness. Why is music so powerful? Because Satan is a musician. Before he fell, he led all of heaven in worship. God created music and ordained it as a means of praise. Therefore, music remains a constant battlefield that can either motivate us to worship with intensity or to fall into idolatry. Be oh, so wise as to what music you take in because there is always a Nebuchadnezzar striking up the band.

Daniel 3:8–12
Wherefore at that time certain Chaldeans came near, and accused the Jews. They spake and said to the king Nebuchadnezzar, O king, live for ever. Thou, O king, hast made a decree, that every man that shall hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, shall fall down and worship the golden image: And whoso falleth not down and worshippeth, that he should be cast into the midst of a burning fiery furnace. There are certain Jews whom thou hast set over the affairs of the province of Babylon, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego; these men, O king, have not re garded thee: they serve not thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego said, "We're not going to give in. We're not going to go along. We're not going to bow down when Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonian Be-Boppers strike up the up the band."

Daniel 3:13
Then Nebuchadnezzar in his rage and fury commanded to bring Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Then they brought these men before the king.

Where was Daniel? Most commentators believe he was on government business out of the area.

Daniel 3:14, 15
Nebuchadnezzar spake and said unto them, Is it true, O Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, do not ye serve my gods, nor worship the golden image which I have set up? Now if ye be ready that at what time ye hear the sound of the cornet, flute, harp, sackbut, psaltery, and dulcimer, and all kinds of musick, ye fall down and worship the image which I have made; well: but if ye worship not, ye shall be cast the same hour into the midst of a burning fiery furnace; and who is that God that shall deliver you out of my hands?

Nebuchadnezzar conquered countries, looted riches, captured people, but he allowed people to worship their own gods. He was considered very liberal and generous in that regard. He let people worship their gods—but he also wanted them to worship his.

That's always the way of the enemy. "You can go to church," he says. "But on Friday night, you have to watch the movie, check out the bar scene, bow down to me. Then, on Sunday, you can go to church again." The enemy will give you the freedom to worship God, hoping you'll feel okay about bowing down to his idols. It's a trade. That's always his way.

Daniel 3:16–18
Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, answered and said to the king, O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God whom we serve is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods, nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up.

In the answer of these three godly men, we see a very important lesson. "God is able to deliver us," they said. But then they added, "Even if He decides not to, we're still not going to bow down." They didn't doubt God's power to save them. But they submitted to His will concerning whether He intended to save them. They weren't doubting God's ability. They were submitting to His sovereignty.

> Who through faith subdued kingdoms, wrought righteousness, obtained promises, stopped the mouths of lions, Quenched the violence of fire, escaped the edge of the sword, out of weakness were made strong, waxed valiant in fight, turned to flight the armies of the aliens.

By faith, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego "quenched the violence of fire." In other words, because they had faith, they weren't burned. But faith in what? They didn't have faith in faith. They had faith in their Father.

When we pour out our requests to God and say, "If You decide not to heal me, bring me that financial windfall, or save my business, it doesn't matter. All I want is Your will"—that is true faith. How I pray we can learn this.

> Daniel 3:19
> Then was Nebuchadnezzar full of fury, and the form of his visage was changed against Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego: therefore he spake, and commanded that they should heat the furnace one seven times more than it was wont to be heated.

The only thing hotter than the fiery furnace was Nebuchadnezzar's anger.

> Daniel 3:20–22
> And he commanded the most mighty men that were in his army to bind Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, and to cast them into the burning fiery furnace. Then these men were bound in their coats, their hosen, and their hats, and their other garments, and were cast into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Therefore because the king's commandment was urgent, and the furnace exceeding hot, the flame of the fire slew those men that took up Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego.

The men that threw Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego into the fire were themselves burned in the process.

> Daniel 3:23–25 (a)

And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, fell down bound into the midst of the burning fiery furnace. Then Nebuchadnezzar the king was astonied, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire? They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see four men loose, walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt . . .

The ropes that bound Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego were burned off by the fiery trial surrounding them. That is why Peter would tell us to rejoice in fiery trials (1 Peter 4:12, 13). They burn off the cords that would otherwise paralyze us.

Daniel 3:25 (b)
. . . and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God.

"How many men did we throw in the fire?" Nebuchadnezzar asked.

"Three," came the answer.

"Then how come I see four—and the fourth is like the Son of God?"

This fiery trial was a testimony to a skeptical, angry unbeliever who saw Jesus in the fire along with Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. There are neighbors and colleagues, fellow students and coworkers watching you. And when you go through fiery trials, as they watch you, they will see Jesus with you.

For topical study of Daniel 3:8–25 entitled "Handling the Heat," turn to page* 710.

Daniel 3:26, 27
Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the mouth of the burning fiery furnace, and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither. Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, came forth of > the midst of the fire. And the princes, governors, and captains, and the king's counsellors, being gathered together, saw these men, upon whose bodies the fire had no power, nor was an hair of their head singed, neither were their coats changed, nor the smell of fire had passed on them.

In addition to burning off the ropes that bound them, and letting others see Jesus, fiery trials are an opportunity for us to draw closer to the Lord than we would have otherwise. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego would have rather been in the fire with Jesus than out of the fire without Him. That is why they stayed there until Nebuchadnezzar ordered them to come out. When do we really see the Lord? More often than not, it's when we're in the midst of a fiery trial.

Prophetically, chapter 3 speaks of the time the Jews, represented by Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, take a stand in the fiery trial of the Tribulation period. According to Revelation 17 and 18, in the end times, there will be a unified religious system and a unified economic system both called Babylon. Where are the Jews in Daniel 3? In Babylon.

Just as Nebuchadnezzar made an image and commanded the people to bow to it, in the Tribulation period, antichrist will make an image and command everyone to bow to it. Initially, Nebuchadnezzar treated Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego well. Antichrist will initially come as a man of peace. But his true colors will show when he makes an image of himself and sets it in the temple.

> And he had power to give life unto the image of the beast, that the image of the beast should both speak, and cause that as many as would not worship the image of the beast should be killed. And he causeth all, both small and great, rich and poor, free and bond, to receive a mark in their right hand, or in their foreheads: And that no man might buy or sell, save he that had the mark, or the name of the beast, or the number of his name. Here is wisdom. Let him that hath understanding count the number of the beast: for it is the number of a man; and his number is Six hundred threescore and six.
> Revelation 13:15–18

The number of the image of the beast is 666. Nebuchadnezzar's image was sixty cubits high, six feet wide, and there were six kinds of instruments played. Thus, Nebuchadnezzar's image is a foreshadowing of the beast of the Tribulation period.

> And the beast was taken, and with him the false prophet that wrought miracles before him, with which he deceived them that had received the mark of the beast, and them that worshipped his image. These both were cast alive into a lake of fire burning with brimstone.
> Revelation 19:20

The beast gets burned in the very fire in which he sought to destroy the Jews. Eventually, the Jewish nation at last recognized that the Lord Jesus is Messiah. Like Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, they won't bow to antichrist but will stand strong in the seven-year fiery furnace of Tribulation. When it looks like they're going to be burned up—just as He did with the three brave men—Jesus will stand in the fire with His people. He'll return at the very point they think they're going down.

> Daniel 3:28–30
> Then Nebuchadnezzar spake, and said, Blessed be the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, who hath sent his angel, and delivered his servants that trusted in him, and have changed the king's word, and yielded their bodies, that they might not serve nor worship any god, except their own God. Therefore I make a decree, That every people, nation, and language, which speak any thing amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill: because there is no other God that can deliver after this sort. Then the king promoted Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, in the province of Babylon.

When Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego emerged from the furnace unharmed, Nebuchadnezzar was amazed, but still not converted. "There is no other God that can deliver after this sort," he declared. He should have stopped with, "There is no other God." And soon, he will.

HANDLING THE HEAT

DANIEL 3:8–25

Recent polls reveal that twenty-five percent of adult Americans think the sun is a planet, two percent believe federal income taxes are too low, and one percent read their Bibles more than once a day. In other words, there seem to be statistics for everything, all with varying results. But I suggest one statistic that would be universally agreed upon is that virtually a hundred percent of believers feel they have gone through a trying time, a difficult experience, a hard trial. According to Peter, this should not come as a surprise to us . . .

> Beloved, think it not strange concerning the fiery trial which is to try you, as though some strange thing happened unto you: But rejoice, inasmuch as ye are partakers of Christ's sufferings; that, when his glory shall be revealed, ye may be glad also with exceeding joy.
> 1 Peter 4:12, 13

Previously, Peter gave the reason for the inevitable trials we face . . .

> That the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried with fire, might be found unto praise and honour and glory at the appearing of Jesus Christ:
> 1 Peter 1:7

To those living in Peter's day, his analogy would mean more than it might to us, for they would be more familiar with the process used to refine gold. In huge furnaces, they would subject the gold to high enough temperatures to liquefy it. The smelter would then stir this molten gold until all impurities were gone. It took heat to make it pure. And the smelter would know the process was complete when he looked into the liquid gold and saw his own reflection—just as Jesus looks for the reflection of Himself in the gold of our faith as it is purified by fiery trials.

The text before us tells us a great deal about fiery trials. You might think you're going through hot times, but the three Jewish men seen here were in a literal fire. Their names were Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego—three godly men who were taken captive from Jerusalem to Babylon, where they were being trained for the service of the Babylonian king, Nebuchadnezzar.

When Nebuchadnezzar ordered his people to bow to a ninety-foot-tall image of himself, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego refused—which resulted in their death sentence by way of a fiery furnace. This furnace wasn't a little oven used to bake rolls and biscuits but an industrial furnace in which iron was smelted and bricks were hardened. It was huge—and very, very hot. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, however, had no misgivings about their decision, having told Nebuchadnezzar that God would deliver them—either through death or rescue. So into the fire they went—a fire seven times hotter than normal because Nebuchadnezzar's rage was apparently seven times greater than it usually was due to the audacious faith of the three Jews.

Notice with me three aspects concerning the fiery trial of these bold believers . . .

The Time of the Trial

The trial did not come to Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego when they were stumbling in sin but when they were standing strong for Him. It would have been so easy for them to back out, to make excuses. They could have said to each other, "Sure, we'll bow down to Nebuchadnezzar's idol outwardly—but in our hearts, we'll be bowing to the Lord. Surely, with all we've been through already, He'll understand our situation." Or they could have said, "This isn't that big a deal. So we bow to the idol? We can still live for the Lord." Or they could have said, "We'll use this as an opportunity for even greater ministry. If we go along with Nebuchadnezzar's order, he'll leave us in positions of leadership and we can eventually impact more people for God." But they didn't. They resisted all of those excuses and stood up when the trial came down.

We must understand that the Lord sends His trials most frequently not when we're stumbling and struggling but when He sees that we're doing well. After all, Jesus said it's the branch that's already bearing fruit that is pruned in order that it might bring forth even more fruit (John 15:2).

Satan comes to us and says the reason we're going through hard times is because the Lord's angry with us. But that's just not true. If one of my kids burned his or her hand on the stove when they were little, I wouldn't need to punish them for it. They would learn quickly that they shouldn't touch the stove because the repercussions of the sin itself taught them most convincingly. It was when my kids were already doing well that I would challenge them and exhort them because I wanted to see them do even better. And that's what the Father does with us.

That is why James would tell us to count it all joy when we face various trials (1:2)—it means the Father sees something in us worth building upon and improving.

Peace in the Trial

We read in verse 24 that Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego weren't running around in the fire, trying to find a way out. They weren't taking off their clothes and trying to snuff out the flames. They weren't sitting down in a corner crying about their ordeal. They weren't striving, complaining, or even seeking to get out. They were simply walking around.

When the going gets tough and the fires grow hot, we have a tendency to want to control the fire if not to put it out altogether. But we must realize that, although we might be able to contain the fire for a season, it will only get hotter eventually. Therefore, we must learn to let the fire burn rather than trying to put it out or cover it up.

When people come down on you, when they don't understand you, when things don't seem to be working out, don't defend yourself. Don't stand up for your rights. Don't try to control the fire. Instead, say, "Lord, let the fire burn. And if anything is left when it's over, I'll know it's of You and I'll rebuild with that material."

Fellowship Through the Trial

"Didn't we throw three men into the fire?" Nebuchadnezzar asked.

"Yes," said his men.

"But I see four," Nebuchadnezzar said. "And the fourth is like the Son of God."

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego could walk around in the fire in peace and they could let it burn with confidence for one reason: the Lord was in there with them.

"I will never leave thee nor forsake thee," Jesus said (Hebrews 13:5). That means He's with us in whatever fiery trial that comes our way. And if we look for Him there, we'll see Him in a way we never would have seen Him otherwise. We can talk esoterically about the Lord. We can discuss theologically His presence. But it's not until we're in the fire of trial that we truly know He's alive, that He's with us, that He's for us.

That's what Stephen found. It was when he was being stoned that he looked up and saw the Son of Man welcoming him into the kingdom (Acts 7:56). That's what Paul discovered. It was most likely after he was stoned at Lystra and left for dead that he was caught up into heaven (2 Corinthians 12:2–4). That's what John learned. It was when he was banished to the island of Patmos that he heard a voice, turned around, and saw the Lord (Revelation 1:9–11).

When do people really see the Lord? Most often, it's not when they're cruising, but when they're cooking. And not only do we see the Lord in hot and hard times, but others are able to see Him as well. You see, the Nebuchadnezzars of this world are not impressed when they see us win the Reader's Digest Sweepstakes. That only makes them jealous. They're impressed when they see us going through the fire of hard times without panicking. It is then they realize that Someone must be in there with us.

Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego didn't come out of the fire until Nebuchadnezzar ordered them out. Maybe you're getting to the place in your walk where you would rather be in the fire of hard times with the Lord than cruising in the shade without an awareness of His presence.

Jesus went through a fire greater than anything you or I can comprehend when He went to the Cross to shield us from the fires of hell. Dr. Donald Barnhouse, one of the great Bible teachers of a generation past, tells a story of what happened to him when he was a boy living in the country. He tells of a large oak tree in front of the barn next to his house that, struck by lightning, lit up like a torch. Before the fire from the oak tree leaped to the roof of the barn, his family was able to move most of the barn animals to safety before it collapsed altogether. The next day, little Donald went out and began to kick around in the ashes. As he kicked one rather large clump, much to his surprise, four little chicks ran out in all directions. He later learned that the mother hen, trapped in the corner of the barn, did what mother hens instinctively do: She gathered her chicks under her wings, absorbed the heat herself, and died to save their lives.

On a hillside overlooking Jerusalem, Jesus cried and said, "Jerusalem, Jerusalem, I would gather you under my wings as a mother hen gathers her chicks, but you would not" (see Matthew 23:37). The Lord died to insulate you from the fires of judgment. But He will not insulate us from the fires of trials. He'll allow them to come into our lives to reveal Himself to us and to the bunch of Nebuchadnezzars who are watching us.

In chapter 4, we see the testimony of the last person you would ever think would be saved. Nebuchadnezzar was king of the Babylonian empire and here we see the story of his conversion.

Daniel 4:1–3
Nebuchadnezzar the king, unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you. I thought it good to shew the signs and wonders that the high God hath wrought toward me. How great are his signs! and how mighty are his wonders! his kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and his dominion is from generation to generation.

In this letter addressed to all people around the world, Nebuchadnezzar sounds like the apostle Paul as he begins his own conversion story.

Daniel 4:4, 5
I Nebuchadnezzar was at rest in mine house, and flourishing in my palace: I saw a dream which made me afraid, and the thoughts upon my bed and the visions of my head troubled me.

The most powerful ruler in the history of the world was at rest in his palace and flourishing in his position. Yet, as he laid on his bed, he was troubled. The person you might think is so closed to the gospel could, like Nebuchadnezzar, be struggling with questions about eternity, mortality, the purpose of life—the questions we, as believers, settled when we gave our heart to Jesus.

Daniel 4:6, 7
Therefore made I a decree to bring in all the wise men of Babylon before me, that they might make known unto me the interpreta tion of the dream. Then came in the magicians, the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers: and I told the dream before them; but they did not make known unto me the interpretation thereof.

When Nebuchadnezzar woke up, he didn't know what to make of his dream. He knew it had significance, but he couldn't put the pieces together. So he did the same thing he did in chapter 2. Even though they were powerless the first time, he called his magicians to interpret his dream.

Daniel 4:8, 9
But at the last Daniel came in before me, whose name was Belteshazzar, according to the name of my god, and in whom is the spirit of the holy gods: and before him I told the dream, saying, O Belteshazzar, master of the magicians, because I know that the spirit of the holy gods is in thee, and no secret troubleth thee, tell me the visions of my dream that I have seen, and the interpretation thereof.

When the magicians were again unable to interpret his dream, Nebuchadnezzar called for Daniel.

Daniel 4:10–12
Thus were the visions of mine head in my bed; I saw, and behold a tree in the midst of the earth, and the height thereof was great. The tree grew, and was strong, and the height thereof reached unto heaven, and the sight thereof to the end of all the earth: The leaves thereof were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all: the beasts of the field had shadow under it, and the fowls of the heaven dwelt in the boughs thereof, and all flesh was fed of it.

Nebuchadnezzar's dream was of a tree so big that all of the beasts of the earth could gather underneath it. It had many leaves and an abundance of fruit. Plus, it grew so high that one could see it from any point on earth.

Daniel 4:13–18
I saw in the visions of my head upon my bed, and, behold, a watcher and an holy one came down from heaven; He cried aloud, and said thus, Hew down the tree, and cut off his branches, shake off his leaves, and scatter his fruit: let the beasts get away from under it, and the fowls from his branches: Nevertheless leave the stump of his roots in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts in the grass of the earth: Let his heart be changed from man's, and let a beast's heart be given unto him; and let seven times pass over him. This matter is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones: to the intent that the living may know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will, and setteth up over it the basest of men. This dream I king Nebuchadnezzar have seen. Now thou, O Belteshazzar, declare the interpretation thereof, forasmuch as all the wise men of my kingdom are not able to make known unto me the interpretation: but thou art able; for the spirit of the holy gods is in thee.

As this magnificent tree extended into the heavens, an angel descended and cut the tree down, leaving only a stump behind.

Daniel 4:19
Then Daniel, whose name was Belteshazzar, was astonied for one hour, and his thoughts troubled him. The king spake, and said, Belteshazzar, let not the dream, or the interpretation thereof, trouble thee. Belteshazzar answered and said, My lord, the dream be to them that hate thee, and the interpretation thereof to thine enemies.

Daniel sat speechless for an hour. Finally, he said to Nebuchadnezzar, "I wish this dream applied not to you but to your enemies."

Notice Daniel's tenderness. He could have said, "This serves you right, Nebuchadnezzar. You've been such a pain to so many people for so long, you deserve what's going to happen." But he didn't. Ezra was another one who was rendered speechless over the sin of his people (9:1–4). Jesus, of course, wept (Luke 19:41). You might be able to quote theology. You might have countless charts on eschatology. There might be no end to the knowledge in your head—but until people see your heart, they won't receive from you.

Daniel 4:20–26
The tree that thou sawest, which grew, and was strong, whose height reached unto the heaven, and the sight thereof to all the earth; Whose leaves were fair, and the fruit thereof much, and in it was meat for all; under which the beasts of the field dwelt, and upon whose branches the fowls of the heaven had their habitation: It is thou, O king, that art grown and become strong: for thy greatness is grown, and reacheth unto heaven, and thy dominion to the end of the earth. And whereas the king saw a watcher and an holy one coming down from heaven, and saying, Hew the tree down, and destroy it; yet leave the stump of the roots thereof in the earth, even with a band of iron and brass, in the tender grass of the field; and let it be wet with the dew of heaven, and let his portion be with the beasts of the field, till seven times pass over him; This is the interpretation, O king, and this is the decree of the most High, which is come upon my lord the king: That they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field, and they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and they shall wet thee with the dew of heaven, and seven times shall pass over thee, till thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will. And whereas they commanded to leave the stump of the tree roots; thy kingdom shall be sure unto thee, after that thou shalt have known that the heavens do rule.

"You are the tree, Nebuchadnezzar, standing so tall. But you will be cut down low and driven out to the fields where you will live like a beast for seven years," Daniel said. "But, just as the stump of the tree was left, you will return to power."

Daniel 4:27
Wherefore, O king, let my counsel be acceptable unto thee, and break off thy sins by righteousness, and thine iniquities by shewing mercy to the poor; if it may be a lengthening of thy tranquillity.

In addition to Daniel's tenderness, notice his honesty. "Turn away from your unrighteousness," he said to Nebuchadnezzar. Like Daniel, we need to be those who care enough to say to people, "You've got to turn away from the path you're on. You've got to come to Jesus."

That's what Jesus did. "Sell your goods and follow Me," He said to the rich, young ruler, knowing riches were his god (Luke 18). The ultimate expression of self-love is not telling people the truth but rather withholding the truth from people who are lost.

In contrast to the tenderness and honesty of Daniel, notice the stubbornness and stupidity of Nebuchadnezzar . . .

Daniel 4:28–30

All this came upon the king Nebuchadnezzar. At the end of twelve months he walked in the palace of the kingdom of Babylon. The king spake, and said, Is not this great Babylon, that I have built for the house of the kingdom by the might of my power, and for the honour of my majesty?

Not only did Nebuchadnezzar hear from the Lord through the dreams that Daniel interpreted, but he literally saw the Lord in the fire with Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego. Like the relentless "Hound of heaven," God was pursuing Nebuchadnezzar. But Nebuchadnezzar hardened his heart and refused to acknowledge Him.

Pride is the foundational sin of everyone who is not saved. Pride is what caused Lucifer to fall.

Daniel 4:31–33
While the word was in the king's mouth, there fell a voice from heaven, saying, O king Nebuchadnezzar, to thee it is spoken; The kingdom is departed from thee. And they shall drive thee from men, and thy dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field: they shall make thee to eat grass as oxen, and seven times shall pass over thee, until thou know that the most High ruleth in the kingdom of men, and giveth it to whomsoever he will. The same hour was the thing fulfilled upon Nebuchadnezzar: and he was driven from men, and did eat grass as oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven, till his hairs were grown like eagles' feathers, and his nails like birds' claws.

Just as Daniel had prophesied, Nebuchadnezzar went insane and developed a rare medical condition known as lycanthropy. Even in this we see God's faithfulness and tenacity. "Whatever it takes, I'm going after you, Nebuchadnezzar," He said. "Even if it means allowing you to eat grass like an ox, develop feathers like an eagle, and grow claws like a bird, I'm going to bring you to the place where you see you need Me."

God's faithfulness and tenacity to go after people never fails to astound me. God will do whatever it takes to bring people to a place where they see they need Him.

Daniel 4:34
And at the end of the days I Nebuchadnezzar lifted up mine eyes unto heaven, and mine understanding returned unto me, and I blessed the most High, and I praised and honoured him that liveth for ever, whose dominion is an everlasting dominion, and his kingdom is from generation to generation:

The first sign of Nebuchadnezzar's conversion was that, instead of looking down like a beast, he looked up to heaven.

Daniel 4:35
And all the inhabitants of the earth are reputed as nothing: and he doeth according to his will in the army of heaven, and among the inhabitants of the earth: and none can stay his hand, or say unto him, What doest thou?

The centurion whose servant was sick spoke to Jesus as a man in authority speaking to One with ultimate authority (Matthew 8:9). So too, Nebuchadnezzar speaks of God as a king speaking of the King of kings.

Daniel 4:36 (a)
At the same time my reason returned unto me; and for the glory of my kingdom, mine honour and brightness returned unto me . . .

Just as the prodigal "came to himself" (Luke 15:17), Nebuchadnezzar's reason and understanding returned to him. In other words, they were both returned to the men they were before they were railroaded by pride.

Daniel 4:36 (b), 37
. . . and my counsellors and my lords sought unto me; and I was established in my kingdom, and excellent majesty was added unto me. Now I Nebuchadnezzar praise and extol and honour the King of heaven, all whose works are truth, and his ways judgment: and those that walk in pride he is able to abase.

Exactly as Daniel prophesied, Nebuchadnezzar returned to power, only this time he knew that his power came not from his own ability but from God's mercy.

5 If I could have one piece of furniture from my childhood, I think it would be our family's kitchen table. It is round and seats six easily—ten or twelve if the leaves are added. I have extremely fond memories of that table because, as I was growing up, after almost every dinner, there would be discussions around that table that would go on at length—discussions not only about the things we did that day but, about politics and philosophy, about religion and Bible prophecy.

Thinking about that table, however, I also have a troubling memory. You see, my older brother, Dave, always sat across from me. Six years older than I, when I was four, five, six, and seven years old, inevitably as the dinner discussions unfolded, suddenly, I was aware that something was happening. Under the table, out of my mom and dad's sight, I knew that my brother Dave's index finger was pointing at me. I just knew it. Even though he was sitting all the way across the table, I could feel it. So I would look underneath, and, sure enough, there was his finger pointing at me.

"Mom, Dave's pointing at me," I would cry.

And she would say, "Jonny, don't worry about it. Just eat your peas and ignore him."

So I would eat my peas—until I had the sensation that Dave's finger was still pointing at me.

Looking under the table, I would see it and cry out all the more. This went on night after night. Usually, about the third or fourth time, it was overpowering because when Dave really wanted to get to me, it wasn't a single finger point at me—it was all five.

Eventually, hearing my cry, Mom and Dad would banish Dave to his room. And then I was spared from the troubling fingers.

But in our text we see another finger appearing that was even more troubling than the finger of my brother pointing at me. In Daniel 5, we see the story of fingers appearing mysteriously and writing a message to the king of Babylon. The year is 539 B.C. Nebuchadnezzar has been dead and gone for twenty years. When he died, he turned the kingdom over to his son-in-law, Nabonidus. Often away from the city, engaged in military conflicts, Nabonidus turned the day-today operation of the kingdom over to his son, Belshazzar.

Babylon was thought to be absolutely invincible. It was surrounded by double walls, one of which was three hundred fifty feet high and eighty-six feet wide—wide enough for six chariots to race around the top and strong enough to support two hundred fifty towers from which the Babylonian soldiers could not only watch but launch an attack. Inside, the city held supplies that could withstand a twenty-year siege.

During the reign of Belshazzar, in the year 539 B.C., the Medes and the Persians formed a military alliance. Audaciously thinking they could overthrow Babylon, they launched an invasion . . .

Daniel 5:1
Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand.

Belshazzar threw a party for his leaders in an apparent show of strength to the Medes and Persians who were beginning to surround the city. "We don't need to fight or fast in fear," he said, "Let's feast!"

Daniel 5:2 (a)
Belshazzar, whiles he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver vessels which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the temple which was in Jerusalem . . .

Years earlier, after conquering the city of Jerusalem, Nebuchadnezzar brought back holy vessels, taken from the temple of Jehovah.

Daniel 5:2 (b)–4
. . . that the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, might drink therein. Then they brought the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God which was at Jerusalem; and the king, and his princes, his wives, and his concubines, drank in them. They drank wine, and praised the gods of gold, and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood, and of stone.

The only reason women would be in attendance at a party like this would be for immoral purposes. That's the problem with worldly parties. More often than not, the results are immorality and blasphemy, with people doing and saying things they regret the next day.

Daniel 5:5, 6
In the same hour came forth fingers of a man's hand, and wrote over against the candlestick upon the plaister of the wall of the king's palace: and the king saw the part of the hand that wrote. Then the king's countenance was changed, and his thoughts troubled him, so that the joints of his loins were loosed, and his knees smote one against another.

When Belshazzar suddenly saw a man's hand writing on the wall of his palace, he didn't need coffee to become sober.

Daniel 5:7
The king cried aloud to bring in the astrologers, the Chaldeans, and the soothsayers. And the king spake, and said to the wise men of Babylon, Whosoever shall read this writing, and shew me the interpretation thereof, shall be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about his neck, and shall be the third ruler in the kingdom.

Nabonidus was the first ruler, Belshazzar the second. The man who could interpret the writing on the wall would be right behind them.

Daniel 5:8–12
Then came in all the king's wise men: but they could not read the writing, nor make known to the king the interpretation thereof. Then was king Belshazzar greatly troubled, and his countenance was changed in him, and his lords were astonied. Now the queen, by reason of the words of the king and his lords, came into the banquet house: and the queen spake and said, O king, live for ever: let not thy thoughts trouble thee, nor let thy countenance be changed: There is a man in thy kingdom, in whom is the spirit of the holy gods; and in the days of thy father light and understanding and wisdom, like the wisdom of the gods, was found in him; whom the king Nebuchadnezzar thy father, the king, I say, thy father, made master of the magicians, astrologers, Chaldeans, and soothsayers; Forasmuch as an excellent spirit, and knowledge, and understanding, interpreting of dreams, and shewing of hard sentences, and dissolving of doubts, were found in the same Daniel, whom the king named Belteshazzar: now let Daniel be called, and he will shew the interpretation.

This queen is not Belshazzar's wife but his mother, the daughter of Nebuchadnezzar. Evidently, when Nebuchadnezzar was converted, she was, as well. Thus she told her son about Daniel.

At this point, Daniel had been out of the public eye for twenty years. Approximately eighty-five years old, he had not been in a position of prominence since Nebuchadnezzar died. Sometimes if God hasn't used us today, this week, or this month, we panic. How much better it is to realize that we're simply tools in the Lord's toolbox and He can pull us out whenever He wants to accomplish whatever He desires. Our job is simply to be ready, available, open. It might not be twenty years until the Lord uses you in the significant way you desire. That's okay. Just say, "Lord, I'm available whenever You want to use me." That was Daniel's mindset. He was off the scene for twenty years—and suddenly, he was summoned.

Daniel 5:13–17
Then was Daniel brought in before the king. And the king spake and said unto Daniel, Art thou that Daniel, which art of the children of the captivity of Judah, whom the king my father brought out of Jewry? I have even heard of thee, that the spirit of the gods is in thee, and that light and understanding and excellent wisdom is found in thee. And now the wise men, the astrologers, have been brought in before me, that they should read this writing, and make known unto me the interpretation thereof: but they could not shew the interpretation of the thing: And I have heard of thee, that thou canst make interpretations, and dissolve doubts: now if thou canst read the writing, and make known to me the interpretation thereof, thou shalt be clothed with scarlet, and have a chain of gold about thy neck, and shalt be the third ruler in the kingdom. Then Daniel answered and said before the king, Let thy gifts be to thyself, and give thy rewards to another; yet I will read the writing unto the king, and make known to him the interpretation.

Hearing of the reward, Daniel said, "I'm not in this for the money, so keep your gifts. But I will tell you the meaning of this handwriting."

Daniel 5:18–23
O thou king, the most high God gave Nebuchadnezzar thy father a kingdom, and majesty, and glory, and honour: And for the majesty that he gave him, all people, nations, and languages, trembled and feared before him: whom he would he slew; and whom he would he kept alive; and whom he would he set up; and whom he would he put down. But when his heart was lifted up, and his mind hardened in pride, he was deposed from his kingly throne, and they took his glory from him: And he was driven from the sons of men; and his heart was made like the beasts, and his dwelling was with the wild asses: they fed him with grass like oxen, and his body was wet with the dew of heaven; till he knew that the most high God ruled in the kingdom of men, and that he appointeth over it whomsoever he will. And thou his son, O Belshazzar, hast not humbled thine heart, though thou knewest all this; But hast lifted up thyself against the Lord of heaven; and they have brought the vessels of his house before thee, and thou, and thy lords, thy wives, and thy concubines, have drunk wine in them; and thou hast praised the gods of silver, and gold, of brass, iron, wood, and stone, which see not, nor hear, nor know: and the God in whose hand thy breath is, and whose are all thy ways, hast thou not glorified:

Seeing what had been written, Daniel first gave a warning to Belshazzar. "You have been rebellious, idolatrous, and blasphemous," he said. "You didn't learn the lessons of Nebuchadnezzar, your grandfather. He had to learn the hard way, becoming like a beast for seven years, eating grass in the field, acting like an animal until he cried out in humility to God. But you didn't learn anything from his experience." Therefore, God has written this against you:

Daniel 5:24
Then was the part of the hand sent from him; and this writing was written.

They caught her in the very act of adultery and brought her before the Rabbi of Galilee—not because they cared about her, but so they might entrap Him.

"Master, the law declares that she should be stoned. What sayest Thou?" they taunted.

If He said, "Free her," they would accuse Him of being a lawbreaker. If He said, "Stone her," He would no longer be a friend of sinners.

But we read in John 8 that Jesus stooped down and, with His finger—the same finger that wrote Thou shalt not commit adultery, the same finger that wrote on Belshazzar's wall—in the ground. When the woman's accusers asked Him again if the woman should be stoned, He said, "He who is without sin among you, let him cast the first stone."

And one, by one, they left.

What did Jesus write on the ground that caused them to drop their rocks and go their way? Based on the original text, I believe He was writing the sins of those who held the rocks. I, too, have violated all of God's laws either directly or in spirit. Therefore, there is a long list of sins written against me. But this list was nailed to the cross (Colossians 2:14), and was made illegible by the blood of the same hand that was pinned thereon, the same hand that wrote on a plaster wall in Babylon and in the dry dust of Jerusalem.

The very hand that wrote against you was pinned to a cross for you. If you believe it, like the woman in John 8, you are free to go your way and sin no more.

And this is the writing that was written, MENE, MENE, TEKEL, UPHARSIN.

Written in Aramaic, as Belshazzar, his thousand men, their wives and concubines, and his mother watched, they wondered what the words meant.

Daniel 5:26
This is the interpretation of the thing: MENE; God hath numbered thy kingdom, and finished it.

In other words, "Belshazzar, your number is up." Belshazzar should have known that his number would be coming up because sixty years earlier, the Lord had warned him through Jeremiah . . .

> I have made the earth, the man and the beast that are upon the ground, by my great power and by my outstretched arm, and have given it unto whom it seemed meet unto me. And now have I given all these lands unto the hand of Nebuchadnezzar the king of Babylon, my servant; and the beasts of the field have I given him also to serve him. And all nations shall serve him, and his son, and his son's son, until the very time of his land come: and then many nations and great kings shall serve themselves of him.
> Jeremiah 27:5–7

"I have given Nebuchadnezzar his empire," the Lord declared. "But in his son's son's day, it will end."

Daniel 5:27
TEKEL; Thou art weighed in the balances, and art found wanting.

Not only was Belshazzar's number up, but his weight was down. He weighed in and he came up short. He'd been given so much but had done so little.

Daniel 5:28
PERES; Thy kingdom is divided, and given to the Medes and Persians.

Belshazzar's kingdom would be given to the ones surrounding the city that very evening.

Daniel 5:29–31
Then commanded Belshazzar, and they clothed Daniel with scarlet, and put a chain of gold about his neck, and made a proclamation concerning him, that he should be the third ruler in the kingdom. In that night was Belshazzar the king of the Chaldeans slain. And Darius the Median took the kingdom, being about threescore and two years old.

That night, an incredible thing happened. One of the greatest upsets of military history was about to unfold—as prophesied by Isaiah two hundred years earlier . . .

> Thus saith the LORD to his anointed, to Cyrus, whose right hand I have holden, to subdue nations before him; and I will loose the loins of kings, to open before him the two leaved gates; and the gates shall not be shut; I will go before thee, and make the crooked places straight: I will break in pieces the gates of brass, and cut in sunder the bars of iron: And I will give thee the treasures of darkness, and hidden riches of secret places, that thou mayest know that I, the LORD, which call thee by thy name, am the God of Israel. For Jacob my servant's sake, and Israel mine elect, I have even called thee by thy name: I have surnamed thee, though thou hast not known me.
> Isaiah 45:1–4

The general leading the Medo-Persian troops was a man named Cyrus. Although Cyrus wouldn't be born until two hundred years after Isaiah penned his prophecy, he was the Lord's anointed, the one who would open the gates and plunder the treasures of an empire thought to be impenetrable.

How did the Medes and Persians get into this city surrounded by a wall three hundred fifty feet high? They ingeniously diverted the Euphrates river a mile and a half north of Babylon and went in through the riverbed.

6 Following their incredible military upset, the Medes and Persians are now in control . . .

Daniel 6:1
It pleased Darius to set over the kingdom an hundred and twenty princes, which should be over the whole kingdom;

Many scholars and historians believe that Darius is another name for Cyrus. Others say he was a man appointed by Cyrus to rule over Babylon. At any rate, here, we see his cabinet established.

Daniel 6:2
And over these three presidents; of whom Daniel was first: that the princes might give accounts unto them, and the king should have no damage.

These one hundred twenty princes were overseen by three presidents who would be accountable to the king. Daniel was chief among them. What would cause Darius to name Daniel prime minister? Verse 3 gives the answer . . .

Daniel 6:3
Then this Daniel was preferred above the presidents and princes, because an excellent spirit was in him; and the king thought to set him over the whole realm.

Darius realized there was an "excellent spirit" within Daniel. What was this excellent spirit? The Holy Spirit.

Daniel interpreted dreams. He prayed with effectiveness. He understood visions. He moved in prophecy. He experienced the miraculous. In other words, he was a man who was filled with the Spirit. That's what made him so successful all the days of his life.

In 2 Chronicles 16:9, we read that the eyes of the Lord go to and fro throughout the whole earth, looking for a man in whom He might show Himself strong, whose heart is perfect toward Him. Our Father is still looking for men and women in whom He can show Himself strong—as He did with Daniel.

Daniel 6:4, 5
Then the presidents and princes sought to find occasion against Daniel concerning the kingdom; but they could find none occasion nor fault; forasmuch as he was faithful, neither was there any error or fault found in him. Then said these men, We shall not find any occasion against this Daniel, except we find it against him concerning the law of his God.

Jealous of Daniel yet unable to find any fault in him they could exploit, his fellow leaders were reduced to attacking his faith.

Daniel 6:6–9
Then these presidents and princes assembled together to the king, and said thus unto him, King Darius, live for ever. All the presidents of the kingdom, the governors, and the princes, the counsellors, and the captains, have consulted together to establish a royal statute, and to make a firm decree, that whosoever shall ask a petition of any God or man for thirty days, save of thee, O king, he shall be cast into the den of lions. Now, O king, establish the decree, and sign the writing, that it be not changed, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Wherefore king Darius signed the writing and the decree.

In a political maneuver meant to frame Daniel exclusively, Darius' cabinet submitted a law that, under penalty of death, for thirty days, no one could make a request of any God or any man other than Darius himself.

Daniel 6:10 (a)
Now when Daniel knew that the writing was signed, he went into his house; and his win dows being open in his chamber toward Jerusalem . . .

Why did Daniel face Jerusalem? Because in 1 Kings 8, when Solomon dedicated the temple, he prayed, "If Your people disobey You and are carried away captive as a result—if they face toward the temple and call upon Your name, hear their prayer and deliver them." Therefore, as a student of the Word, Daniel understood it was his responsibility to pray for God's mercy, deliverance, and blessing on behalf of the people.

Daniel 6:10 (b)
. . . he kneeled upon his knees . . .

In prayer, it's the position of the heart rather than the position of the body that matters. Having said that, however, throughout the Bible—Old Testament and New Testament alike—it seems as though there is something particularly powerful about kneeling in prayer. As Solomon dedicated the temple, we read in 1 Kings 8:22 that he stood before the Lord. But as his prayer continued and the intensity built, he found himself on his knees (1 Kings 8:54). When Elijah prayed, he knelt (1 Kings 18:42). In Acts 20, when Paul was praying for the Ephesian elders he would see no longer, he knelt.

Daniel 6:10 (c)
. . . three times a day, and prayed, and gave thanks before his God . . .

The law was signed. No prayers were to be offered. No requests were to be made of anyone except Darius. But Daniel did as was his custom. He prayed three times a day as was his practice.

> As for me, I will call upon God; and the LORD shall save me. Evening, and morning, and at noon, will I pray, and cry aloud: and he shall hear my voice.
> Psalm 55:16, 17

David, like Daniel, a giant of the faith, cultivated a practice of praying three times a day That doesn't mean they didn't pray other times. But there were three times of prayer that were set aside religiously.

I wonder if this wouldn't be a good practice for many of us to develop, to quiet ourselves, cloister ourselves in some way and say, "I'm going to start my day with the Lord; I'm going to check in halfway through the day with Him; and, before I hit the pillow at night, I'll reflect on the day with the One who gave His life for me."

Daniel 6:10 (d)
. . . as he did aforetime.

Notice that Daniel didn't say, "Okay, you signed a law. Now I am going to get down on my knees—even though I never did previously—and I am going to throw open my windows so you can see my radical spirituality." That was not the heart of Daniel. He wasn't trying to flex his spiritual muscle. He was simply doing what he had always done. And that's where the power is. If the source of Daniel's success was the Holy Spirit, the secret of His success was consistent prayer.

In Matthew 17, as Jesus was on the Mount of Transfiguration with Peter, James, and John, down below a concerned father brought his suicidal son to the disciples. But they were unable to cast out the demon. When Jesus came down and cast out the demon, the disciples said, "How come we couldn't do that?"

Jesus said, "This kind does not come out except by prayer and fasting."

In other words, the disciples were to develop a lifestyle of prayer and fasting because they never knew when a situation would confront them in which they would need the power of the Lord flowing through their lives. They couldn't expect to conjure it up on the spot if they had no history or background in it—and neither can we.

We must live lives of prayer and fasting because we don't know what crisis is going to crop up tomorrow or what challenge is going to arise next week.

"I know I should be praying," you might say, "but I get so tired."

What about Daniel? He was eighty-five years old—and yet he prayed morning, noon, and night.

"But I'm too busy," you say.

Daniel was prime minister.

Excuses just don't work.

Daniel 6:11
Then these men assembled, and found Daniel praying and making supplication before his God.

Notice that the attack came when Daniel was in prayer. More than likely, you're not going to get attacked when you're on the golf course or the tennis courts. The real attacks of the enemy will come when you're in prayer. Think of Jesus in Matthew 4. He was in the wilderness fasting and praying for forty days and what happened? Satan appeared and put him through an incredible series of temptations. It's when we're praying that we're most easily distracted and fatigued because the enemy knows that if he can stop us from praying, he's neutralized what God desires to do in and through our lives.

Daniel 6:12–15
Then they came near, and spake before the king concerning the king's decree; Hast thou not signed a decree, that every man that shall ask a petition of any God or man within thirty days, save of thee, O king, shall be cast into the den of lions? The king answered and said, The thing is true, according to the law of the Medes and Persians, which altereth not. Then answered they and said before the king, That Daniel, which is of the children of the captivity of Judah, regardeth not thee, O king, nor the decree that thou hast signed, but maketh his petition three times a day. Then the king, when he heard these words, was sore displeased with himself, and set his heart on Daniel to deliver him: and he laboured till the going down of the sun to deliver him. Then these men assembled unto the king, and said unto the king, Know, O king, that the law of the Medes and Persians is, That no decree nor statute which the king establisheth may be changed.

Because the government of the Medes and Persians was a constitutional monarchy, once a law was signed by the king, it could not be rescinded.

Daniel 6:16
Then the king commanded, and they brought Daniel, and cast him into the den of lions. Now the king spake and said unto Daniel, Thy God whom thou servest continually, he will deliver thee.

I believe this is not so much a statement of faith made by Darius as it is wishful thinking. Why? Because he had spent all day trying to figure out a way to keep Daniel out of the lions' den.

Daniel 6:17–20
And a stone was brought, and laid upon the mouth of the den; and the king sealed it with his own signet, and with the signet of his lords; that the purpose might not be changed concerning Daniel. Then the king went to his palace, and passed the night fasting: neither were instruments of musick brought before him: and his sleep went from him. Then the king arose very early in the morning, and went in haste unto the den of lions. And when he came to the den, he cried with a lamentable voice unto Daniel: and the king spake and said to Daniel, O Daniel, servant of the living God, is thy God, whom thou servest continually, able to deliver thee from the lions?

When asked if God was able to deliver me, if I were Daniel, at this point I would have said, "Yes! Get me out of here immediately!" Not Daniel. Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego had been content to remain in the furnace until they were ordered out. As we'll see, Daniel was content to preach a minisermon from the lions' den.

Daniel 6:21, 22
Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever. My God hath sent his angel, and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt.

Surrounded by lions, Daniel chats with the king. Lions such as these were bred to be particularly ferocious and were kept in a state of near starvation. But these lions were quiet. They didn't bother Daniel a bit. Who was this angel who was sent? The word "angel" simply means "messenger." John 1:1 identifies Jesus as "the Word," or "the message." Therefore, I believe this angel was the same angel who walked in the fire with Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego in chapter 3. In other words, it was Jesus Himself.

Then was the king exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was taken up out of the den, and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God. And the king commanded, and they brought those men which had accused Daniel, and they cast them into the den of lions, them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

That the wives and children of Daniel's accusers were tossed in to the lions' den was not the Lord's demand but was according to the custom of the Medes and Persians. Nonetheless, whenever we sin, the sad truth of the matter is that sin always affects those who are closest to us. These men sinned and their wives and kids paid the price along with them.

Daniel 6:25–27
Then king Darius wrote unto all people, nations, and languages, that dwell in all the earth; Peace be multiplied unto you. I make a decree, That in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel: for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions.

Overflowing with praise to the Lord and an eternal perspective, the decree of Darius sounds like it could have been penned by the apostle Paul.

Daniel 6:28
So this Daniel prospered in the reign of Darius, and in the reign of Cyrus the Persian.

No less real than the lions that surrounded Daniel, Peter tells us that Satan is a roaring lion seeking whom he may devour (1 Peter 5:8). He has two basic ways to destroy and devour us. That is, he gets us involved in sin and then accuses us concerning our sin.

. . . for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night.

Revelation 12:10 (b)

Satan whispers in our ear constantly. It's not a loud roar, but a soft purr: "You're a sinnerrr," he whispers. "You have no right to pray to God. You'll never be used by Him." If Satan and his demons can't devour you through sin, they'll make constant accusations against you until you're ready to give up and walk away from the Lord. But, because you and I found ourselves damned because of sin and doomed to spend eternity in the lion's den of hell, God sent His Son—the ultimate Messenger—to come down to this earth, to stand with us, to die for us, and to go to hell in our place. Every sin we've ever done, are doing, or will do has been paid by Jesus. Therefore, to overcome Satan's roaring accusations, we plead His blood (Revelation 12:11).

Satan is a roaring lion to be sure—but he got tangled up in a catfight with the Lion of the tribe of Judah and he lost.

7 The first six chapters of Daniel are autobiographical history. That is, they speak mainly of the story of Daniel personally. The final six chapters of Daniel are not autobiographical history but incredible prophecy, for they deal with future events. At least in Daniel's day, they were future events. From our perspective, many of them have already come to pass . . .

Daniel 7:1
In the first year of Belshazzar king of Babylon Daniel had a dream and visions of his head upon his bed: then he wrote the dream, and told the sum of the matters.

Chapters 7 and 8 actually take place between chapters 4 and 5. In chapter 4, Nebuchadnezzar was humbled for seven years before he was restored. In chapter 5, the kingdom was taken from Nebuchadnezzar's grandson, Belshazzar. Here, however, Belshazzar had just come into power and it was at this time that Daniel had another vision . . .

Daniel 7:2
Daniel spake and said, I saw in my vision by night, and, behold, the four winds of the heaven strove upon the great sea.

Revelation 17:15 tells us the "great sea" refers to the nations of the world. Thus, out of the nations of the world four beasts will arise.

Daniel 7:3, 4 (a)
And four great beasts came up from the sea, diverse one from another. The first was like a lion, and had eagle's wings. . . .

The lion with eagles' wings speaks of the Babylonians, synonymous with the head of gold in chapter 2. Archaeological discoveries verify that the national emblem of Babylon was a lion with wings.

Daniel 7:4 (b)

. . . I beheld till the wings thereof were plucked, and it was lifted up from the earth, and made stand upon the feet as a man, and a man's heart was given to it.

The wings were plucked off of the lion and it was given the heart of a man. This speaks of what happened to Nebuchadnezzar. Because of the pride of his heart, God humbled him and he became beastly. When he turned to the Lord, however, he was given a new heart and he stood on his feet once again.

Daniel 7:5 (a)
And behold another beast, a second, like to a bear . . .

The bear speaks of the Medo-Persian empire, synonymous with the arms of silver in chapter 2. With an army of two and one-half million men, the Medes and Persians lumbered along like a bear.

Daniel 7:5 (b)
. . . and it raised up itself on one side, and it had three ribs in the mouth of it between the teeth of it: and they said thus unto it, Arise, devour much flesh.

The three ribs speak of the three empires immediately devoured by the Medes and Persians: the Babylonians, the Egyptians, and the Lydians.

Daniel 7:6
After this I beheld, and lo another, like a leopard, which had upon the back of it four wings of a fowl; the beast had also four heads; and dominion was given to it.

The leopard speaks of the Greeks and is synonymous with the belly of brass in chapter 2. With only 35,000 troops, Alexander could strike quickly and was brilliant in strategy. The four heads represent the four generals who took over his empire after his death.

Daniel 7:7

After this I saw in the night visions, and behold a fourth beast, dreadful and terrible, and strong exceedingly; and it had great iron teeth: it devoured and brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with the feet of it: and it was diverse from all the beasts that were before it; and it had ten horns.

The fourth beast speaks of the Roman Empire and is synonymous with the legs of iron in chapter 2. Out of it, we see ten horns, synonymous with the ten toes of Daniel 2. The horns and toes speak of a confederation of ten nations coming out of the old Roman Empire.

Daniel 7:8
I considered the horns, and, behold, there came up among them another little horn, before whom there were three of the first horns plucked up by the roots: and, behold, in this horn were eyes like the eyes of man, and a mouth speaking great things.

The little horn is synonymous with antichrist. Although there will be some kind of power struggle, he takes control of the ten-nation confederation. How? From a human perspective, he will be incredible. With the intellect of Thomas Jefferson, the leadership skills of Lincoln, the global strategy of Nixon, the oratorical skills of Churchill, the iron fist of Josef Stalin, the charisma of a Kennedy, he will be humanly impressive.

In other words, when antichrist shows up, he won't be wearing a black cape and twirling his mustache. He will draw people to him like a magnet. Seven of the nations will immediately say, "Lead us." Three will resist initially, but they will be overtaken ultimately.

Daniel 7:9–14
I beheld till the thrones were cast down, and the Ancient of days did sit, whose garment was white as snow, and the hair of his head like the pure wool: his throne was like the fiery flame, and his wheels as burning fire. A fiery stream issued and came forth from before him: thousand thousands ministered unto him, and ten thousand times ten thousand stood before him: the judgment was set, and the books were opened. I beheld then because of the voice of the great words which the horn spake: I beheld even till the beast was slain, and his body destroyed, and given to the burning flame. As concerning the rest of the beasts, they had their dominion taken away: yet their lives were prolonged for a season and time. I saw in the night visions, and, behold, one like the Son of man came with the clouds of heaven, and came to the Ancient of days, and they brought him near before him. And there was given him dominion, and glory, and a kingdom, that all people, nations, and languages, should serve him: his dominion is an everlasting dominion, which shall not pass away, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed.

It would have been of great comfort to the captive Jews in Babylon to know that a kingdom not of men but of God was coming that would never end.

Daniel 7:15–18
I Daniel was grieved in my spirit in the midst of my body, and the visions of my head troubled me. I came near unto one of them that stood by, and asked him the truth of all this. So he told me, and made me know the interpretation of the things. These great beasts, which are four, are four kings, which shall arise out of the earth. But the saints of the most High shall take the kingdom, and possess the kingdom for ever, even for ever and ever.

In chapter 2, we saw that Nebuchadnezzar's dream was of a huge image of a man with a head of gold, chest of silver, belly of brass, and legs of iron. Man's perspective of world history and the governments that would come was stately, valuable, impressive. But here in chapter 7, we see God's perspective of those same empires. They're not gold, silver, brass, and iron but beasts.

Then I would know the truth of the fourth beast, which was diverse from all the others, exceeding dreadful, whose teeth were of iron, and his nails of brass; which devoured, brake in pieces, and stamped the residue with his feet; And of the ten horns that were in his head, and of the other which came up, and before whom three fell; even of that horn that had eyes, and a mouth that spake very great things, whose look was more stout than his fellows. I beheld, and the same horn made war with the saints, and prevailed against them; Until the Ancient of days came, and judgment was given to the saints of the most High; and the time came that the saints possessed the kingdom.

Perhaps because it was the only one described as "exceeding dreadful," Daniel asked for more instruction concerning the fourth beast.

Daniel 7:23, 24
Thus he said, The fourth beast shall be the fourth kingdom upon earth, which shall be diverse from all kingdoms, and shall devour the whole earth, and shall tread it down, and break it in pieces. And the ten horns out of this kingdom are ten kings that shall arise: and another shall rise after them; and he shall be diverse from the first, and he shall subdue three kings.

The fourth kingdom, or Rome, is the one from which the little horn, or antichrist, will arise.

Daniel 7:25 (a)
And he shall speak great words against the most High . . .

Antichrist will be such a great orator that he will capture the imagination of the entire world.

Daniel 7:25 (b)
. . . and shall wear out the saints of the most High . . .

Who are these saints? In Revelation 12, we see who antichrist was against . . .

> And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child. And to the woman were given two wings of a great eagle, that she might fly into the wilderness, into her place, where she is nourished for a time, and times, and half a time . . .
> Revelation 12:13, 14 (a)

What is "a time, times, and half a time"? "A time" speaks of one year; "times" speaks of two years. Thus, this is three and one-half years. At the midpoint of the seven-year Tribulation period, antichrist will suddenly wage war against the Jews. When he first comes on the scene, he'll win the approval of the entire world. But, after three and one-half years, he'll show his true colors when he erects an image of himself in the temple and demands to be worshiped as God. God, however, will protect Israel by taking her to a place in the wilderness—most likely the rock city of Petra.

> And it was given unto him to make war with the saints, and to overcome them: and power was given him over all kindreds, and tongues, and nations.
> Revelation 13:7

The church already having been raptured, the saints mentioned here are the people of Israel as well as the Gentiles who will be saved during the Tribulation period.

Daniel 7:25 (c)
. . . and think to change times and laws . . .

During the French Revolution an attempt was made to do away with the seven-day week because of its religious implications and to institute a ten-day week in its place. Perhaps antichrist will make the same attempt.

Or perhaps this refers to the possibility that, although he knows the prophecies of Daniel and Revelation, he thinks he can beat the rap and be victorious in the end.

Daniel 7:25 (d)
. . . and they shall be given into his hand until a time and times and the dividing of time.

Antichrist will be successful—but only for three and a half years.

Daniel 7:26, 27
But the judgment shall sit, and they shall take away his dominion, to consume and to destroy it unto the end. And the kingdom and dominion, and the greatness of the kingdom under the whole heaven, shall be given to the people of the saints of the most High, whose kingdom is an everlasting kingdom, and all dominions shall serve and obey him.

This world leader, this little horn, this big-time power is going down. All dominions shall serve Him—Jesus Christ. Oh, when will man understand this?

Inscribed on the United Nations building in New York City are these words . . .

> . . . and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.
> Isaiah 2:4 (b)

The problem is, the first part of the verse is omitted . . .

> And he shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people . . .
> Isaiah 2:4 (a)

They left out the fact that the Lord is the One who will bring peace. Man's attempts at government are beastly at best. What does a beast do? He angers easily. He guards his territory ferociously. He sheds blood callously. You never see a group of bears marching to save the rabbits. What beasts want, they go after. They take whatever they can get. And they expand their territory whenever possible. That's why God sees these empires as beasts. It's a Person, not a program that will bring peace.

Man does not have the ability to rule himself. He's sinful and corrupt to the core. But the Ancient of Days is coming. And a kingdom that is right and beautiful, true and equitable will follow.

Daniel 7:28
Hitherto is the end of the matter. As for me Daniel, my cogitations much troubled me, and my countenance changed in me: but I kept the matter in my heart.

When he saw world history from God's perspective, Daniel was troubled. But he kept the matter in his heart.

8 As in chapter 7, the events of this chapter took place between chapters 4 and 5 during the reign of Nebuchadnezzar's grandson, Belshazzar.

Daniel 8:1, 2
In the third year of the reign of king Belshazzar a vision appeared unto me, even unto me Daniel, after that which appeared unto me at the first. And I saw in a vision; and it came to pass, when I saw, that I was at Shushan in the palace, which is in the province of Elam; and I saw in a vision, and I was by the river of Ulai.

The year was 551 B.C. Daniel was caught up in the Spirit and taken from Babylon to Shushan, or Susa, the capital city of Persia, or present-day Iran. Whether he was literally transported or simply there in spirit, a vision was given him concerning what would take place in the future.

Daniel 8:3
Then I lifted up mine eyes, and saw, and, behold, there stood before the river a ram which had two horns: and the two horns were high; but one was higher than the other, and the higher came up last.

Daniel saw a vision of a ram with two horns, one higher than the other. Verse 20 tells us this ram represents the Medes and the Persians. Indeed, nine years after Daniel had this vision, the Medes and the Persians, having formed an alliance, attacked Babylon and were victorious. The second horn grew stronger than the first because, although the Medes were initially more powerful, the Persians eventually became the stronger of the two.

Daniel 8:4
I saw the ram pushing westward, and northward, and southward; so that no beasts might stand before him, neither was there any that could deliver out of his hand; but he did according to his will, and became great.

The Medes and Persians became invincible. No one could stop them—until another animal appears . . .

Daniel 8:5, 6
And as I was considering, behold, an he goat came from the west on the face of the whole earth, and touched not the ground: and the goat had a notable horn between his eyes. And he came to the ram that had two horns, which I had seen standing before the river, and ran unto him in the fury of his power.

This he-goat moved so quickly that it appeared he didn't touch the ground. The other unusual feature of his was the single horn coming from his forehead. Verse 21 tells us this he-goat symbolizes the Grecian empire. The "notable horn" is Alexander the Great.

The Medes and Persians ruled until 334 B.C., when suddenly Alexander the Great took 35,000 troops—a very small army—and struck them quickly and speedily. How could Alexander's 35,000 defeat the million-man army of Xerxes? In our own history, we've seen this can be done through guerilla warfare.

Daniel 8:7, 8 (a)
And I saw him come close unto the ram, and he was moved with choler against him, and smote the ram, and brake his two horns: and there was no power in the ram to stand before him, but he cast him down to the ground, and stamped upon him: and there was none that could deliver the ram out of his hand. Therefore the he goat waxed very great . . .

After defeating Xerxes, Alexander went on and kept going south to Israel. When he neared Jerusalem, he was poised to annihilate it when the high priest met him outside of the city and showed him this passage, written two hundred years earlier. So convinced was Alexander that it spoke of him that he spared Jerusalem. The city was saved because the Word was shared.

He then went into Egypt and founded Alexandria, swept north into present-day Afghanistan, and then made a run into India. After conquering India, the he-goat went back to Babylon and established that city as his capital. At that point, realizing he had conquered the entire known world, he wept that there were no worlds left to conquer.

Daniel 8:8 (b)
. . . and when he was strong, the great horn was broken . . .

At the party he threw for all of his soldiers upon their return to Babylon, Alexander became drunk. He walked back to his residence in the rain and fell asleep in his damp clothes. Within three days, he died of pneumonia at the age of thirty-three.

Alexander was the epitome of what the world looks for in a leader. His father was Philip of Macedon, a brilliant general. As little Alexander watched his father, he grew bitterly jealous of his conquests. He complained to those around him that his father was going to conquer everything and leave nothing for Alexander to do. When he was thirteen years old, Philip realized his son was uniquely gifted so he brought in the finest scholar of the ancient world, a philosopher named Aristotle, to teach his son. He was then given a black horse so powerful that no other man could tame or ride him. Alexander was able to do both. Seeing his son upon his mighty horse, Bucephalus,

Philip said, "My son, Macedonia is not worthy of you. Conquer a kingdom that is great."

By the time he was twenty, Alexander had gained control of Greece. As he was conquering some of the rebellious areas north of Macedonia, hearing that the city of Thebes had the audacity to revolt against him, he went to Thebes, destroyed every building in the city, and killed every man, woman, and child except 30,000 whom he sold into slavery. At that point, everyone in Greece realized they dare not rebel against him no matter how long he was gone.

Alexander was a powerful man, a military genius. Yet he died broken and empty. I contrast him with another Man who also died at the age of thirty-three . . .

- Alexander was a man who made himself to be God.
  Jesus, who was God, humbled Himself and became a man (Philippians 2:5–7).
- Unlike Alexander, Jesus was not in competition with His Father. Rather, Jesus was in submission to His Father. "I have come to do the will of Him that sent Me," He said (see John 6:38). "I always do the things that please My Father," He declared (see John 8:29).
- At the age of thirteen, Alexander was taught by Aristotle.
  At the age of twelve, Jesus tutored the priests.
- Alexander shed the blood of millions for his own glorification.
  Jesus shed His own blood for our salvation.
- Alexander rode a magnificent black stallion.
  Jesus rode a lowly donkey.
- Alexander wiped out the city of Thebes and enslaved the rebels.
  Jesus wept over the city of Jerusalem and freed the sinners (John 8:11).
- "Friend, you must die," Alexander said before killing a friend who he thought had made advances toward his wife.
  "Friend, what seekest thou?" Jesus said to the one who would indeed betray Him.
- When Alexander died, his body was placed in a golden casket and moved from Babylon to Memphis, Egypt and finally to Alexandria, where a great monument was built to his memory.

When Jesus died, He was also moved from the place where He was buried—not to another burial place but up to heaven where He lives to make intercession for you and me (Hebrews 7:25).

- Alexander is simply a memory.
Jesus is the Messiah who is coming again.

Daniel 8:8 (c)
. . . and for it came up four notable ones toward the four winds of heaven.

Following Alexander's death, his empire was split into four regions, each overseen by one of his four generals.

Daniel 8:9
And out of one of them came forth a little horn, which waxed exceeding great, toward the south, and toward the east, and toward the pleasant land.

Out of the four who had taken over Alexander's empire, comes one who is called a "little horn." "Little horn" expands his borders and moves toward a place called the "pleasant land," the land that flows with milk and honey, Israel.

Daniel 8:10–12
And it waxed great, even to the host of heaven; and it cast down some of the host and of the stars to the ground, and stamped upon them. Yea, he magnified himself even to the prince of the host, and by him the daily sacrifice was taken away, and the place of his sanctuary was cast down. And an host was given him against the daily sacrifice by reason of transgression, and it cast down the truth to the ground; and it practised, and prospered.

This is exactly what happened in history. One of the four horns, the Seleucid family, controlled Babylon and Syria. Out of that family came a very infamous individual who the Bible calls "the little horn." He is not the same little horn as the one in chapter 7. That little horn, which came out of the ten-nation confederation, is antichrist. This little horn comes out of the Seleucid family and is a picture, a foreshadowing, an illustration of antichrist. This little horn has already come.

From 175 to 164 B.C., this little horn, known as Antiochus came on the scene as the leader of Syria and Babylon. He called himself "Theos Epiphanes," or "God Manifested." Others called him "Antiochus Epiphanes" or "Antiochus the Shining One," because he was ruling in the area of Antioch. The Jews, aware of this madman, called him "Antiochus Epinanes," which means "Antiochus the Insane One." They recognized he was deranged and history confirms this was true.

He began to expand his empire by conquering everything he set his eyes upon—including Israel. Such hatred did he have for the Jews that he demanded that all of the holy writings of the Jews be burned. Claiming to be God, he built a statue of himself and put it in the temple. When the Jews revolted, 40,000 were killed in a single day and perhaps a million more in the ensuing months. He then butchered a pig on the altar in the temple, smeared the blood on the walls, and forced the priests to drink the remainder. He was a cruel madman, a picture of antichrist himself.

Daniel 8:13, 14
Then I heard one saint speaking, and another saint said unto that certain saint which spake, How long shall be the vision concerning the daily sacrifice, and the transgression of desolation, to give both the sanctuary and the host to be trodden under foot? And he said unto me, Unto two thousand and three hundred days; then shall the sanctuary be cleansed.

What are these 2,300 days? When Antiochus Epiphanes began his reign on September 6, 171 B.C., a man named Matthias in the village of Modine refused to give in to his pressure. Like Shadrach, Meshach, and Abed-nego, he refused to submit. For this, he was killed—but he had five sons. These five sons, led by Judah, the oldest, were so incensed that, with guerilla tactics, they began attacking the soldiers of Antiochus. Others joined and the Maccabean Revolt was underway.

On December 25, 165 B.C., they drove Antiochus and his boys out of the land. Judah and his men then went into the temple, cleaned it from the defilements of Antiochus, and relit the candles. But there was only enough holy oil for one day. A new supply would take eight days to make. When they prayed that the oil would miraculously last, the Lord answered their prayer and the candles burned for the eight days until the new oil was ready. The commemoration of this event is called the Feast of Lights, or Hanukkah. September 6, 171 B.C.—when Antiochus came to power—to December 25, 165 B.C. is exactly 2,300 days.

Daniel 8:15–17
And it came to pass, when I, even I Daniel, had seen the vision, and sought for the meaning, then, behold, there stood before me as the appearance of a man. And I heard a man's voice between the banks of Ulai, which called, and said, Gabriel, make this man to understand the vision. So he came near where I stood: and when he came, I was afraid, and fell upon my face: but he said unto me, Understand, O son of man: for at the time of the end shall be the vision.

Daniel was told that the vision of the ram with two horns, the goat with the single horn, and the little horn rising from the ten horns spoke not only of the time of Antiochus but of a later event yet to come. In other words, Antiochus is a foreshadow of antichrist.

Daniel 8:18–21
Now as he was speaking with me, I was in a deep sleep on my face toward the ground: but he touched me, and set me upright. And he said, Behold, I will make thee know what shall be in the last end of the indignation: for at the time appointed the end shall be. The ram which thou sawest having two horns are the kings of Media and Persia. And the rough goat is the king of Grecia: and the great horn that is between his eyes is the first king.

Here, the goat is identified as the symbol of the Grecian Empire.

Daniel 8:22
Now that being broken, whereas four stood up for it, four kingdoms shall stand up out of the nation, but not in his power.

The four generals following Alexander wouldn't be as powerful as he was.

Daniel 8:23
And in the latter time of their kingdom, when the transgressors are come to the full, a king of fierce countenance, and understanding dark sentences, shall stand up.

This speaks of both Antiochus and antichrist.

Daniel 8:24
And his power shall be mighty, but not by his own power: and he shall destroy wonderfully, and shall prosper, and practise, and shall destroy the mighty and the holy people.

Antichrist will perform a host of signs and wonders, but the power will actually be Satan's.

Daniel 8:25 (a)
And through his policy also he shall cause craft to prosper in his hand; and he shall magnify himself in his heart . . .

Antichrist will claim to be God even as Antiochus Epiphanes did, even as Satan did in Isaiah 14 when pride filled his heart.

Daniel 8:25 (b)
. . . and by peace shall destroy many . . .

Initially, antichrist will come as a man of peace, solving the problems of the Middle East, solving the economic tensions in the world. But in the middle of the Tribulation, he'll show his true colors. Three and a half years after he comes into power, blood will flow and heads will roll. According to 2 Thessalonians 2, when antichrist sets up his image and demands to be worshiped, anyone who doesn't will be jeopardizing their own life.

Daniel 8:25 (c)
. . . he shall also stand up against the Prince of princes; but he shall be broken without hand.

At the Battle of Armageddon, antichrist will have the audacity to wage war against Jesus Himself, but he'll be broken apart from human help. Jesus doesn't need our help. He's going to take care of the enemy single-handedly.

Daniel 8:26, 27
And the vision of the evening and the morning which was told is true: wherefore shut thou up the vision; for it shall be for many days. And I Daniel fainted, and was sick certain days; afterward I rose up, and did the king's business; and I was astonished at the vision, but none understood it.

Although the vision was so real to Daniel that it had a physical effect upon him, he didn't understand its meaning. Maybe you can relate to this. Maybe you're saying, "I don't get it. Little horns and ten toes and brass bellies—I'm completely confused!" That's okay. It will affect you just as it did Daniel. Whether or not you can identify the ten toes is not the point. God is saying in this book, "Wake up. We're not playing a game here. We're talking about eternal destiny, about friends and family going through the Tribulation unnecessarily, about suffering, persecution, and eternal damnation."

As believers, we are in an important place as ambassadors of Jesus Christ (2 Corinthians 5:20). Therefore, like Daniel, we, too, must go about the King's business. We can't just cruise through Christianity going through a Bible study occasionally, praying sporadically, hoping things will work out eventually. We must be about the King's business continually. Daniel rose up and did the King's business. May that be said of us.

9 The most important thing we can do in the service of our King is to become men and women of prayer. Here in chapter 9, we see a prayer of Daniel that the Holy Spirit preserved for us to study. Along with those recorded in Ezra 9 and Nehemiah 9, this is one of the three great prayer chapters of the Old Testament.

Daniel 9:1, 2
In the first year of Darius the son of Ahasuerus, of the seed of the Medes, which was made king over the realm of the Chaldeans; In the first year of his reign I Daniel understood by books the number of the years, whereof the word of the LORD came to Jeremiah the prophet, that he would accomplish seventy years in the desolations of Jerusalem.

Although Daniel was a seer, he was still a student. Although he was a prophet, he was still a pupil. That is, he was one who read the Word regularly and studied it carefully. Now, if Daniel was one given to reading and researching the Scriptures, how much more do I need to do the same.

Here, Daniel comes to the twenty-fifth chapter of Jeremiah and sees that Jeremiah foretold that Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians would carry the Jews into captivity. God allowed this because not only had they embraced idolatry but they had ignored God's Word continually—specifically as it related to the Sabbath year.

You see, according to Leviticus 25, every seventh year, God's people were to do no plowing or tilling of the ground. The land was to rest. We now know agriculturally and scientifically why this would be important. But they were simply to take it on faith. On the sixth year, the Lord would give them twice as much in order to see them through the seventh year. But for four hundred ninety years, they ignored that commandment. In other words, the land missed out on seventy years of rest. Therefore, the Lord told Jeremiah that His people would be carried away captive for seventy years. And while they were gone, the land would indeed rest.

Now the seventy years was up. So what did Daniel do? Jeremiah's writings didn't simply stimulate his curiosity but they moved him to activity —and that's always the purpose of prophecy. After reading Jeremiah's prophecy, Daniel was prompted to pray.

Many times, people don't pray because they're not studying or meditating on the Word. When they try to pray, they don't know what to talk about. I have news for you: God is a great conversationalist and He initiates the conversation through His Word. That's why reading the Bible is important and studying it is essential. As I read the Scriptures, I discover the things I should talk about in prayer.

Daniel 9:3
And I set my face unto the Lord God, to seek by prayer and supplication, with fasting, and sackcloth, and ashes:

After the prompting to prayer, we see the preparation for prayer. Daniel set his face, which speaks of determination. Sackcloth is a hairy garment, camel's hair usually, turned inside out so the bristles of the camel continually rub against one's skin. What was Daniel doing? He was showing he was serious in seeking the Lord.

Fasting is a way we can seek the Lord in seriousness. Fasting is an important tool in the Christian arsenal both in doing battle with the enemy and in seeking our Father and His blessings. All day long, we're bombarded by advertising and noise. Not only are our senses bombarded, but our stomachs are constantly craving certain kinds of food. We're stuffing ourselves with this, that, and the other. Fasting is a practical way of saying, "I'm not going to continue showering myself with physical sensations and stimuli. I'm going to slow it down."

Physiologically, you actually become a clearer thinker when you're fasting. Many tests confirm this. Fasting is good for us physically and helpful to us mentally. Fasting is not a way to score points with the Lord but an avenue to deny our flesh physically in order to concentrate on the spiritual realm with greater intensity. Fasting is not meant to prove something to God but to simply place ourselves in a position where we can hear Him more clearly.

As a teenager, Daniel understood the importance of the fast. Here he is now, at eighty-six years of age, still fasting.

Daniel 9:4
And I prayed unto the LORD my God, and made my confession, and said, O Lord, the great and dreadful God, keeping the covenant and mercy to them that love him, and to them that keep his commandments;

After prompting and preparation, here we see the preface to Daniel's prayer. He prefaces his prayer by remembering who he's talking to. The Bible says we're to enter into His gates with thanksgiving and into His courts with praise (Psalm 100:4) because as we reflect on the greatness of God, the problems that seemed so big to us shrink radically.

I encourage you to spend time prefacing your prayer by reflecting upon and remembering the greatness of God. After all, if He spans the universe in His hand, He can surely handle whatever challenges face you (Isaiah 48:13).

Daniel 9:5–15
We have sinned, and have committed iniquity, and have done wickedly, and have rebelled, even by departing from thy precepts and from thy judgments: Neither have we hearkened unto thy servants the prophets, which spake in thy name to our kings, our princes, and our fathers, and to all the people of the land. O Lord, righteousness belongeth unto thee, but unto us confusion of faces, as at this day; to the men of Judah, and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem, and unto all Israel, that are near, and that are far off, through all the countries whither thou hast driven them, because of their trespass that they have trespassed against thee. O Lord, to us belongeth confusion of face, to our kings, to our princes, and to our fathers, because we have sinned against thee. To the Lord our God belong mercies and forgivenesses, though we have rebelled against him; Neither have we obeyed the voice of the LORD our God, to walk in his laws, which he set before us by his servants the prophets. Yea, all Israel have transgressed thy law, even by departing, that they might not obey thy voice; therefore the curse is poured upon us, and the oath that is written in the law of Moses the servant of God, because we have sinned against him. And he hath confirmed his words, which he spake against us, and against our judges that judged us, by bringing upon us a great evil: for under the whole heaven hath not been done as hath been done upon Jerusalem. As it is written in the law of Moses, all this evil is come upon us: yet made we not our prayer before the LORD our God, that we might turn from our iniquities, and understand thy truth. Therefore hath the LORD watched upon the evil, and brought it upon us: for the LORD our God is righteous in all his works which he doeth: for we obeyed not his voice. And now, O Lord our God, that hast brought thy people forth out of the land of Egypt with a mighty hand, and hast gotten thee renown, as at this day; we have sinned, we have done wickedly.

Here we see that a major portion of Daniel's prayer is devoted to penitence. He realizes the problems the people of Israel were experiencing were not because God was cruel but because they were sinful.

When the judgments of God come down in the Tribulation period, the saints, angels, and elders in heaven say, "Righteous and true are Your judgments, O Lord" (Revelation 19:2). Not a single one says, "That's not fair!" They say, "What You're doing, Lord, is perfect." So, if we desire to be a mature brother or sister, one of the keys is to recognize that God is right in all He does. The reason we're in the mess we're in is because of sin. It's not God's fault. He's righteous and true in all He does.

"We've sinned," Daniel says. And yet Daniel is one of the few men in all of the OT of whom no sin is recorded. That doesn't mean he didn't sin, but that he lived an incredibly impeccable life. Here, however, he identifies himself with the people around him.

Wouldn't it be radical if we did that—if we really saw ourselves as one body? When you drop a hammer on your toe, the rest of the body doesn't say, "What a jerk you are, toe." No, the rest of the body immediately begins to aid the toe. The whole body gathers around the hurting member. But what do we in the body of Christ do? When someone drops the proverbial hammer, we find fault. That ought not to be.

If I'm finding fault with people, there's a problem with me. Daniel, a truly righteous man, said, "We have sinned, Father," and, in so doing, models linkage and covering.

Daniel 9:16–19

O Lord, according to all thy righteousness, I beseech thee, let thine anger and thy fury be turned away from thy city Jerusalem, thy holy mountain: because for our sins, and for the iniquities of our fathers, Jerusalem and thy people are become a reproach to all that are about us. Now therefore, O our God, hear the prayer of thy servant, and his supplications, and cause thy face to shine upon thy sanctuary that is desolate, for the Lord's sake. O my God, incline thine ear, and hear; open thine eyes, and behold our desolations, and the city which is called by thy name: for we do not present our supplications before thee for our righteousnesses, but for thy great mercies. O Lord, hear; O Lord, forgive; O Lord, hearken and do; defer not, for thine own sake, O my God: for thy city and thy people are called by thy name.

After penitence in prayer, we see the petition by prayer. What does Daniel request? Mercy. The purpose of prayer is not primarily to move the hand of God but rather to hold the hand of God. People say that prayer changes things. The reality, however is, that prayer changes us. Here, Daniel is coming to a place where he's saying, "I want to be in harmony with You, Father. I read in Jeremiah that our time here is almost over. I'm confessing our sins, Lord. I realize the jam we're in is because we're rebellious. So remember us, Lord." He's not commanding or ordering God to do something. He's simply placing himself in harmony with the will of the Father. And that is what true prayer really is.

Don't think you have to give God a reason to bless you. Approach Him solely on the basis of His mercy. Otherwise, Satan will quench the Spirit of prayer in you by saying you have no right to pray.

Daniel 9:20–22

And whiles I was speaking, and praying, and confessing my sin and the sin of my people Israel, and presenting my supplication before the LORD my God for the holy mountain of my God; Yea, whiles I was speaking in prayer, even the man Gabriel, whom I had seen in the vision at the beginning, being caused to fly swiftly, touched me about the time of the evening oblation. And he informed me, and talked with me, and said, O Daniel, I am now come forth to give thee skill and understanding.

Finally, the perspective from prayer. Daniel was praying concerning the seventy-year captivity. But God sent Gabriel with a message that dealt with something much vaster—the entire history of the Jewish people prophetically.

This frequently happens in prayer. We come, concerned about a particular matter, but as we spend time in prayer, God shows us other things and ministers to us so deeply and intimately that we leave with an entirely different perspective. That's why prayer is so important. Daniel went his way blown away by what he learned in the place of prayer.

Daniel's entire prayer takes less than three minutes to read. Granted, Daniel was fasting. Given, he was intense with sackcloth and ashes. But I would encourage you to not think that, in order to receive revelation from the Lord and be impacted by Him, you need to pray for three hours.

The problem is, Satan comes to us and says, "All you have is five minutes? You really think God is going to meet you in five minutes?" So we commit to pray for an hour. But the hour never comes, or the alarm doesn't go off, or we drift off. Therefore, I encourage you to commit to praying even five minutes. Set your face. Bow your knee. Approach God on the basis of His mercy—and watch how you will leave that place a changed individual.

Daniel 9:23, 24 (a)
At the beginning of thy supplications the commandment came forth, and I am come to shew thee; for thou art greatly beloved: therefore understand the matter, and consider the vision. Seventy weeks are determined upon thy people and upon thy holy city . . .

The word "week" in Hebrew is heptad. Like a decade that means ten or a dozen that means twelve, heptad means seven. It could speak of seven days, seven weeks, or seven years. Here, as is frequently the case throughout the Bible, the heptad refers to seven years. How do we know? There is a principle of Bible interpretation called the Principle of First Mention. That is, if you want to know the meaning of any given term, go to the first place it is mentioned in the Bible and there you will find a key. In Genesis 29, we see the first time heptad is used.

> And Jacob served seven years for Rachel; and they seemed unto him but a few days, for the love he had to her.
> Genesis 29:20

The story is of Jacob, who fell in love with Rachel. Her father, Laban, said to Jacob, "Work for me seven years, and I'll let you have her." At the end of seven years, the wedding ceremony took place. According to custom, the bride was veiled. But when Jacob awoke the next morning, he was shocked to find that he had married Rachel's older sister, Leah.

"Laban, I worked seven years for Rachel," Jacob protested.

"We have a custom that the older daughter always gets married first," Laban said. "But if you work for me for seven more years, I'll throw Rachel in."

So Jacob worked seven more years for Rachel.

> And Laban said, It must not be so done in our country, to give the younger before the firstborn. Fulfil her week, and we will give thee this also for the service which thou shalt serve with me yet seven other years. And Jacob did so, and fulfilled her week: and he gave him Rachel his daughter to wife also.
> Genesis 29:26–28

When Laban said, "Fulfill her week," the word used is heptad. Laban wasn't talking about seven days. He was talking about a "week" of seven years.

> Daniel 9:24 (b)
> . . . to finish the transgression, and to make an end of sins, and to make reconciliation for iniquity, and to bring in everlasting righteousness, and to seal up the vision and prophecy, and to anoint the most Holy.

Seventy weeks are determined upon Israel to finish—or literally to restrain—transgression. That is, Satan—the one who causes transgression—will be restrained. After seventy weeks, sin will end. There will also be reconciliation for iniquity and everlasting righteousness. The vision and prophecy will be sealed and the most Holy anointed. In other words, the message to Daniel was, "Daniel, good things are going to happen at the end of seventy weeks, or four hundred ninety years. Iniquity will be forgiven. Prophecy will be fulfilled. The most Holy One, Jesus Christ, will be anointed and received as King."

Know therefore and understand, that from the going forth of the commandment to restore and to build Jerusalem unto the Messiah the Prince shall be seven weeks, and threescore and two weeks: the street shall be built again, and the wall, even in troublous times.

Daniel was told that sixty-nine weeks—or four hundred eighty-three years—would pass between the time the command to rebuild Jerusalem was given and Messiah would come. Why is there a division between seven weeks and sixty-two weeks? We see the answer in Nehemiah. Don't forget, the Jews were in captivity in Babylon. Jerusalem was lying in ruins. On March 14, 445 B.C., the command was given the Jews to go back home, to rebuild Jerusalem, and restore the temple. Zerubbabel, Ezra, Nehemiah and others began to lead groups of Jews out of captivity and back to Jerusalem to restore and rebuild the city. How long did it take to rebuild the city? Forty-nine years. That's why there are seven weeks followed by sixty-two additional weeks.

If you begin at March 14, 445 B.C. and use the Jewish calendar of three hundred sixty days per year, sixty-nine weeks, or four hundred eighty-three years, brings you to April 6, A.D. 32. What happened on that day? Messiah came riding into Jerusalem on a donkey, offering Himself to be the King of Israel. At first they welcomed Him, waving palm branches and saying, "Hosanna in the highest. Save now. Be our King!"

But within days, the fickle crowd said, "We will not have this Man rule over us. Away with Him. Crucify Him."

> And when he was come near, he beheld the city, and wept over it, Saying, If thou hadst known, even thou, at least in this thy day, the things which belong unto thy peace! . . .
> Luke 19:41, 42 (a)

"Jerusalem," Jesus said, "you should have known that this is your day! Oh, the peace that would be possible if I were your King." But they didn't know it was their day because they didn't know Bible prophecy. And Jesus wept.

> Daniel 9:26 (a)
> And after threescore and two weeks shall Messiah be cut off, but not for himself . . .

Messiah will come. And yet He will be cut off. He'll be killed—but not for Himself. Indeed, He who knew no sin was made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God through Him (2 Corinthians 5:21). Jesus died for our sins. Messiah came, was rejected by Israel, was cut off for our sins—exactly as the prophet declared.

> Daniel 9:26 (b), 27 (a)
> . . . and the people of the prince that shall come shall destroy the city and the sanctuary; and the end thereof shall be with a flood, and unto the end of the war desolations are determined. And he shall confirm the covenant with many for one week . . .

After sixty-nine weeks Messiah came. But there's still one week left. The history of Israel consists of seventy weeks. Therefore, one seven-year period remains to be unfolded. At that time, the prince of the people, antichrist—a charismatic, influential, intelligent world leader—will appear on the scene. And the people will say, "You're the one we want to lead us."

> Daniel 9:27 (b)

. . . and in the midst of the week he shall cause the sacrifice and the oblation to cease, and for the overspreading of abominations he shall make it desolate, even until the consummation, and that determined shall be poured upon the desolate.

Antichrist will come on the scene and negotiate a treaty. He'll solve the Middle East problem ingeniously, including a way that the temple will be rebuilt in Jerusalem.

"But isn't there a mosque on the temple mount?" you ask.

Archaeological discoveries in recent years have unmistakably confirmed that the temple was a little bit north of the Dome of the Rock Mosque. And, interestingly enough, the space where it sat is blank. The Dome of the Rock Mosque sits in the outer court of the old temple. The outer court of the temple was the area where Gentiles could come.

Orthodox Jews today say they will recognize Messiah as the One who rebuilds the temple. Antichrist will do just that. But in the middle of his seven-year treaty, his true colors will show. He'll go into the temple, cause the sacrifices to cease, and set up an image of either himself or Zeus and demand it be worshiped. Matthew 24 calls this "the abomination of desolation." When this happens, the Jews will say, "What have we done?" And, realizing the Jews are no longer going along with his program, antichrist will wage war against Israel.

For three and one-half years, hell will literally break loose on this planet. Finally, at the end of the seven-year Tribulation—or Daniel's seventieth week—Jesus will come back to rule and reign on this earth. Thus, with the seventy weeks completed, there will be an end to sin, a beginning of everlasting rightness, and the Most Holy will be anointed.

We have already seen the first sixty-nine weeks come to pass historically. When will Daniel's seventieth week begin? It could begin anytime.

But before it does, Jesus will call us up to heaven in the Rapture. For seven years, we'll be in heaven, getting to know Him. The church was not in Daniel's first sixty-nine weeks, so neither shall she be in Daniel's seventieth week. That's why Jeremiah calls the Tribulation the time of Jacob's trouble (30:7). What separates Daniel's sixty-ninth week from the seventieth? It's the period of time known as the church age. In A.D. 70, when the temple was destroyed and the Jews were scattered, the prophetic clock stopped ticking. But in May, 1948, when Israel became a nation once again, the prophetic clock started ticking as well.

What does this mean for us personally? So often I come to the Lord talking about some sort of seventy-year activity. But I end up leaving my time of prayer with an entirely different perspective on eternity. I was concerned about why this person doesn't like me, or why this job didn't work out for me, or why my bill didn't get paid on time. But the Lord says, "I want to talk to you about heaven, about eternity." That's why reading the Bible and praying are so important. We need to be reminded of the big picture. Eternity will be here before we know it.

In the third year of Cyrus king of Persia a thing was revealed unto Daniel, whose name was called Belteshazzar; and the thing was true, but the time appointed was long: and he understood the thing, and had understanding of the vision. In those days I Daniel was mourning three full weeks. I ate no pleasant bread, neither came flesh nor wine in my mouth, neither did I anoint myself at all, till three whole weeks were fulfilled.

Here, we see Daniel fasting and pressing in to God's presence. Keep in mind Daniel at this point is at least eighty-five years old. If there was ever a time a person could say, "I deserve a break," it would have been Daniel. After all, he had been praying three times a day for years. He had been cast into the lions' den. He had interpreted dreams and visions under intense pressure. If ever there was a time to relax, it would be now. But Daniel didn't do this. At this time, he launches into another fast. For three full weeks, he sought the Lord with intensity. His was a partial fast—no pastries, no meat, no wine. Fasting can take on that form, as well. Fasting can be for varied lengths of time and from varied types of food.

Daniel 10:4–6

And in the four and twentieth day of the first month, as I was by the side of the great river, which is Hiddekel; Then I lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a certain man clothed in linen, whose loins were girded with fine gold of Uphaz: His body also was like the beryl, and his face as the appearance of lightning, and his eyes as lamps of fire, and his arms and his feet like in colour to polished brass, and the voice of his words like the voice of a multitude.

As he fasted and prayed, Daniel saw an appearance of the pre-incarnate Jesus Christ. His vision compares with those recorded in Ezekiel 1 and Revelation 1.

Daniel 10:7
And I Daniel alone saw the vision: for the men that were with me saw not the vision; but a great quaking fell upon them, so that they fled to hide themselves.

You visionaries, you Daniels, please understand this: Revelation will often bring isolation. That is, when the Lord begins to reveal Himself to you because you are truly seeking Him, others will wonder about you and perhaps even flee from you. They won't see the same vision. Oh, they'll feel the effects. They'll feel the quaking of your life changing—but they won't see the vision.

Daniel 10:8 (a)
Therefore I was left alone, and saw this great vision . . .

Revelation not only sometimes results in isolation but often requires isolation. When did Daniel see the vision? When he was left alone. When John received the Book of Revelation, he was all alone on the island of Patmos. Thus, the Lord was free to make Himself known to John. The same is true with us. Oftentimes, friends and family just won't be there for us because the Lord wants to deal with us.

Daniel 10:8 (b), 9

. . . and there remained no strength in me: for my comeliness was turned in me into corruption, and I retained no strength. Yet heard I the voice of his words: and when I heard the voice of his words, then was I in a deep sleep on my face, and my face toward the ground.

Daniel saw the Lord, heard the voice of the Lord, and fell down before the Lord.

Daniel 10:10
And, behold, an hand touched me, which set me upon my knees and upon the palms of my hands.

As we will see, this is an angel. As seen in 1 Corinthians 11, the early church was very sensitive to the angelic presence. There are angels in our midst, as well. Hebrews 13:2 says we actually talk with angels, but are unaware of it.

Daniel 10:11, 12
And he said unto me, O Daniel, a man greatly beloved, understand the words that I speak unto thee, and stand upright: for unto thee am I now sent. And when he had spoken this word unto me, I stood trembling. Then said he unto me, Fear not, Daniel: for from the first day that thou didst set thine heart to understand, and to chasten thyself before thy God, thy words were heard, and I am come for thy words.

"The first day you prayed, your words were heard," the angel told Daniel. Then why was there no answer for twenty-one days? Why does God delay answers to prayer?

God can answer prayer directly and immediately. Or He can deny the prayer in His sovereignty, knowing what we ask for will be detrimental or He can delay the answer. Why does the Lord delay answers to prayer? Oftentimes, the Lord just wants us to spend time with Him and He knows that if we come cruising into His presence and get what we want immediately, we'll grab the goods and run away quickly. Therefore, oftentimes, I believe the Father says, "It's nice to see you again. Slow down. Don't rush off."

Sometimes, answers to prayer are delayed because God wants us to think through what it is we really want from Him. I remember when my kids were little, every Christmas they gave me wish lists consisting of everything they saw on television, heard about from other kids, and saw in toy catalogues. How did I know what they really wanted? As Christmas got closer, the lists became condensed as they were able to determine the things they really wanted to see under the tree. I believe the same is true with prayer. We come with a torrent of thoughts, ideas, and requests, but sometimes the Lord delays the answer as if to say, "What do you really want?" It's not that He doesn't know. It's that He wants us to discover that which is truly on our own hearts.

Answers to prayer can be delayed because the Lord wants us to spend time with Him, because He wants us to recognize what it is we truly seek—or because of demonic spiritual forces. Such was the case with Daniel . . .

Daniel 10:13
But the prince of the kingdom of Persia withstood me one and twenty days: but, lo, Michael, one of the chief princes, came to help me; and I remained there with the kings of Persia.

In Ephesians 6, we read that we wrestle not against flesh and blood but against principalities and powers and spiritual wickedness in high places. There are angels, yes. But there are also demons. And they are very real. They're apparently highly organized into principalities, powers, rulers, and spiritual wickedness in high places. The Bible seems to teach that countries have specific demons that oversee or undermine them. Here, the angel says to Daniel, "The day you prayed, I was sent, but I was intercepted by the prince of Persia and for twenty-one days I wrestled with him." That is, the demon who oversees Persia, or present-day Iran, intercepted him and kept him from coming until Michael, the archangel of God, came to reinforce this angel and free him from the grasp of the prince of Persia.

Thus, the answer to prayer was hung up in a heavenly conflict. What would happen had Daniel quit praying after eighteen days? I believe the answer would never have come. He had to pray through. There are demons at work, gang. We are not wrestling against people, against flesh and blood. It's not your boss's personality, your husband's insensitivity, or your wife's inadequacies that are irritating you. Rather, there are demons in place that are causing all kinds of irritations, improper evaluations, and very real frustrations. If you're wrestling against people, you're fighting the wrong battle. It's the demons you need to war against, not flesh and blood.

James tells us that we have not because we ask not (4:2). In the original text, it's clear that Jesus taught us to keep asking, keep seeking, keep knocking (Matthew 7:7). Part of the reason we're taught to keep praying is because there is a war going on that, although we don't see it with our eyes, we feel its effects. If we give up in prayer, much of the blessing and release that would have come our way won't make it. Daniel discovered this.

Daniel 10:14–19
Now I am come to make thee understand what shall befall thy people in the latter days: for yet the vision is for many days. And when he had spoken such words unto me, I set my face toward the ground, and I became dumb. And, behold, one like the similitude of the sons of men touched my lips: then I opened my mouth, and spake, and said unto him that stood before me, O my lord, by the vision my sorrows are turned upon me, and I have retained no strength. For how can the servant of this my lord talk with this my lord? for as for me, straightway there remained no strength in me, neither is there breath left in me. Then there came again and touched me one like the appearance of a man, and he strengthened me, And said, O man greatly beloved, fear not: peace be unto thee, be strong, yea, be strong. And when he had spoken unto me, I was strengthened, and said, Let my lord speak; for thou hast strengthened me.

Once again, feeling the effect of the vision, his strength sapped, an angel comes and tells Daniel to be strong, to not be afraid, that he is greatly loved.

"No wonder an angel came to Daniel," you might say. "He was a great man, loved by God. But me? I'm weak. I struggle. The Lord would never speak to me or be able to use me." But check this out: the same angel ministering to Daniel, a messenger angel known as Gabriel, later came to Mary and said, "Hail, thou that art highly favored, or literally greatly loved." Then he shared with her how she was chosen among all women to bring forth the Christ child (Luke 1). Charitoo, the Greek word translated "highly favored," appears only one other place in the New Testament . . .

> To the praise of the glory of his grace, wherein he hath made us accepted in the beloved.
> Ephesians 1:6

The same word spoken to Daniel and to Mary is spoken concerning you. This means you're loved every bit as much as Daniel. You're favored every bit as much as Mary. Because you are in Christ, He'll come to you and use you as surely as He did them.

> Daniel 10:20, 21
> Then said he, Knowest thou wherefore I come unto thee? and now will I return to fight with the prince of Persia: and when I am gone forth, lo, the prince of Grecia shall come. But I will shew thee that which is noted in the scripture of truth: and there is none that holdeth with me in these things, but Michael your prince.

"The battle isn't over," the angel says. "I'm here to share with you, Daniel, but now I have to go back because the battle goes on." The war isn't over, gang. It continues in the heavenly arena. Therefore, like Gabriel, like Daniel, we cannot afford to kick back, to take it easy. Why? I suggest three reasons . . .

Because of our country. Daniel loved his country. The first year Cyrus became king, he told the Jews in captivity to go home, to rebuild their city and temple. But, as Ezra records, only about 49,000 people—a handful—went back. The rest were comfortable in Babylon. They wondered why they should go back and rebuild the temple when they could kick back and be comfortable in Babylon. Oh, initially it was hard there, but as the years went on, Babylon began to feel like home. And, seeing the people comfortable in carnality broke Daniel's heart.

I wonder what the Lord sees in American Christianity. "Why should I worry about going to prayer meeting Wednesday night?" we ask. "Why should I worry about fasting like I used to?" Daniel loved his country and yet he saw so few who were interested in restoring the nation. So, as an eighty-five-year-old man, he said, "I'll fast and pray on behalf of these people who have grown so comfortable."

The Lord didn't say, "If My people who are called by My name will humble themselves and vote, I will heal their land." Nor did He say, "If My people will humble themselves and petition, I will heal their land." He said, "If My people who are called by My name will humble themselves and pray, and seek My face, and turn from their wicked ways, I will hear from heaven, forgive their sin, and heal their land" (2 Chronicles 7:14, italics added). If you're a true patriot, be a prayer warrior. There's a battle raging and it must be fought in prayer constantly.

We can't afford to kick back because of our families. Satan never has a good day. Demons never let up—and they will go after our kids if they see they are vulnerable. Job, the most righteous man on the face of the earth in his day, rose early each morning and offered sacrifice on behalf of each of his kids. He knew his kids were being pressured, so he would rise daily, sacrifice, and intercede. Job knew God. He understood spiritual reality. And he knew he couldn't afford to cruise.

Satan is a roaring lion. Therefore, if you love your kids, parents, you can't kick back, pray occasionally, and go to church sporadically. Your kids will be eaten up. You're a priest in the home, Dad. You're a covering, Mom. Don't take it easy or your kids will pay the price.

Finally, if you kick back, you are asking for real trouble personally because in so doing, you make yourself an easy target.

> Remember what Amalek did unto thee by the way, when ye were come forth out of Egypt; How he met thee by the way, and smote the hindmost of thee, even all that were feeble behind thee, when thou wast faint and weary; and he feared not God.

The Amalekites attacked God's people constantly as they journeyed through the wilderness. Who did the Amalekites pick off? Not the people in the front, but those in the back, those who lagged behind and were "cool" about spiritual things. You might not care about your country. You might not have a family. But if you have a kick-back kind of Christianity, you'll get picked off personally. The front lines aren't where the casualties are. It's when you start dropping back in your intensity, when you start giving up in your ministry that you are in danger of being devoured.

"If God is so good and so powerful, why doesn't He just wipe out the demons that attack us?" you ask. He will eventually, but they are actually serving a purpose presently. Think of it this way: If I see someone at the YMCA working hard lifting weights and take them from him, I am actually doing him a disservice. It is the lifting that gives the strength. And that's the purpose the enemy is fulfilling. Yes, he causes things to get heavy. But the Lord uses him as a weight to strengthen us, to teach us how to press in and be strong. Our Father knows we'll need strength and stamina, experience and endurance for what's ahead, so He allows us to struggle. He'll never give us more than we can handle (1 Corinthians 10:13), but He will allow us to struggle in order to gain spiritual stamina.

Therefore, embrace the struggle and keep going. Become a Daniel. Even when you're eighty-five years old, keep with your devotional life, your spiritual discipline, your studying, and prayer. Don't forsake assembling with other believers (Hebrews 10:25). Don't become a Babylonian, caught up in your business, hobbies, or house. Instead, say, "I will continue on because there's too much at stake."

Lord, by Your grace, keep us going.

11 In chapter 11, we come to the message Gabriel brought Daniel, after Daniel wrestled in prayer for twenty-one days. It's a bird's-eye view—prophetically for Daniel and historically for us—of the events that happen in the Middle East. Scholars have tabulated one hundred thirty-five specific prophecies given in chapter 11, all fulfilled to the most minute detail.

Daniel 11:1, 2
Also I in the first year of Darius the Mede, even I, stood to confirm and to strengthen him. And now will I shew thee the truth. Behold, there shall stand up yet three kings in Persia; and the fourth shall be far richer than they all: and by his strength through his riches he shall stir up all against the realm of Grecia.

At this point in Daniel's life, the Babylonians have been overthrown by the Medes and Persians. Now the Persians are in power. And the angel says, "Three Persians are in power. Three kings are going to come in a row and the fourth one shall be richer than the rest and will stir up the entire kingdom against Greece." That's exactly what happened. The fourth king was Xerxes —and he was determined to wipe out Greece. With his vast wealth, he spent four years raising an army of two and a half million men. It took seven days to march the men across boats that acted as a bridge from the land mass across the Aegean Sea into the region of Greece. The battle was the bloodiest battle in history as the Greeks fought against Xerxes and his two and a half million men. And, although the Greeks lost, the army of Xerxes was decimated.

For the next one hundred fifty-plus years, the Greeks waited to take revenge.

Daniel 11:3, 4
And a mighty king shall stand up, that shall rule with great dominion, and do according to his will. And when he shall stand up, his kingdom shall be broken, and shall be divided toward the four winds of heaven; and not to his posterity, nor according to his dominion which he ruled: for his kingdom shall be plucked up, even for others beside those.

One hundred fifty years later, a mighty king did indeed arise by the name of Alexander. He took all of the anger and revenge that the Greeks were feeling and began to conquer. By the time he was thirty-three, he had conquered the entire known world. But he died of pneumonia shortly thereafter. Following his death, his son didn't take over the kingdom, but it was divided between four of his generals. And now as the story unfolds, we'll focus on two areas taken over by two of Alexander's generals: the families of the Seleucids and the Ptolemys. The Seleucids were in Syria, directly north of Israel. The Ptolemys were in Egypt, directly below Israel. Why are these two kingdoms of the four singled out? Because they surrounded Israel.

Daniel 11:5, 6
And the king of the south shall be strong, and one of his princes; and he shall be strong above him, and have dominion; his dominion shall be a great dominion. And in the end of years they shall join themselves together; for the king's daughter of the south shall come to the king of the north to make an agreement: but she shall not retain the power of the arm; neither shall he stand, nor his arm: but she shall be given up, and they that brought her, and he that begat her, and he that strengthened her in these times.

Rather than fight the Syrians, Ptolemy proposed that they form an alliance. "I have a daughter," he said to Antiochus in Syria. "Marry her and that will make us one big family like Alexander wanted us to be."

"I can't," Antiochus said. "I'm married."

"Dump her," Ptolemy said.

Antiochus agreed. The wedding took place—but soon after that, Ptolemy died and Antiochus decided he wanted his first wife back. She returned to him—only to stab him in the back before killing Ptolemy's daughter and their child, as well.

Daniel 11:7–9
But out of a branch of her roots shall one stand up in his estate, which shall come with an army, and shall enter into the fortress of the king of the north, and shall deal against them, and shall prevail: And shall also carry captives into Egypt their gods, with their princes, and with their precious vessels of silver and of gold; and he shall continue more years than the king of the north. So the king of the south shall come into his kingdom, and shall return into his own land.

Enraged by what had happened to his sister, Ptolemy's son, Ptolemy III gathered an army, marched through Israel, and did in the Syrians. And while he was there, he rescued 2,500 gods the Syrians had stolen from the Egyptians years earlier.

Daniel 11:10
But his sons shall be stirred up, and shall assemble a multitude of great forces: and one shall certainly come, and overflow, and pass through: then shall he return, and be stirred up, even to his fortress.

In response to the Egyptian invasion, Antiochus III launched a counterattack against Egypt and, in the process, claimed Israel as part of his empire.

Daniel 11:11–14
And the king of the south shall be moved with choler, and shall come forth and fight with him, even with the king of the north: and he shall set forth a great multitude; but the multitude shall be given into his hand. And when he hath taken away the multitude, his heart shall be lifted up; and he shall cast down many ten thousands: but he shall not be strengthened by it. For the king of the north shall return, and shall set forth a multitude greater than the former, and shall certainly come after certain years with a great army and with much riches. And in those times there shall many stand up against the king of the south: also the robbers of thy people shall exalt themselves to establish the vision; but they shall fall.

Back and forth the battle went, now centering in Israel. Finally Antiochus V came on the scene, determined to solve the problem once and for all. So he persuaded the Greeks to join him in invading Egypt once again.

Daniel 11:15–17
So the king of the north shall come, and cast up a mount, and take the most fenced cities: and the arms of the south shall not withstand, neither his chosen people, neither shall there be any strength to withstand. But he that cometh against him shall do according to his own will, and none shall stand before him: and he shall stand in the glorious land, which by his hand shall be consumed. He shall also set his face to enter with the strength of his whole kingdom, and upright ones with him; thus shall he do: and he shall give him the daughter of women, corrupting her: but she shall not stand on his side, neither be for him.

As tensions began to ease, Antiochus said to the house of Ptolemy, "I've got a beautiful daughter. You have a son. I'll ship my daughter down to you in Egypt. She'll hang out there, wait for your son to grow up, and then they can be married." What he was really after, however, was to place his daughter inside the palace of the Ptolemys to act as a spy. The woman's name? Cleopatra. It was a good idea—until Cleopatra actually fell in love and refused to spy on the house of Ptolemy.

Daniel 11:18
After this shall he turn his face unto the isles, and shall take many: but a prince for his own behalf shall cause the reproach offered by him to cease; without his own reproach he shall cause it to turn upon him.

Antiochus then turned his face toward the Greek isles, determined to conquer them. But when he went north to vent his frustration by conquering the Greek islands, he came into contact with the emerging Roman Empire, which kept him from carrying out his plan.

Daniel 11:19, 20
Then he shall turn his face toward the fort of his own land: but he shall stumble and fall, and not be found. Then shall stand up in his estate a raiser of taxes in the glory of the kingdom: but within few days he shall be destroyed, neither in anger, nor in battle.

He turned back to his own land and died inside the temple of one of his gods. The problem is, all of his military ventures had taken a tremendous toll on the country north. They had a huge deficit. So in 187 B.C., the next Antiochus announced that he would send 1,000 tax collectors throughout the Syrian empire to tax the people. But someone slipped some poisonous mushrooms into his dinner and he died. All of this sets the stage for the remainder of the chapter.

The year is 175 B.C. Out of these two groups of people, one individual emerges: Antiochus Epiphanes—a very important person prophetically, for he is a picture, a foreshadowing of one who is even more vile: antichrist.

Daniel 11:21, 22
And in his estate shall stand up a vile person, to whom they shall not give the honour of the kingdom: but he shall come in peaceably, and obtain the kingdom by flatteries. And with the arms of a flood shall they be overflown from before him, and shall be broken; yea, also the prince of the covenant.

In 175 B.C., Antiochus Epiphanes, a great public orator, appeared on the scene and, with great trickery and flattery, seduced the people into acknowledging that he was the rightful king—not only of Syria, but of Israel as well. And when he came to power, he overthrew the legitimate high priest and put his own false priesthood in place.

Daniel 11:23, 24
And after the league made with him he shall work deceitfully: for he shall come up, and shall become strong with a small people. He shall enter peaceably even upon the fattest places of the province; and he shall do that which his fathers have not done, nor his fathers' fathers; he shall scatter among them the prey, and spoil, and riches: yea, and he shall forecast his devices against the strong holds, even for a time.

Edom, Moab, all of Palestine, into Syria—Antiochus took control of the "fattest" or richest real estate.

Daniel 11:25, 26
And he shall stir up his power and his courage against the king of the south with a great army; and the king of the south shall be stirred up to battle with a very great and mighty army; but he shall not stand: for they shall forecast devices against him. Yea, they that feed of the portion of his meat shall destroy him, and his army shall overflow: and many shall fall down slain.

When he waged war against the Egyptians, Antiochus renewed the old rivalry but did it with treachery by tricking some of the servants of Ptolemy to turn against their king. Thus, the king of the south was betrayed by his own people.

Daniel 11:27, 28
And both these kings' hearts shall be to do mischief, and they shall speak lies at one table; but it shall not prosper: for yet the end shall be at the time appointed. Then shall he return into his land with great riches; and his heart shall be against the holy covenant; and he shall do exploits, and return to his own land.

The Egyptians knew they'd been had. Although they came to the peace table and set up peace agreements with Syria, they were lying through their teeth.

Daniel 11:29, 30
At the time appointed he shall return, and come toward the south; but it shall not be as the former, or as the latter. For the ships of Chittim shall come against him: therefore he shall be grieved, and return, and have indignation against the holy covenant: so shall he do; he shall even return, and have intelligence with them that forsake the holy covenant.

Years passed and Antiochus decided to make another military venture into Egypt. The ships of Chittim, or Cypress, were Roman galleys that prevented Antiochus from advancing. History tells us that the Roman soldiers actually draw a line in the sand and said, "Step over that line toward Egypt and you're dead."

Daniel 11:31
And arms shall stand on his part, and they shall pollute the sanctuary of strength, and shall take away the daily sacrifice, and they shall place the abomination that maketh desolate.

Prevented from going to Egypt, in his frustration and anger, Antiochus headed north—right into Jerusalem, where he vented his anger on the Jews. Upon his arrival, 40,000 were killed. By the time his anger was vented, 100,000 had been slaughtered. Then came the "abomination of desolation"—when he went into the temple, killed a pig on the altar, smeared the blood on the walls of the temple, and demanded the remainder be drunk by the Jewish priests. Then he erected a statue of either Zeus or himself and demanded that it be worshiped. It was a sickening scene. That's why the Jews called him not Antiochus Epiphanes, or "Antiochus the Shining One," but Antiochus Epinanes, or "Antiochus the Madman." Indeed, along with Caesar, Nero, and Hitler, he is one of the most insane rulers in history.

Daniel 11:32
And such as do wickedly against the covenant shall he corrupt by flatteries: but the people that do know their God shall be strong, and do exploits.

At this point, 170 B.C., the Jews were devastated by the holocaust of Antiochus. Yet there was one family who decided to stand up to the madman. A man named Judah and his brothers—known as the Maccabees, launched a guerilla war against Antiochus that lasted until 165 B.C.—when they overthrew the Syrians and threw them out of Jerusalem.

No matter how big the enemy might be, how dark the day might seem, how large the battle might loom, the people that truly know their God will be strong and do exploits because they realize that, if God be for them, who can be against them? (Romans 8:31). The gutsiest people in the world are believers who know their God, who don't back down or give up in the face of challenge, but who simply say, "I know the Lord is with me and no matter how dark the day might be, I'm going to continue doing what He's called me to do."

That's why we study the Word—that we might know God and do great exploits.

Daniel 11:33–35
And they that understand among the people shall instruct many: yet they shall fall by the sword, and by flame, by captivity, and by spoil, many days. Now when they shall fall, they shall be holpen with a little help: but many shall cleave to them with flatteries. And some of them of understanding shall fall, to try them, and to purge, and to make them white, even to the time of the end: because it is yet for a time appointed.

Verses 2 through 34 chronicle four hundred seventy consecutive years of Jewish history. Suddenly, verse 35 leapfrogs over centuries. Why? Because the first thirty-two verses speak of Daniel's sixty-nine weeks, while verse 35 speaks of Daniel's seventieth week. In between verses 34 and 35 is the church age. When the church age is over, when the believers are raptured, Daniel's seventieth week—the time of the Tribulation—dawns. That's why Daniel jumps from Antiochus Epiphanes to the end times yet to come. Antiochus Epiphanes was part of the first sixty-nine weeks. Now we go to the seventieth week, where one even more vile than he comes on the scene. His name is antichrist . . .

Daniel 11:36 (a)
And the king shall do according to his will . . .

Just like Lucifer who said, "I will be like God," which caused him to be cast from heaven and become Satan (Isaiah 14:14), antichrist, who is filled with Satan does according to his own will. Contrast this with Jesus who prayed, "Not My will, but Thy will be done" (Luke 22:42).

Daniel 11:36 (b)
. . . and he shall exalt himself, and magnify himself above every god . . .

Again, contrast antichrist, exalting and magnifying himself, with Jesus who, although He was equal with God humbled Himself and made Himself of no reputation (Philippians 2: 7, 8).

Daniel 11:36 (c)
. . . and shall speak marvellous things against the God of gods . . .

Antichrist will speak so powerfully that he'll make Adolf Hitler and Winston Churchill look like stammerers. He'll inspire the entire world to turn against the true and living God.

Daniel 11:36 (d)
. . . and shall prosper till the indignation be accomplished: for that that is determined shall be done.

The world will rally around this coming world leader, this great orator, this magnetic individual—and he'll prosper.

Daniel 11:37 (a)
Neither shall he regard the God of his fathers . . .

This verse is the reason most Bible teachers believe that although he's living in Europe, antichrist will be of Jewish heritage.

Daniel 11:37 (b)
. . . nor the desire of women . . .

Antichrist will very possibly be homosexual.

Daniel 11:37 (c)
. . . nor regard any god: for he shall magnify himself above all.

Antichrist will be his own god. Like antichrist, people who are atheists worship the dumbest god of them all: themselves. "I will worship only that I can understand and comprehend," they say. And in so saying, they worship their own intellects.

Daniel 11:38
But in his estate shall he honour the God of forces: and a god whom his fathers knew not shall he honour with gold, and silver, and with precious stones, and pleasant things.

The one god antichrist will honor is the god of military might—but it is an expensive god, indeed.

Daniel 11:39
Thus shall he do in the most strong holds with a strange god, whom he shall acknowledge and increase with glory: and he shall cause them to rule over many, and shall divide the land for gain.

Antichrist will use his god of military might to dominate the world. Initially, he depended on his charisma, flattery, and talk of peace. But now he begins to flex his military muscle.

Daniel 11:40 (a)
And at the time of the end shall the king of the south push at him . . .

The Egyptians and Arabs will begin to wage war against antichrist in the middle of the Tribulation period.

Daniel 11:40 (b)
. . . and the king of the north shall come against him like a whirlwind, with chariots, and with horsemen, and with many ships; and he shall enter into the countries, and shall overflow and pass over.

From Ezekiel 37—39, we know that the king of the north refers not to the Syrians but to the Russians.

Daniel 11:41 (a)
He shall enter also into the glorious land . . .

The glorious land is the same as the pleasant land in Daniel 8:9. It's Israel.

Daniel 11:41 (b)–44 (a)
. . . and many countries shall be overthrown: but these shall escape out of his hand, even Edom, and Moab, and the chief of the children of Ammon. He shall stretch forth his hand also upon the countries: and the land of Egypt shall not escape. But he shall have power over the treasures of gold and of silver, and over all the precious things of Egypt: and the Libyans and the Ethiopians shall be at his steps. But tidings out of the east and out of the north shall trouble him . . .

In Ezekiel 38 and 39, we see the Russians coming before the Tribulation unfolds. Here, they have regrouped. At least three and a half years have gone by, and they're coming down to Israel again. At this point, antichrist is troubled because out of the east, he hears tidings. Revelation 9 tells us those tidings are that the king of the east is coming with an army of two hundred million men. When Revelation was written John must have thought he heard wrong. But in the 1960s, Radio Peking announced that China had established a militia of two hundred million men. Suddenly, people who were studying prophecy took notice. Here, we see not only the Russians and the Arabs pinching antichrist, but the Chinese, as well. No wonder antichrist is troubled. He sees his world empire collapsing.

. . . therefore he shall go forth with great fury to destroy, and utterly to make away many.

Although antichrist lashes out at the world indiscriminately, his anger will be particularly directed toward the Jews.

Daniel 11:45
And he shall plant the tabernacles of his palace between the seas in the glorious holy mountain; yet he shall come to his end, and none shall help him.

Antichrist will make his headquarters in a valley called Megiddo, where the final battle will unfold. As the armies of the world converge to destroy him, no one will help him. He has his munitions—but it could be that they are rendered inoperable by advanced technology. When things get down to the end time, will all of the computer-based weaponry be scrambled? With sophisticated weapons useless will soldiers be reduced to using horses and swords? Maybe not—but I think it's a possibility.

We do know that right when it looks like the whole world—particularly Israel—will be devastated at Armageddon, Jesus will come back. Suddenly, all these armies will stop fighting each other and start firing at the Lord.

Needless to say, they won't have a prayer.

12 Historians tell us that, since 650 B.C., there have been 1,656 arms races between two major empires. Of those, all but sixteen ended in a war between those two empires. The sixteen that didn't end in war were because the race caused the countries to collapse economically and fall from world power. Secular, military history doesn't give a lot of hope for peace in the future. And Bible prophecy says the same thing. There are going to be some heavy-duty conflicts ahead.

These battles will culminate in Israel at the Battle of Armageddon. Antichrist will consolidate his power but will find himself very unpopular. And the king of the east will march with two hundred million men across the Asian land mass down to the valley of Megiddo. The Russians from the north will come down. The king of the south—the Egyptian and Arab countries—will consolidate their countries and move north. Thus, antichrist, who will make his capital in Jerusalem, will be boxed in with nothing to do but await the battle.

The vision of chapters 10 and 11 continues in chapter 12 . . .

Daniel 12:1 (a)
And at that time . . .

As seen in chapter 11, this refers to the Tribulation period, the time of antichrist.

Daniel 12:1 (b)
. . . shall Michael stand up, the great prince which standeth for the children of thy people . . .

Michael is one of only two named angels in the Bible. The other is Gabriel. As seen in chapter 10, Gabriel is the messenger angel. Michael is the archangel who is always linked with Israel. It seems as though the forces of hell are organized very carefully with demonic princes over specific nations and regions. There are angelic beings over certain regions and Michael is the archangel, the "Four-Star General" overseeing Israel.

Daniel 12:1 (c)
. . . and there shall be a time of trouble, such as never was since there was a nation even to that same time . . .

When Michael stands up, there will be trouble. In Revelation 12, we see what happens when Michael stands up and why it causes such difficulty . . .

> And there was war in heaven: Michael and his angels fought against the dragon; and the dragon fought and his angels, And prevailed not; neither was their place found any more in heaven. And the great dragon was cast out, that old serpent, called the Devil, and Satan, which deceiveth the whole world: he was cast out into the earth, and his angels were cast out with him. And I heard a loud voice saying in heaven, Now is come salvation, and strength, and the kingdom of our God, and the power of his Christ: for the accuser of our brethren is cast down, which accused them before our God day and night. And they overcame him by the blood of the Lamb, and by the word of their testimony; and they loved not their lives unto the death.
> Revelation 12:7–11

In Revelation 12, we see what Daniel 12 is talking about. That is, in the middle of the Tribulation—the seven-year period when antichrist is on the scene, when we, as Christians, are in heaven with Jesus Christ and the world is going through a series of judgments, in the middle of the Tribulation—Satan is cast out of heaven.

"I thought Satan lived in hell," you say.

Not yet. From Job 1, we know that Satan roams the earth and has access to heaven. What does he do there? Revelation 12 and Job 1 tell us he accuses the brethren—us. But 1 John 2 tells us that we have an Advocate in Jesus Christ. Satan is the prosecuting attorney who brings charges against us, but Jesus is our defense Lawyer who says, "I object, Father. They are believers in Me and My blood has cleansed them." And God dismisses the case for lack of evidence. I would think Satan would tire of losing case after case. But he's a tireless enemy, accusing day and night.

There's coming a time, however, when he will be disbarred and thrown out of court forever. Michael will cast him out and no longer will he have access into heaven.

> Therefore rejoice, ye heavens, and ye that dwell in them. Woe to the inhabiters of the earth and of the sea! for the devil is come down unto you, having great wrath, because he knoweth that he hath but a short time. And when the dragon saw that he was cast unto the earth, he persecuted the woman which brought forth the man child.
> Revelation 12:12, 13

The woman referred to here is Israel. The man child is Jesus Christ.

> And the dragon was wroth with the woman, and went to make war with the remnant of her seed, which keep the commandments of God, and have the testimony of Jesus Christ.
> Revelation 12:17

When Michael, the archangel, kicks Satan out of heaven, Satan will come to earth and take out his frustration on Israel and the Tribulation believers. That is why Jesus said in Matthew 24:22 that, unless the days were shortened, all flesh would be destroyed. It's literally going to be hell on earth.

Daniel 12:1 (d)
. . . and at that time thy people shall be delivered, every one that shall be found written in the book.

A remnant of Jews will be miraculously and beautifully delivered, brought into the wilderness—very possibly the rock city of Petra—where they will be preserved from antichrist and the wrath of Satan.

Daniel 12:2
And many of them that sleep in the dust of the earth shall awake, some to everlasting life, and some to shame and everlasting contempt.

In the Tribulation—with Satan cast out of heaven, with brutal times taking place on earth—there is a resurrection. This speaks directly of Israel. Revelation 20 sheds more light on this . . ., now there's a resurrection.

Revelation 20 speaks of two resurrections. The first speaks of those who didn't take the mark of the beast but embraced the Lord and submitted to His Word. In other words, it speaks of those who are saved during the Tribulation period. Many will read books, remember sermons, remember the witness we gave and will be saved. In addition, an angel will fly across the sky preaching the everlasting gospel, 144,000 Jewish evangelists will be preaching, and two witnesses—perhaps Elijah and Moses back from the dead—will perform miracles. A lot of evangelism will happen in the Tribulation period before Jesus comes again. And I believe multiplied millions will realize Jesus is Lord—but it will cost them. Revelation 20 tells us they will be beheaded. So, if you're not yet a believer, don't lose your head—use it! Get saved now!

At the end of the Tribulation, right before the thousand years of peace, those who were killed in the Tribulation will be resurrected. That's the first resurrection. Then, after the thousand years of peace is over, when the Millennium is completed, the second resurrection takes place when the unrighteous are resurrected. At the great white throne judgment, they'll stand before the Lord as the books of all they've ever thought, done, and said will be opened. At that time, no one will be able to say, "I deserve to be in heaven." Their own works, words, and motives will prove otherwise.

And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.

Be wise. In light of what's happening prophetically, we should be motivated to be soul-winners, to evangelize, to share the good news. Prophecy is not meant to titillate our curiosity. It's meant to motivate us to activity. If you are wise, if you want to experience the full capacity of what God intends for you in ages to come, be a soul-winner. Turn people to righteousness. Turn them to Jesus Christ and you'll shine forever and ever.

For topical study of Daniel 12:3 entitled "Sharing and Shining," turn to page* 745.

Daniel 12:4 (a)
But thou, O Daniel, shut up the words, and seal the book, even to the time of the end . . .

"Daniel, these things aren't going to make sense until the end times," the angel tells Daniel.

Daniel 12:4 (b)
. . . many shall run to and fro . . .

Because the phrase, "to and fro," is an idiom for world travel, on the basis of this verse, Sir Isaac Newton, one of the most brilliant men in history and also a wonderful believer, deduced that if Daniel's words were literally true, if man would be able to travel throughout the world, he would have to be able to travel at fifty miles per hour. Voltaire, a contemporary and an atheist said, "That doddering fool. Every scientist knows that if man traveled over thirty miles per hour, his heart would stop."

Daniel 12:4 (c)
. . . and knowledge shall be increased.

Knowledge shall indeed be increased. Eighty-five percent of all scientists who have ever lived are alive today. Three thousand pages of scientific and technological information are being printed every second. To try and keep up with this information explosion is impossible. We know the end is coming because people are traveling the globe and knowledge is exploding.

Daniel 12:5–7
Then I Daniel looked, and, behold, there stood other two, the one on this side of the bank of the river, and the other on that side of the bank of the river. And one said to the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, How long shall it be to the end of these wonders? And I heard the man clothed in linen, which was upon the waters of the river, when he held up his right hand and his left hand unto heaven, and sware by him that liveth for ever that it shall be for a time, times, and an half; and when he shall have accomplished to scatter the power of the holy people, all these things shall be finished.

From the time antichrist sets up his image in the temple and makes people worship it, there will be three and a half years left until Jesus comes back.

Daniel 12:8–10
And I heard, but I understood not: then said I, O my Lord, what shall be the end of these things? And he said, Go thy way, Daniel: for the words are closed up and sealed till the time of the end. Many shall be purified, and made white, and tried; but the wicked shall do wickedly: and none of the wicked shall understand; but the wise shall understand.

"Daniel, go your way. Seal up this prophecy. The wicked will keep on behaving wickedly. The righteous will behave rightly. And the wise will understand at the right time. But Daniel, shut the book. It's not for your day," the angel said.

Compare this with what John was told concerning the revelation he received . . .

> And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand. He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still.

John was also told that the unjust will be unjust, the filthy will be filthy, and that the righteous will be moving into more rightness. But Daniel was told to seal the book while John was told not to seal the book. Why? We live in a day when Daniel is no longer an impossible book to understand because so much of it has already come to pass. Therefore, the Book of Revelation is opened to us because the Book of Daniel provides the key.

In your own Bible reading, there might be many things you read that you don't understand. The dietary regulations of Deuteronomy, for example, might be a mystery to you. So you wonder why you should even read about them. But there will come a time in your own pilgrimage, in your own walk when those things will begin to make sense. You'll read in the New Testament about the kinds of things we should be taking in and thinking on, staying away from certain activities and meditating on others—and you'll begin to make connections between them and the regulations in Deuteronomy. If you're not reading the Bible consistently, you'll never make those connections. But if you're reading consistently—even if you don't understand what you're reading today—there will come a time a year or two or five down the road, when it all makes sense. Even though it might be sealed up today, even though you might not understand it now, there will come a time when you hear the words, "Seal not up the book. The time is at hand. I'm going to show you how this applies to your life."

Keep reading—even though you're not fully understanding. The Holy Spirit will honor you for having that information and He'll begin to make application.

Daniel 12:11
And from the time that the daily sacrifice shall be taken away, and the abomination that maketh desolate set up, there shall be a thousand two hundred and ninety days.

Three and a half years is 1,260 days. Why, then, if the second half of the Tribulation is over after 1,260 days, is it 1,290 days before the abomination of desolation—the image antichrist placed in the temple—is taken away? Why is there a thirty-day lapse between when Jesus Christ comes back and the image is removed? I don't know. I suggest to you, however, that this gives time for what Ezekiel 20 and Matthew 25 speak of—the regathering of all the Jews who have been scattered under antichrist's persecution and the judging of all the nations that survive the Tribulation. Every nation shall be judged to see if they are allowed to go into the Millennium—the 1,000 years of peace. The single determining factor will be their treatment of the Jews—whether they joined in the persecution of God's people, or whether they protected and stood with them. You see, only those who fear and love God will take that risk.

Daniel 12:12
Blessed is he that waiteth, and cometh to the thousand three hundred and five and thirty days.

This is when all of the judgments are through, the kingdom is established, the image is gone, the temple is restored, everything is in place. Blessed is he who makes it to that point.

Daniel 12:13
But go thou thy way till the end be: for thou shalt rest, and stand in thy lot at the end of the days.

"Go your way, Daniel," the angel says. "This won't apply to you because you're going to die. But you'll be resurrected. You'll stand. You'll come back again at the right time. So don't give up."

SHARING AND SHINING

A Topical Study of DANIEL 12:3

The true stars that will shine forever and ever are not Oscar winners or Super Bowl winners but soul winners. Here, an angel came from heaven and told Daniel that he who desires to shine as the stars forever and ever will commit himself to winning souls, to sharing the truth of righteousness with others.

The apostle Paul would pick up this same analogy . . .

> There are also celestial bodies, and bodies terrestrial: but the glory of the celestial is one, and the glory of the terrestrial is another. There is one glory of the sun, and another glory of the moon, and another glory of the stars: for one star differeth from another star in glory. So also is the resurrection of the dead. . . .
> 1 Corinthians 15:40–42 (a)

Inspired by the Holy Spirit, Paul talks about the bodies we're going to be given in eternity. One astronomer wrote that there is now conclusive evidence that there are entire galaxies beyond ours made of compressed carbon, which is simply another name for diamonds. It's going to be amazing exploring the cosmos. So the Lord tells us He will give us bodies that are particularly appropriate for exploring the universe and living in the ages to come.

We're going to have bodies designed for heaven. But Paul also points out that the glory of one star differs from another star. In this context, the word, "glory," simply means "outshining." In other words, there will be varying degrees of brightness. If you know Jesus as your Savior, you're going to heaven. But when we get to heaven, the Bible says that crowns will be given for the service we've rendered to the Lord on earth.

You might say, "I have no desire to walk around with a crown on my head in heaven, so what's the big deal?"

But these crowns are not something we'll wear. Revelation 4:10 declares that we'll cast these crowns at the feet of Jesus, the One who did so much for us. In and of itself, that should be enough motivation to serve Him here—so that we might bring Him a gift when we see Him face to face.

But it's more than that. These crowns will determine what kind of star we are in heaven. Paul here is saying that there will be different intensities. Again, you might say, "I don't care if I'm a star or not." But the glory, or "outshining," speaks of your capacity to enjoy eternity.

When my kids were babies, whenever they banged on pots and pans with a wooden spoon, they'd giggle and have the time of their lives. Yet if I played those pots and pans with a wooden spoon, I wouldn't feel a thing because I'm no longer one year old. My capacity to understand and enjoy life is far beyond beating pots and pans. My world is bigger. My experience is greater.

So too, in heaven, we're all going to be happy. Everyone will be elated. But our capacities will differ. Everyone will be filled to the brim, but the size of the cups will differ greatly. Some will be great big barrels filled to the top. Some will be tiny teacups, also full to the brim. Some will be in heaven with a limited capacity to enjoy and experience eternity. Sure, they're saved. But they did nothing with their walks. They rendered no real service to the Lord. They just cruised through life—watching television and waiting to move on to eternity. And we'll see them banging pots and pans in heaven.

But others, because they were wise on earth, because they were soul winners, will have huge capacities in heaven. Therefore, don't miss the big picture, gang. Don't just make it to heaven by the skin of your teeth. Be wise. Enlarge your capacity to experience eternity by winning souls, by sharing the gospel.

As believers, most of us know we should be sharing and witnessing. We've been trained. We know the Scriptures. We've even taken classes and seminars. But we don't do what we know we should do and have been trained to do. We don't witness. Why? I'm convinced it's because we have been mistaken concerning what witnessing or winning souls is all about. We look at witnessing in the context of confrontation, telling people they're sinners and they're going to hell unless they get saved. But when we see people react against that kind of witnessing, when they put up walls and walk away from us, we say, “I’m tired of confronting people.” And we stop witnessing.

Witnessing, however, is not confrontation. Look with me at an illustration of witnessing not as confrontation but as invitation . . .

Invitation

In Numbers 10, we see the people of God journeying toward the Promised Land. As they set out, Moses talks to his brother-in-law, a man named Hobab . . .

> And Moses said unto Hobab, the son of Raguel the Midianite, Moses' father in law, We are journeying unto the place of which the LORD said, I will give it you: come thou with us, and we will do thee good: for the LORD hath spoken good concerning Israel.
> Numbers 10:29

Rather than telling Hobab he was a sinful Midianite and a pagan idolater, Moses said, "Hobab, come with us. We're going to a place that will be good for us."

In the same way, we can tell people we work with, live by, and are related to "Come with us. We're going to a good place. We're going to heaven."

For us as believers, this earth is as bad as it's ever going to get. We're just passing through this wilderness on our way to heaven. But for the unbeliever, this world is the best it's going to be. For them, it's all downhill from here.

Notice what Hobab said . . .

> And he said unto him, I will not go; but I will depart to mine own land, and to my kindred.
> Numbers 10:30

If you've ever tried to witness, does Hobab's answer sound familiar? "I have my own land, my own people," he said.

"Fine. Stay in Midian. Get wiped out when Midian gets attacked," Moses could have said. But he didn't. After extending an invitation, he now gives Hobab an exhortation . . .

Exhortation

> And he said, Leave us not, I pray thee; forasmuch as thou knowest how we are to encamp in the wilderness, and thou mayest be to us instead of eyes. And it shall be, if thou go with us, yea, it shall be, that what goodness the LORD shall do unto us, the same will we do unto thee.
> Numbers 10:31, 32

"Hobab, don't leave us to go back to your people," Moses said. "You can be eyes for us in the wilderness. You know this territory. You know the dangers and the pitfalls. You can be of tremendous benefit to us."

Jesus did the same thing. Before He spoke to the woman at the well about heaven, He asked for her help. Before He ministered to her, He allowed her to minister to Him by asking for water (John 4:7).

We miss great opportunities if we don't follow the example of Jesus and Moses, if we don't recognize peoples' gifts and abilities. To the doctor, we can say, "Come with us. We need you. You would be such a blessing to us." To the businessman, we can say, "Travel with us. We could use your skills. You could be a blessing to so many who are trying to sort out their finances." To the teacher, we can say, "Join us. Your ability to impact kids would be so beneficial to us."

Inspiration

We have been given the matchless opportunity of sharing the gospel with people. The gospel is good news.

> If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to cleanse us from all unrighteousness.
> 1 John 1:9

> My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.

We have the privilege of saying to people, "Maybe things in your past haunt you. But I have good news for you: All of your sin—every single sin you've ever committed—has been forgiven because Jesus died not only for my sins but for the sins of the whole world."

When we treat people as though they are forgiven, when we treat them like brothers and sisters, a funny thing happens. Like Hobab, they change their minds and join us. The greatest secret I know in winning souls is simply to treat people as if they're already saved. I have seen so many people come into the family of God because they were treated like brothers instead of sinners. Sinners loved to be around Jesus because He would talk to them about the kingdom, about His Father, and about eternity as if they were already believers. May we do the same.

Talk to people as though they're already part of the family of faith. Share with them what you've been learning and ask where they themselves are in their relationship with the Lord. Invite them to join the family of God as we journey together toward heaven. The ice will melt. People will be drawn in. You'll see souls won. And you'll shine for eternity.

HOSEA

Background to Hosea

In the Book of Hosea, we feel the heartbeat of God possibly more clearly than in any other book of the Bible. This prophet would be commanded by the Lord to marry and love a prostitute even though she would be unfaithful to him as a powerful illustration to the people of Israel concerning their relationship with their Husband, Jehovah.

> Fear not; for thou shalt not be ashamed: neither be thou confounded; for thou shalt not be put to shame: for thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth, and shalt not remember the reproach of thy widowhood any more. For thy Maker is thine husband; the LORD of hosts is his name; and thy Redeemer the Holy One of Israel; The God of the whole earth shall he be called. For the LORD hath called thee as a woman forsaken and grieved in spirit, and a wife of youth, when thou wast refused, saith thy God.
> Isaiah 54:4–6

Even as the church is the bride of Christ, Israel is the wife of Jehovah. But Israel had a tragic tendency to prostitute herself by leaving the relationship she had with God in order to pursue other gods. Thus, in Hosea's wife, Israel would see an illustration of herself.

We need illustrations. I'm reminded of a four-year-old boy, intently coloring a picture.

"What are you drawing?" his dad asked.

Without looking up, the boy said, "I'm drawing a picture of God."

"Son, no one in the whole world knows what God looks like," his dad said.

And still without looking up, the boy said, "Well, they will in a minute or two."

Although we don't have an illustration of what God looks like physically, through Hosea, we see His heart.

Not only would Hosea's marriage be an illustration to the people, but it would provide Hosea himself the unique and rare opportunity to feel what God felt, to experience what Paul calls "the fellowship of suffering."

> That I may know him, and the power of his resurrection, and the fellowship of his sufferings, being made conformable unto his death;
> Philippians 3:10

To truly know the Lord means not only to experience the power of the Lord, but to feel with Him. Only one man in the Bible is referred to as the friend of God (James 2:23). And it was to Abraham, His friend, God said to take his only son to Mount Moriah and offer him as a sacrifice to Him. Why did God tell him to do this? Centuries later, Mount Moriah would become known as Golgotha or Calvary. Therefore, I believe God wanted His friend to experience something of the pain He would feel when His only Son would be sacrificed for our sin on that very mountain.

Sometimes the Lord allows His friends—those who want to know Him intimately and walk with Him closely—to experience the fellowship of suffering. On an earthly level, there is a unique bonding that takes place when we go through hard times with someone. When we suffer, we relate to the Lord on a deeper level than when times are easy and prosperous. Therefore, in His surprising command to Hosea, God was actually saying, "I'm going to allow you the privilege of feeling what I feel."

Hosea ministered to the ten northern tribes of Israel from 750 to 714 B.C., which makes him perhaps the longest-ministering prophet in the Bible. He ministered through the reigns of the last six kings of the ten northern tribes and was on the scene when they were invaded by the Assyrians after refusing to heed the Lord's warnings.

The Book of Hosea is divided into two major sections. In chapters 1 through 3, we see the tragedy in Hosea's home life. Chapters 4 through 14 compose the second half, which speaks of a tragedy in Hosea's homeland. After seeing Hosea's personal ordeal in chapters 1 through 3, in chapters 4 through 7, we see a polluted people—particularly the ten northern tribes. In chapters 8 through 10, we see a punished people. In chapter 11, we see a prized people. In chapters 12 through 14, we see a pardoned people. And through it all, we see the heart and love of God.

HOSEA

Hosea 1:1, 2

1 The word of the LORD that came unto Hosea, the son of Beeri, in the days of Uz ziah, Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash, king of Israel. The beginning of the word of the LORD by Hosea. And the LORD said to Hosea, Go, take unto thee a wife of whoredoms and children of whoredoms: for the land hath committed great whoredom, departing from the LORD.

As God tells Hosea to marry a harlot who was herself the child of a harlot, we see Him setting up this illustration of the relationship His people had with Him.

Hosea 1:3

So he went and took Gomer the daughter of Diblaim; which conceived, and bare him a son.

Hosea married Gomer and she bore him a son.

Hosea 1:4, 5

And the LORD said unto him, Call his name Jezreel; for yet a little while, and I will avenge the blood of Jezreel upon the house of Jehu, and will cause to cease the kingdom of the house of Israel. And it shall come to pass at that day, that I will break the bow of Israel in the valley of Jezreel.

Hosea was to name his son Jezreel, which means "to scatter," as an illustration of what would happen in 721 B.C. when the Assyrians decimated the land and the ten northern tribes scattered, never to be found again.

Hosea 1:6 (a)

And she conceived again, and bare a daughter. . . .

In verse 1, we read that Gomer "bare him a son," referring to Hosea. Here in verse 6, on the other hand, we simply read that she "bare a daughter." In other words, this baby was not Hosea's.

Hosea 1:6 (b)
. . . And God said unto him, Call her name Lo-ruhamah: for I will no more have mercy upon the house of Israel; but I will utterly take them away.

According to Bible scholar, J. Sidlow Baxter, the literal meaning of Lo-ruhamah speaks of the fact that she never knew a father's mercy or love.

Hosea 1:7, 8
But I will have mercy upon the house of Judah, and will save them by the LORD their God, and will not save them by bow, nor by sword, nor by battle, by horses, nor by horsemen. Now when she had weaned Lo-ruhamah, she conceived, and bare a son.

Again, this is not Hosea's son.

Hosea 1:9
Then said God, Call his name Lo-ammi: for ye are not my people, and I will not be your God.

Lo-ammi means "Not mine." Even as Lo-ammi was not Hosea's, so too, the Lord says to Israel, "If you will not let Me be your God, you will not be My people." Be it a nation or an individual, the Lord doesn't force His love on anyone. He offers Himself to be a Lord, a Father, a God, a Redeemer, a Savior—but He will not force Himself upon anyone.

"Behold I stand at the door and knock," Jesus said. "If any man hear my voice and open the door, I will come in and sup with him and he with Me" (Revelation 3:20). Jesus knocks persistently, but gentlemanly. If anyone chooses to open the door, He will come in and be their Lord and live in their heart—but He won't kick in the door.

I'm always amazed by how polite the Lord is. He constantly gives every one of us the choice to give Him entry into our lives or into any part of our lives. But the choice is always ours.

Hosea 1:10 (a)
Yet the number of the children of Israel shall be as the sand of the sea, which cannot be measured nor numbered . . .

Even in spite of her rejecting the Lord, a prophecy is given to Israel that she would increase in population.

Hosea 1:10 (b)
. . . and it shall come to pass, that in the place where it was said unto them, Ye are not my people, there it shall be said unto them, Ye are the sons of the living God.

Second, the prophecy was given that Israel would turn to God.

Hosea 1:11 (a)
Then shall the children of Judah and the children of Israel be gathered together . . .

Third, Israel and Judah would no longer be divided.

Hosea 1:11 (b)
. . . and appoint themselves one head, and they shall come up out of the land: for great shall be the day of Jezreel.

Fourth, Israel would have one head—which speaks of Messiah.

God is not through with Israel. His people shall become numerous as the sand, be called sons of the living God, be reunited once again, and acknowledge one head—the Lord Jesus Christ. Israel is the wife of Jehovah and He is committed to her in spite of her fickleness and faithlessness. This gives me great hope because, as Paul makes clear in Romans 10 and 11, He is relentlessly committed to us, as well.

2 Hosea 2:1
Say ye unto your brethren, Ammi; and to your sisters, Ru-hamah.

Jezreel, Hosea's legitimate son, is told to rename his brother Ammi, which means "My people," and his sister, Ru-hamah, which means "Having obtained mercy."

Hosea 2:2–5
Plead with your mother, plead: for she is not my wife, neither am I her husband: let her therefore put away her whoredoms out of her sight, and her adulteries from between her breasts; Lest I strip her naked, and set her as in the day that she was born, and make her as a wilderness, and set her like a dry land, and slay her with thirst. And I will not have mercy upon her children; for they be the children of whoredoms. For their mother hath played the harlot: she that conceived them hath done shamefully: for she said, I will go after my lovers, that give me my bread and my water, my wool and my flax, mine oil and my drink.

Jezreel is told to warn his mother of the brutal consequences of her sin.

Hosea 2:6
Therefore, behold, I will hedge up thy way with thorns, and make a wall, that she shall not find her paths.

In Job 3, we see this same hedge of protection when God declared that He would plant a hedge around Job so that the enemy would not be able to harm him more than what the Lord allowed.

There is a hedge around every believer that protects us from the attacks and attempts of the enemy to destroy us. If Satan could, he would strike every one of us with disease or death. He would show no mercy whatsoever. But the Lord has a hedge around us and only what God allows for His purposes in strengthening our faith or developing our ministry can touch us. That is why the Bible tells us to give thanks in everything (1 Thessalonians 5:18). Nothing can come into our lives except that which the Lord allows.

Hosea 2:7
And she shall follow after her lovers, but she shall not overtake them; and she shall seek them, but shall not find them: then shall she say, I will go and return to my first husband; for then was it better with me than now.

In addition to protecting us from that which would harm us from without, the hedge also protects us from within. That is, it prevents us from trying to leave the Lord to go after another lover, to reach out to some other pleasure.

But there's also a hedge round about the person leaving the Lord trying to go after another lover, trying to reach out to some other pleasure. Be it bread, water, or wool; be it drink, contentment, or pleasure, the hedge will prevent us from grasping what it is we think we want apart from God. "If I could just pursue that, even though I know it's wrong; if I could only have that, even though it's not right, I know I would be satisfied," we think. But, because there's a hedge around us, we will find exactly what Gomer found: it won't work. No one can break through this hedge of thorns without getting hurt. There are no exceptions.

In addition to this being a warning, it can also provide comfort because if you have friends, relatives, or family doing what Gomer did, saying, "I'm tired of walking with God. I'm going to pursue the things of the world for awhile"—they'll find there's a hedge between them and what they're hoping to find. If you know people who are wandering away down the path of vulnerability, plant a hedge in prayer and watch God use it to frustrate their attempts to enjoy carnality.

Hosea 2:8
For she did not know that I gave her corn, and wine, and oil, and multiplied her silver and gold, which they prepared for Baal.

The very things Israel hoped to obtain by sacrificing to Baal, God had already given her. That shouldn't be surprising. All we ever want is always in God's hand. Ask Peter. "I go a fishing," he said—not realizing that the very thing he sought was in the hand of Jesus all along (John 21:3–9).

Hosea 2:9, 10

Therefore will I return, and take away my corn in the time thereof, and my wine in the season thereof, and will recover my wool and my flax given to cover her nakedness. And now will I discover her lewdness in the sight of her lovers, and none shall deliver her out of mine hand.

None of Gomer's companions would be able to save her from the judgment that would come upon her. In a larger sense, the allies Israel so eagerly trusted and the idols she so sacrificially worshiped would prove powerless to save her.

Hosea 2:11
I will also cause all her mirth to cease, her feast days, her new moons, and her sabbaths, and all her solemn feasts.

Scholars believe Israel's feast days were celebrated not at the temple, as God had intended, but at Dan and Bethel—where images of calves stood. No wonder, then, that God despised this corruption of His plan for His people (Isaiah 1:13).

Hosea 2:12 (a)
And I will destroy her vines and her fig trees, whereof she hath said, These are my rewards that my lovers have given me . . .

Israel mistakenly attributed the fruit with which God so graciously and consistently blessed her to the hand of her idols.

Hosea 2:12 (b)
. . . and I will make them a forest, and the beasts of the field shall eat them.

Following the Assyrian invasion, vineyards and orchards would become overgrown and, with fences destroyed or deteriorated, the wild animals would have a field day in them.

Hosea 2:13, 14 (a)

And I will visit upon her the days of Baalim, wherein she burned incense to them, and she decked herself with her earrings and her jewels, and she went after her lovers, and forgat me, saith the LORD. Therefore, behold, I will allure her . . .

"My people forgot Me," the Lord declares. "Therefore, I will . . ." One would think He would say, ". . . abandon her." That's what I would have said. But the incomprehensible grace and mercy of God causes Him to say not, "I will abandon her," but, "I will allure her." And I am so thankful He does, for it is that same grace and mercy that allowed Him not to abandon us but to die for us even while we were yet sinners (Romans 5:8).

Hosea 2:14 (b)
. . . and bring her into the wilderness . . .

When God redeemed His people from bondage in Egypt, we read in Deuteronomy that He brought them to the wilderness to humble them, to prove them, and to do them good (8:2, 3, 16). We read in John 1:28 that it was to the wilderness region of Bethabara that people went to be baptized by John. It was in the wilderness that Jesus was completely triumphant over Satan (Matthew 4), and in the wilderness that 5,000 were fed (Matthew 15:33). Throughout Scripture, we see that God sometimes does His most powerful work in wilderness settings. Therefore, if you're in such a place right now, take heart and take hope. As He did with His people, God has drawn you there in order to humble and prove you—but also to do you great good.

Hosea 2:14 (c)
. . . and speak comfortably unto her.

"Speak ye comfortably to Jerusalem," the prophet Isaiah was told (40:2). God would bring His people to the wilderness to speak words of true comfort to them—not the fickle comfort the world gives, but the eternal comfort that can only come from drawing close to Him (Matthew 5:4; 2 Corinthians 1:4).

Hosea 2:15 (a)
And I will give her her vineyards from thence, and the valley of Achor for a door of hope . . .

Achor means "trouble." It was in the valley of trouble that Achan was stoned for being in possession of forbidden spoils from Jericho (Joshua 7). Here in Hosea, however, this valley of trouble has a door of hope, for, following the wilderness experience of invasion by Assyria and captivity in Babylon, Israel would never again walk in idolatry.

Hosea 2:15 (b)
. . . and she shall sing there, as in the days of her youth, and as in the day when she came up out of the land of Egypt.

Following her captivity, Israel would sing again (Ezra 2:65)—just as she did following her bondage in Egypt.

Hosea 2:16
And it shall be at that day, saith the LORD, that thou shalt call me Ishi; and shalt call me no more Baali.

Ishi means "My husband." Baali means "Master" or "Baal." In other words God is saying, "You'll no longer address Me as a false god because you'll know Me intimately."

Hosea 2:17, 18
For I will take away the names of Baalim out of her mouth, and they shall no more be remembered by their name. And in that day will I make a covenant for them with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven, and with the creeping things of the ground: and I will break the bow and the sword and the battle out of the earth, and will make them to lie down safely.

The beasts of the field that ate the crops in verse 12 would now do no more harm.

Hosea 2:19, 20
And I will betroth thee unto me for ever; yea, I will betroth thee unto me in righteousness, and in judgment, and in lovingkindness, and in mercies. I will even betroth thee unto me in faithfulness: and thou shalt know the LORD.

In Jeremiah 3:8, we read that God had given His people a single bill of divorce because she had committed adultery. Here, however, three times we see Him committing Himself to betrothing her again.

Hosea 2:21, 22
And it shall come to pass in that day, I will hear, saith the LORD, I will hear the heavens, and they shall hear the earth; And the earth shall hear the corn, and the wine, and the oil; and they shall hear Jezreel.

After God regathered His people from their time in the wilderness brought on by the impending invasions of Assyria and Babylon, He would hear their prayers and would send rain upon the earth, which, in turn, would respond by being fruitful once again.

Hosea 2:23
And I will sow her unto me in the earth; and I will have mercy upon her that had not obtained mercy; and I will say to them which were not my people, Thou art my people; and they shall say, Thou art my God.

The people who had been scattered in 1:5 would now be scattered or sown in their own land, where they would take root and be fruitful. They who had known no mercy in 1:6 would now know mercy. They who had not been God's people in 1:9 would now be His.

In all of this, we see the heart and promises, the passion and unspeakable mercy of God. Even though Gomer would prove to be unfaithful time and again, through Hosea's treatment of her, we see the heart of God toward His people, saying, "I'll allure you. I'm committed to you. I'll walk with you in a marriage relationship."

3 In chapter 3, Hosea's wife leaves yet again. Our tendency would be to leave a wife like that. After all, didn't Jesus say if our husband or wife is unfaithful, we have a right to divorce them? Yes, but He said this only because of the hardness of our hearts (Mark 10:5). In other words, we have that right—but, as modeled by Hosea, we don't have to exercise it . . .

Then said the LORD unto me, Go yet, love a woman beloved of her friend, yet an adulteress, according to the love of the LORD toward the children of Israel, who look to other gods, and love flagons of wine. So I bought her to me for fifteen pieces of silver, and for an homer of barley, and an half homer of barley: And I said unto her, Thou shalt abide for me many days; thou shalt not play the harlot, and thou shalt not be for another man: so will I also be for thee.

Hosea found his wife this time actually in the town square, walking the streets as a prostitute. He paid fifteen pieces of silver—half the price of a slave—and a homer and a half of barley, which was half the ration given to a cow. In this, we see that her life was beginning to reveal the toll her sin was taking.

Immorality takes a toll not only physically, but on the soul, as well. The soul is comprised of the mind and emotions. Therefore, the person who makes a practice of immorality will find his very personality eroded. Like peeling layers from an onion, immorality peels away the layers of your soul. And what is lost in those seasons of immorality are lost permanently. Oh, you can be forgiven—and yet a toll is taken. That's why the Bible says he who practices immorality lacks understanding (Proverbs 6:32).

God doesn't say, "Live morally because I don't want you to have any fun." He says, "There's a reason to stay away from immorality. The physical relationship is a spiritual union. Two people become one. In the context of marriage, this is beautiful. But outside of that context, every time you join yourself with another, you lose part of your essence never to regain it."

Hosea 3:4, 5
For the children of Israel shall abide many days without a king, and without a prince, and without a sacrifice, and without an image, and without an ephod, and without teraphim: Afterward shall the children of Israel return, and seek the LORD their God, and David their king; and shall fear the LORD and his goodness in the latter days.

Like Gomer, the people of Israel would become bankrupt and impoverished. But they would one day come back. And the Lord would embrace them yet again. Of this burnt-out nation no longer pulsating with vitality, no longer shining with beauty but beat up and blackened in the open market of world history, God says, "I'm not giving up or walking out. Instead, I'm reaching out because My love is absolutely unchangeable."

4 In Chapters 4 through 14, we come to the section that speaks not of the tragedy in Hosea's home life but of the tragedy in his homeland. Through his marriage to Gomer, the allegory has been established. The picture has been painted. Now prophecy begins to be spoken concerning the nation of Israel.

Hosea 4:1, 2
Hear the word of the LORD, ye children of Israel: for the LORD hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land. By swearing, and lying, and killing, and stealing, and committing adultery, they break out, and blood toucheth blood.

The Hebrew word translated "controversy" is a legal term. In other words, the Lord declares He wants to file a complaint against His people. Because they didn't know Him, mercy and truth and a relationship with Him was replaced by swearing, lying, murder, theft, and adultery.

Hosea 4:3
Therefore shall the land mourn, and every one that dwelleth therein shall languish, with the beasts of the field, and with the fowls of heaven; yea, the fishes of the sea also shall be taken away.

This speaks of severe drought.

Hebrews 4:4
Yet let no man strive, nor reprove another: for thy people are as they that strive with the priest.

It would be useless to correct these people because they were so intent on sinning that they didn't even listen to the priest—even though, according to Deuteronomy 17:12, this was a crime punishable by death.

Hosea 4:5 (a)
Therefore shalt thou fall in the day, and the prophet also shall fall with thee in the night . . .

Israel would be attacked by Assyria in broad daylight and the battle would continue in the dark of night (Jeremiah 6:4, 5).

Hosea 4:5 (b)
. . . and I will destroy thy mother.

"Thy mother" would speak of the cities of Samaria to the north and Jerusalem to the south—both of which would fall by the hands of the Assyrians and Babylonians.

Hosea 4:6
My people are destroyed for lack of knowledge: because thou hast rejected knowledge, I will also reject thee, that thou shalt be no priest to me: seeing thou hast forgotten the law of thy God, I will also forget thy children.

Because God's people had grown bored of His Word, they would no longer be priests, no longer serve Him. As in Hosea's day, I am convinced that the great need of the body of Christ is to know the Word of God. Churches are in confusion, caught up in odd doctrine all for lack of knowledge. It seems people don't want to hear the Word and study the Scriptures. They want to get on a pet doctrine and ride it until they've missed the point completely.

Hosea 4:7
As they were increased, so they sinned against me: therefore will I change their glory into shame.

It was as they prospered financially that God's people sinned against Him. Some preachers insist that if you're walking in godliness, you'll prosper financially. But here God says prosperity itself can create problems. Therefore, it is not always God's plan for His people to prosper financially. Yes, He will bless us exceedingly abundantly above all we can ask or think (Ephesians 3:20)—but there are also times when we'll experience difficulties and challenges physically, financially, or emotionally because He knows we have a tendency to forget Him when the going is too easy.

Hosea 4:8, 9
They eat up the sin of my people, and they set their heart on their iniquity. And there shall be, like people, like priest: and I will punish them for their ways, and reward them their doings.

Because the priests were erring, the people were following in error. Poet John Donne was right when he said no man is an island. Each of us affects others. That's why we have to walk in rightness.

Hosea 4:10
For they shall eat, and not have enough: they shall commit whoredom, and shall not increase: because they have left off to take heed to the LORD.

"Oh that men would praise the LORD for his goodness, and for his wonderful works to the children of men!" the psalmist declares. "For he satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with goodness" (Psalm 107:8, 9). It is no wonder we read that God's people would eat but not be satisfied—for how could they be if they no longer acknowledged the only Source of true satisfaction?

Hosea 4:11
Whoredom and wine and new wine take away the heart.

"The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked: who can know it?" the Lord declares (Jeremiah 17:9). We have a hard enough time knowing our own hearts without wine further clouding the issue.

Hosea 4:12
My people ask counsel at their stocks, and their staff declareth unto them: for the spirit of whoredoms hath caused them to err, and they have gone a whoring from under their God.

Stocks refer to wooden idols and the staff refers to the practice of using different rods to make decisions (Ezekiel 21:21, 22)—rather than waiting on the Lord for guidance.

Hosea 4:13, 14
They sacrifice upon the tops of the mountains, and burn incense upon the hills, under oaks and poplars and elms, because the shadow thereof is good: therefore your daughters shall commit whoredom, and your spouses shall commit adultery. I will not punish your daughters when they commit whoredom, nor your spouses when they commit adultery: for themselves are separated with whores, and they sacrifice with harlots: therefore the people that doth not understand shall fall.

The context here is of the prostitution that accompanied the worship of false gods. It is as if this sin could not be dealt with individually, but was so infectious that it would take nothing less than the fall of the entire nation to free the people from it.

Hosea 4:15 (a)
Though thou, Israel, play the harlot, yet let not Judah offend . . .

Judah, learn the lesson of what's happening in the north and don't repeat their mistakes. Watch out.

Hosea 4:15 (b)
. . . and come not ye unto Gilgal . . .

Once the place where the children of Israel were circumcised as a sign of a renewal of their covenant relationship with God as they were poised to enter the Promised Land (Joshua 5), in Hosea's day, Gilgal was a center of idol worship (9:15; 12:11).

Hosea 4:15 (c)
. . . neither go ye up to Beth-aven, nor swear, The LORD liveth.

The name Beth-aven or "house of vanity" is substituted for Bethel or "house of God" because, although Bethel was the place where God appeared to Jacob (Genesis 28:17), when the nation was divided, Jeroboam made one of two cities where a golden calf was worshiped (1 Kings 12:28). In this context, saying, "The Lord liveth" would have been equivalent to taking His name in vain.

Hosea 4:16
For Israel slideth back as a backsliding heifer: now the LORD will feed them as a lamb in a large place.

A backsliding heifer speaks of one who struggled to pull away from the yoke. Refusing to bear the yoke of God's love and protection, following the Assyrian invasion, His people would be scattered in the wilderness.

Hosea 4:17
Ephraim is joined to idols: let him alone.

The Hebrew word translated "joined" literally means "fascinated."

"My spirit shall not always strive with man," God declared (Genesis 6:3). Thus, He would leave Israel to the consequences of her choice.

Hosea 4:18, 19
Their drink is sour: they have committed whoredom continually: her rulers with shame do love, Give ye. The wind hath bound her up in her wings, and they shall be ashamed because of their sacrifices.

Israel would be carried away as if blown by the wind.

5 Hosea 5:1 (a)
Hear ye this, O priests; and hearken, ye house of Israel; and give ye ear, O house of the king; for judgment is toward you . . .

Priests, people, and king would all be judged because all had contributed to Israel's sin.

Hosea 5:1 (b), 2
. . . because ye have been a snare on Mizpah, and a net spread upon Tabor. And the revolters are profound to make slaughter, though I have been a rebuker of them all.

Mizpah means "watch tower." Tabor means "lofty place." Both were hunting locations and, thus, symbols here of the trap of idolatry into which Israel had so willingly walked.

Hosea 5:3–5
I know Ephraim, and Israel is not hid from me: for now, O Ephraim, thou committest whoredom, and Israel is defiled. They will not frame their doings to turn unto their God: for the spirit of whoredoms is in the midst of them, and they have not known the LORD. And the pride of Israel doth testify to his face: therefore shall Israel and Ephraim fall in their iniquity; Judah also shall fall with them.

Although the Lord knew Israel and Judah, they refused to know Him.

Hosea 5:6
They shall go with their flocks and with their herds to seek the LORD; but they shall not find him; he hath withdrawn himself from them.

"Ye shall seek Me, and find Me, when ye shall search for Me with all your heart," the Lord declares (Jeremiah 29:13). Israel brought flocks and herds to seek the Lord—but, as Jesus would later say, her heart, His one request—was far from Him (Matthew 15:8).

Hosea 5:7
They have dealt treacherously against the LORD: for they have begotten strange children: now shall a month devour them with their portions.

Some scholars translated "month" as locusts. As seen in Joel, locusts did indeed descend upon Israel, leaving only devastation in their wake. Others say the word "month" speaks of the fact that in a month, Assyria would demand from Israel a heavy tax of fifty shekels per head (2 Kings 15:19, 20). Either way—whether by locust or tax, Israel would experience the effects of her arrogant idolatry.

Hosea 5:8
Blow ye the cornet in Gibeah, and the trumpet in Ramah: cry aloud at Beth-aven, after thee, O Benjamin.

"Blow the trumpet, Hosea. Sound the alarm. My people continue to ignore Me and are determined to turn away from My Word. Therefore, the enemy is not far behind."

Hosea 5:9–11
Ephraim shall be desolate in the day of rebuke: among the tribes of Israel have I made known that which shall surely be. The princes of Judah were like them that remove the bound: therefore I will pour out my wrath upon them like water. Ephraim is oppressed and broken in judgment, because he willingly walked after the commandment.

The commandment referred to here is the one given by Jeroboam to worship calves at Dan and Bethel rather than to worship the Lord in Jerusalem (1 Kings 12).

Hosea 5:12–14
Therefore will I be unto Ephraim as a moth, and to the house of Judah as rottenness. When Ephraim saw his sickness, and Judah saw his wound, then went Ephraim to the Assyrian, and sent to king Jareb: yet could he not heal you, nor cure you of your wound. For I will be unto Ephraim as a lion, and as a young lion to the house of Judah: I, even I, will tear and go away; I will take away, and none shall rescue him.

"I'll come first as a moth," the Lord declares. "But if My people don't respond, I'll come as a lion."

We have all experienced this to one degree or another. When we are in times of rebellion, something eats at us from within and we say, "I've got to get back to the place of prayer. I need to put away that sin." But if we don't respond to the fluttering of the moth, because the Lord loves us too much to let us continue in sin, He comes as a lion. Let me encourage you to respond to the fluttering of the moth because the ripping of the lion is tough. It's painful, brutal, and unnecessary. Yet if we won't respond to His gentle voice, we'll hear His loud roar.

Hosea 5:15

I will go and return to my place, till they acknowledge their offence, and seek my face: in their affliction they will seek me early.

It was in the house that the prodigal son decided to leave his father. It was in the pigpen that he decided to return (Luke 15). It was prosperity that caused God's people to forget Him (verse 7)—and it would be affliction that would bring them back.

Our Father, being infinitely more loving than we could ever be as earthly parents, desires to bless us beyond all we can ask or even think—yet when the blessings He gives turn our hearts from Him, He reluctantly withdraws His hand of blessing in order that we will once again seek Him. The question then becomes not "Why is God so hard?" but "Why are we so dumb?"

6 Hosea 6:1
Come, and let us return unto the LORD: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up.

Speaking through Hosea, the Lord shows He is truly Jehovah-ropheka, or the God who heals (Exodus 15:26). The Lord wants to heal these people, but before there can be healing, there must be tearing. Before there can be binding, there must be cutting. Even as cancer must be dealt with severely, the Lord says, "Allow Me to have My way. Allow Me to do what needs to be done even if it's painful—for that is the only way you will be healed."

Maybe you have felt some of that pain as the Lord cut certain things from your life, allowing the Sword of the Spirit, the Word of God to operate on specific areas. It's a painful process, but healing is sure to follow. That's always the way of the Lord.

Hosea 6:2
After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight.

"We're going to be torn and cut up for two days," Hosea tells the people of Israel. "But after three days, we will rise up." The third day always speaks of resurrection.

> But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.
> 2 Peter 3:8

In the year A.D. 70, Jerusalem was destroyed. The people of Israel scattered and ceased to be a nation. From A.D. 70 to the present time, they've been struggling. Even now, they fight for their very existence. For 2,000 years—two days in the Lord's economy—she's been in turmoil. But I suggest that somewhere in the beginning of the third Millennium—the third day—Israel will be revived when the Prince of Peace returns.

> Hosea 6:3, 4
> Then shall we know, if we follow on to know the LORD: his going forth is prepared as the morning; and he shall come unto us as the rain, as the latter and former rain unto the earth. O Ephraim, what shall I do unto thee? O Judah, what shall I do unto thee? for your goodness is as a morning cloud, and as the early dew it goeth away.

"I've promised to revive you on the third day," the Lord says. "I've promised to give you rain that will bless you agriculturally. But your commitment to Me is like dew. It's there for a few moments, but when the sun comes out, when challenges come, your commitment disappears." Jesus would use this same analogy in describing what happens to people who embrace the Word initially, but drop it in the heat of trials (Matthew 13).

> Hosea 6:5–7
> Therefore have I hewed them by the prophets; I have slain them by the words of my mouth: and thy judgments are as the light that goeth forth. For I desired mercy, and not sacrifice; and the knowledge of God more than burnt offerings. But they like men have transgressed the covenant: there have they dealt treacherously against me.

"It wasn't your sacrifices and burnt offerings I was after," the Lord says. "I wanted you to be a people who show mercy toward each other and have a passion for Me."

The word, "knowledge," speaks not of knowing about the Lord but of knowing Him intimately. Even as these people were serving Baal, they were still going to the temple of God religiously. They were there for worship every Sunday morning and Bible study every Wednesday night. They were serving on committees and singing in the choir—but their hearts were far from God. Over and over in the prophecy of Hosea, we hear the heartbeat of God, saying, "I want your love."

Hosea 6:8–11
Gilead is a city of them that work iniquity, and is polluted with blood. And as troops of robbers wait for a man, so the company of priests murder in the way by consent: for they commit lewdness. I have seen an horrible thing in the house of Israel: there is the whoredom of Ephraim, Israel is defiled. Also, O Judah, he hath set an harvest for thee, when I returned the captivity of my people.

Gilead was one of the three cities of refuge on the other side of the Jordan. Thus, it would be a city of the Levites. Yet even they were defiled by sin. The entire nation—not only of Israel but of Judah as well—was infected and polluted by sin. And the harvest they would reap would be the one they themselves sowed (Galatians 6:7).

7 Hosea 7:1, 2
When I would have healed Israel, then the iniquity of Ephraim was discovered, and the wickedness of Samaria: or they commit falsehood; and the thief cometh in, and the troop of robbers spoileth without. And they consider not in their hearts that I remember all their wickedness: now their own doings have beset them about; they are before my face.

Here, the Lord is saying, "I wanted to heal these people. But their iniquity was discovered or, literally, flaunted." It's not as though the Lord is a harsh taskmaster, saying, "I won't heal you because you've sinned." No, He's saying, "I wanted to heal you, but couldn't because you were so proud of your sin."

There was a time in our own country when people were embarrassed about their sin. Now it's flaunted, leaving us to wonder how much healing, how many blessings are averted because of it.

Hosea 7:3
They make the king glad with their wickedness, and the princes with their lies.

Those in authority as well as those in the general population not only tolerated but celebrated the liberal state of their society.

Hosea 7:4–7
They are all adulterers, as an oven heated by the baker, who ceaseth from raising after he hath kneaded the dough, until it be leavened. In the day of our king the princes have made him sick with bottles of wine; he stretched out his hand with scorners. For they have made ready their heart like an oven, whiles they lie in wait: their baker sleepeth all the night; in the morning it burneth as a flaming fire. They are all hot as an oven, and have devoured their judges; all their kings are fallen: there is none among them that calleth unto me.

Israel's sin is compared to the heat of an oven. Although she thought she could control it, although she thought she could both walk in sin and walk with God, she would be devoured by the very heat she thought she could control.

Hosea 7:8

Ephraim, he hath mixed himself among the people; Ephraim is a cake not turned.

Israel was like a pancake—hot on the bottom but raw on the top. In other words, she was a mixture. Jesus would use a similar analogy when He called the church at Laodicea lukewarm (Revelation 3:16). Throughout Scripture, we see injunctions against mixture. Repeatedly, the Lord speaks against it as if to say, "Either be on fire so I can use you, or be cold so I can convict you, but don't be half-baked or lukewarm."

Hosea 7:9
Strangers have devoured his strength, and he knoweth it not: yea, gray hairs are here and there upon him, yet he knoweth not.

Israel wasn't even aware that her vitality and vibrancy were gone. In Judges 16, we see the same thing happen in the life of Samson. One of the saddest verses in the Bible is where we read that he stood up and "wist not that the Spirit of the Lord was departed from him" (Judges 16:20). His hair was cut and now he was powerless—but he didn't even know it until it was too late.

This is what's tricky about losing our spiritual vitality. We don't even know it until the enemy is there. We realize only too late that our strength is gone. To the people of Israel, Hosea says, "Yes, you're celebrating your liberality right now and enjoying your material prosperity. But you don't realize the enemy is at the gates. You're going to stand up like Samson, thinking you'll be able to take them on, but you're going down. A stranger will devour you." Indeed, just as Philistines devoured Samson, so the Assyrians would devour Israel.

If we ignore our walk with the Lord—our devotional life, times of prayer, times of fellowship—there will be an enemy from hell on the way. When he comes, we can't stand up to him if we have no backlog, no history, no consistency in our walk with the Lord. And we'll go down as a result.

The disciples found this to be true. When Jesus was on Mount Hermon, the disciples below were trying to cast out a demon from a boy. But they were powerless to do so. When Jesus came down, He cast out the demon—and the disciples said, "Why couldn't we do that?"

"This kind does not come out except by prayer and fasting," Jesus answered (Matthew 17:21).

The question obviously is, "How could the disciples have known this would happen?"

And that's the point Jesus is making. We should be living a life of prayer and fasting because we don't know when we're going to be face to face with the enemy. We need to have a history, a backlog, a discipline of fasting and prayer so that when the enemy does come, when the opportunity does arise, we'll have the power to deal with the challenge.

Israel mistakenly thought that, because she was prospering, she would be invincible. Little did she know that in a matter of years Assyria would destroy her. Don't be like Israel. Don't find yourself sidelined by the enemy because you didn't take seriously the message of Hosea. Don't think that you don't need to pray or seek the Lord with intensity but that you'll just cruise into church occasionally. If you do, like Israel, you'll be half-baked. Like Samson, you'll be powerless.

Hosea 7:10–12
And the pride of Israel testifieth to his face: and they do not return to the LORD their God, nor seek him for all this. Ephraim also is like a silly dove without heart: they call to Egypt, they go to Assyria. When they shall go, I will spread my net upon them; I will bring them down as the fowls of the heaven; I will chastise them, as their congregation hath heard.

After laying her eggs, if an intruder comes by, a mother dove will pretend that her wing is broken to distract the intruder. The reason she's called silly is because, when you see a bird flopping on the ground, you know there must be a nest close by. "You're just like a dove," the Lord said to His people. "You're going to Assyria and Egypt for help instead of coming to Me. As a result, you're going to be overtaken." Indeed, the people they were looking to were the very ones that would devour them. By flopping around, Israel would become an easy target.

Woe unto them! for they have fled from me: destruction unto them! because they have transgressed against me: though I have redeemed them, yet they have spoken lies against me. And they have not cried unto me with their heart, when they howled upon their beds: they assemble themselves for corn and wine, and they rebel against me. Though I have bound and strengthened their arms, yet do they imagine mischief against me. They return, but not to the most High: they are like a deceitful bow: their princes shall fall by the sword for the rage of their tongue: this shall be their derision in the land of Egypt.

God had provided, protected, and prospered Israel. He had found her, fed her, and fought for her. Yet for all of that, rather than repent and return to Him, Israel rebelled against Him, turning instead to her powerless idols and relying on her faulty alliances.

8 Hosea 8:1
Set the trumpet to thy mouth. He shall come as an eagle against the house of the LORD, because they have transgressed my covenant, and trespassed against my law.

The eagle was the national symbol of the Assyrians. Here, the Lord identifies the very group that would devour the ten northern tribes.

Hosea 8:2, 3
Israel shall cry unto me, My God, we know thee. Israel hath cast off the thing that is good: the enemy shall pursue him.

Didn't Jesus say the same thing?

Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

Matthew 7:22, 23

These people, like those who stand before Jesus in the day of judgment, will soon find out that although they might have been going through the motions of serving Him, He never knew them. This reminds us that a person who only knows about the Lord in his head without having a relationship with Him in his heart can actually miss heaven by eighteen inches.

Hosea 8:4–7
They have set up kings, but not by me: they have made princes, and I knew it not: of their silver and their gold have they made them idols, that they may be cut off. Thy calf, O Samaria, hath cast thee off; mine anger is kindled against them: how long will it be ere they attain to innocency? For from Israel was it also: the workman made it; therefore it is not God: but the calf of Samaria shall be broken in pieces. For they have sown the wind, and they shall reap the whirlwind: it hath no stalk: the bud shall yield no meal: if so be it yield, the strangers shall swallow it up.

Rather than seeking the Lord, the people of Israel went to great effort and expense to establish kings and idols so that they could be like the surrounding nations. But whatever a man sows, he reaps (Galatians 6:7). Therefore, because she sowed the seed of self-reliance, she would reap a more devastating crop than she could have imagined when she would have only herself to rely upon as the Assyrians advanced upon her.

Hosea 8:8–11
Israel is swallowed up: now shall they be among the Gentiles as a vessel wherein is no pleasure. For they are gone up to Assyria, a wild ass alone by himself: Ephraim hath hired lovers. Yea, though they have hired among the nations, now will I gather them, and they shall sorrow a little for the burden of the king of princes. Because Ephraim hath made many altars to sin, altars shall be unto him to sin.

Not until she was in captivity would Israel see the sin of her idolatry.

Hosea 8:12
I have written to him the great things of my law, but they were counted as a strange thing.

"I wrote My law for Israel, but it was counted as strange," the Lord declares. In other words, they thought it was written for someone else. How often do we sit in a Bible study and say, "Oh, I wish my husband was here to hear that," or, "I wish my neighbor would get this message," or, "I wish my boss would understand that point." The Lord writes His Word for us. Therefore, we are in terrible danger whenever we think it was written for someone else.

Hosea 8:13, 14
They sacrifice flesh for the sacrifices of mine offerings, and eat it; but the LORD accepteth them not; now will he remember their iniquity, and visit their sins: they shall return to Egypt. For Israel hath forgotten his Maker, and buildeth temples; and Judah hath multiplied fenced cities: but I will send a fire upon his cities, and it shall devour the palaces thereof.

These people were doing what we often do in contemporary American Christianity. They were building ministries, programs, and gated communities. But they lost their personal, vital, intimate relationship with the Lord in the process.

In chapter 9, we see five things Israel would experience as a punished people. These same experiences will befall us if we forget the Lord. Yet if any apply to you even now, take hope. Thank the Lord that He is showing you where you're at, that you might get right.

Hosea 9:1, 2

Rejoice not, O Israel, for joy, as other people: for thou hast gone a whoring from thy God, thou hast loved a reward upon every cornfloor. The floor and the winepress shall not feed them, and the new wine shall fail in her.

The death of joy is the first sign that something is wrong in your walk with the Lord.

Hosea 9:3
They shall not dwell in the LORD's land; but Ephraim shall return to Egypt, and they shall eat unclean things in Assyria.

The second result of rebelliousness is a return to bondage. When you're not in the right place with the Lord, you'll find yourself tangled up in the things of the world from which you were previously free.

Hosea 9:4–7
They shall not offer wine offerings to the LORD, neither shall they be pleasing unto him: their sacrifices shall be unto them as the bread of mourners; all that eat thereof shall be polluted: for their bread for their soul shall not come into the house of the LORD. What will ye do in the solemn day, and in the day of the feast of the LORD? For, lo, they are gone because of destruction: Egypt shall gather them up, Memphis shall bury them: the pleasant places for their silver, nettles shall possess them: thorns shall be in their tabernacles. The days of visitation are come, the days of recompence are come; Israel shall know it: the prophet is a fool, the spiritual man is mad, for the multitude of thine iniquity, and the great hatred.

Third, we see a loss of discernment. Because she had lost her spiritual bearings, Israel thought God's prophets were fools. We will find the same thing to be so in our own walks. If our hearts aren't right, saints will seem like fanatics and spirituality will seem like lunacy.

Hosea 9:8–10

The watchman of Ephraim was with my God: but the prophet is a snare of a fowler in all his ways, and hatred in the house of his God. They have deeply corrupted themselves, as in the days of Gibeah: therefore he will remember their iniquity, he will visit their sins. I found Israel like grapes in the wilderness; I saw your fathers as the firstripe in the fig tree at her first time: but they went to Baal-peor, and separated themselves unto that shame; and their abominations were according as they loved.

Israel had walked into sin that was as dark and depraved as any in her history, including the rape and murder of the Levite's wife in Judges 19:16–22, of which Gibeah is a reference.

Hosea 9:11–16
As for Ephraim, their glory shall fly away like a bird, from the birth, and from the womb, and from the conception. Though they bring up their children, yet will I bereave them, that there shall not be a man left: yea, woe also to them when I depart from them! Ephraim, as I saw Tyrus, is planted in a pleasant place: but Ephraim shall bring forth his children to the murderer. Give them, O LORD: what wilt thou give? give them a miscarrying womb and dry breasts. All their wickedness is in Gilgal: for there I hated them: for the wickedness of their doings I will drive them out of mine house, I will love them no more: all their princes are revolters. Ephraim is smitten, their root is dried up, they shall bear no fruit: yea, though they bring forth, yet will I slay even the beloved fruit of their womb.

A falling birthrate would be the fourth sign of a rebellious people. Spiritually, the same thing will be true of us. When a flock is healthy, there is always natural reproduction. But when a flock—be it a church or an individual—is not healthy, there is no new birth or growth. We read in Acts 8 that, as Philip was preaching the gospel, people were so eager to share that the entire city was filled with joy.

Hosea 9:17

My God will cast them away, because they did not hearken unto him: and they shall be wanderers among the nations.

The fifth result of rebellion is isolation. You'll know when you've run aground spiritually because you'll feel cut off from the Lord. "Abide in Me and My words in you," Jesus said. "He who abides not in Me is cast forth as a branch and is withered and cast into the fire" (see John 15:4–6). Like Israel, you'll feel burned out, cut off, and you'll wander in circles if you cease to abide in the Lord.

Again, I encourage you to see these signs not as condemnation but as evaluation. If they speak of your own situation, return to the Lord, call upon Him and He will do what it takes to draw you to Himself once again.

Hosea 10:1

Israel is an empty vine, he bringeth forth fruit unto himself: according to the multitude of his fruit he hath increased the altars; according to the goodness of his land they have made goodly images.

"Goodly images" speaks of Israel's idols. "Why callest thou me good?" Jesus asked. "There is none good but one, that is, God" (Matthew 19:17). The irony is that Israel's gods were constructed in the land and from the very material given her by the only One who is good, the only One who is God.

Hosea 10:2

Their heart is divided; now shall they be found faulty: he shall break down their altars, he shall spoil their images.

Because there was no Gideon in her midst (Judges 6), Israel's altars would be broken and her idols spoiled by the hands of the invading Assyrians.

Hosea 10:3

For now they shall say, We have no king, because we feared not the LORD; what then should a king do to us?

In Hosea's day, four kings were murdered by their successors in the space of less than thirteen years. But even that would not cause her to take stock and repent of her sin.

Hosea 10:4–6 (a)
They have spoken words, swearing falsely in making a covenant: thus judgment springeth up as hemlock in the furrows of the field. The inhabitants of Samaria shall fear because of the calves of Beth-aven: for the people thereof shall mourn over it, and the priests thereof that rejoiced on it, for the glory thereof, because it is departed from it. It shall be also carried unto Assyria for a present to king Jareb . . .

Beth-aven, or "house of vanity," is a derogatory name for Bethel, or "house of God." There was a rival going on in history between Samaria and Bethel because both cities were centers for calf worship, initially instituted by Jeroboam to keep his people from leaving Israel to travel to Judah in order to worship at the temple in Jerusalem (1 Kings 12:28). On the eve of her destruction, Israel doesn't fear the Lord or mourn for her sin. Instead, she fears and mourns only the loss of her idols.

Hosea 10:6 (b), 7
. . . Ephraim shall receive shame, and Israel shall be ashamed of his own counsel. As for Samaria, her king is cut off as the foam upon the water.

The rapid succession of kings in Hosea's day verifies that their positions were no more secure than air bubbles.

Hosea 10:8 (a)
The high places also of Aven, the sin of Israel, shall be destroyed: the thorn and the thistle shall come up on their altars . . .

Israel's pagan altars would not be exempt in the desolation of the land.

Hosea 10:8 (b)

. . . and they shall say to the mountains, Cover us; and to the hills, Fall on us.

Jesus would use this same language in reference to another day of devastation—the Tribulation (Luke 23:30).

Hosea 10:9
O Israel, thou hast sinned from the days of Gibeah: there they stood: the battle in Gibeah against the children of iniquity did not overtake them.

Reference is again made to the days of Israel's judges, when "every man did that which was right in his own eyes" (Judges 17:6)—and it led nowhere but to ever darker sin (Judges 19:16–22).

Hosea 10:10, 11
It is in my desire that I should chastise them; and the people shall be gathered against them, when they shall bind themselves in their two furrows. And Ephraim is as an heifer that is taught, and loveth to tread out the corn; but I passed over upon her fair neck: I will make Ephraim to ride; Judah shall plow, and Jacob shall break his clods:

The picture here is of the slavery and servitude Israel and Judah would experience under the rule of Assyria and Babylon. No man can serve two masters, Jesus said (Matthew 6:24). But we all will serve one. We'll either serve the Lord of love as friends (John 15:15) or we'll serve the god of this world as slaves.

Hosea 10:12–15
Sow to yourselves in righteousness, reap in mercy; break up your fallow ground: for it is time to seek the LORD, till he come and rain righteousness upon you. Ye have plowed wickedness, ye have reaped iniquity; ye have eaten the fruit of lies: because thou didst trust in thy way, in the multitude of thy mighty men. Therefore shall a tumult arise among thy people, and all thy fortresses shall be spoiled, as Shalman spoiled Beth-arbel in the day of battle: the mother was dashed in pieces upon her children. So shall Bethel do unto you because of your great wickedness: in a morning shall the king of Israel utterly be cut off.

After the Lord shared His heartbreak concerning the rebelliousness of His people, telling them that their spiritual strength was sapped, their spiritual hair was gray, yet they still thought they were doing okay because, in His grace and mercy, He still allowed blessings to be enjoyed. But He told them the enemy was coming and they wouldn't be able to stand.

If I were the Lord, I'm sure I would have a tendency to write these folks off at this point. If God was like us, His love would be conditional, His patience short, His motives amiss. But God isn't like us. And in chapters 11 through 14, He begins to say to them, "You're a prize to Me," as He gives them glorious hope concerning how He will restore and bless them.

11 Hosea gives us a pulse on the heart of God in a real, more picturesque way than perhaps any other prophet depicts. In chapter 11, we will see that, although Israel was a polluted and punished people, she was also a prized and precious people.

Hosea 11:1
When Israel was a child, then I loved him, and called my son out of Egypt.

As we see in Matthew 2:15, this verse prophetically refers to Jesus Christ. When the wise men came to worship the Babe of Bethlehem, Herod told them to tell him where Jesus was so he could worship Him, too. But the wise men were warned in a dream not to return to Herod because Herod was not out to worship Jesus but to destroy this rival to his throne. So the wise men went home a different way. When Herod discovered this, he was so incensed that he ordered the death of every child two years old and younger. But, before the soldiers arrived on the scene, Joseph was warned to take Jesus into Egypt and remain there, fulfilling Hosea 11:1. Israel means "Governed by God." Truly, Jesus was the One who was perfectly governed by God.

Why was this prophecy given?

I suggest it is because Egypt symbolizes the world. You see, Jesus, the Son of God, spent time in Egypt and was called out of Egypt. This reminds me that Jesus is a High Priest who is touched with the difficulties we go through because He was tempted in every point we are, yet without sin (Hebrews 4:15).

Maybe you feel like you're in Egypt. Maybe you think your sin is incredibly tough, that no one could possibly understand it. But Jesus does. No matter what you're facing, no matter how brutal your sin might be, no matter how heavy your bondage might feel, Jesus has tasted it. Every single sin anyone has ever faced, Jesus Christ dealt with. Others might be horrified but Jesus understands. It was when we were in Egypt—before we had any understanding of spiritual things—that God called us. It was while we were yet sinners that Christ died for us (Romans 5:8).

Hosea 11:2, 3
As they called them, so they went from them: they sacrificed unto Baalim, and burned incense to graven images. I taught Ephraim also to go, taking them by their arms; but they knew not that I healed them.

"I called My people," the Lord declares. "I carried them in my arms. I taught them how to walk. But they didn't acknowledge Me. They served Baal instead."

If you asked God's people in Hosea's day if they loved God, they would say, "Absolutely! We celebrate all of the feasts and go to the temple religiously." And if you asked them about the little idol on their mantels, they would probably say it was just something to inspire them. They were going through the motions of loving God, but their hearts were divided.

Hosea 11:4–6

I drew them with cords of a man, with bands of love: and I was to them as they that take off the yoke on their jaws, and I laid meat unto them. He shall not return into the land of Egypt, but the Assyrian shall be his king, because they refused to return. And the sword shall abide on his cities, and shall consume his branches, and devour them, because of their own counsels.

Even as a man draws his favorite ox with a rope, so God drew His people with cords of love. And He took off the muzzle so they could eat the food He prepared. Yet, because Israel listened to her own counsel rather than to that of her loving Master, she would be led by Assyria not with cords of love but with the fetters of slavery and would herself be devoured.

And my people are bent to backsliding from me: though they called them to the most High, none at all would exalt him. How shall I give thee up, Ephraim? how shall I deliver thee, Israel? how shall I make thee as Admah? how shall I set thee as Zeboim? mine heart is turned within me, my repentings are kindled together. I will not execute the fierceness of mine anger, I will not return to destroy Ephraim: for I am God, and not man; the Holy One in the midst of thee: and I will not enter into the city.

Admah and Zeboim were two cities destroyed when God judged Sodom and Gomorrah. If I were God, I would say, "My people continually backslide from Me and rebel against Me. That does it. I'm through." But I'm a man and not God. And, praise be to His name, He's God and not a man. Therefore, He would not enter the city to destroy it. This, however, presents a divine dilemma—for if God is the Holy One, how could He love such sinful people?

The story is told of a man in World War II gunned down by the Nazis outside of Paris. Two of his friends picked up his body after the skirmish was over and walked half a mile to a small church outside the village. They knocked on the door and asked the priest if they could bury their friend.

"Was he Catholic?" the priest asked.

"No, he was a Methodist," they said.

"You can't bury him in our cemetery," the priest said. "But you can bury him outside the fence."

So his two friends did just that.

A couple of weeks later, these same two friends, marching back through the area wanted to pay their respects at the grave of their friend. They went to the church and walked along the fence but couldn't find the grave. So they knocked at the door of the church and said, "We're confused. We buried our friend a couple of weeks ago, but we can't find his grave."

The priest answered, "That night, after you left, I couldn't sleep a wink. So the next day I got up and moved the fence. He's inside now."

That's what the Lord did for us. How could He be fair and equitable and yet loving and merciful? He moved the fence. How? Through the Cross of Calvary. We're inside because of the blood Jesus shed in our place.

Hosea 11:10
They shall walk after the LORD: he shall roar like a lion: when he shall roar, then the children shall tremble from the west.

That is, the Lion of the Tribe of Judah would roar, and those in captivity would return.

Hosea 11:11, 12
They shall tremble as a bird out of Egypt, and as a dove out of the land of Assyria: and I will place them in their houses, saith the LORD. Ephraim compasseth me about with lies, and the house of Israel with deceit: but Judah yet ruleth with God, and is faithful with the saints.

"I'm going to bring you back again," God says to His people. "You'll be carried into captivity because of your own foolishness, but I won't wipe you out. You're My prize and I'll bring you back again."

12 Chapters 12, 13, and 14 deal with a pardoned people. Chapters 12 and 13 speak of their present rebellion while chapter 14 speaks of their future salvation.

Hosea 12:1 (a)
Ephraim feedeth on wind, and followeth after the east wind . . .

Like a dog chasing his tail, Israel chased the wind.

Hosea 12:1 (b)
. . . he daily increaseth lies and desolation; and they do make a covenant with the Assyrians, and oil is carried into Egypt.

The oil spoken of here is not petroleum but aromatic oils. That is, Israel was making alliances with the Assyrians and negotiating with the Egyptians. In so doing, she was just like her father, Jacob . . .

Hosea 12:2–5
The LORD hath also a controversy with Judah, and will punish Jacob according to his ways; according to his doings will he recompense him. He took his brother by the heel in the womb, and by his strength he had power with God: Yea, he had power over the angel, and prevailed: he wept, and made supplication unto him: he found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us; Even the LORD God of hosts; the LORD is his memorial.

Just as Jacob was a deceiver, so was Israel. But Jacob was different for, after he was broken by the Lord and was blessed by the Lord, he returned to the Lord.

Hosea 12:6, 7
Therefore turn thou to thy God: keep mercy and judgment, and wait on thy God continually. He is a merchant, the balances of deceit are in his hand: he loveth to oppress.

Rather than being identified as a spiritual man, Israel was likened to a merchant—one whose priorities and energy are directed toward the things of the world rather than to the things of the Lord.

Hosea 12:8
And Ephraim said, Yet I am become rich, I have found me out substance: in all my labours they shall find none iniquity in me that were sin.

Prosperity is not a proof of God's blessing. God's people were sadly deceived in thinking that, because they were rich, they must be doing something right.

Hosea 12:9
And I that am the LORD thy God from the land of Egypt will yet make thee to dwell in tabernacles, as in the days of the solemn feast.

In the days of the Feast of the Tabernacles, the people dwelled in tents for a week to remind them of their wilderness wanderings. But, here God said He would make them dwell in tents again—not as a symbol but because their houses would be destroyed.

Hosea 12:10
I have also spoken by the prophets, and I have multiplied visions, and used similitudes, by the ministry of the prophets.

God's prophets had warned the people directly, through object lesson, and through allegory—not the least of which was Hosea's marriage to Gomer—all to no avail.

Hosea 12:11
Is there iniquity in Gilead? surely they are vanity: they sacrifice bullocks in Gilgal; yea, their altars are as heaps in the furrows of the fields.

Like Gilead, Gilgal was a center of idol worship.

Hosea 12:12–14
And Jacob fled into the country of Syria, and Israel served for a wife, and for a wife he kept sheep. And by a prophet the LORD brought Israel out of Egypt, and by a prophet was he preserved. Ephraim provoked him to anger most bitterly: therefore shall he leave his blood upon him, and his reproach shall his Lord return unto him.

God spoke to Jacob in a dream (Genesis 28). He spoke to Moses through a vision (Exodus 3). He spoke to them both directly and they heeded His voice. But the people He preserved through them heeded none of His words. Therefore, He was left with no choice but judgment.

THE REST OF THE STORY

A Topical Study of HOSEA 12:4

He was the grandson of Abraham, the father of the Jews. And here he was, returning to his homeland. For twenty years, he had been living with his uncle in Haran after tricking his older twin brother out of his blessing and birthright. Realizing he had been swindled, Esau threatened to kill his brother. So Jacob ran for his life to Haran.

But the conflict didn't begin there. It actually began before Jacob and Esau were even born. When their mother, Rebekah, asked why there was a rumbling inside her, the Lord told her it was because two nations were fighting in her womb (Genesis 25:23). When Rebekah's day to give birth arrived, Esau was born first—but grabbing his heel was Jacob. In fact, Jacob means "heel snatcher"—one who trips people. From his first moment of life, Jacob was saying, "I want to be first." The desire to be first would drive him to become a capable, successful, brilliant individual. But, at the time of his birth, he lost out to Esau. Thus, as the older of the two, the birthright and blessing would be Esau's.

The birthright entitled one to three important things. The first was property. The one with the birthright received a double inheritance of the property. The second benefit was priesthood. That is, the one with the birthright became the spiritual leader of the family upon the father's death. The third element was progeny. The one with the birthright would be in the line that would bring forth Messiah.

The purpose of the blessing was different. It was pronounced by the father to the one who had the birthright to give him identity in the present and prophecy for the future. In other words, the one with the blessing would receive insight into who he really was and inspiration as to what he would become.

Jacob wanted these things. So one day when Esau was hungry after a day of hunting, Jacob offered him a bowl of pottage, or stew, in exchange for his birthright. Commenting on this incident, Hebrews 12 says that Esau was a profane—or carnal—man, who, for a morsel of meat, a moment of pleasure, sold his birthright. After downing the stew, however, Esau realized his loss and bitterness began to fill his heart. It came to the surface once again when, years later, Jacob disguised himself as Esau and received the blessing, as well. Esau lamented his loss and threatened to kill Jacob. At that point, Jacob decided it was time for him to leave.

On the first night of his journey, Jacob found himself in a wilderness area called Bethel. No doubt his conscience was bothering him and fear must have filled his heart as he wearily fell asleep, using a rock for a pillow. As he slept, the Lord spoke to him through a dream, promising that He would be with Jacob. Although He didn't condone Jacob's deceit, He appreciated Jacob's desire to obtain the blessing and the birthright, to be a spiritual individual.

When Jacob awoke, he said, "Surely, God is in this place and I knew it not." I love that because there are times when I'm out in the wilderness—my circumstances are barren; perhaps I feel very alone; maybe I'm bothered from within. But, like Jacob, I need to realize the Lord has promised He will never leave me nor forsake me (Hebrews 13:5). Even though you might feel like you're in the wilderness today, even though your conscience might be troubling you, hear the Word of the Lord to Jacob and to you: God is in this place. He's with you.

Jacob traveled on to Haran. For twenty years, he and his uncle tried to outwit each other—until the Lord told Jacob it was time for him to return to his homeland. Receiving word that his brother was still alive, Jacob sent word to Esau that he was a rich man, that he wasn't coming to trick him, but rather to share with him. Hearing that Esau was coming to meet him with an army, however, Jacob prayed that the Lord would be with him.

The night before he was to meet Esau face to face, we read in Genesis 32:24 that "an angel wrestled with him until the breaking of the day." When the angel saw that he couldn't prevail against Jacob, he touched Jacob's thigh and it became dislocated.

"Let me go," the angel said. "It's morning."

"I will not let you go except you bless me," Jacob said.

And his name was changed from Jacob, "heel snatcher," to Israel, "governed by God."

Although he walked with a limp for the rest of his days, Jacob was a stronger man because he was governed by God.

Were it not for Hosea, we would think the only lesson to be learned from this vignette is the importance of prevailing prayer—an important lesson, indeed. But check out what Hosea adds to the story . . .

> Yea, he had power over the angel, and prevailed: he wept, and made supplication unto him: he found him in Bethel, and there he spake with us;

When did Jacob have power over the angel? Hosea tells us it wasn't when he said, "I won't let you go unless you bless me." It was when he was weeping, saying, "Please bless me." In other words, Jacob wasn't in control. He was crying. He wasn't full of bravado. He was broken.

This is life-changing for me. Jacob didn't initiate the wrestling match. It was the Lord who came to Jacob and wrestled with him. But the Lord didn't prevail. Why? Because He wasn't getting through. The same thing happens to us. The Lord comes to us regarding certain issues. We feel convicted about certain areas of our lives. We feel the Lord wrestling with us. But we can fight Him off if we so choose. We can say to Him, "You're not going to have that area of my life. I'm not going to give in on that point. I'm not going to allow You to have Your way in that situation. I refuse."

Jesus will come to you, talk to you, work with you, even wrestle with you—but He won't force you. According to His own counsel, He has limited himself. Therefore, if you wish, you can resist Him. All night long, Jacob resisted the angel. Then, the angel touched Jacob's hip. Suddenly, Jacob was hurting. Realizing his brokenness, Jacob clung to the Lord, crying, "I'm sorry. I'll never let You go. Please bless me." It's a wounded and weeping Jacob saying, "Please bless me," as he grovels in brokenness. And it was then—when his face was in the dirt, when his hip was out of joint, when he was wiped out physically and crying emotionally that the angel said, "You have prevailed."

When did Jacob prevail? When he no longer resisted the work of God in his life, when he simply said, "I need Your blessing. Lord, I need You. I'm hurting." And it was then that his name was changed. No longer would he pull this out, manipulate that, or accomplish the other because of his abilities or personality. Now he was Israel. Now he would be governed by God. Because he lost, Jacob won.

The day was breaking. A new day was dawning. Jacob, who previously walked confidently with head held high and chest puffed out, now went back to his family limping. And every step he took reminded him that he could do nothing, that he had to lean upon God every step of the way. No longer would he tell God what to do. Instead, he would be submitted to Him completely and totally.

That's what the Lord wants for us. We think that, with our spirituality, our fasting, prayer, and great faith, we can force His hand and make something happen—only to find just the opposite. It is when I'm on my face disjointed, dislocated, and broken, simply saying, "Have Your way. Direct me, Lord. Use me whatever way You want, whatever that might mean, as I walk haltingly through life" that I'm Israel, that I'm governed by Him. The Lord knows that when we are strong either in our own selves or our own spiritual state, we're weak because our strength has limits. But when we're weak and crying out to Him, saying, "Lord, live Your life through me; do Your will in me," we're strong because His strength is limitless. It is only then that He can do what He wants to do in my life—not because of my strength but because of my weakness.

That's my prayer for us. Have Your way with us, Lord—whatever that means and wherever it leads. We'll be happy to limp through life as long as we can lean on You.

13 Hosea 13:1

When Ephraim spake trembling, he exalted himself in Israel; but when he offended in Baal, he died.

When Israel was right with God, the nations trembled. When she spoke, people listened. In her was authority; through her was ministry and effectiveness. But past greatness does not guarantee future greatness. There was a time when Israel was great, but now, because they were worshiping other gods, there was no roaring, no trembling, no impact, no effectiveness, no ministry.

Do you remember a time when you sought the Lord with passion, with all of your heart? He blessed you—and then what happened? So often when the blessings of God come, we begin to slack off. We pray if it's convenient, study the Word occasionally, fellowship sporadically. This is what happened to Israel. God had blessed them—but they used His blessings to serve other gods.

Hosea 13:2
And now they sin more and more, and have made them molten images of their silver, and idols according to their own understanding, all of it the work of the craftsmen: they say of them, Let the men that sacrifice kiss the calves.

Proskuneo, the Greek word translated "worship" literally means "to turn and kiss." This is the relationship the Lord desires to have with us. Instead, we see His people kissing calves instead.

Hosea 13:3–6
Therefore they shall be as the morning cloud, and as the early dew that passeth away, as the chaff that is driven with the whirlwind out of the floor, and as the smoke out of the chimney. Yet I am the LORD thy God from the land of Egypt, and thou shalt know no god but me: for there is no saviour beside me. I did know thee in the wilderness, in the land of great drought. According to their pasture, so were they filled; they were filled, and their heart was exalted; therefore have they forgotten me.

Here, the Lord says, "When you were in the wilderness you sought Me. I knew you in the hard times. But when your pastures were green, when times were good, you forgot Me." The pitfall of prosperity must be understood. Yes, the Lord wants to bless you. There's no question about it. He will withhold no good thing from those that love Him (Psalm 84:11). The problem is, when He blesses us, if we're not very careful, we'll be enamored with His blessings rather than with Him.

Hosea 13:7, 8
Therefore I will be unto them as a lion: as a leopard by the way will I observe them: I will meet them as a bear that is bereaved of her whelps, and will rend the caul of their heart, and there will I devour them like a lion: the wild beast shall tear them.

The Lord would be to His people as a lion, a leopard, a bear in the invading Assyrian and Babylonian armies. But rather than any of those animals, He longed to be a mother hen, protecting rather than chastening His people (Luke 13:34).

Hosea 13:9
O Israel, thou hast destroyed thyself; but in me is thine help.

"You've destroyed yourself," the Lord says, "but in Me—not from Me, but in Me—is your help." We read in 2 Corinthians 1:20 that all of the promises of God in Jesus are "yea and amen." That is, when we're walking with Jesus, everything we need is found in Him. He doesn't give us life, He is our life. He doesn't give us bread, He is the bread. He doesn't show us the way. He is the way.

Hosea 13:10, 11
I will be thy king: where is any other that may save thee in all thy cities? and thy judges of whom thou saidst, Give me a king and princes? I gave thee a king in mine anger, and took him away in my wrath.

Because Israel as a whole wanted a king so that she could be like the nations—and because the ten tribes wanted their own king apart from David's line, it is no wonder God's people ended up first with Saul and then with Jeroboam, both of whom were disastrous leaders. Their clamor for a king was an outright rejection of the rule and authority of God Himself (1 Samuel 10:19).

Hosea 13:12
The iniquity of Ephraim is bound up; his sin is hid.

If only God's people had confessed, their sin could have been forgiven by God. But because they failed to confess their sin, it would be held against them.

Hosea 13:13
The sorrows of a travailing woman shall come upon him: he is an unwise son; for he should not stay long in the place of the breaking forth of children.

In other words, Israel is like a baby who refuses to come out of the womb and be born. God's people refused to break away from their idols into a deeper, fuller, richer life.

Hosea 13:14
I will ransom them from the power of the grave; I will redeem them from death: O death, I will be thy plagues; O grave, I will be thy destruction: repentance shall be hid from mine eyes.

"O death, where is thy sting?" Paul would ask. "O grave, where is thy victory?" (1 Corinthians 15:55) because God would ransom His people from the power of the grave when Jesus gave Himself a ransom for many (Matthew 20:28).

Hosea 13:15, 16
Though he be fruitful among his brethren, an east wind shall come, the wind of the LORD shall come up from the wilderness, and his spring shall become dry, and his fountain shall be dried up: he shall spoil the treasure of all pleasant vessels. Samaria shall become desolate; for she hath rebelled against her God: they shall fall by the sword: their infants shall be dashed in pieces, and their women with child shall be ripped up.

Although Ephraim's very name meant "fruitful" (Genesis 41:52), an east wind—Assyria—would come on the wilderness route from Assyria to Israel and she would dry up. Her capital, Samaria, would become desolate because her men, women, and even infants would be destroyed. And it all would be the tragic result of rebellion against a God who did everything possible to draw them back to Him.

O Israel, return unto the LORD thy God; for thou hast fallen by thine in iquity. Take with you words, and turn to the LORD: say unto him, Take away all iniquity, and receive us graciously: so will we render the calves of our lips. Asshur shall not save us; we will not ride upon horses: neither will we say any more to the work of our hands, Ye are our gods: for in thee the fatherless findeth mercy.

If they would render God the sacrifice of praise—the calves of their lips—rather than bowing to a calf of gold, the Lord would receive His people graciously. If they would realize that neither their gods nor alliances could save them, they would find mercy.

Hosea 14:4, 5

I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him. I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the lily, and cast forth his roots as Lebanon.

Just as sin is contrasted with repentance, the destruction of the land in chapter 13 is contrasted with its potential fruitfulness here in chapter 14 upon the return of God's people to Him.

Hosea 14:6

His branches shall spread, and his beauty shall be as the olive tree, and his smell as Lebanon.

If they returned to Him, God's people would be as beautiful as a fruit-bearing olive tree. And guess what. By God's incredible, unsearchable, amazing grace, as believers, we are actually grafted into that very tree (Romans 11:17).

Hosea 14:7, 8
They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the corn, and grow as the vine: the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with idols? I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green fir tree. From me is thy fruit found.

If God's people would return to Him, they would be as a fruitful vine. Again, by His matchless, limitless grace, as believers, we are branches of the one true vine, Jesus Christ—and it is only as we cling to Him that we bear fruit (John 15).

Hosea 14:9
Who is wise, and he shall understand these things? prudent, and he shall know them? for the ways of the LORD are right, and the just shall walk in them: but the transgressors shall fall therein.

The transgressors will stumble indefinitely, but those who are wise will hear.

C. H. Spurgeon visited one of his parishioners and saw a weather vane on the man's barn inscribed with the words "God is love."

"Are you trying to say that God's love changes?"

"Oh, no," the farmer said. "I'm saying that no matter which way the wind is blowing, God is still love."

That is the message of Hosea. God's people would break His heart. And yet, just as Hosea was not to give up on Gomer, God would not give up on His people. His love remained consistent toward them—just as it does for you.

Hear the heart of your Father. Come back to Him. Let Him love you.

JOEL

Background to Joel

There is a great deal of truth to the old proverb that says, "I complained I had no shoes until I saw a man that had no feet." Oftentimes, we feel upset, irritated, or bitter about situations that "bug" us or eat at us. But when we come across another person or group of people who have it harder than we do, we suddenly feel foolish for complaining. If something is bothering you right now, I guarantee it's not bugging you as much as the people in Joel's day were being bugged—for when this book was written, the land of Judah had been invaded by locusts that had completely wiped out the land.

The Lord then raised up a prophet named Joel to explain to the people what was happening, what they should be doing, and what the big picture was concerning the invasion of these bugs. Joel came on the scene and, although his message was relatively short, what he said was power-packed and extremely helpful for any who feel bugged, eaten up, or devoured by any given situation.

We don't know a great deal about Joel himself. It is believed he ministered in the year 830 B.C. If that be so, he would be a contemporary of Elisha the prophet and under the rule of Joash who was king of Judah at this time. He would probably have known Elijah, the miracle-worker, and he would certainly know about Jonah.

The book can be divided into two parts. The first part concerns the day of the locust from 1:1 to 2:27. The second part concerns the day of the Lord from 2:28 to the end of the book. As we will see, the day of the locust was actually an illustration, a sneak-preview of what was to come in the day of the Lord. If God's people thought they had a hard time with grasshoppers, they will experience even greater devastation in the day of the Lord.

Three things happen simultaneously in this short but powerful book. First, Joel was speaking to the people practically. After all, they had seen their land, their investments, their future wiped out by locusts. Second, he was speaking to the people prophetically. That is, he was talking about the day of the Lord, a day yet to come. Third, he was actually speaking to us personally. You see, maybe in the last year, your marriage, ministry, business, or family has been eaten away by locusts of one kind or another. Take heart! This book is for you because Joel addresses the issue for those who feel as if they've been eaten up, destroyed, set back, or devoured in any area of life.

Joel 1:1
The word of the LORD that came to Joel the son of Pethuel.

Joel means "Jehovah is God"—a good name for a man who would come on the scene and explain to people what God was doing as their land was being destroyed.

Joel 1:2–4
Hear this, ye old men, and give ear, all ye inhabitants of the land. Hath this been in your days, or even in the days of your fathers? Tell ye your children of it, and let your children tell their children, and their children another generation. That which the palmerworm hath left hath the locust eaten; and that which the locust hath left hath the cankerworm eaten; and that which the cankerworm hath left hath the caterpiller eaten.

There are actually ninety kinds of locusts. Here, we see four. The palmerworm gnawed. The Hebrew word translated "locust" means "storming one." "Canker" means "creeping one." The Hebrew word translated "caterpillar" means "stripping one." Thus, we see four waves of this invading army of insects. First came the gnawing, followed by the swarming, creeping, and stripping.

"Have you ever seen anything like this in all of the generations?" God asks. "Tell your children about this."

Joel 1:5
Awake, ye drunkards, and weep; and howl, all ye drinkers of wine, because of the new wine; for it is cut off from your mouth.

As we will see, Joel won't indict the people for idolatry as did the other prophets. Rather, he says the real sin at this time was drunkenness. Here, however, there would be an instant withdrawal program for them because the vineyards had been devoured.

Joel 1:6, 7
For a nation is come up upon my land, strong, and without number, whose teeth are the teeth of a lion, and he hath the cheek teeth of a great lion. He hath laid my vine waste, and barked my fig tree: he hath made it clean bare, and cast it away; the branches thereof are made white.

The locusts destroyed everything in their path, leaving only a white powder in their wake. In modern times, they've even been known to eat plastic and metal. Nothing stops them.

Joel 1:8, 9
Lament like a virgin girded with sackcloth for the husband of her youth. The meat offering and the drink offering is cut off from the house of the LORD; the priests, the LORD's ministers, mourn.

This is one of the few references to drink offerings in the Bible. Before the locusts devoured their crops, people would pour wine on top of their sacrifices and offer them as a drink offering to the Lord.

Joel 1:10–12
The field is wasted, the land mourneth; for the corn is wasted: the new wine is dried up, the oil languisheth. Be ye ashamed, O ye husbandmen; howl, O ye vinedressers, for the wheat and for the barley; because the harvest of the field is perished. The vine is dried up, and the fig tree languisheth; the pomegranate tree, the palm tree also, and the apple tree, even all the trees of the field, are withered: because joy is withered away from the sons of men.

The devastation caused by the locusts not only meant that there would be little to eat or drink in the coming year, but it also meant that the country would collapse as indeed it did.

Sometimes we in America have a tendency to feel very secure in our healthy economy, innovative technology, or strong industry. But this book tells us that something as simple as grasshoppers could put an end to all of that. In reality, the strength of every economy in the world is tenuous at best. All it takes is a couple of years of drought or an onslaught of disease and any country will eventually collapse. Just the year before, the people of Joel's day had experienced an almost unprecedented prosperity. They thought they had it made. But when bugs by the trillions descended on their land, their joy withered as surely as did their crops.

Joel 1:13
Gird yourselves, and lament, ye priests: howl, ye ministers of the altar: come, lie all night in sackcloth, ye ministers of my God: for the meat offering and the drink offering is withholden from the house of your God.

The locusts affected Israel not only economically and physically but spiritually as well because, without meat, they were unable to offer the sacrifices upon which the entire religious system of the Old Testament was built.

Joel 1:14, 15
Sanctify ye a fast, call a solemn assembly, gather the elders and all the inhabitants of the land into the house of the LORD your God, and cry unto the LORD, Alas for the day! for the day of the LORD is at hand, and as a destruction from the Almighty shall it come.

There are three major days or eras spoken of in Scripture. We are presently in the day of man (1 Corinthians 4:3). That is, mankind is having his own way. This world has virtually rejected the Lord—and we're suffering the consequences.

Second, we see the day of Christ in 1 Corinthians 1:7 and 8, 2 Corinthians 1:14 and Philippians 1:6. The day of Christ is synonymous with the Rapture of the church—when the church is snatched up into heaven where we'll spend seven years with Him. We'll be given our rewards and live in the mansions He's prepared for us during this seven-year "honeymoon" with our Bridegroom. It's going to be glorious. But while that's happening, another day will be unfolding on earth—the day of the Lord.

The third day spoken of in Scripture is the day of the Lord (Isaiah 2:12; 13:6; Ezekiel 30:3). Joel is the first to introduce the theme of the day of the Lord and speaks of it five times in his book. The day of the Lord is different from the day of Jesus Christ. It is the time that immediately follows the Rapture when God intervenes directly in the affairs of humanity. It begins with a period of time called the Tribulation—the seven-year period seen in Revelation 6—19, when God finally gets the attention of a world that isn't listening. The day of the Lord continues into the event directly following the Tribulation—the Millennium. The Millennium is 1,000 years of peace when Jesus rules and reigns from Jerusalem—when men shall study war no more, when things will be right at last. The day of the Lord begins with the Tribulation and goes all the way to the end of the Millennium. It starts darkly, but ends in the glorious light of the kingdom age.

That's the way all Hebrew days go. We begin our day at sunrise and progress to night. The Jewish people, however, begin their day with the setting of the sun. Their days begin dark but get lighter. I like that!

Joel 1:16–20
Is not the meat cut off before our eyes, yea, joy and gladness from the house of our God? The seed is rotten under their clods, the garners are laid desolate, the barns are broken down; for the corn is withered. How do the beasts groan! the herds of cattle are perplexed, because they have no pasture; yea, the flocks of sheep are made desolate. O LORD, to thee will I cry: for the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness, and the flame hath burned all the trees of the field. The beasts of the field cry also unto thee: for the rivers of waters are dried up, and the fire hath devoured the pastures of the wilderness.

The Romans called the locusts "burners of the field." Indeed, when they came it was as if a fire had swept through the area. Maybe a problem, challenge, or difficulty has swept through our own life, leaving nothing but ashes. Take heart, dear saint. The dawn of the morning is yet to come.

2 Joel 2:1
Blow ye the trumpet in Zion, and sound an alarm in my holy mountain: let all the inhabitants of the land tremble: for the day of the LORD cometh, for it is nigh at hand;

In Numbers 10, we see trumpets used either to gather the people of Israel or to instruct them in battle. In 1 Thessalonians 4:16, we read that, when Jesus descends to rapture us, He will call us with a voice like a trumpet. Revelation 8 talks about trumpet judgments against the rebellious people who have rejected God's Son instead of responding to His goodness.

In our day, the trumpet speaks of our being called up and of judgment coming down. In Joel's day, it spoke of coming together and seeking the Lord.

Joel 2:2
A day of darkness and of gloominess, a day of clouds and of thick darkness, as the morning spread upon the mountains: a great peo ple and a strong; there hath not been ever the like, neither shall be any more after it, even to the years of many generations.

The day of the locust is a dark day indeed. Those who have experienced this kind of invasion of locusts tell us the sun cannot even be seen until the locusts are either killed, fly to another destination, or, are blown away by the wind. This darkness also speaks to us, however, because sometimes that's the way our lives feel—gloomy and dark to the point where we don't even want to face a new day.

Joel 2:3, 4 (a)
A fire devoureth before them; and behind them a flame burneth: the land is as the garden of Eden before them, and behind them a desolate wilderness; yea, and nothing shall escape them. The appearance of them is as the appearance of horses . . .

Under a microscope, the face of a locust looks just like a horse. In fact, one of the ancient Greek words used for locusts is "little horse."

Joel 2:4 (b), 5 (a)
. . . and as horsemen, so shall they run. Like the noise of chariots on the tops of mountains shall they leap . . .

When locusts descend upon an area, they make the sound of a low roar.

Joel 2:5 (b)–7
. . . like the noise of a flame of fire that devoureth the stubble, as a strong people set in battle array. Before their face the people shall be much pained: all faces shall gather blackness. They shall run like mighty men; they shall climb the wall like men of war; and they shall march every one on his ways, and they shall not break their ranks:

Proverbs 30:27 speaks of the mystery that, although they have no leader, locusts move like an army. The description here is interesting because they picture something much more terrible that will happen in the day of the Lord . . .

And there came out of the smoke locusts upon the earth: and unto them was given power, as the scorpions of the earth have power. And it was commanded them that they should not hurt the grass of the earth, neither any green thing, neither any tree; but only those men which have not the seal of God in their foreheads. And to them it was given that they should not kill them, but that they should be tormented five months: and their torment was as the torment of a scorpion, when he striketh a man. And in those days shall men seek death, and shall not find it; and shall desire to die, and death shall flee from them. And the shapes of the locusts were like unto horses prepared unto battle; and on their heads were as it were crowns like gold, and their faces were as the faces of men. And they had hair as the hair of women, and their teeth were as the teeth of lions. And they had breastplates, as it were breastplates of iron; and the sound of their wings was as the sound of chariots of many horses running to battle. And they had tails like unto scorpions, and there were stings in their tails: and their power was to hurt men five months.

Revelation 9:3–10

Revelation 9 describes what will happen in the day of the Lord and the Tribulation. Locusts will be released from the bottomless pit—but they will be unique in that they will be instructed to harm only those who don't have the seal of God on their foreheads, the people on earth who will still reject God even in the day of the Tribulation when they should be turning to Him. Why should they turn to God? Because of the witness we leave behind, because of the testimony of the 144,000 Jewish evangelists who will preach the gospel (Revelation 7), because of the angel flying through the sky, preaching (Revelation 14), because of the two witnesses—most likely Elijah and Moses—who come on the scene preaching and doing miracles (Revelation 11). Those who reject all of this will be attacked by locusts that strike like a scorpion.

Joel 2:8–11
Neither shall one thrust another; they shall walk every one in his path: and when they fall upon the sword, they shall not be wounded. They shall run to and fro in the city; they shall run upon the wall, they shall climb up upon the houses; they shall enter in at the windows like a thief. The earth shall quake before them; the heavens shall tremble: the sun and the moon shall be dark, and the stars shall withdraw their shining: And the LORD shall utter his voice before his army: for his camp is very great: for he is strong that executeth his word: for the day of the LORD is great and very terrible; and who can abide it?

Of this day, Jesus said, "Unless those days were shortened, no one would survive them" (Matthew 24:22). Why is Joel declaring this?

Through him, God is speaking lovingly but honestly to us, saying, "Terrible times are coming. But you don't have to be there. You can escape them by turning to Me."

In Joel's day, the people weren't as interested in future things as they were worried about their crops that were devastated. Maybe you're saying, "The day of the Lord, the day of Christ, and the day of man are all very interesting, but they don't help me with my marriage, my kids, or my business. I'm not concerned about future events because my relationships are breaking down, my finances are drying up, I have more than enough to handle right now." But Joel speaks to this issue as well . . .

Joel 2:12, 13 (a)
Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: And rend your heart, and not your garments . . .

In Old Testament days, people would tear their clothes as a sign of deep sorrow. But the Lord is saying an outward show doesn't change the inward reality. "Don't go through the outward motions of church and spirituality," He says. "Come before Me with brokenness."

Joel 2:13 (b), 14
. . . and turn unto the LORD your God: for he is gracious and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repenteth him of the evil. Who knoweth if he will return and repent, and leave a blessing behind him; even a meat offering and a drink offering unto the LORD your God?

One of Satan's greatest achievements has been to convince the world that God is just waiting to judge people in any way, at any time, for any thing He can. As we see here, nothing could be farther from the truth. He is, in fact, looking for any way possible not to judge people, showing patience and mercy to generations.

Joel 2:15–17 (a)

Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly: Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts: let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet. Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD, weep between the porch and the altar . . .

Although the devastation caused by the locusts rendered a burnt offering impossible, the priests were to gather the people before the altar and offer a sacrifice of tears.

Joel 2:17 (b)–19
. . . and let them say, Spare thy people, O LORD, and give not thine heritage to reproach, that the heathen should rule over them: wherefore should they say among the people, Where is their God? Then will the LORD be jealous for his land, and pity his people. Yea, the LORD will answer and say unto his people, Behold, I will send you corn, and wine, and oil, and ye shall be satisfied therewith: and I will no more make you a reproach among the heathen:

It wasn't for their own comfort and ease that the people asked the Lord to spare their land. It was for His own reputation among the heathen. As we see throughout Scripture, this is a prayer God is only too willing to answer (1 Samuel 12:22; Psalm 106:8; Isaiah 48:9; Ezekiel 20:14).

Joel 2:20, 21
But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea, and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because he hath done great things. Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice: for the LORD will do great things.

Whether the army the Lord will remove refers to the army of locusts or the army of Sennacherib that would invade, the Lord would do great things in restoring the land (Isaiah 10:12).

Joel 2:22–24
Be not afraid, ye beasts of the field: for the pastures of the wilderness do spring, for the tree beareth her fruit, the fig tree and the vine do yield their strength. Be glad then, ye children of Zion, and rejoice in the LORD your God: for he hath given you the former rain moderately, and he will cause to come down for you the rain, the former rain, and the latter rain in the first month. And the floors shall be full of wheat, and the fats shall overflow with wine and oil.

The former and latter rains speak of the October rains and the April rains. In other words, God would once again water the land. He would bless His people agriculturally and economically.

Joel 2:25 (a)
And I will restore to you the years that the locust hath eaten . . .

The promise of God is absolutely incredible, for He promises not only to carry us from the point of devastation but actually to make up the lost time.

Joel 2:25 (b), 26
. . . the cankerworm, and the caterpiller, and the palmerworm, my great army which I sent among you. And ye shall eat in plenty, and be satisfied, and praise the name of the LORD your God, that hath dealt wondrously with you: and my people shall never be ashamed.

Notice that the Lord refers to the locust as the army He Himself sent. His people were going down a merry little road of ease and prosperity that was leading them right to damnation eternally. So He said, "Kids, I love you too much to let you continue on your way. I'll send an army of locusts if that's what it takes to get you on your knees and to soften your hearts toward Me. Then I'll bless you. Then I'll do mighty things in your life in ways you can't believe."

For topical study of Joel 2:25, 26 entitled "Restoring the Year," turn to page 778.

Joel 2:27–31
And ye shall know that I am in the midst of Israel, and that I am the LORD your God, and none else: and my people shall never be ashamed. And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my spirit upon all flesh; and your sons and your daughters shall prophesy, your old men shall dream dreams, your young men shall see visions: And also upon the servants and upon the handmaids in those days will I pour out my spirit. And I will shew wonders in the heavens and in the earth, blood, and fire, and pillars of smoke. The sun shall be turned into darkness, and the moon into blood, before the great and the terrible day of the LORD come.

Matthew 24, Luke 21, and Revelation 6—19 speak exactly of what verses 30 and 31 describe. During the Tribulation—the seven-year period that God judges a Christ-rejecting world—these signs will be seen on earth —specifically by the people of Israel. And, as we see in verses 27–29, even as the Tribulation comes down, so does the Holy Spirit. You see, we live in the time of the Gentiles, the Church Age. But the church is going to be raptured in the day of Jesus Christ. Then the day of the Lord will dawn. As God begins to judge, He'll pour out His Spirit particularly on the nation of Israel. That's why Paul would declare in Romans 11:26 that all Israel will be saved. The Jews who are now blinded to the fact that Jesus Christ is Messiah will have their eyes opened at that time. And, oh, what a glorious day it will be!

That is the ultimate fulfillment of this prophecy, but the fulfillment began in Acts 2 on the Day of Pentecost. The disciples had seen the resurrected Jesus Christ. They had spoken with Him. He had made Himself known to them. But when He ascended into heaven, the disciples at that time must have wondered, "What now?" They were believers. They had the Holy Spirit inside of them, for we read in John 20 that Jesus had gathered them around Him, breathed on them, and said, "Receive ye the Holy Ghost." They were born again at that moment. The Spirit indwelt them. But yet they were not a radical, on-fire group of believers, for before He ascended, Jesus told them to go to Jerusalem and wait for the promise of the Father, for the Holy Spirit to come upon them (Luke 24:49). In other words, although the Holy Spirit was already in them, they were to wait for Him to come upon them.

So they went to Jerusalem. They hung out and prayed behind closed doors, wondering what would happen next. After ten days—on the day of Pentecost—Acts 2 tells us there was the sound of a mighty, rushing wind. There were flames of fire seen on the heads of the one hundred twenty disciples. They began to speak in other tongues, praising God, magnifying the Lord. Suddenly, they were worshiping and praising God to the point that people on the street below began to nudge each other, saying, "There's a party up there. Those guys are drunk."

When Peter was aware that this was what the people outside were thinking, he addressed the group, saying, "These men are not drunk as you suppose. This is that prophesied by Joel." And he quoted Joel 2:28. The fulfillment of Joel's prophecy began at Pentecost. But its fullness will only be seen after the Rapture of the church. Pentecost was the initiation. The Tribulation will be the completion.

Joel 2:32
And it shall come to pass, that whosoever shall call on the name of the LORD shall be delivered: for in mount Zion and in Jerusalem shall be deliverance, as the LORD hath said, and in the remnant whom the LORD shall call.

We come to a new section in verse 28—for here the subject shifts from the day of the locust to the day of the Lord, a subject developed in chapter 3.

RESTORING THE YEAR

A Topical Study of JOEL 2:25, 26

The Book of Joel sums up a year in the life of a nation. The people of Israel had been plagued by a swarm of locusts that had devoured the land. The crops were destroyed to the point that even the bark of the trees was stripped. There was nothing left. All of the energy and effort of the previous year had been eaten up in a matter of weeks. Maybe as you look back at the past year of your own life, you feel like locusts have descended upon it. Maybe you put a lot of energy into a relationship only to have nothing to show for it now. Maybe you gave a lot of yourself to your job but were passed by for a promotion. Maybe the creeping, gnawing, crawling, stripping locusts have left virtually nothing behind of that which you so lovingly planted, to which you so energetically gave yourself.

But, as He said to His people in Joel's day, God says to you this day, "I will restore the years the locust has eaten. I'll not only give you a fresh start, but will restore to you the years that were lost, the energy that was wasted." When you feel burned out and bugged, disappointed and devastated, remember this promise . . .

Sincere Repenting

> Therefore also now, saith the LORD, turn ye even to me with all your heart, and with fasting, and with weeping, and with mourning: And rend your heart, and not your garments, and turn unto the LORD your God . . .
> Joel 2:12, 13 (a)

To tap into the blessing, the promise of the Lord to restore the years that have been lost, there must first be sincere repenting. In Old Testament times, people would tear their clothes to show their sorrow. But it was simply an outward gesture rather than an inward reality. Here, the Lord says, "I want you to be truly broken before Me. I want you to come to Me with weeping, fasting, and a broken heart."

The word "repentance" is a military term that simply means "about face." As they march in one direction, when soldiers hear the command, "About face" they turn around and being marching in the opposite direction. Repentance means you were once moving one way, but you turn around and move in exactly the opposite direction.

Repentance begins with confession. The Greek word translated "to confess" literally means "to say the same." In other words, true confession means I come before the Lord and say the same thing He says about my sin. I don't call it an error, a lapse in judgment, or someone else's problem. I say, "Lord, have mercy on me. My attitude stinks. The sin is mine."

Confession is the beginning, but it's not enough to simply confess our sin. We must turn from it, as well. We must say, "You sent and allowed the locusts to come into my life in order to show me that I've been wrong. Now, Lord, I humble myself before You and I'm going to march in the opposite direction."

Solemn Regathering

> Blow the trumpet in Zion, sanctify a fast, call a solemn assembly: Gather the people, sanctify the congregation, assemble the elders, gather the children, and those that suck the breasts: let the bridegroom go forth of his chamber, and the bride out of her closet. Let the priests, the ministers of the LORD*, weep between the porch and the altar, and let them say, Spare thy people, O* LORD . . .
> Joel 2:15–17 (a)

"Blow the trumpet," the Lord says, "and call the people to gather to seek My face." The people had been forsaking this kind of assembly. After all, their crops had been coming in well. Their borders were secure. They thought they had no need to gather together. Yet I can't count the number of times I've heard devastated people mark the beginning of their downfall at the point they stopped assembling with the people of God. They were either angry with someone, disappointed in something, or just too busy to make fellowship a priority.

"Blow the trumpet," the Lord says, "and everyone is to be there."
"But I'm nursing my baby," the mother says.
"Be there," the Lord says.
"But we just got married," the groom says.
"Be there," the Lord says. "There are no exceptions."

People think they can go it alone. But it doesn't work that way. You see, our God is a Father. As a father, I could say, "Kids, just eat whenever you want. We won't have a dinner hour. We won't have family devotions. We'll just have kind of a 'cosmic family.' " But I would be a very poor father if that was my mindset. I want my family to be together. Why? It's important for them to interact. It's important for me to both observe them together and to talk to them as a unit. It's important for them to talk things through and to work things out.

“I can just pray out in the woods,” some say. “I can have my own worship service—just me and the Lord.” The problem is, the New Testament knows nothing of that kind of Christianity. The ones who try to go it alone are vulnerable to getting picked off. The people of Israel discovered this. As they traveled through the wilderness, the Amalekites would attack the ones lagging behind (Deuteronomy 25:18). The same is still true. To grow as a believer and progress on this pilgrimage, I need to assemble with brothers and sisters who will sometimes bless me and other times bug me. It’s all part of being a family.

Spirited Rejoicing

> But I will remove far off from you the northern army, and will drive him into a land barren and desolate, with his face toward the east sea, and his hinder part toward the utmost sea, and his stink shall come up, and his ill savour shall come up, because he hath done great things. Fear not, O land; be glad and rejoice: for the LORD will do great things.
> Joel 2:20, 21

As the trumpet blew, the people who gathered were surrounded by the devastated crops and barren vineyards that had been devoured by locusts. Yet what does the Lord say? He says, "I want you to rejoice because I made a promise to you and I want you to act as though it's already come to pass." That's what faith is. There are many ways to please God, but not one of them lacks faith as an ingredient (Hebrews 11:6). The world says, "If I see it, I'll believe it."

The Lord says, "Believe it and then you'll see it."

"Rejoice in the Lord always. Again I say rejoice," Paul would say (Philippians 4:4). In other words, "I'm going to tell you over and over again to rejoice in the Lord." Believe the promise of the Lord even before you see it worked out because faith is essential to seeing the fullness of God's blessings released.

When my daughter, Mary Elizabeth, was about two years old, I remember telling her a bedtime story about a big, red bear who came in the house and said, "Mary, grab my neck. We're going for a walk." So in the story, little Mary grabbed the bear's neck and they go for a walk through Jacksonville and all of the various stores and shops. At the end of Jacksonville, they go into the Jacksonville Trader. Inside the store, the bear sees a big box and in the box is a beautiful baby doll. The bear grabs the box and has the people wrap it, and gives it to Mary.

At that point, Mary jumped up excitedly and said, "Where is it, Daddy? Where is it?"

"Where's what?" I asked.

"The dolly!" Mary said as she looked under the chair, under the bed, and in her closet. You see, Mary was so into the story that she believed what I was saying had actually happened.

The next day I bought the doll.

"If you, being evil, know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will the heavenly Father give good gifts to His?" Jesus asked (Luke 11:13).

If you're saying, "Wow! Beautiful! Thank You, Lord!" as you read His promises in the Word, you can be sure He's going to be so delighted by your faith that blessing you will be His joy (Matthew 8:10).

3 Joel 3:1–3

For, behold, in those days, and in that time, when I shall bring again the captiv ity of Judah and Jerusalem, I will also gather all nations, and will bring them down into the valley of Jehoshaphat, and will plead with them there for my people and for my heritage Israel, whom they have scattered among the nations, and parted my land. And they have cast lots for my people; and have given a boy for an harlot, and sold a girl for wine, that they might drink.

Here, the Lord declares that, in the day of the Lord, He will judge all nations on the basis of how they treated His people—including those who sold Jewish boys and girls into slavery and used the money to indulge their flesh. This has happened throughout history. In A.D. 70, the Roman general, Titus, killed one and a half million Jews and sold thousands into slavery in a three-month period alone. In our own day, of course, there was the horror of the holocaust of World War II.

But the Lord will one day bring all nations to the valley of Jehoshaphat where they will answer to Him. Where is this valley? It's the Kidron Valley —a small valley that only takes a couple of minutes to walk through that leads to the Mount of Olives. It was called the Valley of Jehoshaphat because it was there that Jehoshaphat had a great victory (2 Chronicles 20).

In Matthew 25, we read that at the end of the Tribulation, when the seven-year period of judgment is over and before the world is ushered into the 1,000 years of peace in the Millennium, God will call all of the nations together to judge them. In the Valley of Jehoshaphat, or the Kidron Valley, the Lord will determine which people will be allowed to go into the Millennium. What will be the measure? How they treated the Jews in the day of Tribulation. Those who cared for them, stood by them, and watched over them will be allowed to come into the kingdom. Those who ignored them, who didn't care about them, will be cast into hell itself. Why will that be the criterion? Because when the Jews recognize Jesus as their Messiah midway through the Tribulation, antichrist will wage war against them. Therefore, any nation or individual who stands with them places his own life in jeopardy for the cause of Christ.

On the other hand, this gathering of the nations could refer to the final battle, the battle of Armageddon. We know that this brutal, bloody battle in which all of the nations of the world will converge in Israel will be in the valley of Megiddo. This valley is approximately two hundred miles in length and one hundred miles wide—enough for the nations of the world to converge in battle. But suddenly, when things look hopeless for Israel, Jesus will appear. Thus, whether this passage refers to the battle of Armageddon or to the judgment of Matthew 25, the enemies of God's people will be judged very definitely.

Joel 3:4–8

Yea, and what have ye to do with me, O Tyre, and Zidon, and all the coasts of Palestine? will ye render me a recompence? and if ye recompence me, swiftly and speedily will I return your recompence upon your own head; Because ye have taken my silver and my gold, and have carried into your temples my goodly pleasant things: The children also of Judah and the children of Jerusalem have ye sold unto the Grecians, that ye might remove them far from their border. Behold, I will raise them out of the place whither ye have sold them, and will return your recompence upon your own head: And I will sell your sons and your daughters into the hand of the children of Judah, and they shall sell them to the Sabeans, to a people far off: for the LORD hath spoken it.

The people of Tyre and Sidon, as well as the Philistines, not only plundered God's temple, but sold His people into slavery. Therefore, because the law of sowing and reaping is an immutable law of God (Galatians 6:7), God's people would eventually be freed while history shows that they themselves would be sold into slavery after they were conquered by Alexander and the Greeks.

Joel 3:9, 10
Proclaim ye this among the Gentiles; Prepare war, wake up the mighty men, let all the men of war draw near; let them come up: Beat your plowshares into swords, and your pruninghooks into spears: let the weak say, I am strong.

In Isaiah 2:4, we read that in the Millennium, swords will be beaten into plowshares and spears into pruning hooks because peace will render them obsolete. Here, however, the Lord says just the opposite. In the Tribulation period, He'll say, "If you have plows, make them into swords. If you have pruning hooks, sharpen them for spears because war is coming."

Joel 3:11
Assemble yourselves, and come, all ye heathen, and gather yourselves together round about: thither cause thy mighty ones to come down, O LORD.

As the armies assemble God's people pray, "O, Lord, let Your mighty ones come down." Who are the mighty ones? We are. When the world looks like it's going to be blown to bits, they'll look up and exclaim, "Behold, He cometh with 10,000 of His saints" (Jude 14).

Joel 3:12, 13 (a)
Let the heathen be wakened, and come up to the valley of Jehoshaphat: for there will I sit to judge all the heathen round about. Put ye in the sickle, for the harvest is ripe . . .

In Revelation 14, we see this "putting in of the sickle" in relationship to the battle of Armageddon.

Joel 3:13 (b), 14
. . . come, get you down; for the press is full, the fats overflow; for their wickedness is great. Multitudes, multitudes in the valley of decision: for the day of the LORD is near in the valley of decision.

Whether they have come to the Valley of Jehoshaphat or to Megiddo, whether they have come to be judged or to fight, the peoples' future will indeed be decided. Maybe you have friends, children, or parents who are in the "valley of decision" even now. Wage war on their behalf through prayer that they might make the right decision, that they might choose Jesus.

Joel 3:15–17
The sun and the moon shall be darkened, and the stars shall withdraw their shining. The LORD also shall roar out of Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the heavens and the earth shall shake: but the LORD will be the hope of his people, and the strength of the children of Israel. So shall ye know that I am the LORD your God dwelling in Zion, my holy mountain: then shall Jerusalem be holy, and there shall no strangers pass through her any more.

When the Lord comes back and dwells in Jerusalem, there shall be no more strangers. Tensions will be gone. Turmoil will vanish. Instead, Jerusalem will be filled with people who are ruled by the Lord, submitted to the Lord, and walking with the Lord.

Joel 3:18
And it shall come to pass in that day, that the mountains shall drop down new wine, and the hills shall flow with milk, and all the rivers of Judah shall flow with waters, and a fountain shall come forth of the house of the LORD, and shall water the valley of Shittim.

The picture here is of the abundance of vineyards and flocks, of sustenance and refreshment that will characterize the Millennium, when the Prince of Peace rules and reigns in Jerusalem.

Joel 3:19
Egypt shall be a desolation, and Edom shall be a desolate wilderness for the violence against the children of Judah, because they have shed innocent blood in their land.

The Egyptians and the Edomites were two peoples who constantly troubled the Jews.

Joel 3:20, 21
But Judah shall dwell for ever, and Jerusalem from generation to generation. For I will cleanse their blood that I have not cleansed: for the LORD dwelleth in Zion.

The Lord will cleanse the blood of Judah. In Zechariah 12, we see what this means . . .

> And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced, and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn.
> Zechariah 12:9, 10

In that day, God's people will look at Jesus—the One they pierced—and they will at last realize what He did for them. They'll mourn over the fact that they rejected Him. In that day, they'll see Him and embrace Him. They'll be cleansed and forgiven. All of Israel will be saved (Romans 11:26)—and, oh, what a glorious day that will be!

AMOS

Background to Amos

The situations in which Joel and Amos ministered are very, very different. When Joel was ministering, the people of God were plagued by grasshoppers. When Amos was ministering, the people of God were prospering in greenbacks. In Joel's day, the people were asking, "What is going on?" In Amos' day, the people were cruising without a care in the world.

The setting of Amos takes us to a time in the history of Israel when, with the exception of the days of Solomon, she prospered unlike any other time in her history. The year was approximately 760 B.C. The ruler was Jeroboam II, a man who ruled the country for forty years with great success.

The people of Israel were riding tall in the saddle. There had been a feudal war going on between the Syrians and the Israelis for about a hundred years. But Jeroboam was able to not only beat back the Syrians but to expand Israel's borders. In the process, Israel gained some lucrative trade routes between the Assyrians to the north and the Egyptians to the south. As the caravans traveled between these two empires, the Jews would tax them accordingly.

On the surface, things couldn't have been better. Below the surface, however, there were some real problems. Below the surface, there was spiritual decay. So the Lord tapped Amos on the shoulder, saying, "Go and rip down the façade of false spirituality. Expose the spiritual disease of the people and the danger that lies ahead unless they return to Me."

Amos was an unlikely character to be chosen for several reasons. First, he was from the area of Tekoa, about ten miles south of Jerusalem. In other words, Amos was from Judah, but his ministry would be to the ten northern tribes in Israel. Tekoa was in the kingdom of Judah, but Amos' ministry would not be to Judah but to the ten northern tribes in Israel. If that weren't enough, Tekoa was the quintessential "hick town." It was known only for sheep and fig trees. Amos tended sheep and picked figs—hardly positions of high esteem. Yet the Lord said, "Amos, I'm sending you to Bethel, the place where the king hangs out and where intellectual, religious meetings are held. I'm sending you to tell those people what is on My heart."

Amos was called a herdsman, not even a shepherd, and a fig picker. We're talking about hillbilly, migrant worker, a low place on the ladder of status. Yet the Lord said, "Amos, I'm sending you to Bethel, the most sophisticated region of Israel to speak My heart to the intellectual and religious elite." Some scholars believe that all of Amos' messages were given in a week's time. This is very possible. But there was something about this hillbilly from hick town that captured the imagination of the people. They didn't like his message—but he spoke truth in such a way that they were captivated. He talked about farming carts being pressed down, lions chewing up vulnerable sheep, baskets of rotting figs. In other words, rather than try and come across as something he wasn't, he used images and references that related to his own occupation. He simply drew upon his own experiences to speak God's heart in a way people could understand.

The Lord loves to use the foolish things of the world to confound the wise (1 Corinthians 1:27). So often we think we can't be used unless we have a Ph.D. after our name. Not so. The Lord loves to use the Amoses.

This book that bears his name is divided into two parts. In the first part—chapters 1 through 6—eight nations are denounced. In the second part—chapters 7 through 9—five visions are announced.

Amos 1:1 (a)
The words of Amos, who was among the herdman of Tekoa . . .

Right off the bat, Amos identifies himself. He doesn't try to cover up his background. He doesn't say, "I am a prophet," or, "I am a man of God." He simply introduces himself to the people of Israel as a herdman from a backwoods region in Judah.

Amos 1:1 (b)
. . . which he saw concerning Israel in the days of Uzziah king of Judah, and in the days of Jeroboam the son of Joash king of Israel, two years before the earthquake.

Uzziah was ruling in the south, Jeroboam in the north. We know the earthquake mentioned was quite substantial because two hundred fifty years later, Zechariah would also make mention of it.

Amos 1:2
And he said, The LORD will roar from Zion, and utter his voice from Jerusalem; and the habitations of the shepherds shall mourn, and the top of Carmel shall wither.

Beginning in verse 3 and going through chapter 6, we see a series of indictments against eight nations. Amos will begin with the Syrians then deal with the Phoenicians. He'll talk about the Philistines, the Moabites, and the Edomites, drawing a circle that begins to get closer and closer to Israel. When the Israelites heard the indictments against the nations surrounding them, they must have applauded—until they realized the judgments were hitting closer and closer to home.

Amos 1:3 (a)

Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Damascus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof . . .

Damascus is the capital city of Syria. Amos will use this phrase, "three transgressions and for four" over and over again. This doesn't mean there were four sins, but rather it's an expression that says, "Because they continue on sinning."

Amos 1:3 (b)–5
. . . because they have threshed Gilead with threshing instruments of iron: But I will send a fire into the house of Hazael, which shall devour the palaces of Ben-hadad. I will break also the bar of Damascus, and cut off the inhabitant from the plain of Aven, and him that holdeth the sceptre from the house of Eden: and the people of Syria shall go into captivity unto Kir, saith the LORD.

Because of their cruelty toward His people, God would judge Syria. Their houses would be burned, their people would be bound. To this day, the Syrians still attempt to attack the region of Gilead—the Galilee area—with "instruments of iron" called tanks. In fact, when the Syrians entered the region in the 1973 war, they came with more tanks than were used in totality in World War II.

Amos 1:6–8
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Gaza, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they carried away captive the whole captivity, to deliver them up to Edom: But I will send a fire on the wall of Gaza, which shall devour the palaces thereof: And I will cut off the inhabitant from Ashdod, and him that holdeth the sceptre from Ashkelon, and I will turn mine hand against Ekron: and the remnant of the Philistines shall perish, saith the Lord GOD.

The Gaza Strip is one of the political flashpoints of Israel to this day. It was a problem for Israel in the days of Amos, as well. Because the Philistines were selling the Jews into slavery, the Lord said He would judge them. Their cruelty would come back upon them. In A.D. 70, when the Romans destroyed Jerusalem, they renamed Israel Palestine, or "Land of the Philistines." Even as the Philistines dwelt in Gaza in the days of Amos, the Palestinians claim this land as part of their destiny today.

Amos 1:9, 10
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Tyrus, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they delivered up the whole captivity to Edom, and remembered not the brotherly covenant: But I will send a fire on the wall of Tyrus, which shall devour the palaces thereof.

Tyre did not remember their brotherly covenant. What was this covenant? I Kings 9 tells us there was an agreement between Israel and Tyre—a peace treaty that was broken. Therefore, because the Lord is a God of great integrity, He would judge Tyre for failing to honor her agreement.

Amos 1:11, 12
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Edom, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he did pursue his brother with the sword, and did cast off all pity, and his anger did tear perpetually, and he kept his wrath for ever: But I will send a fire upon Teman, which shall devour the palaces of Bozrah.

The people of Edom were descendants of Esau, the twin brother of Jacob. But because Edom continually waged war against Israel, the Lord says they would be judged.

Isn't it interesting that, not only regarding individuals but churches, we often have the most problems with those to whom we're closest? The churches that have the most difficulty are most often those who are closest in theology, in flavor, in philosophy. This ought not to be.

Amos 1:13–15
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of the children of Ammon, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because they have ripped up the women with child of Gilead, that they might enlarge their border: But I will kindle a fire in the wall of Rabbah, and it shall devour the palaces thereof, with shouting in the day of battle, with a tempest in the day of the whirlwind: And their king shall go into captivity, he and his princes together, saith the LORD.

The Ammonites showed no mercy to the people of Israel—even to pregnant women—and destroyed them for one reason: the Ammonites wanted to expand their borders. Here, the Lord said He would judge them for that. But, before we point a finger too quickly at the Ammonites, we would do well to look at our own society. We rip open women and destroy the children within because we want our own occupational, financial, or relational borders to expand. "I just can't afford this baby," our society says. "It will put a strain on my resources and cramp my style. I don't have room in my life for a baby right now."

Thus, I see no difference in the sin of abortion and the sin for which Ammon was judged.

2 If you place yourself in the pews of Amos' day and listen to this country preacher, you can almost hear the people of Israel saying, "Great! Best news I've heard in years. The Lord is going after the Edomites and the Ammonites and the people of Tyre! Preach it, Amos!"

In chapter 2, we come to his indictment against the Moabites concerning their lack of respect for the dead.

Amos 2:1–3

Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Moab, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof; because he burned the bones of the king of Edom into lime: But I will send a fire upon Moab, and it shall devour the palaces of Kerioth: and Moab shall die with tumult, with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet: And I will cut off the judge from the midst thereof, and will slay all the princes thereof with him, saith the LORD.

The Moabites desecrated the dead by burning the bones of their enemy, the Edomite king.

My tendency would be to say, "Who cares? Lord, the Edomites were a cruel people, too. So why would You be concerned about the Moabites burning them?" Yet, in reality, there's only One who can truly judge. "Vengeance is Mine," saith the Lord (Romans 12:19). Therefore, if the Edomites are to be judged, only God can judge them.

As Christians, we need to realize that vengeance is the Lord's alone. He is the only One worthy to judge, the only One with all the facts, the only One who sees the heart. Truly, the God of Ananias and Sapphira (Acts 5).

This means I don't have to go around burning people with the fire of my opinion or the flames of my wrath. We are commanded simply to love one another and to leave the judging to God (Matthew 7:1).

Amos 2:4 (a)
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Judah, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof . . .

Following the indictments against Syria, Gaza, Tyre, Edom, Ammon, and Moab, we come to the southern tribes of Judah . . .

Amos 2:4 (b), 5
. . . because they have despised the law of the LORD, and have not kept his commandments, and their lies caused them to err, after the which their fathers have walked: But I will send a fire upon Judah, and it shall devour the palaces of Jerusalem.

Because the people of Judah didn't keep the Word, fire would fall upon them.

We hear a lot about people getting burned-out. But the root of their problem is the same as Judah's. That is, they don't hear the Word of the Lord.

"Remember the Sabbath day, to keep it holy," the Lord declares (Exodus 20:8).

"That's archaic," man argues. "We can make more money if we work on the Sabbath."

And we get burned out as a result. Any law of God we violate, we do so to our own destruction. Any law of the Lord we ignore, we do so at our own peril.

Amos 2:6 (a)
Thus saith the LORD; For three transgressions of Israel, and for four, I will not turn away the punishment thereof . . .

As the circle gets drawn tighter and tighter, we finally come to Israel.

Amos 2:6 (b)
. . . because they sold the righteous for silver . . .

The first indictment against Israel was for bribery.

Amos 2:6 (c)
. . . and the poor for a pair of shoes;

The second indictment against Israel was for slavery. The ten northern tribes had fallen into the despicable practice of selling people into slavery for the price of a pair of shoes.

Amos 2:7
That pant after the dust of the earth on the head of the poor, and turn aside the way of the meek: and a man and his father will go in unto the same maid, to profane my holy name:

The third indictment against Israel was for immorality.

Amos 2:8
And they lay themselves down upon clothes laid to pledge by every altar, and they drink the wine of the condemned in the house of their god.

The fourth indictment against Israel was for insensitivity. That is, as prescribed by Old Testament law, anyone in financial straits could get a loan by using his cloak as collateral. But the lender was not to keep the cloak at night lest the owner become cold (Deuteronomy 24:12, 13). The people Amos indicts were not only keeping the cloaks, but using them in their false religious practices.

I wonder if this isn't applicable in some ways to our own society. We rip each other off in finances and business. We exploit and then come to church and give our tithes and offerings. That's not right. Here, the Lord calls for justice and rightness in a society.

Amos 2:9
Yet destroyed I the Amorite before them, whose height was like the height of the cedars, and he was strong as the oaks; yet I destroyed his fruit from above, and his roots from beneath.

The Lord reminds Israel that the Ammonites were destroyed for the very things they were now doing. "If I didn't spare them, do you think I'm going to let you do these things indefinitely?" He asks.

We can save ourselves so much unnecessary pain by learning lessons from every story in the Bible—for while it is true that experience is the best teacher, it doesn't have to be our experience. Let us learn from the experience of others.

Amos 2:10, 11
Also I brought you up from the land of Egypt, and led you forty years through the wilderness, to possess the land of the Amorite. And I raised up of your sons for prophets, and of your young men for Nazarites. Is it not even thus, O ye children of Israel? saith the LORD.

As seen in Numbers 6, the Nazarites were men who were singularly devoted to the Lord.

Amos 2:12, 13
But ye gave the Nazarites wine to drink; and commanded the prophets, saying, Prophesy not. Behold, I am pressed under you, as a cart is pressed that is full of sheaves.

"I blessed you with Nazarites—men who were dedicated—and you talked them into drinking. I sent you prophets, but you forbade them to prophesy," the Lord declares, as He describes the heaviness of His heart with an illustration from Amos' own background.

Amos 2:14–16
Therefore the flight shall perish from the swift, and the strong shall not strengthen his force, neither shall the mighty deliver himself: Neither shall he stand that handleth the bow; and he that is swift of foot shall not deliver himself: neither shall he that rideth the horse deliver himself. And he that is courageous among the mighty shall flee away naked in that day, saith the LORD.

Neither the swift nor the strong, neither the bowman nor the bold would be able to deliver himself from the judgment of the Lord that would be meted out by the Assyrians.

3 Amos 3:1, 2
Hear this word that the LORD hath spoken against you, O children of Israel, against the whole family which I brought up from the land of Egypt, saying, You only have I known of all the families of the earth: therefore I will punish you for all your iniquities.

God chose a family, the seed of Abraham, to show the world how life should be lived. He used Israel as a model that all of the world would see that He is good and that walking in His way would bring blessing. Here, He says, "Of all the families of the world, I have known you. I have chosen you, given you a special calling, and tremendous blessing. What are you doing with the privilege, the calling, and the blessing I've given you? You're walking away from Me. Therefore, I have no choice but to chasten you because you're My family."

Amos 3:3
Can two walk together, except they be agreed?

Two people can walk together only if they are going in the same direction. God was leading His people one way, but they were walking in another. How easy it is for us to fall prey to the same problem.

For topical study of Amos 3:3 entitled "Simply Walking Together," turn to page* 788.

Amos 3:4–6
Will a lion roar in the forest, when he hath no prey? will a young lion cry out of his den, if he have taken nothing? Can a bird fall in a snare upon the earth, where no gin is for him? shall one take up a snare from the earth, and have taken nothing at all? Shall a trumpet be blown in the city, and the people not be afraid? shall there be evil in a city, and the LORD hath not done it?

Using examples first from the wild, then from the air, and finally from the city itself, God asks a series of questions, each of whose answer is "no"—underscoring the fact that, not only would it be impossible for His people to walk in a different direction from Him and still call Him their God, but that the calamity about to befall them would be His way to bring them back.

Amos 3:7, 8
Surely the Lord GOD will do nothing, but he revealeth his secret unto his servants the prophets. The lion hath roared, who will not fear? the Lord GOD hath spoken, who can but prophesy?

"How can we walk in agreement with the Lord? Where's He going?" we sometimes ask.

“I will do nothing without revealing My secrets unto My servants, the prophets,” the Lord answers. “The prophets will speak boldly. My will won’t be hard to find.”

How I thank the Lord for Amos and Isaiah, for Jeremiah and Hosea—for prophets from whom we can learn the heart of God. Get in the Word, gang. Study the prophets. Meditate on the Psalms. Memorize the Gospels. Read the Word—and you’ll know exactly what the Lord wants you to do.

Amos 3:9–11
Publish in the palaces at Ashdod, and in the palaces in the land of Egypt, and say, Assemble yourselves upon the mountains of Samaria, and behold the great tumults in the midst thereof, and the oppressed in the midst thereof. For they know not to do right, saith the LORD, who store up violence and robbery in their palaces. Therefore thus saith the Lord GOD; An adversary there shall be even round about the land; and he shall bring down thy strength from thee, and thy palaces shall be spoiled.

Even the Philistines in Ashdod and the Egyptians in their palaces would agree that God’s judgment of His people was overdue.

Amos 3:12
Thus saith the LORD; As the shepherd taketh out of the mouth of the lion two legs, or a piece of an ear; so shall the children of Israel be taken out that dwell in Samaria in the corner of a bed, and in Damascus in a couch.

“Just as a shepherd rips open the mouth of a lion and takes out the remains of one of his sheep, so too, you will be devoured,” the Lord declares through Amos. Indeed, within forty years, Israel’s boom turned into a bust. The Assyrians destroyed the people of Israel exactly as Amos prophesied.

Amos 3:13, 14
Hear ye, and testify in the house of Jacob, saith the Lord GOD, the God of hosts, That in the day that I shall visit the transgressions of Israel upon him I will also visit the altars of Bethel: and the horns of the altar shall be cut off, and fall to the ground.

When the Assyrians invaded the country, not only would the people of Israel be judged, but their golden calf and altars to their false gods would be destroyed.

Amos 3:15
And I will smite the winter house with the summer house; and the houses of ivory shall perish, and the great houses shall have an end, saith the LORD.

The trappings of their economic prosperity—their vacation homes, houses of costly ivory, mansions, and everything else the people of God had worked so hard to achieve—was all about to end.

SIMPLY WALKING TOGETHER

A Topical Study of AMOS 3:3

I clearly remember the day my son, Benjamin, learned to walk. With his older sister, Mary Elizabeth, literally running by the age of one, with Ben still crawling at eighteen months, we wondered if he'd ever walk. So when he took his first steps shortly thereafter, our whole family gathered around him and cheered.

This reminds me of the verse in 3 John 4. At approximately ninety years of age, John wrote, "I have no greater joy than to hear my children are walking in truth." And, here in Amos, we hear that same heart. In fact, throughout Scripture, the Christian experience is likened to a walk.

God Declares That Man Should Walk with Him

> Ye shall walk in all the ways which the LORD your God hath commanded you, that ye may live, and that it may be well with you, and that ye may prolong your days in the land which ye shall possess.
> Deuteronomy 5:33

"I want to bless you. I want it to go well with you. I want your days to be prolonged in the land I'm giving you. I want you to live—really live," God declares.

Jesus said the same thing when He said, "I have come that you might have life and life abundantly" (John 10:10). God's plan and desire is not abundant life only presently—but on into eternity. In Genesis 5, we see the story of a man who walked with God quite literally . . .

> And Enoch lived sixty and five years, and begat Methuselah: And Enoch walked with God after he begat Methuselah three hundred years, and begat sons and daughters: And all the days of Enoch were three hundred sixty and five years: And Enoch walked with God: and he was not; for God took him.

At age sixty-five, Enoch began walking with God. For three hundred years, he walked so closely with the Lord that it is as if one day, the Lord looked at him and said, "Enoch, we're closer to My house than yours, so why don't you just come on up and stay with Me?" Enoch never died. He was just raptured, translated, and snatched up into heaven, where he is living to this day.

You see, walking with God has benefits not only in this life but in heaven —where all things will be right, where every tear will be dried, where every question will be answered, where every problem will be solved.

God Desires Man Would Walk with Him

> And they heard the voice of the LORD God walking in the garden in the cool of the day: and Adam and his wife hid themselves from the presence of the LORD God amongst the trees of the garden.
> Genesis 3:8

God not only declares that man should walk with Him, but He desires that man would walk with Him. That is, our walking with God is not only for our benefit but for His enjoyment. We see this in Genesis 3, a story we know well. After Adam and Eve rebelled against the Lord in the Garden of Eden, when Adam heard God walking in the cool of the day, he hid himself because, evidently, God and Adam had a habit of walking together at that time. God showed up for His appointment, but Adam hid because now they were no longer in agreement.

God desired that man would walk with Him. But man started doing His own thing. Rather than walk with God, he chose to crawl in carnality. Centuries later, in the day of Amos, we still hear the cry of a Father who desired that His people walk with Him.

God Determined Man Could Walk with Him

> And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth.
> John 1:14

God declared that man should walk with Him and desired that man would walk with Him. But man didn't. He failed in Eden and failed in the days of Amos. Did God wash His hands and say, "Forget it"? No. Even though man was polluted by sin, God determined that man could walk with Him by becoming a Man Himself.

We were crawling in carnality, but God became a Man in Christ Jesus.

> The next day John seeth Jesus coming unto him, and saith, Behold the Lamb of God, which taketh away the sin of the world.
> John 1:29

God sent His Son to be slain for our sin, to take away the disharmony, the disagreement, the barrier between us and God.

> Again the next day after John stood, and two of his disciples; And looking upon Jesus as he walked, he saith, Behold the Lamb of God! And the two disciples heard him speak, and they followed Jesus.
> John 1:35–37

Jesus walked in perfect harmony with the Father. And, as people watched Him walk, as they listened to the words He spoke, as they saw the deeds He did, they followed Him. Why? Because He lived life the way it was meant to be lived. There was a quality, a vitality, an attractiveness about Him that caused people to want to know what He said, to travel where He was going.

Then Jesus turned, and saw them following, and saith unto them, What seek ye? They said unto him, Rabbi, (which is to say, being interpreted, Master,) where dwellest thou? He saith unto them, Come and see. They came and saw where he dwelt, and abode with him that day: for it was about the tenth hour.

John 1:38, 39

Jesus asks a question that needs to be asked of every individual who has ever lived: What are you seeking? What are you really after in life?

These men who sought Jesus as He walked said, "We want to hang out with You."

We, too, have seen Jesus Christ—not face to face, but through a glass darkly (1 Corinthians 13:12). And what we have seen of Him is immensely impressive. The words He spoke, the way He lived, the things He taught, and, above all, the work He did on the Cross is beyond anything we could imagine. The Lamb of God took away every sin I have ever committed in my entire life. On the Cross, He paid for every carnal thought, sinful act, and stubborn mistake. That's why John exclaimed, "Behold the Lamb of God who takes away the sin of the world!" We can walk with our Father once again. We can have harmony and unity with God because Jesus paid the price for our sin. The barrier is gone.

Think about when you first got saved. It was so simple. You knew you were a sinner and you knew Jesus died for your sin. But, all too often, after we become believers, something subtle begins to happen. Our walks become complicated. We think we have to learn ten verses a day, read ten chapters in the Bible a week, and witness to ten people at work in order to maintain our walk with the Lord. We develop philosophies and theologies, obligations and regulations—and then wonder where the joy of our walk with the Lord went. Paul addresses this very issue . . .

As ye have therefore received Christ Jesus the Lord, so walk ye in him: Rooted and built up in him, and stablished in the faith, as ye have been taught, abounding therein with thanksgiving. Beware lest any man spoil you through philosophy and vain deceit, after the tradition of men, after the rudiments of the world, and not after Christ. For in him dwelleth all the fulness of the Godhead bodily. And ye are complete in him, which is the head of all principal ity and power:

Colossians 2:6–10

Here, Paul calls the Colossian believers back to simplicity. "Don't let anyone burden you with traditions and activities," he says. "You're complete in Christ. Enjoy the simplicity. Even as you received Christ, walk in Him."

How did you receive Jesus? You made no bargains with Him. You signed no contracts with Him. You just came in humility and gratitude, saying, "Lord, thank You for dying for me. Take control of my life." It was so simple. The problem with many believers is that, although we understand we're saved by grace and not works, after we're saved, we start working. We start complicating things and wonder where the joy went.

Jesus was invited by a Pharisee named Simon to have dinner at his house. As He sat at Simon's table, a woman came into the room with an alabaster box in her hand. Making her way to Jesus, she wept at His feet. Then she dried her tears from His feet with her hair and anointed them with the costly ointment from within the alabaster box. Simon sat back and watched, thinking that if Jesus were indeed a prophet, He would know what kind of woman this was.

Knowing what Simon was thinking, Jesus told a parable of a creditor who had two debtors. One owed him fifty pence, the other five hundred pence. Neither of the debtors could pay, so the creditor forgave them both.

"Which of the two would love the creditor more?" Jesus asked Simon.

"The one who was forgiven the larger debt," Simon answered.

"You're right," Jesus said, "When I came into your house, you did not kiss Me, as is the custom. But this woman has not ceased kissing My feet. When I came into your house, you did not wash My feet, as is the custom. But this woman has washed My feet with her tears. When I came into your house, You did not anoint My head with oil, as is the custom. But this woman has anointed even My feet."

Then Jesus turned to the woman and said, "Though your sins be many, you are forgiven. The one who is forgiven little loves little. But the one who is forgiven much, loves much."

Simon, no doubt, was cut to the quick. After all, Jesus was saying that a prostitute was in a much better place than he was because she loved Him more. She understood grace in simplicity and her need for forgiveness while Simon, the Pharisee, flaunted his theology and spirituality but loved Jesus little (Luke 7).

When you first got saved, you came as that woman did. You knew you were a sinner and perhaps with tears flowing down your cheeks, or gratitude in your heart, you said, "Lord, You're so good to me. Thank You for dying for my sins." And like her, you opened the alabaster box of praise. But here's the question: have you become like Simon?

Now that you're a Christian, are you working hard to keep the regulations, disciplining yourself religiously, studying hard and worshiping with intensity, witnessing regularly—but loving Jesus only minimally? Have you lost the simplicity? To walk with God simply means realizing you're a sinner and thanking Him for saving you. It's not dependent upon your working, witnessing, praying, studying, tithing, or worshiping. It's just saying, "Lord, I'm a sinner. Thank You for saving me."

We worship and witness, pray and praise, sacrifice and serve not to earn God's favor but because He has already shown such favor to us. The Christian life is a delight because it's so simple. We can walk in agreement with God solely because of the work of the Lamb. It's finished. It's complete. Enjoy your salvation—and be free.

Hear this word, ye kine of Bashan, that are in the mountain of Samaria, which op press the poor, which crush the needy, which say to their masters, Bring, and let us drink.

Amos, the herdman from Tekoa, compares Israel's affluent society to the cows of Bashan, which were noted for their stubbornness and strength due to the richness of their pasture land (Psalm 22:12).

Amos 4:2

The Lord GOD hath sworn by his holiness, that, lo, the days shall come upon you, that he will take you away with hooks, and your posterity with fishhooks.

When the Assyrians came down forty years later, they joined thousands of Israelites by hooks and led them into captivity in Assyria, where they would assimilate them into the Assyrian culture.

Amos 4:3
And ye shall go out at the breaches, every cow at that which is before her; and ye shall cast them into the palace, saith the LORD.

Although the people would try to escape as the Assyrian's invaded, their attempts would be futile.

Amos 4:4, 5
Come to Bethel, and transgress; at Gilgal multiply transgression; and bring your sacrifices every morning, and your tithes after three years: And offer a sacrifice of thanksgiving with leaven, and proclaim and publish the free offerings: for this liketh you, O ye children of Israel, saith the Lord GOD.

The people of God were still bringing Him their tithes, offerings, and sacrifices—but they were mixed with leaven, a picture of sin (Leviticus 2:11; 1 Corinthians 5:8). In other words, they were playing a game. Their hearts were not inclined toward God. Their sacrifices were offered only for the sake of appearance.

Amos 4:6–8
And I also have given you cleanness of teeth in all your cities, and want of bread in all your places: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. And also I have withholden the rain from you, when there were yet three months to the harvest: and I caused it to rain upon one city, and caused it not to rain upon another city: one piece was rained upon, and the piece whereupon it rained not withered. So two or three cities wandered unto one city, to drink water; but they were not satisfied: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

God hoped dry times would motivate His people to return to Him.

Amos 4:9–11
I have smitten you with blasting and mildew: when your gardens and your vineyards and your fig trees and your olive trees increased, the palmerworm devoured them: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. I have sent among you the pestilence after the manner of Egypt: your young men have I slain with the sword, and have taken away your horses; and I have made the stink of your camps to come up unto your nostrils: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD. I have overthrown some of you, as God overthrew Sodom and Gomorrah, and ye were as a firebrand plucked out of the burning: yet have ye not returned unto me, saith the LORD.

"What more do I have to do to get your attention?" God asks. "When I blessed you, you forgot Me. So I sent both heat and mildew your way. Locusts have devoured your crops. Drought has eroded your economy. You've been overthrown like Sodom. Yet you're still not seeing that I'm calling you to Me."

Amos 4:12
Therefore thus will I do unto thee, O Israel: and because I will do this unto thee, prepare to meet thy God, O Israel.

"Because I bless you and you ignore Me, because I blast you and you ignore Me, prepare to meet Me. I'm taking you home," God declares. "You're stubbornly going down a destructive path," God says. "Therefore, you leave Me no alternative but to short-circuit you into eternity."

If you don't grasp this point, I believe your perspective of God will be amiss. This isn't God saying in anger and hostility, "I'm going to destroy you," but rather, "You're so stubborn. You're unteachable. Therefore, I'll short-circuit you into eternity because the path you're on will destroy you."

Amos 4:13
For, lo, he that formeth the mountains, and createth the wind, and declareth unto man what is his thought, that maketh the morning darkness, and treadeth upon the high places of the earth, The LORD, The God of hosts, is his name.

God declares His thought to man. How does one declare a thought? The only way is by a word. How did God declare His thought, how did He reveal His heart? In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God (John 1:1). He did it in the person of Jesus Christ. That's why Jesus had to come—not only to die for our sin, but also because everyone had their own idea of what God was like. So God revealed His thought by becoming the Word incarnate.

How do I know what God is like? By studying the life of Jesus Christ, by listening to His words, by seeing what He did in situations. Without Jesus, we could only argue and hypothesize about the character of God. But because Jesus came, we can know what God is like.

"Show us the Father," Philip said.

"Oh, Philip," Jesus answered. "Have I been with you so long? Don't you know that he that hath seen Me hath seen the Father. I and the Father are One" (see John 14:8, 9).

How do we know the thought, the heart, the mind, the intent of God? Through Jesus Christ. He is God's final Word.

Amos 5:1–3
Hear ye this word which I take up against you, even a lamentation, O house of Is rael. The virgin of Israel is fallen; she shall no more rise: she is forsaken upon her land; there is none to raise her up. For thus saith the Lord GOD; The city that went out by a thousand shall leave an hundred, and that which went forth by an hundred shall leave ten, to the house of Israel.

The mission of a prophet is not an easy one—especially in the setting in which Amos ministered. Here, the people in Israel were singing, "Happy Days Are Here Again." After all, the country was experiencing prosperity and peace like they hadn't experienced since the days of Solomon. But Amos is told to sing a lamentation, or a dirge, because, beneath the façade of peace and prosperity, the spiritual wickedness and moral corruption that pervaded the country would result in the destruction of ninety percent of Israel's population by the hands of the Assyrians.

Amos 5:4, 5
For thus saith the LORD unto the house of Israel, Seek ye me, and ye shall live: But seek not Bethel, nor enter into Gilgal, and pass not to Beer-sheba: for Gilgal shall surely go into captivity, and Bethel shall come to nought.

Bethel, Gilgal, and Beer-Sheba were all centers of idol worship, specifically of golden calves. The people of God were to stay away from these places and instead seek the Lord.

Amos 5:6
Seek the LORD, and ye shall live; lest he break out like fire in the house of Joseph, and devour it, and there be none to quench it in Bethel.

If we seek the Lord, we'll live life to the fullest. If we ignore Him, we'll be burned up, consumed by our own sin.

Amos 5:7, 8
Ye who turn judgment to wormwood, and leave off righteousness in the earth, Seek him that maketh the seven stars and Orion, and turneth the shadow of death into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night: that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth: The LORD is his name:

Only the One who created life knows how it can be lived to the fullest. "Don't ignore Me," the Lord says, "and you'll find the life you're craving."

Amos 5:9
That strengtheneth the spoiled against the strong, so that the spoiled shall come against the fortress.

The Creator of the Universe is He who strengthens the spoiled against the strong, who uses the weak things of the world to confound the things that are mighty (1 Corinthians 1:27). That is why our strength actually lies in our weakness (2 Corinthians 12:10).

Amos 5:10
They hate him that rebuketh in the gate, and they abhor him that speaketh uprightly.

The people of Israel dismissed any who spoke the truth (Isaiah 29:21).

Amos 5:11–13
Forasmuch therefore as your treading is upon the poor, and ye take from him burdens of wheat: ye have built houses of hewn stone, but ye shall not dwell in them; ye have planted pleasant vineyards, but ye shall not drink wine of them. For I know your manifold transgressions and your mighty sins: they afflict the just, they take a bribe, and they turn aside the poor in the gate from their right. Therefore the prudent shall keep silence in that time; for it is an evil time.

"Are not five sparrows sold for two farthings, and not one of them is forgotten before God?" Jesus asked (Luke 12:6). The God who not only created but cared for the sparrows was certainly aware of how His people were mistreating the poor and weak in their midst.

Amos 5:14, 15
Seek good, and not evil, that ye may live: and so the LORD, the God of hosts, shall be with you, as ye have spoken. Hate the evil, and love the good, and establish judgment in the gate: it may be that the LORD God of hosts will be gracious unto the remnant of Joseph.

Even though the dirge has already been sung, Amos is saying, "Seek the Lord and it may be that He will be gracious to the remnant. Those who turn toward Him will find God's goodness being poured out upon them."

Amos 5:16–20
Therefore the LORD, the God of hosts, the Lord, saith thus; Wailing shall be in all streets; and they shall say in all the highways, Alas! alas! and they shall call the husbandman to mourning, and such as are skilful of lamentation to wailing. And in all vineyards shall be wailing: for I will pass through thee, saith the LORD. Woe unto you that desire the day of the LORD! to what end is it for you? the day of the LORD is darkness, and not light. As if a man did flee from a lion, and a bear met him; or went into the house, and leaned his hand on the wall, and a serpent bit him. Shall not the day of the LORD be darkness, and not light? even very dark, and no brightness in it?

Amos picks up on the same theme Joel developed—the day of the Lord. The day of the Lord is the day when the Lord will intervene in history. The people of Israel were looking forward to that day—but not for the right reasons. They simply wanted more comfort and ease. "Do you really know what you're saying?" Amos asks. "For you, the day of the Lord will be dark. You might think you'll escape the lion—the problems of the present world—but there will be a bear or a serpent—future problems—to greet you."

Amos 5:21–24
I hate, I despise your feast days, and I will not smell in your solemn assemblies. Though ye offer me burnt offerings and your meat offerings, I will not accept them: neither will I regard the peace offerings of your fat beasts. Take thou away from me the noise of thy songs; for I will not hear the melody of thy viols. But let judgment run down as waters, and righteousness as a mighty stream.

"I'm weary of your 'playing church,' " the Lord declares. "I'm weary of your songs, your sacrifices, and your incense because they're not from the heart. You're going through the motions, but there's no emotion. You're going through the ritual, but there's no reality."

How many people go to church simply because it's the respectable thing to do, dropping a quarter in the offering plate, paying their dues? America is full of churches that fall into this category—where people are not interested in seeking the Lord, hearing His voice, or doing what His Word declares.

Amos 5:25–27
Have ye offered unto me sacrifices and offerings in the wilderness forty years, O house of Israel? But ye have borne the tabernacle of your Moloch and Chiun your images, the star of your god, which ye made to yourselves. Therefore will I cause you to go into captivity beyond Damascus, saith the LORD, whose name is The God of hosts.

Even in the days when God's people witnessed His miraculous power firsthand—when they saw the parting of the Red Sea, when they ate manna that fell from heaven and drank water from a rock—they had a tendency to wander toward false gods. And, because this tendency was still with them, they would find themselves held captive beyond Damascus.

6 Amos 6:1 (a)
Woe to them that are at ease in Zion . . .

Whenever you come to the word, "woe" in Scripture, think of it as "whoa," and slow down so you can pay careful attention to what the Lord is saying.

I'm reminded of the preacher who was selling his horse. To the prospective buyer, he said, "This horse is a little bit unusual. If you really want him to go, don't say 'Giddy up.' Say, 'Praise the Lord,' and he'll take off."

"I can handle that," the buyer said.

"And to get him to stop, don't say, 'Whoa.' Say, 'Amen,' and he'll stop."

"Okay," the man said. He bought the horse and galloped away. After riding some distance, he was curious to see how fast the horse would go. "Praise the Lord," he said—and the horse took off at unbelievable speed. Hanging on for dear life, the man saw a precipice ahead and realized the horse was about to race right over the cliff.

"Glory!" he said. But that didn't work. "Hallelujah!" he shouted. But when the horse kept running, he knew that wasn't the right word, either. Right before the horse was to go over the cliff, he said, "Oh, Lord, save me. In Jesus' Name. Amen!" The horse screeched to a stop inches from the edge of the cliff.

And so relieved was the man that all he could say was, "Praise the Lord!"

Amos 6:1 (b)
. . . and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came!

In other words, because of the peace and prosperity she was experiencing, all of the nations looked to the region of Samaria as the place to be.

Amos 6:2–4
Pass ye unto Calneh, and see; and from thence go ye to Hamath the great: then go down to Gath of the Philistines: be they better than these kingdoms? or their border greater than your border? Ye that put far away the evil day, and cause the seat of violence to come near; That lie upon beds of ivory, and stretch themselves upon their couches, and eat the lambs out of the flock, and the calves out of the midst of the stall;

The people of God were living in luxury and plunging into all sorts of immorality and gluttony.

Amos 6:5
That chant to the sound of the viol, and invent to themselves instruments of musick, like David;

In 1 Chronicles 23, we read that David, a man after God's own heart, actually invented instruments upon which he could praise the Lord. These people, however, were using instruments not to praise the Lord but to appeal to the flesh.

Amos 6:6
That drink wine in bowls, and anoint themselves with the chief ointments: but they are not grieved for the affliction of Joseph.

Rather than being grieved for the people in need, the people in Amos' day indulged in wine by the bowlful.

Amos 6:7
Therefore now shall they go captive with the first that go captive, and the banquet of them that stretched themselves shall be removed.

Like the word "woe," whenever you see the word "therefore" in Scripture, stop and ask "What is that there for?" Why would God's people be carried away captive? Because of sexual immorality, sensual music, gluttony, and drunkenness. That's why, during this time when everything seemed to be going so well, Amos was on the scene, saying, "Watch out. The path you're on leads only to bondage."

Amos 6:8
The Lord GOD hath sworn by himself, saith the LORD the God of hosts, I abhor the excellency of Jacob, and hate his palaces: therefore will I deliver up the city with all that is therein.

The temple in Jerusalem had been Jacob's excellency. But because the people were only going through the motions of true worship, the place in which the Lord once delighted to dwell (Psalm 87:2) was now a place He abhorred.

Amos 6:9–11
And it shall come to pass, if there remain ten men in one house, that they shall die. And a man's uncle shall take him up, and he that burneth him, to bring out the bones out of the house, and shall say unto him that is by the sides of the house, Is there yet any with thee? and he shall say, No. Then shall he say, Hold thy tongue: for we may not make mention of the name of the LORD. For, behold, the LORD commandeth, and he will smite the great house with breaches, and the little house with clefts.

This speaks of the coming destruction both of great and small, of rich and poor by the hands of the Assyrians.

Amos 6:12–14
Shall horses run upon the rock? will one plow there with oxen? for ye have turned judgment into gall, and the fruit of righteousness into hemlock: Ye which rejoice in a thing of nought, which say, Have we not taken to us horns by our own strength? But, behold, I will raise up against you a nation, O house of Israel, saith the LORD the God of hosts; and they shall afflict you from the entering in of Hamath unto the river of the wilderness.

Israel would be invaded from the city of Hamath in the north and the invading Assyrians would make their way clear to the Nile in the south all because, rather than allowing God's judgment to soften their hearts, their hearts remained as hard as stone.

7 While the first six chapters of Amos deal with the pronouncements of eight judgments, the second half consists of the announcement of five visions . . .

Amos 7:1–6
Thus hath the Lord GOD shewed unto me; and, behold, he formed grasshoppers in the beginning of the shooting up of the latter growth; and, lo, it was the latter growth after the king's mowings. And it came to pass, that when they had made an end of eating the grass of the land, then I said, O Lord GOD, forgive, I beseech thee: by whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small. The LORD repented for this: It shall not be, saith the LORD. Thus hath the Lord GOD shewed unto me: and, behold, the Lord GOD called to contend by fire, and it devoured the great deep, and did eat up a part. Then said I, O Lord GOD, cease, I beseech thee: by whom shall Jacob arise? for he is small. The LORD repented for this: This also shall not be, saith the Lord GOD.

Amos' first two visions consisted of grasshoppers eating the land followed by fire consuming the land. Both times, Amos sought the Lord, asking Him how the land would survive.

This speaks to me very practically. What are we to do when we see things that either bug us or burn us? We're to do what Amos did. We're to seek the Lord and pray that the situation would change, that the problem would be solved. In answer to Amos' prayer, God relented because He knew all along that He could find an intercessor in Amos that would give Him the righteous excuse not to do what He was planning on doing. In light of this, I wonder how many of our own situations could be changed if, instead of being bugged or burned, we would pray. James tells us we have not because we ask not (4:2). Therefore, rather than expounding on how bugged we are, how burned up we are, how upset we are, we must be those who get on our knees and pray—and see what the Lord might do in changing the entire situation.

Amos 7:7–9
Thus he shewed me: and, behold, the Lord stood upon a wall made by a plumbline, with a plumbline in his hand. And the LORD said unto me, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A plumbline. Then said the Lord, Behold, I will set a plumbline in the midst of my people Israel: I will not again pass by them any more: And the high places of Isaac shall be desolate, and the sanctuaries of Israel shall be laid waste; and I will rise against the house of Jeroboam with the sword.

In Amos' third vision, we see neither praying on his part nor relenting on God's. Why? Because the Lord is the One who stimulates us to pray in the first place. Without His pressing us, without His motivating us, we would never pray at all. This time, the Lord didn't move Amos to pray. Why? Because the house of Jeroboam was destined to collapse.

Amos 7:10, 11
Then Amaziah the priest of Bethel sent to Jeroboam king of Israel, saying, Amos hath conspired against thee in the midst of the house of Israel: the land is not able to bear all his words. For thus Amos saith, Jeroboam shall die by the sword, and Israel shall surely be led away captive out of their own land.

Amaziah was the intellectual, religious priest of Bethel who honored God with his mouth one moment and then honored Baal and polished the golden calf the next. Because he felt threatened by Amos, Amaziah told Jeroboam that Amos prophesied Jeroboam would die by the sword. In reality, however, Amos said the house of Jeroboam would die by the sword. In fact, this prophecy would not be fulfilled until Jeroboam's grandson sat on the throne.

That's the way gossip and innuendo always work. False witnesses tweak the truth just enough to give a false impression that works to the advantage of the talebearer. Of course, this is seen no more clearly than in the false witness borne against Jesus Himself (Mark 14:57, 58).

Amos 7:12, 13

Also Amaziah said unto Amos, O thou seer, go, flee thee away into the land of Judah, and there eat bread, and prophesy there: But prophesy not again any more at Bethel: for it is the king's chapel, and it is the king's court.

"Go back where you came from, Amos," Amaziah said. "You don't belong here."

Amos 7:14, 15
Then answered Amos, and said to Amaziah, I was no prophet, neither was I a prophet's son; but I was an herdman, and a gatherer of sycomore fruit: And the LORD took me as I followed the flock, and the LORD said unto me, Go, prophesy unto my people Israel.

"I'm not claiming to be an intellectual like you," Amos answered. "I'm simply a herdman and a fig-picker. But the Lord told me to preach to the people of Israel and I obeyed."

Where was Amos when he was called? He was with the flock. Where was Moses when he was called to lead Israel? Watching the sheep (Exodus 3:1). Where was David? Watching his father's sheep (1 Samuel 16:19). Where do you find shepherds? Where do you find true spiritual leaders? You find them in those who are tending the flock—caring for people, loving people, and giving themselves to people. You'll always find true shepherds among sheep and fruit-gatherers picking fruit.

Amos 7:16, 17
Now therefore hear thou the word of the LORD: Thou sayest, Prophesy not against Israel, and drop not thy word against the house of Isaac. Therefore thus saith the LORD; Thy wife shall be an harlot in the city, and thy sons and thy daughters shall fall by the sword, and thy land shall be divided by line; and thou shalt die in a polluted land: and Israel shall surely go into captivity forth of his land.

"Because you're not listening to the word of the Lord, Amaziah, here's what will happen," the Lord said through Amos.

If we're not listening to the Word of God, we, too, will find ourselves in big-time trouble. It's just that simple. If we never pray with our husbands or wives, if we never have devotions with our kids, if we never spend time in the Word ourselves, we can't wonder why our families end up held captive by the world, just as Israel would be.

8 In chapter 8, Amos has another vision for the people of Israel who were so enamored with their culture and luxury, for those who were at ease in Zion.

Amos 8:1, 2 (a)
Thus hath the Lord GOD shewed unto me: and behold a basket of summer fruit. And he said, Amos, what seest thou? And I said, A basket of summer fruit. . . .

Amos was a fig-picker. So what did the Lord use to speak to him? He used fruit—something which Amos understood. The Lord is truly a Master Communicator and He will communicate with you in the terms and through the things you can best understand. So often we think we have to delve into areas with which we're unfamiliar and learn concepts we really can't grasp —but that's not so. The Lord will speak to you right where you're at. He'll speak to you in the most wonderful, natural way. Therefore, as you go through your day, keep your antennae up. Listen for the Lord teaching you lessons using the things that are right before you.

Amos 8:2 (b)
. . . Then said the LORD unto me, The end is come upon my people of Israel; I will not again pass by them any more.

Just like ripe summer fruit that is about ready to spoil, God's people who, at one time were fruitful, were about to perish.

Amos 8:3
And the songs of the temple shall be howl-ings in that day, saith the Lord GOD: there shall be many dead bodies in every place; they shall cast them forth with silence.

The songs that were once praise and adoration would become a lamentation.

Amos 8:4–7
Hear this, O ye that swallow up the needy, even to make the poor of the land to fail, Saying, When will the new moon be gone, that we may sell corn? and the sabbath, that we may set forth wheat, making the ephah small, and the shekel great, and falsifying the balances by deceit? That we may buy the poor for silver, and the needy for a pair of shoes; yea, and sell the refuse of the wheat? The LORD hath sworn by the excellency of Jacob, Surely I will never forget any of their works.

The people had become so material, so caught up in the business aspects of their life that they chafed at the bit to get back to their business pursuits. "Let's get this worship service over so we can get back to making money, so that we can exploit people and rip them off. We'll do whatever it takes to get ahead," they said.

"I see what you're doing," the Lord said. "You think you're prospering but it's only through deceit and exploitation. Therefore, like rotten fruit, you'll be thrown out."

Amos 8:8–10
Shall not the land tremble for this, and every one mourn that dwelleth therein? and it shall rise up wholly as a flood; and it shall be cast out and drowned, as by the flood of Egypt. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the Lord GOD, that I will cause the sun to go down at noon, and I will darken the earth in the clear day: And I will turn your feasts into mourning, and all your songs into lamentation; and I will bring up sackcloth upon all loins, and baldness upon every head; and I will make it as the mourning of an only son, and the end thereof as a bitter day.

"Because your hearts are far from Me, trouble is coming," the Lord says to His people through Amos. "The stock market will crash. The economy will collapse."

Amos 8:11
Behold, the days come, saith the Lord GOD, that I will send a famine in the land, not a famine of bread, nor a thirst for water, but of hearing the words of the LORD:

God's judgment would affect His people not only agriculturally and economically but spiritually. Prophets would still proclaim the Word and teachers would still explain the Word—but a time would come when people wouldn't hear the Word. The information would still be available, but people wouldn't receive it.

Amos 8:12
And they shall wander from sea to sea, and from the north even to the east, they shall run to and fro to seek the word of the LORD, and shall not find it.

Because they wouldn't hear the Word of the Lord, people run here, there, and everywhere, trying to figure out the solution to their problems, the answer to their questions. They bounce from one experience to another, trying to determine what life is about.

Amos 8:13
In that day shall the fair virgins and young men faint for thirst.

After restlessness, we see weariness. As God's people, those who should have been at a place of vitality and fullness will instead faint, give up, and drop out.

Amos 8:14

They that swear by the sin of Samaria, and say, Thy god, O Dan, liveth; and, The manner of Beer-sheba liveth; even they shall fall, and never rise up again.

The reason for the famine of hearing the Word was that God's people worshiped idols from the north in Dan to Beer-sheba in the south. Consequently, because they filled themselves with idol worship, they could no longer hear the Word of the Lord.

You may wonder why you're not hearing the words of the Lord, why the Bible is so dry, why there is a famine in your land. As seen here, a very possible reason is that you are worshiping an idol of compromising literature, of questionable entertainment, of overworking to make more money. In Mark 4, Jesus said the Word of God is like seed thrown in the soil of men's hearts. But the cares of this world, the deceitfulness of riches, and the lust for material things can choke its growth.

When you experience a famine in hearing the Word of the Lord, it's His loving signal that something is amiss. When Scripture is no longer vibrant or important, when the impressions are no longer real or understandable, when spiritual truths are meaningless to you, the Lord in His love says, "That's the first sign I'm giving you that something is wrong in your life. The path you're on will eventually destroy you."

If this is where you're at, seek the Lord. Let Him point out to you the sin of Samaria, the gold calf of Dan before it destroys you. If you turn from it, your appetite for the Word will return. The seed of the Word will flourish once more, bringing forth much fruit.

9 In chapter 9, Amos has another vision that relates to the idols God's people were worshiping . . .

Amos 9:1 (a)
I saw the LORD standing upon the altar . . .

This refers not to the altar in the temple of Jerusalem but to the altar in a temple of a false god.

Amos 9:1 (b)
. . . and he said, Smite the lintel of the door, that the posts may shake: and cut them in the head, all of them; and I will slay the last of them with the sword: he that fleeth of them shall not flee away, and he that escapeth of them shall not be delivered.

"I'm going to bring down this idolatrous temple on the heads of those who worship within." We see an illustration of this in Judges 16, the story of Samson. When he threw away all of the blessings of God and gave in to the temptations of Delilah, the Spirit of God left him and, as a result, he was captured by the Philistines. Physically blind, as he stood between two pillars of the temple of Dagon, he asked the Lord for one last measure of strength. When God graciously gave Samson a second chance, Samson pushed out the pillars. The walls and roof of the temple collapsed, resulting in the deaths of more people than Samson had killed in his life.

Though they dig into hell, thence shall mine hand take them; though they climb up to heaven, thence will I bring them down: And though they hide themselves in the top of Carmel, I will search and take them out thence; and though they be hid from my sight in the bottom of the sea, thence will I command the serpent, and he shall bite them:

Even if people attempted to flee to hell itself, they would not escape the Lord.

Whither shall I go from thy spirit? or whither shall I flee from thy presence? If I ascend up into heaven, thou art there: if I make my bed in hell, behold, thou art there.

Psalm 139:7, 8

David was comforted by the fact that no matter where he was—experiencing highs or feeling down in the depths of hell, God was with him. But here God is saying, "If you think you're going to get out of this situation by dying, you're wrong. You cannot escape My judgment. There's no place to hide."

Amos 9:4, 5
And though they go into captivity before their enemies, thence will I command the sword, and it shall slay them: and I will set mine eyes upon them for evil, and not for good. And the Lord GOD of hosts is he that toucheth the land, and it shall melt, and all that dwell therein shall mourn: and it shall rise up wholly like a flood; and shall be drowned, as by the flood of Egypt.

"The land that is so prosperous right now will be judged," the Lord declares. "It will melt, evaporate, dissipate before your eyes." Because the people of Israel rebelled against God, their enemies came in and, just as prophesied, deforested the nation that was once so beautiful. They cut down trees, which, in turn, altered the climate. The rich soil eroded and the land became arid.

Our lives also become rocky and dry when we rebel against the Lord. Things begin to erode. That which was once productive becomes barren.

Amos 9:6, 7
It is he that buildeth his stories in the heaven, and hath founded his troop in the earth; he that calleth for the waters of the sea, and poureth them out upon the face of the earth: The LORD is his name. Are ye not as children of the Ethiopians unto me, O children of Israel? saith the LORD. Have not I brought up Israel out of the land of Egypt? and the Philistines from Caphtor, and the Syrians from Kir?

While the Lord had indeed delivered His people from bondage in Egypt, He would not turn a blind eye to their sin—for He had delivered even heathen nations, as well. Therefore, Israel could not presume she was immune from His judgment.

Amos 9:8, 9
Behold, the eyes of the Lord GOD are upon the sinful kingdom, and I will destroy it from off the face of the earth; saving that I will not utterly destroy the house of Jacob, saith the LORD. For, lo, I will command, and I will sift the house of Israel among all nations, like as corn is sifted in a sieve, yet shall not the least grain fall upon the earth.

God would allow His people to be carried into all nations—yet not one true grain would be lost. In other words, there would always be a remnant of those who were faithful to Him.

Amos 9:10
All the sinners of my people shall die by the sword, which say, The evil shall not overtake nor prevent us.

Although the people denied the Word given to them, they would experience its results nonetheless. In 722 B.C., the Assyrians destroyed hundreds of thousands of them and carried hundreds of thousands more into captivity by putting fishhooks in their mouths and leading them with ropes to Assyria. At that point, the ten northern tribes were never heard of again.

In spite of this, Amos ends his prophecy with a glorious promise, for after declaring the punishment that was coming to Israel, he now gives a promise for Israel . . .

Amos 9:11 (a)
In that day will I raise up the tabernacle of David that is fallen . . .

This could mean, as Orthodox Jews believe, that there will be a literal rebuilding of the tabernacle in the day of the Lord, in the end times. It most likely refers, however, to the household of David. That is, Jesus Christ, the Son of David, will rule and reign in Jerusalem.

Amos 9:11 (b)–13
. . . and close up the breaches thereof; and I will raise up his ruins, and I will build it as in the days of old: That they may possess the remnant of Edom, and of all the heathen, which are called by my name, saith the LORD that doeth this. Behold, the days come, saith the LORD, that the plowman shall overtake the reaper, and the treader of grapes him that soweth seed; and the mountains shall drop sweet wine, and all the hills shall melt.

This idea of the mountains dropping sweet wine and the hills melting is talking about a restoration of the land. When the mountains first melted, they became rocky and barren. Now, they will flow with wine. They will be lush and bountiful once again.

Amos 9:14, 15
And I will bring again the captivity of my people of Israel, and they shall build the waste cities, and inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, and drink the wine thereof; they shall also make gardens, and eat the fruit of them. And I will plant them upon their land, and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them, saith the LORD thy God.

The Book of Amos ends with a promise that the kingdom will be restored, the heathen subdued, agricultural blessings renewed, and security guaranteed for the people of Israel. It's a promise of God's abundant blessing in the kingdom that is yet to come.

ISRAEL AND THE CHURCH

A Topical Study of AMOS 9:11–15

Fire has contrasting qualities. It can be a blessing or a burden. Depending on where you're standing, it can either warm you up or burn you out. When Amos came on the scene, he warned the people in a fiery way about the coming punishment upon Israel. In fact, no other prophet spoke of fire more than Amos. But as his prophecy unfolds, we see a change of tone. After warning the people of the coming punishment upon Israel, he warms them with the coming promise for Israel. He tells them there are special benefits and blessings that will come upon them very definitely.

In verses 11 through 15, he talks about a restoration of the Davidic covenant—that David's house will be raised again. And indeed it will. When Jesus Christ, the Son of David, comes back and rules and reigns from Jerusalem, the house of David will be restored and resurrected again. He also talks about the subduing of the heathen, abundant crops, and guaranteed security.

We live in a day when we are beginning to see the fulfillment of these promises to Israel. At the same time, a controversy has arisen concerning Israel because the Christians are confused about how Israel and the church relate to each other. Presently, there are four understandings concerning this question . . .

Some say Israel has been replaced by the church. That is, when the Jewish people rejected Messiah, the Lord forsook Israel and decided to start all over again with the church. Therefore, they say, all of the promises concerning Israel apply only to the church.

Others say that Israel is synonymous with the church. That is, all of the Old Testament promises and prophecies concerning Israel materially and nationally are fulfilled in the church spiritually and eternally.

Still others maintain that Israel is equal to the church. That is, devout Jews who practice Judaism will make it into the kingdom of God just as devout Christians will because they are all His children.

But I believe the Word of God teaches clearly that Israel is distinct from the church. And I believe this understanding is important not only prophetically but practically.

One of the key components of Bible interpretation is the primary passage. That is, whenever you're looking at any given subject, rather than taking an isolated verse from here or a small phrase from there, go to the primary passage where a subject is addressed. From that, you'll gain understanding concerning the subject. False teachers don't do this. Instead, they take a verse from here, a phrase from there, and they build an erroneous belief system that ignores the primary passage the Bible presents.

The primary passage that clearly addresses the relationship the church has to Israel is seen in Romans 9, 10, 11.

It was said in antiquity that all roads lead to Rome, for Rome was the center of the world politically, economically, militarily, and culturally. Spiritually, the same is still true, for all theological roads lead to the Book of Romans because it clarifies every important truth in the Bible.

- Romans 1 through 8 deals with the principles of salvation.
- In chapters 12 through 15, we see the practical aspects of salvation.
- But in the middle, in chapters 9 through 11, Paul talks about Israel.

Why? Some commentators think it's just a parenthetical insert. Not true! Romans 9 through 11 is essential to the flow of the Book of Romans because Romans 8, the climax of the principles of salvation says there is no more condemnation, that all things work together for good, that nothing shall separate us from the love of God in Christ Jesus. As wonderful as these promises are, however, a question comes to mind. That is, "Will God keep His promises? After all, didn't He make promises to Israel that went unfulfilled?"

Thus, in between the principles of salvation and the practical aspects of salvation, Paul talks about the problem of salvation. That is, what do you do with the Jews in light of this new plan of salvation? Paul brilliantly develops his argument. In chapter 9, he talks about God's past dealings with Israel, revealing God's sovereignty. In chapter 10, he talks about God's present dealings with Israel, revealing God's equality. In chapter 11, he talks about God’s promised dealings with Israel, revealing God’s integrity. And in each one, God reveals something essential concerning His character.

God's Past Dealings with Israel

Of all the people of the world, Israel was adopted by God. When Abraham was in Ur worshiping the moon goddess, God said, "I'm going to pull that man out of the Babylonian religious system, adopt him, and make him a nation. And the nation that comes from him will show the world what it means to walk with Me."

As God's chosen people, the nation of Israel was the recipient of unique blessings. First, they actually saw the visible, tangible presence of God's glory in a pillar of fire by night, a cloud by day, and the shekinah glory that filled the temple. Second, they had the covenants—the agreements God established with them. Third, the Law was given to them to show them how to live. People used to laugh at the Jews for believing in the principles of the Law. "Crazy Jews," they would say. "They don't even eat pork"—even as the Gentiles were dying of trichinosis right and left. God knew what He was saying. He knew humanity would not have an understanding of trichinosis or the danger of poisonous shellfish for centuries, so in His Law, He gave minute instructions about how He wanted His people to live—for their own good. Fourth, God's people were given the privilege of serving God. But above all, they were given Jesus.

After talking about the gifts of God to Israel in Romans 9:1 through 5, Paul talks about the grace of God upon Israel in verses 6 through 21. Although Abraham had two sons, God chose to bless only Isaac. Of Isaac's two sons, God chose only Jacob. Is this fair? God is sovereign. He does what He wants for reasons He knows. As we see Jacob's and Esau's lives unfold, we see that, although Jacob wasn't always good, he did have a heart for God. Esau, on the other hand, had such little regard for God that he traded his birthright for a bowl of stew (Genesis 25:32). God chose right. He always does.

The opportunity to be God's people was given to Israel sovereignly, but it was not given exclusively. God would later open the door wider. Yet sadly, although the Gentiles would be included, Israel would miss the opportunity. The Gentiles attained righteousness by faith. The Jews tried to show they were deserving, and missed it entirely.

God's Present Dealings with Israel

Now God no longer deals differently with Jews and Gentiles. Now He deals with Jew, Gentile, black, white, young, old, Californian, Oregonian, redhead, blonde, fat, skinny, tall, short—all people equally. Jesus kept the law perfectly. We can see the fulfillment of the law in Jesus Christ. And He died on the Cross as its ultimate fulfillment. The Law serves simply to point people to Him (Galatians 3:24).

In Romans 10, Christ is revealed as Savior in verses 1 through 4 and received as Savior in verses 5 through 15. Christ is received as Savior when you come to the place where you confess Him as Lord (Romans 10:9, 10). Verses 16 through 21 talk about Christ rejected as Savior. This message was entrusted to the Jews, but they did not receive it. Does that mean there's no hope for them?

God's Promised Dealings with Israel

In Romans 11, we see that God's promises to Israel are still intact. "Look at me," Paul says. "I'm saved. Therefore, God hasn't given up on the Jews. All of His promises to them are still valid." The olive tree is a symbol of Israel. Paul says that, although the natural branches were broken off, the root is still in place. That is, Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob trusted in God rather than in their own works. So God grafted in the Gentiles as branches. But Paul says the natural branches will be grafted in again because God is not through with Israel (Romans 11:23, 24). If the wild branches are bearing fruit—which we, as Gentiles, are—can you imagine how fruitful the natural branches will be once they're grafted back in? The nation will experience revival unlike any that has ever been seen in the history of the world. The Jews are only blind for a specific amount of time. After the church is raptured, Israel will see that Jesus is Lord and all Israel will be saved (Romans 11:26).

"Count on it," Paul says. "The promises to Israel will be fulfilled." Therefore, dear saint, the promises given to you are equally sure. What a glorious God we serve.

Amen.

OBADIAH

Background to Obadiah

Beginning with Hosea and ending with Malachi, the final twelve books of the Old Testament are known as the minor prophets not because of their importance but because of their length. A sermon's strength is not necessarily equivalent to its length. In fact, sometimes the shortest messages can be the most potent and impacting. With a book only twenty-one verses long, although Obadiah is the "minorest" of the minor prophets, he has a major message for us today.

We don't know where Obadiah was born, when he lived, or what his circumstances were. We do know that his name means "servant of the Lord." A servant, of course, is to serve rather than to be noticed. That's what John the Baptist taught us when he said that Jesus must increase but that he himself must decrease (John 3:30). Like John the Baptist, Obadiah had a servant mentality.

Obadiah was sent by the Lord to minister to the Edomites—a very proud people. Approximately 2,000 years before Christ came, God desired to show the world the benefits and blessings that would come to people who walked with Him. So He tapped a man named Abraham—a man who lived in the city of Ur and worshiped the moon—on the shoulder and called him to become an entirely new nation. Abraham's son was named Isaac. Isaac had a son named Jacob. Jacob had a twin brother named Esau, the father of the Edomites. Even before they were born, Jacob and Esau fought in the womb of their mother, Rachel. When Rachel sought the Lord concerning this, He said it was because there were two nations inside of her and that they were already warring with one another (Genesis 25:23).

The Lord sovereignly and wisely chose the younger of the two to continue His line. He rejected Esau because Esau was a carnal man as evidenced by the fact that he sold his birthright for a bowl of pottage, or stew (Genesis 25:33). When Esau left his family's heritage to begin his own society, he married a number of heathen wives and began a nation called the Edomites. Edom means "red"—after the color of the pottage he so desired (Genesis 25:30).

The Edomites lived in an area southeast of Israel, an area in present-day Jordan—a rocky, rugged area. They became a powerful, prolific people and developed three cities: Bozrah, Teman—which was known as a center of knowledge and wisdom in the ancient world—and their capital city of Petra. Because Petra was hidden in the crater of a volcano with only one way in on a narrow mountain pass that was only twelve feet wide in many places, it was thought to be the safest place in the world. Historians tell us it would take only twenty men to defend the city of one million because the Edomites would stand on the cliffs surrounding the city that ranged in height from 200 to 1,000 feet and pelt any intruders with boulders.

As a result, the Edomites were extremely proud and arrogant. So the Lord sent His humble servant, Obadiah, to address them.

He predicted destruction of the Edomites. In verses 17 through 21, we see the promised restoration of the Israelites.

OBADIAH

Obadiah 1
The vision of Obadiah. Thus saith the Lord GOD concerning Edom; We have heard a rumour from the LORD, and an ambassador is sent among the heathen, Arise ye, and let us rise up against her in battle.

In verse 1, we see the Lord sending Obadiah as an ambassador to the heathen nations, telling them they would be stirred up to wage war against the Edomites.

Obadiah 2
Behold, I have made thee small among the heathen: thou art greatly despised.

In verse 2, the Lord's message through Obadiah to Edom was that their doom was imminent.

Obadiah 3, 4
The pride of thine heart hath deceived thee, thou that dwellest in the clefts of the rock, whose habitation is high; that saith in his heart, Who shall bring me down to the ground? Though thou exalt thyself as the eagle, and though thou set thy nest among the stars, thence will I bring thee down, saith the LORD.

Regardless of how invincible they thought they were, the Lord would bring the Edomites down.

Obadiah 5, 6
If thieves came to thee, if robbers by night, (how art thou cut off!) would they not have stolen till they had enough? if the grapegatherers came to thee, would they not leave some grapes?

How are the things of Esau searched out! how are his hidden things sought up!

Because Edom was thought to be impregnable, banks carved in the cliffs of the rock city of Petra were devoted to holding the treasures of her allies. Here, the Lord says, "Every last one of your treasures will be stolen." When Petra was rediscovered in the early 1800s, although the buildings that were carved right out of rock were still intact, not a single item was found within them. Considering Petra had a population of one million, the fact that there wasn't a single artifact left not only fulfills Obadiah's prophecy, but makes it unique in the history of archeology.

Obadiah 7
All the men of thy confederacy have brought thee even to the border: the men that were at peace with thee have deceived thee, and prevailed against thee; they that eat thy bread have laid a wound under thee: there is none understanding in him.

The Edomites were known as very sophisticated diplomats. But they would be double-crossed.

Obadiah 8, 9
Shall I not in that day, saith the LORD, even destroy the wise men out of Edom, and understanding out of the mount of Esau? And thy mighty men, O Teman, shall be dismayed, to the end that every one of the mount of Esau may be cut off by slaughter.

After prophesying that her territory would be subdued, her treasures stolen, and her treaties subverted, here we see Edom's troops and wise men slaughtered. The Edomites were not only known for their military ability but also for their intellectual capability. In the study of ancient cultures of the region, Petra is one of the great unsolved mysteries to this day. Inside the city and all around Edom there was an abundance of agriculture. Yet Edom only received an inch of rainfall a year. How did they irrigate their crops? How could they sustain such a large population? Although archaeologists have uncovered the ruins of their aqueducts and holding systems, exactly how they worked still remains a mystery.

Despite their technical ingenuity, however, judgment was headed their way. What had the Edomites done to cause such heavy judgment against themselves?

Obadiah 10–13
For thy violence against thy brother Jacob shame shall cover thee, and thou shalt be cut off for ever. In the day that thou stoodest on the other side, in the day that the strangers carried away captive his forces, and foreigners entered into his gates, and cast lots upon Jerusalem, even thou wast as one of them. But thou shouldest not have looked on the day of thy brother in the day that he became a stranger; neither shouldest thou have rejoiced over the children of Judah in the day of their destruction; neither shouldest thou have spoken proudly in the day of distress. Thou shouldest not have entered into the gate of my people in the day of their calamity; yea, thou shouldest not have looked on their affliction in the day of their calamity, nor have laid hands on their substance in the day of their calamity;

After seeing their judgment described, here we see why the Edomites' destruction was deserved: they encouraged Israel's foes. When Israel was in trouble—either when the Philistines attacked in 840 B.C. or during the Babylonian invasion of 587 B.C.—rather than stand by Israel, they stood against her, interested only in what they could get as spoil (Psalm 137:7).

Obadiah 14
Neither shouldest thou have stood in the crossway, to cut off those of his that did escape; neither shouldest thou have delivered up those of his that did remain in the day of distress.

Not only did the Edomites encourage Israel's foes but they enslaved Israel's fugitives. That is, they captured and enslaved the Israelites trying to escape destruction when Israel was attacked.

Obadiah 15, 16
For the day of the LORD is near upon all the heathen: as thou hast done, it shall be done unto thee: thy reward shall return upon thine own head. For as ye have drunk upon my holy mountain, so shall all the heathen drink continually, yea, they shall drink, and they shall swallow down, and they shall be as though they had not been.

That which Edom had done to Israel would now befall her. She would be eaten up and swallowed down.

Obadiah 17
But upon mount Zion shall be deliverance, and there shall be holiness; and the house of Jacob shall possess their possessions.

In verse 17, after seeing the predicted destruction of the Edomites, we come to the promised restoration of the Israelites. So much had been given to them but they weren't enjoying it. The time is coming, however, when they shall truly possess their possessions, when they will understand and enjoy the blessings God has given them.

Obadiah 18
And the house of Jacob shall be a fire, and the house of Joseph a flame, and the house of Esau for stubble, and they shall kindle in them, and devour them; and there shall not be any remaining of the house of Esau; for the LORD hath spoken it.

When the Lord comes back, all shall be Israel's that was intended to be hers. The Edomites, however, would be burned as stubble. Centuries after this prophecy was given, in A.D. 70, when the Romans came into the area, due to guerilla warfare and disease, the Edomites could not effectively resist them. But when they heard there were rebels in Jerusalem standing up to the Romans, the 20,000 remaining Edomites joined them and holed up in the temple. When Titus began to burn Jerusalem and destroy the temple, history tells us that 8,500 Edomites were burned alive with it. The remaining 12,000 Edomites were slaughtered in the city or outside the city gates. That is why, although you might live next to an Iranian, Ethiopian, or Egyptian, you'll never meet an Edomite. They were permanently destroyed.

Obadiah 19, 20
And they of the south shall possess the mount of Esau; and they of the plain the Philistines: and they shall possess the fields of Ephraim, and the fields of Samaria: and Benjamin shall possess Gilead. And the captivity of this host of the children of Israel shall possess that of the Canaanites, even unto Zarephath; and the captivity of Jerusalem, which is in Sepharad, shall possess the cities of the south.

Verses 19 and 20 list the territory Israel will enjoy when the Lord comes back—when she will at last truly possess her possessions.

Obadiah 21
And saviours shall come up on mount Zion to judge the mount of Esau; and the kingdom shall be the LORD's.

Obadiah's prophecy ends by saying that, although Edom will be destroyed, Israel will go on.

Ethnically, this is a reminder to all people at all times that God's hand is on the Jews in a very special way. In the Book of Genesis, God declared that those who blessed them would be blessed while those who cursed them would themselves be cursed (12:3). Throughout history, nations that bless Israel have experienced blessings while nations that have come against her have ultimately experienced hardship or destruction altogether.

But, because Edom represents so much of the tendency within our own society, I believe Obadiah also says something to us personally. That is, we feel just as safe and secure in our money market certificates, stock portfolios, pensions, and savings accounts as the Edomites did in their rock city. We think we're secure because we're a democracy, because we are masters of technology and have a strong military.

These six things doth the LORD hate: yea, seven are an abomination unto him: A proud look, a lying tongue, and hands that shed innocent > blood, An heart that deviseth wicked imaginations, feet that be swift in running to mischief, A false witness that speaketh lies, and he that soweth discord among brethren.

> Proverbs 6:16–19

We hate child molesters, murderers, and kidnappers. But God says number one on the list of things He hates is pride.

Why? I suggest two reasons . . .

First, pride makes people independent from Him. Proud people don't seek God because they are secure in what they have. Why is God grieved when we are independent from Him? Because He knows we're missing all the blessings He has for us. When a person experiences tragedy or difficulty, setback or reversal, he prays. He comes to prayer meetings. He has morning devotions. He asks people to pray for him. He prays constantly because he's desperate. But when he's proud, he doesn't pray. And in so doing, he cuts himself off from that which God wants to do for him. So it is a loving Father who says, "If My children are proud, they won't pray. And if they don't pray, they won't receive all that I want to give them and do for them."

Second, pride makes us insensitive to others.

> Only by pride cometh contention: but with the well advised is wisdom.
> Proverbs 13:10

If you're fighting with your wife, at odds with your neighbor, or having problems with your boss it is always an issue of pride because pride is the root of all contention.

> Pride goeth before destruction, and an haughty spirit before a fall.
> Proverbs 16:18

Just like the Edomites, we will go down if there is pride in our hearts because we will become independent from God and insensitive to others.

What's the solution? The first is confession of sin. I find that daily, constantly, and specifically confessing my sin to God keeps me in a place of constant humility. “Lord, I wasn’t listening to that person. I over-reacted to that situation. I ignored that need.” You will not walk around with a puffed up head or puffed out chest if you are constantly confessing your sin. That’s why God desires it.

> Confess your faults one to another, and pray one for another, that ye may be healed. . . .
> James 5:16 (a)

We are to humble ourselves not only in the sight of God but to confess our faults one to another because there’s nothing that will keep us humble like confessing our faults to a close brother or sister. Everyone has problems, struggles, and difficulties. We’re all in this together.

The pathway to humility winds through confession. The second solution to pride lies in humiliation.

> I knew a man in Christ above fourteen years ago, (whether in the body, I cannot tell; or whether out of the body, I cannot tell: God knoweth;) such an one caught up to the third heaven. And lest I should be exalted above measure through the abundance of the revelations, there was given to me a thorn in the flesh, the messenger of Satan to buffet me, lest I should be exalted above measure. For this thing I besought the Lord thrice, that it might depart from me. And he said unto me, My grace is sufficient for thee: for my strength is made perfect in weakness. Most gladly therefore will I rather glory in my infirmities, that the power of Christ may rest upon me.
> 2 Corinthians 12:2, 7–9

Paul realized that, because he had been given so much revelation, God saw there was a possibility of pride so He allowed a messenger of Satan to buffet him. Some think this refers to a demon. Others think it refers to a temptation that taunted him. Others say it was an eye disease. Still others say there was a group of people who sought to undermine Paul through innuendo and rumor wherever he went.

Whatever it was, Paul prayed three times to be delivered from it before he finally realized that it was when he was weak that he was actually strong. When he was humiliated, he knew he had to depend upon God. So he embraced the humiliation.

Is there someone who humiliates you constantly? Embrace him. Is there a temptation that taunts you incessantly? Are you plagued by a physical infirmity? Accept what the Lord is doing through it because it's keeping you humble. This will keep you tender toward people and dependent upon the Lord. Humility and brokenness are of utmost importance in His sight. Therefore, He will do whatever it takes to keep His children in that position.

May He keep us ever dependent upon Him lest we become like Edom and are brought down tragically. May we find our security not in our own plans and profits but in Him alone so that we, like Israel, can possess all He has for us.

JONAH

Background to Jonah

Unlike that of any other prophet, Jonah's message was singular and only eight words long: Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown (3:4). Thus, unlike any other prophetic book, the Book of Jonah is not a series of messages. Rather, it is a two-act drama. In Act 1, chapters 1 and 2, the setting is the great sea—the Mediterranean. The plot is Jonah forsaking his mission. In Act 2, chapters 3 and 4, the setting is the great city—Nineveh. The plot is Jonah fulfilling his mission. The star of the cast is God. Jonah is the supporting actor and there is a cameo appearance by the great fish.

In an effort to make the Book of Jonah easier to "swallow," critics and pseudo-scholars have suggested different ways it should be interpreted. Some say it should be interpreted as a myth—that it's an interesting story from antiquity, but not to be taken literally. Like Moby Dick or Robinson Crusoe, it's fascinating, but fiction nonetheless. Others say it should be interpreted allegorically. That is, they suggest that Jonah represents the Jews; the great sea depicts the nations of the world; and the great fish symbolizes the Babylonians who held the Jews captive for seventy years before freeing them to return to their homeland.

But I believe the Book of Jonah should be interpreted historically. Neither myth nor allegory, it speaks of an actual event. Why do I say this? First, because Jonah is referred to in the Old Testament. Jonah is referred to in 2 Kings 14:25 as an actual person, named as a prophet, and his hometown identified. Second, Jonah is referred to in the New Testament. In Matthew 12 and 16, by referring to Jonah by name, Jesus verified and validated this Old Testament account.

Satan seems to have a special hatred for and a determination to undermine the authenticity of the Books of Genesis, Jonah, and Daniel. Why? I believe it is because Genesis speaks of the Incarnation of Christ, Jonah of the Resurrection of Christ, and Daniel of the Second Coming of Christ. In the opening pages of the very first book of the Bible, we see the Proto Evangelicum—the first mention of the gospel message. Jesus Himself identified this story as a picture of His burial and Resurrection (Matthew 12:38, 39). In Daniel 7, Jesus is seen ruling over the earth and destroying the enemy following His Second Coming.

But just as Satan seeks to stamp out the authority of these books, I find it interesting that Jesus seemed to go out of His way to put His stamp of approval on them. In Matthew 19:4, Jesus used the Genesis account of the creation of Adam and Eve as a cornerstone for His teaching on marriage. In Matthew chapters 12 and 16, as well as in Luke 11, Jesus referred to Jonah in response to the clamor of the people for a sign. In Matthew 24, Jesus spoke of Daniel by name and based His end-time teaching on the second chapter of Daniel's book.

In chapter 1 of Jonah, we'll see God's patience when Jonah protested. In chapter 2, we'll see God's pardon when Jonah prayed. In chapter 3, we'll see God's power when Jonah preached. In chapter 4, we'll see God's pity when Jonah pouted. Some find this book "fishy." Others find it hard to "swallow." But I pray you will get "hooked" on this book, a whale of a tale about a rebellious prophet, a wicked city, and the God of the second chance.

Jonah 1:1 (a)
Now the word of the LORD came unto Jonah . . .

Jonah means "Dove." Throughout Scripture, the dove is the symbol of the Holy Spirit. Therefore, it is an appropriate name for this one whose anointed ministry ushered in the greatest revival in world history.

Jonah 1:1 (b), 2
. . . the son of Amittai, saying, Arise, go to Nineveh, that great city, and cry against it; for their wickedness is come up before me.

Located on the eastern side of the Tigris River, Nineveh, the capital city of Assyria, was one of the greatest cities of antiquity. With 1,200 two-hundred-feet high towers and surrounded by a hundred-feet-high wall whose foundation was made of polished stone and of such breadth that three chariots could drive abreast atop it, Nineveh was magnificent to behold. Sixty miles in circumference, enough corn could grow inside the walls to feed the population of 600,000. Within the city were magnificent palaces, including courtyards covering more than a hundred acres. The roof of the king's palace was supported by beams of cedar resting on columns of cypress and inlaid and strengthened with bands of sculptured silver and gold. Hanging gardens filled the city with rich plants and rare animals. Temples, palaces, libraries, and arsenals abounded to adorn and enrich the city beyond belief. And all was built by the labor of foreign slaves.

It was an awesome city—but it was also an awful city. To this day, Assyrians are known as the cruelest, most sadistic people in world history. Furniture made of human skin and pyramids constructed of human skulls attest to their atrocities. Thus, telling Jonah to go to Nineveh would have been comparable to telling him to go to Berlin in the 1940s.

But Jonah rose up to flee unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD . . .

Jonah fled from the presence of the Lord out of fear. However, it was not the cruelty of the Ninevites Jonah feared—but the mercy of God toward them (Jonah 3:2). You see, Jonah knew that if the Ninevites turned to God, He would forgive them—and the last thing Jonah wanted was to see the Ninevites blessed. He wanted to see them blasted.

Jonah put patriotism above evangelism. But before we are too quick to judge, we must search our own hearts. What if the Lord said to you, "I have a mission for you: Go to the most anti-American country and give your life to them in My name"? If you're like Jonah—or me—you would have a very hard time with that request. But our Father says, "I love this world—including all of those who shout, 'Death to the Great White Satan America.' You may not understand them, but I do."

We have to be careful of a "Moral Majority mentality" that says, "America is always right and everyone else needs to see things our way." We're part of something bigger than the USA, gang. We're part of the kingdom of God; and our King is merciful, compassionate, slow to anger, and desirous that all be saved (2 Peter 3:9).

Jonah 1:3 (b)
. . . and went down to Joppa . . .

Jonah went down to Joppa. This is the first of many downward steps he'll take.

Jonah 1:3 (c)
. . . and he found a ship going to Tarshish . . .

Nineveh is to the northeast of Israel. Joppa is to the west. Therefore, Jonah sailed in the opposite direction of the Lord's command. Whenever you're running in the opposite direction from the presence or call of the Lord, you can be sure that Satan will have a ship all ready for you to set sail.

Jonah 1:3 (d)
. . . so he paid the fare thereof . . .

Jonah paid for his excursion in rebellion. Anytime you rebel, know this: The ship will be there waiting, but you'll pay a heavy price because, although sin is exciting initially, it's expensive eventually (Hebrews 11:25).

Jonah 1:3 (e)
. . . and went down into it . . .

Jonah went down into the boat and he's going to go down even lower before he's through. If you feel "down" today, could it be because, like Jonah, you're ignoring or rebelling against something the Lord has told you to do?

Jonah 1:3 (f), 4
. . . to go with them unto Tarshish from the presence of the LORD. But the LORD sent out a great wind into the sea, and there was a mighty tempest in the sea, so that the ship was like to be broken.

God sent a storm.

> For he commandeth, and raiseth the stormy wind, which lifteth up the waves thereof. They mount up to the heaven, they go down again to the depths: their soul is melted because of trouble. They reel to and fro, and stagger like a drunken man, and are at their wits' end. Then they cry unto the LORD in their trouble, and he bringeth them out of their distresses.
> Psalm 107:25–28

Sometimes God sends storms of severity in order to bring His children into port safely. Such was Jonah's case. This storm was not God's punishment of Jonah, but showed His patience with Jonah. You see, had Jonah listened, through the howling wind of the storm, he could have heard God's voice saying, "I'm not going to let you go, Jonah. I love you too much. So blow, wind, blow."

Not every storm, however, is the result of rebellion. Jesus sent His disciples into storms on more than one occasion not because they were sinning, but because they had need of strengthening—not to destroy them, but to develop them (Matthew 14:24; Luke 8:23).

Some of the most beautiful trees I've ever seen are the cypress trees of the Monterey Peninsula. The longer the wind blows these trees, the more shapely and beautiful they become. The stronger the wind blows, the deeper their roots go. Thus, the cypress become incredibly sturdy and very lovely because of the constant wind upon them.

The same is true of us. God's stormy winds upon our lives are meant not to destroy us, but to develop us. If you feel in the midst of a storm even now, take hope, dear saint. God is either using it to bring you back to His safe port or He's using it to make your life into a beautiful trophy of His grace.

Jonah 1:5 (a)
Then the mariners were afraid, and cried every man unto his god . . .

Every man—even the most seasoned sailor—has someone or something he cries to when the storm gets brutal.

Jonah 1:5 (b)
. . . and cast forth the wares that were in the ship into the sea, to lighten it of them. But Jonah was gone down into the sides of the ship . . .

The sailors began throwing their possessions and treasures overboard—and Jonah went deeper still.

Jonah 1:5 (c)
. . . and he lay, and was fast asleep.

When Jesus was in a boat on the Sea of Galilee, so sound was His sleep that His disciples had to waken Him during a storm (Mark 4:38). Jesus could sleep through the storm in peace, knowing that His Father was in control. This was not the case with Jonah. He was asleep not because he was at peace with God but because he was rebelling against Him. If you've ever been so weighed down by sin that you just wanted to pull the blankets over your head and fall asleep, hoping everything would somehow be okay when you woke up, you know how Jonah felt.

Jonah 1:6, 7
So the shipmaster came to him, and said unto him, What meanest thou, O sleeper? arise, call upon thy God, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not. And they said every one to his fellow, Come, and let us cast lots, that we may know for whose cause this evil is upon us. So they cast lots, and the lot fell upon Jonah.

The sailors drew straws to determine whose fault the storm was—and Jonah got the short one.

Jonah 1:8
Then said they unto him, Tell us, we pray thee, for whose cause this evil is upon us; What is thine occupation? and whence comest thou? what is thy country? and of what people art thou?

"Who are you?" the sailors asked Jonah. "And what have you done to deserve this kind of punishment?"

Jonah 1:9, 10
And he said unto them, I am an Hebrew; and I fear the LORD, the God of heaven, which hath made the sea and the dry land. Then were the men exceedingly afraid, and said unto him, Why hast thou done this? For the men knew that he fled from the presence of the LORD, because he had told them.

"The God who made the sea and the dry land told me to go to Nineveh," Jonah explained. "But there's no way I'm going because I hate the Assyrians." Jonah mistakenly thought he could run away in rebellion and hide out in the hold of a heathen ship, where no one would be the wiser.

Crew members of an English ship sailing around Cape Horn in the 1870s mutinied against their captain and shot him in the head before throwing him overboard, where his body landed on an ice shelf. Forty years later, off the coast of central Chile, an iceberg was spotted. To keep it from impeding the passage of sailing vessels in the area, a couple of men sailed out to blow it up, only to discover the frozen body of a man encased within. After chipping away the top layer of ice, the body was identified as that of Frank Shaw, a sea captain who had disappeared. Thus, the mutineers, who, for forty years thought they had gotten away with their crime, were hung on the gallows in London.

Be sure your sin will find you out (Numbers 32:23). You never know what iceberg's going to float in!

Jonah 1:11, 12
Then said they unto him, What shall we do unto thee, that the sea may be calm unto us? for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous. And he said unto them, Take me up, and cast me forth into the sea; so shall the sea be calm unto you: for I know that for my sake this great tempest is upon you.

Jonah said, "Since my sin is the reason you guys are getting seasick, throw me instead of your treasures overboard and the storm will stop."

The problem with sin and rebellion is this: Innocent people get tossed around in our storms. You might say with great bravado, "I'll pay the fare. I'll pay the price for my sin"—but that doesn't take into account the fact that others will get beat up and go down in the process. Our families, friends, and coworkers often pay the price for our own foolishness and rebellion.

Jonah 1:13 (a)
Nevertheless the men rowed hard to bring it to the land . . .

The sailors fought harder against the storm. Knowing Jonah was the prophet of a very powerful God, they feared to touch him. It is interesting that these unbelieving, heathen sailors had more respect for the omnipotence of God than did His own prophet.

Jonah 1:13 (b)–16
. . . but they could not: for the sea wrought, and was tempestuous against them. Wherefore they cried unto the LORD, and said, We beseech thee, O LORD, we beseech thee, let us not perish for this man's life, and lay not upon us innocent blood: for thou, O LORD, hast done as it pleased thee. So they took up Jonah, and cast him forth into the sea: and the sea ceased from her raging. Then the men feared the LORD exceedingly, and offered a sacrifice unto the LORD, and made vows.

These scared, salty sailors were the first souls saved in a revival that would become the greatest in history.

Jonah 1:17 (a)
Now the LORD had prepared a great fish . . .

The Hebrew word dag, here translated "fish," can also mean "creature" or "whale."

Jonah 1:17 (b)
. . . to swallow up Jonah. . . .

If people would do a little more historical research, they wouldn't struggle intellectually with Jonah being in the belly of a great fish or even a whale. The following account is by M. DeParvelle, French scientist and editor of the Journal Des Debats . . .

In February, 1891, the whaling ship, Star of the East, was in the vicinity of the Falkland Islands when the lookout sighted a large sperm whale three miles away. Two boats were lowered and in short time, one of the harpooners was able to spear the creature. The second boat also attacked the whale but was upset by a lash of its tail, causing the crew to fall into the sea. One of them drowned but the other, James Bartley, simply disappeared without a trace.

After the whale was killed, the crew set to work with axes and spades to remove the blubber. They worked all day and into the night. The next day, they attached tackle to the stomach in order to hoist it to the deck. In so doing, the sailors were startled by something in the stomach which gave spasmodic signs of life. Inside was found the missing sailor, doubled up and unconscious. He was laid on the deck and treated to a bath of sea water, which soon revived him.

At the end of the third week, he had entirely recovered from the shock and resumed his duties on the ship. His face, neck, and hands were bleached to a deadly whiteness and he took on the appearance of parchment. Bartley affirms that he probably would have lived inside his house of flesh until he starved, for he lost his senses through fright and not through lack of air.

This is only one of several records wherein non-Christian, unbelieving historians and scientists have recorded incidents of men surviving in whales.

Jonah 1:17 (c)
. . . And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.

Jonah was in a tight spot, no doubt about it! Tight spots are interesting because they will either make us bitter or make us better. The boiling water that hardens the egg softens the potato.

In chapter 2, Jonah will come out better—not bitter—because his tight spot will bring him to a place of prayer.

A WHALE OF A SIGN

A Topical Study of JONAH 1:17

Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it . . .

Matthew 12:38, 39 (a)

The skeptics had gathered around our Lord once again, asking for a sign. Although Jesus could have easily given them one, He chose instead to look those boys in the eye and say, "An evil and adulterous"—or a physical and material—"generation seeks after a sign." He said this because He knew the tendency of skeptic and saint alike to become so confined to the realm of the physical that there is no room for the reality of the spiritual.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore said unto him, We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe.

John 20:24, 25

Eight days later, Jesus answered Thomas, saying,

Thomas, because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed.

John 20:29

Blessed are they that have not seen and yet believe. Who is the blessed person, the happy person? The one who lives in the spiritual rather than the material arena.

Just as swimmers bind their legs together to develop their stroke, the Lord wants to develop the "stroke" of our faith by binding the "kick" of our physical senses. "Learn to live in the arena of the unseen," He says to us. "Learn to walk by faith rather than by sight. The material world is doomed to disappear. I'm grooming you for eternity."

Jesus did not comply with the demand of the skeptics for the type of sign they had in mind. It wasn't because their request was too hard for the One who had fed 5,000 with a few loaves and fishes, walked on water, and calmed a storm. Their request was not too big. It was too small—for the sign Jesus promised was bigger than anything they could have imagined.

"There is one sign I will give," Jesus said, "to you and to everyone throughout history. It is the sign of the prophet Jonah—for just as Jonah was in the belly of the whale for three days and three nights before he appeared again, so too, for three days and three nights, I will be in the heart of the earth" (see Matthew 12:39, 40).

Because the Resurrection was the one and only sign Jesus promised, I would like to share with you three reasons why it is the basis of our belief and the foundation of our faith.

The Resurrection Is Authentication of Who Jesus Was

I remember talking to a man in San Diego who told me that he was the Messiah for our generation. His goal was twofold: to save San Diego and to save the whales.

"How can I know you are really God?" I asked.

"You'll hear of my death very soon," he said. "But after I die, I will resurrect from the dead and make myself known to men."

That was fifteen years ago. I'm still waiting.

There is only One who rose from the dead, which is why the Resurrection validates Jesus as unique among men.

"Yeah," you say, "but did He really rise from the dead? I heard He didn't die at all—that one of His disciples disguised himself as a Roman soldier, took a sponge filled with some sort of knock-out drug, and held it up to Jesus on the tip of a spear as He hung on the Cross. Then, after three days, Jesus came to, claiming He had risen from the dead."

If you believe that a man could endure a beating with the flagellum, have his beard plucked out, be nailed to a cross, have a spear stuck in his side, be placed in a tomb without fresh air, food, or water for three days and three nights then suddenly pop up, push away a three-ton stone, take on a hundred Roman soldiers, and walk around, saying, "I've resurrected" you are a person of remarkable faith!

"Well, maybe He died," you say. "But did He really rise from the dead? Maybe the Jewish leaders took His body just to bug the believers."

That is also impossible for me to believe. After all, the Jews considered Christianity to be a blasphemous and heretical doctrine. Producing the body of Jesus would have put an end to it forever.

"Well," you suggest, "maybe the Romans took His body."

The Romans? History tells us that not only did Christianity divide the Roman Empire but that it ushered in its eventual demise. The Romans could have saved their empire and saved themselves the trouble of killing millions of Christians simply by producing the body of Jesus.

“Well,” you wonder, “maybe Mary and the other women went to the wrong tomb on Easter morning.”

Do you mean to say that no one hearing the women’s story would have investigated it thoroughly to see if, in their grief, the women had become confused and mistaken?

“Well,” you theorized, “maybe, wanting to perpetuate the teaching of their leader and to establish His place in history, the disciples stole the body.”

History and human nature say otherwise. Peter was crucified upside down. John was first boiled in oil and then left to die on the island of Patmos. James was sawn in half lengthwise. Thomas was speared in the back. Andrew’s brains were beaten out with a club. To a man, the disciples —many seeing their wives and children tortured—died violent, brutal deaths rather than deny that Jesus Christ had risen from the dead. To believe that any group of men would endure the ravaging of their families and the torture of their own bodies in order to uphold what they know to be a lie is beyond the limits of credibility.

Any thinking person who explores the question honestly and with intellectual integrity must conclude that Jesus did indeed rise from the dead.

The Resurrection Is Validation of What Jesus Does

> But if we walk in the light, as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another, and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all sin. . . . And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.
> 1 John 1:7, 2:1 (b), 2

What does "propitiation" mean? It means "satisfaction."

In other words, according to John, Jesus' death satisfied the demands of a holy God who said that sin must be punished. Jesus was the propitiation, the satisfaction. The question is: Did it work? Did God look at the death of Jesus Christ and say, "Yes. That will do. Jon's sins are now forgiven"? Did the blood truly take away my sins?

I could go through the actions of writing you a million-dollar check, it would mean nothing if I didn't have the funds to back it up. Jesus claimed to be dying for our sins, but did His death "take?" Did it really satisfy the demands of a holy God who said, "The soul that sinneth, it shall die" (Ezekiel 18:4)?

Yes. The Resurrection proves it. It's the validation of what Jesus does. His blood does indeed cleanse us. It is valid. It "took." It works! "This Jesus hath God raised up" (Acts 2:32)—validating what He did on the Cross and what He continues to do in our lives.

The Resurrection Is Exhilaration for Those Jesus Loves

On Easter Sunday, the women who discovered the empty tomb were excited, the disciples were elated, and all who saw Jesus were exhilarated. Why? It was not because they said, "Theologically, this is the verification and the validation of His work on the Cross and, apologetically, this is the authentication of who He is."

No, these people were not thinking in terms of theology. They were simply aware that Jesus, their Lord, had risen; that Jesus, their Friend, was back.

"My Friend is back!" Peter must have said—"the One who healed my mother-in-law, taught me to walk on water, and paid my temple tax with a coin from a fish's mouth."

"Our Friend is back!" the disciples must have echoed—"the One who calmed storms, fed multitudes, and loved sinners."

"I will never leave you. I will never forsake you," He said. "And I will send you another Comforter—the same kind of Person I am. He will be with you always—even to the ends of the earth" (Matthew 28:20; John 14:16).

So it is what we can say, "Our Friend is here! His Spirit lives in our hearts."

When I'm hungry emotionally, spiritually, or physically—He's here to satisfy me and to supply all my needs according to His riches. When I go through storms and feel like my boat is about to sink, it's Jesus, the living Lord, who walks out and rescues me. When sickness strikes my family, when challenges and difficulties surround me, it's Jesus who comes in, takes me by the hand, and lifts me up.

The Resurrection is authentication of who Jesus is, validation of what He does, and exhilaration for those He loves. Truly, it's a whale of a sign—the only sign we need.

Jonah 2:1

2 Then Jonah prayed unto the LORD his God out of the fish's belly,

Jonah didn't pray the minute he was swallowed. Three days and three nights passed before he prayed. Why do you suppose he waited so long? I suggest it was for the same reason we do.

When we're in a place where we know we have rebelled against the will of the Lord and we're in a tight spot because of it, we think, "No doubt I have blown it so badly and grieved God so deeply that He won't listen to anything I say. Therefore, why pray? If I were God, I wouldn't listen to me, either."

We have the mistaken idea that God hears the prayers of "good people" but turns a deaf ear to those who are in a place of rebelliousness or weakness.

So often I mistakenly think my relationship with God is based upon the subtle supposition that if I'm really "good"—if I'm reading my Bible, going to church, and praying a lot—God will hear my prayers. But if I'm not, then He's not interested. But that's just not true—for, as Jonah is about to experience, God is gracious and merciful, kind and compassionate, ready to forgive and eager to respond to His children no matter where they're at or why they're there.

Jonah 2:2

And said, I cried by reason of mine affliction unto the LORD, and he heard me; out of the belly of hell cried I, and thou heardest my voice.

Seaweed wrapped around his head, fish slapping him in the face, the temperature a stifling 98.6 (if it was indeed a whale), Jonah felt as though he was in hell itself. He had gone down to Joppa, down to the ship, down inside the ship, down in the belly of the whale—down into hell itself. At last he called out to the Lord. And the Lord heard his cry.

Jonah 2:3–9

For thou hadst cast me into the deep, in the midst of the seas; and the floods compassed me about: all thy billows and thy waves passed over me. Then I said, I am cast out of thy sight; yet I will look again toward thy holy temple. The waters compassed me about, even to the soul: the depth closed me round about, the weeds were wrapped about my head. I went down to the bottoms of the mountains; the earth with her bars was about me for ever: yet hast thou brought up my life from corruption, O LORD my God. When my soul fainted within me I remembered the LORD: and my prayer came in unto thee, into thine holy temple. They that observe lying vanities forsake their own mercy. But I will sacrifice unto thee with the voice of thanksgiving; I will pay that that I have vowed. Salvation is of the LORD.

Jonah had no idea what would happen next. He was just glad that, after three days and three nights in the belly of the great fish, he sensed the presence of the Lord.

Jonah 2:10
And the LORD spake unto the fish, and it vomited out Jonah upon the dry land.

The whale suddenly felt the "urge to regurge," and Jonah was deposited on the beach. So, if you feel that nothing is working out with your job, your relationships or your family; if you feel that your life is going nowhere, that nothing is making sense, take heart—for even when we think nothing is working out, God has promised that it's all working out (Romans 8:28). You see, while Jonah felt forsaken and forgotten, blinded and in the dark—for three days and three nights when he thought his life was going nowhere—the whale was moving.

Where was it going? It was swimming from somewhere out in the middle of the Mediterranean off the coast of Spain back to the place where God had wanted Jonah all along. Jonah didn't have a clue that anything was happening until suddenly he was on the beach at Assyria.

The same is true for you. If you call out to the Lord and say, "Lord, I need You," you'll find that eventually you'll be right where you were supposed to be—that, through the days and nights when you thought nothing was happening, unbeknownst to you, the whale was moving.

3 Jonah 3:1 (a)
And the word of the LORD came unto Jonah the second time . . .

Our God is the God of the second chance.

I remember reading that General Motors Corporation only gave one chance. That is, according to the article, candidates for executive positions were taken out to lunch where their every move was scrutinized—down to the seasoning of their soup. If they salted their soup before tasting it, they supposedly demonstrated the behavior of one who makes decisions before having the facts. One false move like that, and they'd be out!

I'm thankful God isn't like that because we would all be dust, curtains, toast, finished. We wouldn't have a chance! And, lest you think Jonah was an exceptional case, please note that giving people a second chance is God's usual mode of operation.

Abraham denied that Sarah was his wife and watched her carried off to kings' harems—not once, but on two separate occasions (Genesis 12:15; 20:2). Moses murdered a man and tried to cover his sin by burying the body in the desert sand (Exodus 2:12). David committed adultery and subsequently murdered Uriah (2 Samuel 11:4, 15). Peter denied Jesus by the enemy's fire (Matthew 26:74). John Mark left Paul and Barnabas stranded when he ran home to Jerusalem (Acts 13:13). Yet in each of these cases, God used these men after their mistakes.

Why? Because giving people a second chance is God's delight. God loves to use the foolish things of the world to confound the wise and the weak things to confound the strong (1 Corinthians 1:27).

I remember taking my daughter, Jessie, for a walk down the Rogue River. As we walked along the shore, we noticed four or five fishermen standing on the rocks out in the water. They had on fishing hats, vests, and waders. They had fancy fishing poles with shiny reels and tackle boxes with sonic lures.

"Have you caught anything?" I called.

"Not yet."

Just then, Jessie, who was about seven years old at the time, said, "Daddy, can I fish?"

"Honey, we don't have a pole," I said.

Not easily deterred, Jessie reached down, grabbed a stick and said, "Here, Daddy. Here's a pole."

"But, Jess, we don't have any line," I said.

Five minutes later, after digging through the rocks and finding a few feet of used line with a rusty hook on the end, she tugged on the pants leg of one of the fishermen and said, "Could I borrow some bait, please?"

"Sure," the amused fisherman said as he handed her a fish egg.

With a big smile on her face, Jessie dropped her line in, and, within ninety seconds, pulled her stick-pole, recycled line, rusty hook, borrowed egg—and shiny trout out of the water.

That's just like us! The Lord loves to use children like us—with our little poles and rusty hooks—to do His work. In Ephesians 2:4–7, Paul says that God, who is rich in mercy, saved us so that in the ages to come, we might be a testimony to the glory of His grace.

You see, when the angels see you and me ruling and reigning with our Lord in heaven, they'll marvel, saying, "Truly the Lord is full of grace! Look at the people He's chosen. Look at the folks He's rewarded. Look how He's using them!"

God loves to use people like you and me—with flaws, failures, and shortcomings. And here, He's about to use Jonah who, only three days earlier, had been sailing in the opposite direction from where he should have been going.

But maybe you read this account and say, "That's nice that God gave Jonah a second chance. But what if Jonah would have blown it a third time or an eighth time? I understand that the Lord gives second chances—but what about a tenth chance or a hundredth chance? What would have happened if, after being deposited on the beach, Jonah went to the nearest port and bought another ticket to sail as far away from Nineveh as he could get?

I think the Lord would have had another whale for him, another situation all set up to bring him back again—a third, a fourth, a thirtieth, a fortieth, a three-hundredth, a four-hundredth time. God's mercy is inexhaustible. He just keeps working with us and remaking us. He doesn't give up on us. He just doesn't.

In Luke 15, Jesus told a profound story about a son who went to his dad and said, "Pops, give me my inheritance. I want to go into a far country and do my own thing." His dad, knowing what his son would do, gave him the money anyway. The son spent his father's money on wine, women, and song—until famine hit. Destitute and impoverished, he got a job feeding pigs. But after he had his fill of eating pig slop and sleeping in the pigpen, he finally said, "I'll go home and be a servant in my dad's house. At least that will be better than being here with the pigs." Much to his surprise, however, upon his return, his father ran out to welcome him home. Instead of getting busted, he got a banquet. Instead of getting kicked, he got kissed.

Now, what would have happened if, after a few months, the son had said, "I'm going back to the far country"? I believe the father would have let him go again—and would have welcomed him home again. And, eventually, after the third or fourth or eighth or tenth trip home—the son would have finally said, "I'm tired of hanging out with the pigs." And he would have returned home to stay.

You see, the difference between the prodigal and the pig is that the prodigal finally says, "I don't belong here." So too, the child of God might find himself in the pigpen from time to time and in the belly of the great fish upon occasion—but he won't stay there.

How do you know if God is still working with you? You'll want out of the pigpen.

You'll go back home eventually—and each time you do, the Father will be there to greet you, to receive you, and—as He did to Jonah—to speak to you yet another time.

Jonah 3:1 (b)–3 (a)
. . . saying, Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city, and preach unto it the preaching that I bid thee. So Jonah arose, and went unto Nineveh, according to the word of the LORD. . . .

"Arise," God said. Everyone stumbles but God will use any stumbler willing to arise.

Jonah 3:3 (b)
. . . Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.

For centuries, scholars claimed Nineveh didn't exist and used its mention in Scripture to prove the Bible fallacious—until the year 1845 when one day, quite by accident, an English archaeologist began to uncover one of the greatest cities of antiquity: the city of Nineveh.

That's always the way it is. The Bible proves itself to be true while the pseudo-intellectuals are proven wrong again and again. The Bible is infallible and, sooner or later, archaeology or science verifies what the Word of God says time after time.

Jonah 3:4
And Jonah began to enter into the city a day's journey, and he cried, and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh shall be overthrown.

Throughout Scripture, forty is the number of judgment and trial. The people of Israel wandered forty years in the wilderness. It rained on Noah forty days and forty nights. Jesus was tested in the desert for forty days. Here, Jonah declared there would be only forty days until Nineveh would be destroyed.

Jonah 3:5 (a)
So the people of Nineveh believed God . . .

Notice it doesn't say the people of Nineveh believed in God. It says they believed God. There's a big difference. Six hundred thousand Ninevites believed God when He said that in forty days, judgment was coming. And the greatest revival in the world took place as a result. But an even greater revival is yet to come. After the church is raptured, there will be 144,000 Jewish evangelists preaching, angels flying across the sky proclaiming the gospel, Elijah and Moses working miracles—and multiplied millions will call upon the name of the Lord.

This intrigues me because there are those who say that, because Jesus cannot come back until everyone hears the gospel, the church must be present in the Tribulation in order that the gospel can be proclaimed. Yet here, in Jonah 3, we see the greatest revival of all time—before the church was even born.

Jonah 3:5 (b)–9
. . . and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them even to the least of them. For word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he arose from his throne, and he laid his robe from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and sat in ashes. And he caused it to be proclaimed and published through Nineveh by the decree of the king and his nobles, saying, Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste any thing: let them not feed, nor drink water: But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth, and cry mightily unto God: yea, let them turn every one from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from his fierce anger, that we perish not?

The Ninevites took the message of Jonah seriously and responded wholeheartedly.

Why? I believe there are two reasons . . .

First, Jonah's message was simple. So often in our witnessing, we make our message so complicated as we try to explain the hypostatic union, eschatology, and theology. We give our defense against evolution and discuss the ramifications of abortion—but many times, the people with whom we're sharing don't understand what we're talking about because we get so defensive or complex. So often, we mistakenly think we have to give all the arguments, answer all the questions, and deal with all the problems. But you would be shocked at how many people respond if you just say, "Hey, could I pray with you to receive Jesus Christ as your Lord and Savior right now?"

Second, Jonah's message was real. In the three documented cases of men being swallowed by whales, all three men emerged in the same condition. Due to the gastric juices in the stomach, they looked like hairless albinos—pure white with not even an eyelash or eyebrow to be found. This encourages me because I often think that, in order to be effective, I can have no previous failures, no mistakes, no splotches on my record. But, in reality, it was the scarring, bleaching, and pain—the visible results of his own rebellion that gave Jonah credibility and effectiveness.

Why is it that, as believers, we think we have to impress the world?

I suggest that, like Jonah, we need to say to people, "I've been in the pit. I'm bleached—but I'm alive. The Lord has been merciful and gracious to me. And He's faithful to see me through."

Jonah 3:10
And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

This doesn't mean God made a mistake. It means He changed direction, changed course, altered His plan—just as Jonah feared He would.

Jonah 4:1
But it displeased Jonah exceedingly, and he was very angry.

Jonah was angry that history's most vicious people got saved in history's greatest revival.

Jonah 4:2
And he prayed unto the LORD, and said, I pray thee, O LORD, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish: for I knew that thou art a gracious

God, and merciful, slow to anger, and of great kindness, and repentest thee of the evil.

Forgiveness is the deepest need of man and the highest achievement of God. We have this picture that the Lord is just waiting for us to mess up so He can come down and deal with us. But Jonah knew otherwise. He knew that the Lord in His mercy would forgive the Ninevites if they called to Him.

Mercy imitates God and irritates Satan. If you want to be like God, be merciful. Be forgiving. Be slow to anger, slow to criticize, slow to find fault.

Jonah 4:3
Therefore now, O LORD, take, I beseech thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live.

Why did Jonah say this? I suggest it was not only because he was mad at the Ninevites but because his reputation was at stake. "In forty days, you guys are going to be toast," he had told the Ninevites. But when he realized it wasn't going to happen, he became more concerned about his reputation than about their salvation.

Jonah 4:4
Then said the LORD, Doest thou well to be angry?

This verse literally reads, "Is it right for you to be angry because of well-doing?" In other words, God asked Jonah, "Because I have done something good, should that make you angry?"

Jonah 4:5 (a)
So Jonah went out of the city, and sat on the east side of the city, and there made him a booth, and sat under it in the shadow . . .

There were 600,000 baby believers within the walls of Nineveh. Jonah should have been in the city teaching and discipling them, encouraging and ministering to them. Instead, he disengaged himself from people and sat on the sidelines.

Here is a guaranteed recipe for depression: Do what Jonah did and distance yourself from people.

Here are ten steps to overcoming depression:

• Step 1: Do something good for someone else.

• Step 2: Repeat Step 1 nine times.

Jonah 4:5 (b)
. . . till he might see what would become of the city.

Even after the Ninevites repented, Jonah still hoped God might blast rather than bless them.

Why? I suggest he doubted the sincerity of their conversion.

But before we come down too hard on Jonah, I wonder if we've ever seen someone walk forward for salvation and said to ourselves, "I know that guy. I bet he's just doing this to impress people." I wonder if we've ever seen someone get baptized and said to ourselves, "I've heard about her. This will never last."

There sat Jonah—feeling sorry for himself and judging the city that God had forgiven. If I were the Lord, I would have blasted Jonah at this point. But that's neither what God did to him nor what He does to us . . .

Jonah 4:6 (a)
And the LORD God prepared a gourd, and made it to come up over Jonah, that it might be a shadow over his head, to deliver him from his grief. . . .

God said, "There's Jonah—pouting and mad because I saved 600,000 people. I think I'll just bless him." And He caused a palmchrist to grow beside Jonah, to shade him from the hot Assyrian sun.

Isn't that just like the Lord? The blessings we have are not because we deserve them. They're because God is merciful and kind and gracious. Have you discovered the interesting irony that many times it's when you haven't been praying with great consistency or studying the Word with fervency that blessing comes your way supernaturally?

That's grace!

Since before the foundation of the world, through the ages, and on into eternity, God's dealings with us are always by grace. When we least deserve it, He blesses us.

Jonah 4:6 (b)
. . . So Jonah was exceeding glad of the gourd.

When Jonah was delivered from the whale, Scripture doesn't record him being happy. When 600,000 Ninevites were saved, Scripture doesn't record him being happy. It was only when his personal comfort was met in the shade of the gourd that, for the first time in the whole book, we see Jonah happy.

Jonah 4:7
But God prepared a worm when the morning rose the next day, and it smote the gourd that it withered.

Jonah at last was no longer depressed—and then the worm came and his gourd was gone. So too, something happens when you think, At last, I'm out of my despondency and despair—it is then that the worm will come. It is important to see and remember that it was God who prepared the worm just as He prepared the gourd. Job said it this way: "It is the Lord who gives and it is the Lord who takes away. Blessed be the name of the Lord" (Job 1:21). That's why we are to give thanks in everything (1 Thessalonians 5:18).

It was as if the Lord said, "Yesterday, Jonah, I comforted you. Today, I'm developing you." And the same is true with us. One day God blesses us and comforts us. The next day, He deals with us and develops us. It's all part of the process because God is more concerned about our character than about our comfort. He comforts us and blesses us to be sure—but He also sends worms to develop us.

Maybe you had a worm smite you recently—in the form of your boyfriend, your boss, or someone else who let you down. That "worm" is from the Lord.

When his son, Absalom, took control of his capital city, King David found himself running for his life. On his flight from Jerusalem, a little "worm" named Shimei showed up and began throwing dirt and rocks at him as he yelled, “David, you’re a blood man. You’re getting exactly what you deserve.”

Abishai, one of David’s men said, “Why should this dead dog curse my lord, the king? Let me go over, I pray thee, and take off his head,”—to which David replied, “Don’t touch him. The Lord has allowed it” (2 Samuel 16:5–11).

When you can say to the worm throwing rocks at you, to the person who hurts you, to the situation that discourages you, “The Lord has allowed it,” that’s maturity.

Jonah 4:8
And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a vehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.

After preparing a whale to deliver Jonah, a gourd to shade him, and a worm to develop him, God prepared a wind to blow upon him.

For a topical study of Jonah 4:6–8, see “Preparing and Repairing” below.

Jonah 4:9–11
And God said to Jonah, Doest thou well to be angry for the gourd? And he said, I do well to be angry, even unto death. Then said the LORD, Thou hast had pity on the gourd, for the which thou hast not laboured, neither madest it grow; which came up in a night, and perished in a night: And should not I spare Nineveh, that great city, wherein are more than sixscore thousand persons that cannot discern between their right hand and their left hand; and also much cattle?

“Jonah, you’re grieving the loss of a gourd—but what about 120,000 children in Nineveh who are too young to even know their right hand from their left?” the Lord asks. “I know you’re angry with the adults and their sadistic cruelty. But what about the kids, Jonah—or at least the cattle? Where is your mercy? Where is your compassion?”

The book ends and the question remains, because, you see, the question is one that must be asked continually of each of us to whom God has given a second chance: Where is your heart?

PREPARING AND REPAIRING

A Topical Study of JONAH 4:6–8

Sometime around the year 780 B.C., the Lord looked down from heaven and saw a great but exceedingly wicked city. It was Nineveh, capital of the powerful Assyrian Empire. Desiring to bring a message of warning to Nineveh, God looked to the region of northern Israel by the Sea of Galilee to a small village wherein lived a man named Jonah.

"Go to Nineveh, Jonah," the Lord commanded. "And cry against it for their wickedness has come before Me."

You know the story. When Jonah heard he was to go to Nineveh, he took off in the opposite direction and sailed toward Tarshish.

I don't blame Jonah. The Ninevites were a terrifying people. We read in the annals of history that many cities, upon hearing even a rumor that the Assyrians were headed their way, hoisted up the white flag of surrender rather than engage themselves against these vicious people. The Assyrians led those they conquered into captivity in a most cruel way. They connected them together with fishhooks either in their mouths or noses, connected the fishhooks with rope, and led tens of thousands of people hundreds of miles across rugged terrain.

Other times, the Assyrians chose to annihilate a city completely by chopping off the noses, hands, and feet of their victims before leaving them to bleed to death. Others were skinned alive or beheaded. The skins of the former were pinned to the walls of the vanquished city; the skulls of the latter were stacked in pyramids outside the city wall as a warning to everyone in the region.

When God said to Jonah, "Arise. Go to Nineveh," it's easy to see why Jonah sailed in the opposite direction. But it was not his fear of the Ninevites that caused him to do so. It was his fear of the mercy of God. You see, Jonah feared that the Ninevites would receive his message, repent, and enjoy God's mercy. Jonah didn't want mercy for the Ninevites. He wanted revenge.

Revenge is a desire lurking in the flesh of each of us. Even the ancient Chinese had a proverb that speaks about revenge: If your enemy does you wrong, buy every one of his children a new drum.

Indeed, there is something within us that wants to get back at the people who bug us. Jonah was no exception. That is why he ran in the opposite direction. But the Lord had a way of bringing Jonah back. After a bit of a detour, Jonah at last found himself in Nineveh, preaching a sermon only eight words long: Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be destroyed.

Such an impact did Jonah's message have on the people of Nineveh that there was widespread repentance throughout the city. And just as Jonah feared—the Lord had mercy.

So what did Jonah do? He built a lean-to on a hillside overlooking Nineveh so he could witness her destruction should God change His mind and wipe out the city. The irony of this scene is incredible. I mean, Jonah had just experienced the most successful ministry in world history. Six hundred thousand Ninevites repent en masse and turn toward the Lord in the greatest revival the world has ever seen—and Jonah's depressed!

That is why the Lord would now work on Jonah for, you see, it was relatively easy for God to deliver Jonah out of the belly of the great fish compared with the greater challenge of delivering him from the bowels of his "self-fish" nature.

It is as if God said, "You're a selfish individual, Jonah. You live for yourself. You think about yourself. You're wrapped up in yourself. But I'm going to repair you. I'm not going to give up on you. I'm going to deal with you and deliver you from your selfish mentality."

How would He do this? In order to repair Jonah, the Lord prepared three things for him . . .

God Prepared a Wonder to Give to Jonah

And the Lord God prepared a gourd . . .

Jonah 4:6 (a)

When did the Lord prepare this wonder, this blessing for Jonah? When he was doing well? When his attitude was right? When his heart was soft and tender? No. It was when Jonah's attitude was stinking, when his mentality was material, when his compassion was lacking.

God's blessings to us are never given on the basis of our deserving them. They are always based upon grace. What is grace? It is the unmerited, undeserved, unearned favor of God. God says to us, just as He said to Jonah, "Here's a blessing. Here's a wonder for you—not because you're worthy of it, not because of anything you've done, but in spite of everything you've done. I know your attitude stinks. I know there are problems in your perspective. But I love you anyway."

Oftentimes, we fool ourselves into thinking we deserve God's blessings because we're pretty together. But we're not. I remember when my kids were little, one night at the dinner table, I could see Peter was somewhat discouraged. So I led my family in a cheer for him.

"Give me a P!" I said. "Give me an E! Give me a T!"

By this time, two-year-old Mary was really getting into it.

"Give me another E!" I continued. "Give me an R! What does it spell?"

And Mary yelled, "Jesus!"

We all laughed hard because we know Peter. And Jesus he's not! None of us is!

Here was Jonah, perched on a hillside, feeling sorry for himself and self-righteously judging the Ninevites, yet God blessed him anyway—just like he's blessing you this very moment.

What do I mean? It's like Daniel said to Belshazzar. "Belshazzar," he said, "don't you realize that your very breath is in the hand of the God you are blaspheming?" (see Daniel 5:23). Truly, our breath is in the hand of God. Composed of seventy-eight percent nitrogen, twenty percent oxygen, and two percent other gases, every breath we take is a miracle, for if the content shifted even one degree to seventy-nine percent nitrogen, we would all be immediately poisoned. If, on the other hand, it shifted to twenty-one percent oxygen, the whole world would immediately explode in a fireball.

Every second your heart beats, four ounces of blood are displaced. In one year's time, your heart has pumped enough blood to fill eighty-one railroad tanker cars.

We're alive! Every breath we take, every beat of our hearts, the food we had for breakfast—they're all wonders from a gracious God to us, His undeserving children.

God Prepared the Worm That Took from Jonah

But God prepared a worm . . .

Jonah 4:7 (a)

After the wonder came the worm. Jonah was happy in the shade of the gourd—until the next day when a worm came slithering along and began chomping away on it. As the gourd withered, Jonah murmured.

We do the same thing. "Why would God take away my gourd of job security?" we ask. "Why would He have my boss (that worm) slither in my direction last Friday and say my services are no longer needed? Why would He take away my gourd of emotional security? Why would He have my boyfriend (that snake) tell me he no longer wants to date me?"

Wait a minute. Before you murmur too loudly, don't forget who prepared the worm. You see, just as the comfort and blessing of the gourd was prepared by the Lord, so was the biting and devouring of the worm.

Why? Because the Lord knows we have a tendency to get too attached to the things of this world and too comfortable in this life. One of the accounts of the sinking of the Titanic details that, as the ship began to go down and the deck began to tilt, one of the wealthiest women on board ran below, pushing her way past the security guards and into her stateroom. Once inside, she scrambled furiously—not for the jewels or the money stored within—but for three oranges she had tucked away.

God says to you and me, "It's not the things you think are so important that really matter. I'm going to allow the stripping away of those things you valued so much, in which you had so much time invested, for which you had so much affection in order that you might value what is eternal more than what is temporal, that you might care about people more than you do about things, that you might set your heart on things above."

The Bible tells us to give thanks in everything—not just for the wonders but for the worms, as well (1 Thessalonians 5:18). So be thankful—and take a worm out to lunch!

God Prepared the Wind That Whirled Around Jonah

> And it came to pass, when the sun did arise, that God prepared a vehement east wind; and the sun beat upon the head of Jonah, that he fainted, and wished in himself to die, and said, It is better for me to die than to live.
> Jonah 4:8

What does the wind speak of? It speaks of those times when things are swirling around us, when trials are coming down upon us, when we're not sure what's happening.

For Jonah, the wind was not necessarily a negative thing. It could have given Jonah an opportunity for reflection. He could have said, "It's hot today, Lord. Thank You for yesterday when the gourd was shading me and covering me. Thanks for the blessing of yesterday." Or, it could have given Jonah a change in location. He could have said, "Why am I out here on this hillside when I could be in any one of thousands of homes inside the city walls?"

You see, the wind could have driven Jonah into the city—to where he was supposed to be. After all, 600,000 had just been saved. Jonah should have been in the city encouraging them, discipling them, teaching them. But where was he? He was a spectator on a hillside.

If you want to be miserable, do what Jonah did. Remove yourself from people and just sit on the side of the hill with folded arms, watching, analyzing, judging. If, however, you want to be fulfilled and blessed—both personally and in ministry—get out of yourself and into other peoples' lives. Don't be on the hillside watching. Be in the city ministering!

Gang, the winds that blow through your life clear the air and give you a rare opportunity to see where you are. You'll either say, "I need to get back in the city," or, like Jonah, you'll say, "I want to die." The winds—the trials themselves—aren't meant to make or break you. They're meant to show you where you are.

God prepared the blessing of the gourd, the burden of the worm, the blowing of the wind for one reason: to prepare Jonah. To prepare him for what? For eternal life.

> Let not your heart be troubled: ye believe in God, believe also in me. In my Father's house are many mansions: if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.
> John 14:1, 2

What is Jesus doing right now?

Preparing a place for you to live eternally.

What is the Holy Spirit doing right now?

Preparing you for the eternal place.

How? By blessing you with good things you don't deserve, taking from you things that would limit your perspective, and allowing you to go through windstorms that show you where your heart is. Therefore, allow the Lord to mature you. Embrace what He's doing. Go with the flow of how He's moving as He continues to repair you presently and prepare you eternally.

MICAH

Background to Micah

Prophesying in the mid-700s B.C., Micah's ministry lasted approximately forty years—a period in which Israel's ten northern tribes were engaged in a civil war against the two southern tribes. So brutal was this war that in 2 Chronicles 28 we are told 120,000 men from the south alone were slaughtered in a single day's battle.

Micah is unique in that he was the only prophet sent to both the northern and southern kingdoms. His heart must have broken as he traveled between the two warring factions. Not only did he witness decimation in the southern kingdom but annihilation of the northern kingdom when, in 722 B.C., the Assyrians carried the ten northern tribes into captivity.

In addition to problems militarily, the Jews were wavering spiritually. The people who should have known God were not walking with God. Consequently, in His grace, the Lord raised up a group of men to call His people back to walking with Him. Hosea, Amos, Micah, and Isaiah were all contemporaries. Isaiah seems to have played a special role in Micah's life. In fact, the Book of Micah has been called "Isaiah in shorthand" because much of what is written in Isaiah is also recorded verbatim in Micah.

"Here is a classic case of plagiarism," the critics contend. "Micah simply ripped off the prophecies of Isaiah."

I disagree. Isaiah's words seen in Micah are not a case of plagiarism but of impartation . . .

> And the things that thou hast heard of me among many witnesses, the same commit thou to faithful men, who shall be able to teach others also.
> 2 Timothy 2:2

In other words, Paul said, "Timothy, pass what I'm saying on to others who will in turn pass it to others." And that's what we see in Micah. An older Isaiah undoubtedly influenced a younger Micah.

With so much of Isaiah found in Micah, it's easy to wonder why the Lord inspired Micah to write at all. I suggest one reason might be that a lot of us get swamped with Isaiah's sixty-six chapters. So in Micah, we find an abridged version of Isaiah. Second, I believe the Book of Micah underscores the fact that, in order to learn lessons, we need to hear them repeatedly.

> Wherefore I will not be negligent to put you always in remembrance of these things, though ye know them, and be established in the present truth.
> 2 Peter 1:12

Both in our conversations and in our teaching, our tendency is to feel we have to share something creative and fresh, something that has a new twist or an idea never before heard. Not so. We must be more concerned about people being established in truth than about them being impressed with our insights or profound thoughts.

"I know you know this," said Peter, "but I'm going to keep reminding you until you are established in it, until you know it like the back of your hand, until you're doing it not just hearing it." Through Micah the Lord is telling us that these truths are central and that we need to hear them again.

The Book of Micah divides itself into three sections. In chapters 1 through 3, we see the Lord pronouncing grievous retribution. In chapters 4 and 5, we see the Lord promising glorious restoration. After pronouncing retribution, the Lord promises restoration. After disciplining His people, He rebuilds and revives them. That's always the way of our Father. Finally, in chapters 6 and 7, we see the Lord proclaiming gracious reconciliation as His mercy and lovingkindness are seen so beautifully in the final two chapters.

MICAH

Micah 1:1–5 (a)

1 The word of the LORD that came to Micah the Morasthite in the days of Jotham, Ahaz, and Hezekiah, kings of Judah, which he saw concerning Samaria and Jerusalem. Hear, all ye people; hearken, O earth, and all that therein is: and let the Lord GOD be witness against you, the Lord from his holy temple. For, behold, the LORD cometh forth out of his place, and will come down, and tread upon the high places of the earth. And the mountains shall be molten under him, and the valleys shall be cleft, as wax before the fire, and as the waters that are poured down a steep place. For the transgression of Jacob is all this, and for the sins of the house of Israel. . . .

"Because of the sin of Samaria and Jerusalem, when I come," says the Lord, "mountains will melt; valleys will be divided in two; and judgment will flow like water over a waterfall." Samaria was the capital of the ten northern tribes; Jerusalem the capital of the two southern tribes. The sin of these two capital cities was that which would bring judgment upon them.

Micah 1:5 (b)–7

. . . What is the transgression of Jacob? is it not Samaria? and what are the high places of Judah? are they not Jerusalem? Therefore I will make Samaria as an heap of the field, and as plantings of a vineyard: and I will pour down the stones thereof into the valley, and I will discover the foundations thereof. And all the graven images thereof shall be beaten to pieces, and all the hires thereof shall be burned with the fire, and all the idols thereof will I lay desolate: for she gathered it of the hire of an harlot, and they shall return to the hire of an harlot.

The sin of Samaria and Jerusalem was idolatry. Mornings would find the Jews offering sacrifices to Jehovah in the temple. But evenings would find them worshiping idols in the groves. So too, in Washington, D.C., many of our country's leaders attend prayer breakfasts in the morning and endless rounds of cocktail parties in the evening.

> I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot. So then because thou art lukewarm, and neither cold nor hot, I will spue thee out of my mouth.
> Revelation 3:15, 16

What is lukewarm? A mixture of hot and cold. "If you're hot, I can use you," says the Lord. "If you're cold, I can convict you. But if you're straddling the fence between the two, I will spew you out of My mouth because that's something I just can't stomach." To a certain degree, we know how the Lord feels. After all, steaming tea on a cold day is comforting. Iced tea on a summer day is refreshing. But room temperature tea on any day is annoying.

Because these people couldn't decide between Jehovah and Baal—between the things of God and the things of the world—the Lord said, "I will judge."

Hearing this, Micah responds . . .

> Micah 1:8, 9 (a)
> Therefore I will wail and howl, I will go stripped and naked: I will make a wailing like the dragons, and mourning as the owls. For her wound is incurable . . .

This prophetic word wasn't something that merely interested Micah casually. It affected him emotionally. He wailed like a jackal. He mourned like an owl. It affected him so deeply that he tore off his clothes as a sign of brokenness.

Micah's reaction should speak volumes to us. When the subject of prophecy is raised, many times our tendency is to say, "Let's hear about how the Russians will get wiped out when they invade Israel and how the Chinese will be destroyed. Oh, boy!" Too often we have a fascination with prophecy that I believe needs to be adjusted. Prophecy should not titillate us intellectually or fire us up patriotically. Prophecy should break us emotionally.

Micah was a godly man. When he heard about judgment, he wailed; he wept; he was broken. May the Lord begin to work that kind of heart into us.

Micah 1:9 (b)
. . . for it is come unto Judah; he is come unto the gate of my people, even to Jerusalem.

In 722 B.C., Samaria would be destroyed by the Assyrians. Twenty years later, the Assyrians would besiege Jerusalem.

Micah 1:10 (a)
Declare ye it not at Gath . . .

"Tell it not in Gath," David said concerning news of the death of Saul and Jonathan, "lest the daughters of the uncircumcised triumph" (2 Samuel 1:20).

"Declare ye it not at Gath," Micah echoes concerning the fall of Samaria and Jerusalem lest God's enemies would have reason to rejoice.

Micah 1:10 (b)
. . . weep ye not at all: in the house of Aphrah roll thyself in the dust.

Dust and ashes symbolized great sorrow (Jeremiah 6:26; Ezekiel 27:30).

Micah 1:11, 12
Pass ye away, thou inhabitant of Saphir, having thy shame naked: the inhabitant of Zaanan came not forth in the mourning of Beth-ezel; he shall receive of you his standing. For the inhabitant of Maroth waited carefully for good: but evil came down from the LORD unto the gate of Jerusalem.

In what has rightly been called a funeral for a ruined kingdom, Micah lists some of the cities that fell to Sennacherib's Assyrian army.

Micah 1:13
O thou inhabitant of Lachish, bind the chariot to the swift beast: she is the beginning of the sin to the daughter of Zion: for the transgressions of Israel were found in thee.

Located near the northern border, Lachish was the first city in Judah to copy the idol worship of Israel.

Micah 1:14, 15
Therefore shalt thou give presents to Moresheth-gath: the houses of Achzib shall be a lie to the kings of Israel. Yet will I bring an heir unto thee, O inhabitant of Mareshah: he shall come unto Adullam the glory of Israel.

Israel would appeal to the Philistine city of Moresheth-gath for assistance against the Assyrians but, because Moresheth-gath could not or would not help, Moresheth-gath would likewise fall prey to the Assyrians who would claim her and the neighboring city of Adullam as if they were the rightful heir.

The intrigue of verses 10 through 15 can escape our foreign ear until we realize that Micah, as did Isaiah, employs a series of paranomasias, or plays on words . . .

- In verse 10, aphar, or "dust," plays on Aprah, the name of the city.
- In verse 13, Lachish plays on rechesh, or "swift beast."
- In verse 14, Achzib plays on achzab, or "lie."

This technique would have caused Micah's message to lodge in the minds of the people who stood in such need of warning.

Micah 1:16
Make thee bald, and poll thee for thy delicate children; enlarge thy baldness as the eagle; for they are gone into captivity from thee.

"Judgment is coming," Micah declares. "Your enemies will experience victory over you because of your iniquity. So shave your head as a sign of the brokenness of your heart."

2 After seeing the reality of retribution in chapter 1, we see the reasons for retribution in chapters 2 and 3. Here in chapter 2, we see that one reason is due to the sins of the people . . .

Micah 2:1
Woe to them that devise iniquity, and work evil upon their beds! when the morning is light, they practise it, because it is in the power of their hand.

God's people—who should have been meditating on His Word—were lying in their beds, plotting about what they were going to do the next day to get ahead. Contrast this with David, the man after God's own heart, who said, "My soul shall be satisfied as with marrow and fatness; and my mouth shall praise thee with joyful lips when I remember Thee upon my bed, and meditate on Thee in the night watches" (Psalm 63:5, 6).

What do you think about when you're having a hard time falling asleep? A good thing to do when you can't sleep is to spend time in prayer or to start memorizing Scripture. It will either bless your heart or knock you out—either way, you win!

Micah 2:2
And they covet fields, and take them by violence; and houses, and take them away: so they oppress a man and his house, even a man and his heritage.

Money is not evil. Things are not evil. It is in the love of money and the love of things that the trouble lies (1 Timothy 6:10). Because the people in Micah's day were manipulating and using people to get things rather than using things to help and serve people, they were headed for trouble.

Micah 2:3
Therefore thus saith the LORD; Behold, against this family do I devise an evil, from which ye shall not remove your necks; neither shall ye go haughtily: for this time is evil.

"As you're plotting evil, I'm plotting judgment," the Lord declares.

Micah 2:4, 5
In that day shall one take up a parable against you, and lament with a doleful lamentation, and say, We be utterly spoiled: he hath changed the portion of my people: how hath he removed it from me! turning away he hath divided our fields. Therefore thou shalt have none that shall cast a cord by lot in the congregation of the LORD.

"The result of the Lord's judgment against you will be the topic of conversation of those surrounding you as your land is given to strangers," Micah warns.

Micah 2:6, 7 (a)
Prophesy ye not, say they to them that prophesy: they shall not prophesy to them, that they shall not take shame. O thou that art named the house of Jacob, is the spirit of the LORD straitened? are these his doings? . . .

"Do you resort to oppression and manipulation because you think the Lord is unable to provide for you, to care for His own?" Micah asks.

Micah 2:7 (b)
. . . do not my words do good to him that walketh uprightly?

"The Word of God is like a fire," Jeremiah declares (5:14). A fire will either warm or burn. It all depends on where you're standing. Unlike a physical fire, however, the closer one is to the fire of the Word, the more he will be warmed and the farther he strays from the fire of the Word, the more he will be burned.

Micah 2:8
Even of late my people is risen up as an enemy: ye pull off the robe with the garment from them that pass by securely as men averse from war.

The idea expressed here is that the poor were being oppressed because they were easy targets. We have the same problem in our own country. The homeless are among us and the poor are falling further and further behind economically. Many of us have a conservative bent politically, but we must never forget that God cares about the state of the impoverished very definitely. The heart of God through Micah declares, "You're getting rich by ripping the shirts off the backs of the poor—and in so doing, you are waging war against Me."

Micah 2:9
The women of my people have ye cast out from their pleasant houses; from their children have ye taken away my glory for ever.

Financially, things were booming for a certain segment of society in Micah's day. But God says, "What about the women who no longer have houses? What about the kids on the streets?"

Micah 2:10, 11
Arise ye, and depart; for this is not your rest: because it is polluted, it shall destroy you, even with a sore destruction. If a man walking in the spirit and falsehood do lie, saying, I will prophesy unto thee of wine and of strong drink; he shall even be the prophet of this people.

For guidance, God's people were looking to prophets who promised continued prosperity and an abundance of wine and strong drink, ignoring the prophets who spoke God's heart, who called for justice and compassion.

Micah 2:12, 13

I will surely assemble, O Jacob, all of thee; I will surely gather the remnant of Israel; I will put them together as the sheep of Bozrah, as the flock in the midst of their fold: they shall make great noise by reason of the multitude of men. The breaker is come up before them: they have broken up, and have passed through the gate, and are gone out by it: and their king shall pass before them, and the LORD on the head of them.

As seen throughout chapter 2, although the sons of the people were a reason for God's retribution upon them, as seen here at the end of chapter 2, His love for His people is the reason for His mercy toward them. This promise would be partially fulfilled when they returned from their Babylonian captivity. But it will be completely fulfilled when all of Jacob, all of Israel will at least recognize the One who will break through—her "breaker," her Messiah, Jesus Christ—at His Second Coming.

3 Following the sins of the people in chapter 2, in chapter 3, we see the sins of the princes—the politicians—as a reason for God's retribution . . .

Micah 3:1–3
And I said, Hear, I pray you, O heads of Jacob, and ye princes of the house of Israel; Is it not for you to know judgment? Who hate the good, and love the evil; who pluck off their skin from off them, and their flesh from off their bones; Who also eat the flesh of my people, and flay their skin from off them; and they break their bones, and chop them in pieces, as for the pot, and as flesh within the caldron.

The imagery in this passage speaks of treating people like meat, of ignoring the weak, of justice only for the wealthy (verse 11).

Micah 3:4

Then shall they cry unto the LORD, but he will not hear them: he will even hide his face from them at that time, as they have behaved themselves ill in their doings.

"Because they ignored the cries of those looking to them for help, when the leaders of My people call unto Me in their own time of need, I will likewise ignore them," the Lord declares.

Micah 3:5–7
Thus saith the LORD concerning the prophets that make my people err, that bite with their teeth, and cry, Peace; and he that putteth not into their mouths, they even prepare war against him. Therefore night shall be unto you, that ye shall not have a vision; and it shall be dark unto you, that ye shall not divine; and the sun shall go down over the prophets, and the day shall be dark over them. Then shall the seers be ashamed, and the diviners confounded: yea, they shall all cover their lips; for there is no answer of God.

The true prophets who prophesied judgment were regarded as enemies while the prophets who prophesied good things to those who paid them were embraced as friends. But because prophets were not exempt from the judgment that would befall Israel, they would find themselves in the same captivity, darkness, and shame as the rest of the nation.

Micah 3:8
But truly I am full of power by the spirit of the LORD, and of judgment, and of might, to declare unto Jacob his transgression, and to Israel his sin.

Unlike the prophets for hire, Micah prophesied by the Spirit of the Lord and was thus able to speak directly about the issue of sin rather than worrying about how to tickle the ears of his audience.

Micah 3:9–12 (a)

Hear this, I pray you, ye heads of the house of Jacob, and princes of the house of Israel, that abhor judgment, and pervert all equity. They build up Zion with blood, and Jerusalem with iniquity. The heads thereof judge for reward, and the priests thereof teach for hire, and the prophets thereof divine for money: yet will they lean upon the LORD, and say, Is not the LORD among us? none evil can come upon us. Therefore shall Zion for your sake be plowed as a field, and Jerusalem shall become heaps . . .

Here, the priests are indicted. With justice, prophecy, and religion all governed by money, the princes, prophets, and priests of Israel had become financially rich but spiritually bankrupt. Consequently, the Lord was justified in plowing Zion as a field, in bringing Jerusalem to ruin, in judging His people.

Micah 3:12 (b)
. . . and the mountain of the house as the high places of the forest.

The "house" refers to the temple. At the end of God's pronouncement of grievous retribution, He includes a preview of glorious restoration—for, as seen in chapter 4, He will rebuild His people as surely as He rebuilds the temple.

To these people who were completely corrupt in every aspect of their society, God doesn't say, "I'm giving up on you." He says, "I'm going to build you."

4 In chapters 4 and 5, we come to a different section. No longer is the Lord pronouncing grievous retribution. Now He promises glorious restoration . . .

Micah 4:1, 2
But in the last days it shall come to pass, that the mountain of the house of the LORD shall be established in the top of the mountains, and it shall be exalted above the hills; and people shall flow unto it. And many nations shall come, and say, Come, and let us go up to the mountain of the LORD, and to the house of the God of Jacob; and he will teach us of his ways, and we will walk in his paths: for the law shall go forth of Zion, and the word of the LORD from Jerusalem.

"I'm going to reestablish My house. I'm going to rebuild My temple," the Lord declares. And I believe that, in these last days, the stage has been set for that very thing. In Jerusalem today, those with the last name of Cohen, which means "priest," are studying seriously and intently—waiting for the day when the temple will be rebuilt and they will be called upon to reinstitute temple worship.

"Wait a minute," you protest. "I've been hearing about these being the last days for years, yet here we are still."

The apostles also believed Jesus would come back in their day. After all, they heard Him say, "Behold, I come quickly" (Revelation 22:7). And He will.

As one approaches the speed of light, time begins to slow down radically. Thus, if you went on a space mission and cruised around for five years at the speed of light—although you might look for your family upon your return to earth, you wouldn't find them because, while you were cruising around the galaxy for five years, one million years would have passed on earth.

I don't know how fast Jesus moved when He ascended to heaven, but I bet He moved real fast. And if He approached the speed of light, then, really, He's only been gone for a couple of minutes. Peter alludes to this when he said that a day with the Lord is as a thousand years and a thousand years is as a day (2 Peter 3:8). So if 1,000 years is as a day, the Lord has only been gone two days. That's not very long.

I firmly believe that Jesus left us with enough information about the rebirthing and rebuilding of Israel to tell us without doubt that we are coming to the end of this age. And in the last days, the Lord says we will see the rebuilding of His temple. The stage is set. The property is bare in Jerusalem.

The money is raised. The priesthood is studying. The people of Israel are back in their homeland—and we are truly living in the last days.

Micah 4:3
And he shall judge among many people, and rebuke strong nations afar off; and they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruninghooks: nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more.

This verse is inscribed on the United Nations building in New York City. The problem is, they left out the first part of the verse—which is the key to the entire verse. No matter how organized she becomes, no matter how politically involved she is, even the church will not be able to usher in peace on this earth. Oh, there will be peace internally as the Holy Spirit floods peoples' hearts individually—but there won't be peace nationally until the Prince of Peace comes back.

The only way a person can have peace internally is to allow Jesus Christ, the Prince of Peace, into his life personally. And the only way the world can experience peace globally is for Jesus to come back and reign in Jerusalem —as seen in this prophecy.

Micah 4:4
But they shall sit every man under his vine and under his fig tree; and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the LORD of hosts hath spoken it.

When Jesus comes back, not only will there be peace among the nations corporately—but there will be peace for all men individually.

Micah 4:5–8
For all people will walk every one in the name of his god, and we will walk in the name of the LORD our God for ever and ever. In that day, saith the LORD, will I assemble her that halteth, and I will gather her that is driven out, and her that I have afflicted; And I will make her that halted a remnant, and her that was cast far off a strong nation: and the LORD shall reign over them in mount Zion from henceforth, even for ever. And thou, O tower of the flock, the strong hold of the daughter of Zion, unto thee shall it come, even the first dominion; the kingdom shall come to the daughter of Jerusalem.

Keep in mind the flow of Micah's message: "Yes, judgment is coming," declares the Lord, "but restoration is certain when I reign from Jerusalem." For a thousand years, the Lord will rule in Jerusalem—but there will first be a delay, as seen in verses 9 through 13 . . .

Micah 4:9, 10 (a)
Now why dost thou cry out aloud? is there no king in thee? is thy counsellor perished? for pangs have taken thee as a woman in travail. Be in pain, and labour to bring forth, O daughter of Zion, like a woman in travail: for now shalt thou go forth out of the city, and thou shalt dwell in the field, and thou shalt go even to Babylon . . .

Although Jerusalem's enemy in Micah's day was Assyria, Jerusalem would miraculously escape Assyria's siege (2 Kings 18:9—19:37). Here, Micah looks a hundred years ahead to the ultimate enemy who would destroy Jerusalem: Babylon. Micah's prophecy was fulfilled when, a hundred years after making this pronouncement, in 605 B.C., Nebuchadnezzar's Babylonian army invaded Jerusalem and carried the Jews into captivity.

Micah 4:10 (b)
. . . there shalt thou be delivered; there the LORD shall redeem thee from the hand of thine enemies.

In other words, "I'll send you to Babylon, but I won't leave you there," says the Lord. Because the people of Judah flirted with idols constantly, the Lord sent them to Babylon—the center of idolatry. While they were there, the Jews got sick of idols. They were delivered, healed of that problem completely.

Be careful about the sins with which you're flirting because the Lord might finally say, even as He did to these people, "Go ahead. Have your fill."

And, although you might be freed of your addiction eventually, you will go through some heartbreaking times in captivity.

Micah 4:11–13
Now also many nations are gathered against thee, that say, Let her be defiled, and let our eye look upon Zion. But they know not the thoughts of the LORD, neither understand they his counsel: for he shall gather them as the sheaves into the floor. Arise and thresh, O daughter of Zion: for I will make thine horn iron, and I will make thy hoofs brass: and thou shalt beat in pieces many people: and I will consecrate their gain unto the LORD, and their substance unto the Lord of the whole earth.

The Babylonian captivity would not be the only event that would delay the Lord's return. Here, Micah skips centuries ahead to speak of the Tribulation that will preface His return to rule and reign in peace and prosperity.

Now gather thyself in troops, O daughter of troops: he hath laid siege against us: they shall smite the judge of Israel with a rod upon the cheek.

Because Micah's message was given seven hundred years before Jesus' birth, Jesus knew His people would actually go to war against Him—that they would smite Him, refuse to respond to Him, and reject Him. And yet, He still came.

Micah 5:2
But thou, Bethlehem Ephratah, though thou be little among the thousands of Judah, yet out of thee shall he come forth unto me that is to be ruler in Israel; whose goings forth have been from of old, from everlasting.

Bethlehem means "House of bread." It was an insignificant little town among the thousands of Judah. In fact, so many Bethlehems were in Israel at this time that Micah identifies this one specifically as Bethlehem Ephratah—or "fruitful."

For topical study of Micah 5:2 entitled "O Little Town of Bethlehem," turn to page* 835.

Micah 5:3
Therefore will he give them up, until the time that she which travaileth hath brought forth: then the remnant of his brethren shall return unto the children of Israel.

"If you don't want Me to rule over you; if you smite Me, come against Me, and refuse Me, I won't force Myself on you. I will give you up, Israel," declares the Lord. When does Israel finally recognize Jesus of Nazareth as her promised Messiah? There's a remnant of Jewish people who recognize this even now, but Israel recognizes Jesus nationally during the time of travail, during Jacob's trouble, during the Tribulation (Zechariah 13).

Micah 5:4
And he shall stand and feed in the strength of the LORD, in the majesty of the name of the LORD his God; and they shall abide: for now shall he be great unto the ends of the earth.

During the trail of Israel in the Tribulation period (Revelation 6—19), the Lord will move among His people. At last, they will acknowledge Him as Messiah as He shepherds the nation of Israel.

Micah 5:5, 6
And this man shall be the peace, when the Assyrian shall come into our land: and when he shall tread in our palaces, then shall we raise against him seven shepherds, and eight principal men.

And they shall waste the land of Assyria with the sword, and the land of Nimrod in the entrances thereof: thus shall he deliver us from the Assyrian, when he cometh into our land, and when he treadeth within our borders.

"The Assyrian" is another name for antichrist—the coming world dictator who will appear to be a friend of Israel initially, but will show his true colors eventually. Haman, Herod, Hitler all moved in the spirit of antichrist and were defeated. So too, "the Assyrian"—the actual antichrist will one day be annihilated (Revelation 19).

Who will protect Israel when antichrist comes to destroy her? The same One who protects and never forsakes us: Jesus Christ.

Micah 5:7–10
And the remnant of Jacob shall be in the midst of many people as a dew from the LORD, as the showers upon the grass, that tarrieth not for man, nor waiteth for the sons of men. And the remnant of Jacob shall be among the Gentiles in the midst of many people as a lion among the beasts of the forest, as a young lion among the flocks of sheep: who, if he go through, both treadeth down, and teareth in pieces, and none can deliver. Thine hand shall be lifted up upon thine adversaries, and all thine enemies shall be cut off. And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that I will cut off thy horses out of the midst of thee, and I will destroy thy chariots:

Israel's glorious restoration is delayed by her captivity in Babylon and the travail in the Tribulation. Jesus will come to her once and will be rejected (John 1:11). Then He'll come again and be accepted (Zechariah 13:9). In his shortened version of Isaiah, Micah has touched on all of this.

Micah 5:11
And I will cut off the cities of thy land, and throw down all thy strong holds:

Because their daily lives depend on their defense, the Israeli army is the most ingenious and committed army in the world. But here the Lord is saying, "When I come, your horses and chariots, your tanks and technology, your strength and ingenuity will all be unnecessary for you will need no other protection than the protection you will find in Me."

Micah 5:12–15
And I will cut off witchcrafts out of thine hand; and thou shalt have no more soothsayers: Thy graven images also will I cut off, and thy standing images out of the midst of thee; and thou shalt no more worship the work of thine hands. And I will pluck up thy groves out of the midst of thee: so will I destroy thy cities And I will execute vengeance in anger and fury upon the heathen, such as they have not heard.

In the New Testament, the word translated "witchcraft" is pharmakeia, from which we get our word, "pharmacy." There is a direct connection in the Bible between witchcraft and drugs—which doesn't surprise me at all. Cruising into Santa Cruz in the late sixties and early seventies to go surfing, I would invariably see people stoned on LSD and other hallucinogens. And it always amazed me that what they screamed was spiritual: "I am Jesus Christ," they'd say. Or, "I am Satan," or, "I am God." They never spoke of Buddha or Mohammed—only of Jesus and God, heaven, hell, and Satan.

Why? I believe it is because in some way, drugs very definitely open the door to the realm of the spirit. Comedians might make light of drugs. Politicians might trivialize them. But drugs are a serious business that figure prominently into the Book of Revelation and the end-time scene.

O LITTLE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM

A Topical Study of MICAH 5:2

Every year, the magazines come out with their "Who's Hot and Who's Not?" issues. Contrast this with the text before us, in which we see something of the heart of our Lord, for He is not looking for the famous people or the hot spot to do His work. In fact, the place God chose for His Son to be born was anything but a hot spot of the world.

If I were God, I think I would have had My Son born in Rome, the political center of the day. People would have been able to take note. Word of His birth would have spread quickly. Or perhaps I would have chosen Athens, the intellectual center of the day—where intellectuals philosophized by the hour, pondering deep questions and debating the meaning of life. If not Rome or Athens, I would have chosen Jerusalem, the religious center of the day. With the temple in her midst, Jerusalem embodied Israel's history and heritage in spiritual matters.

But seven hundred years before the event, God inspired Micah to pinpoint the site Messiah would be born not as Rome, Athens, or Jerusalem but in Bethlehem—a podunk little community five miles outside of Jerusalem. Jerusalem was where the action was; Bethlehem was simply where the shepherds hung out.

Today, we have romanticized shepherding. But in Jesus' day, shepherds were considered outcasts. Because they were usually tending sheep, they could not always take part in the ceremonial cleansing necessary to enter into temple worship. Thus, shepherds were ostracized by the religious elite. Bethlehem was full of shepherds because Bethlehem was full of sheep. You see, the flocks owned by the priests serving in the temple, as well as the flocks used for sacrifices in the temple were kept in Bethlehem. Even today, Bethlehem has sort of an outcast flavor. Seeing the traditional spot where Christ was born, marked by a tarnished bronze and gold star in the floor of a decaying church, one wonders about this little town of Bethlehem.

And yet I suggest that Bethlehem was the most appropriate place for Jesus to be born—for it tells us wonderful things about our Lord . . .

Bethlehem Reflects Our Lord's Personality

In the only autobiographical statement He made, Jesus said, "I am meek and lowly" (Matthew 11:29). No wonder, then, that He wouldn't have been born in Rome with her grandeur and glory or in Athens with her intellectual superiority or in Jerusalem with her religious tradition and ceremony.

And I like that because we are not Rome for we are not famous or powerful. Nor are we Athens for we are not highly esteemed by intellectuals. Nor are we Jerusalem for we cannot claim to be ceremonially pure. We're Bethlehem—the place where outcasts hang out. Thus, Jesus can be born in us.

Bethlehem Reveals Our Lord's Priority

When questioned why He spent time with tax collectors and prostitutes, Jesus said, "I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance" (Matthew 9:13). In other words, "My priority is people who are hurting, people who have need."

Jesus' assertion is especially telling in connection with the account in Matthew 9 . . .

> While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler, and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live.
> Matthew 9:18

A man who was esteemed highly in his community fell at the feet of the Carpenter from Nazareth because tragedy had struck his family: his daughter was dead. But it is the verse that follows that amazes me . . .

> And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.
> Matthew 9:19

"I have decided to follow Jesus," we sing.

Yet Jesus follows the person in need, the person in difficulty, the person who hurts. Therefore, if I am truly following Jesus, I will go to those who are weeping, those who are aching, those who feel despondent or discouraged, despised or rejected. Truly following Jesus means we'll be surrounded by people who hurt.

- Are you a disciples of Jesus?
  Then follow Him.
- Where's He going?
  To those in need, to the shepherds, to Bethlehem.

Will you go to Jerusalem, Athens, or Rome—or will you follow Him to Bethlehem—where no one will see you, write articles about you, take pictures of you, or applaud you? Jesus goes to the obscure little village, the hurting, insignificant person. And I'm so thankful He does because that's me.

Bethlehem Reminds Us of Our Lord's Abilities

Once Nowhere-ville, after Jesus was born in Bethlehem, this little town became renowned for all time. He changed it. He made it a place highly esteemed in the hearts of all who love Him. And I see Jesus doing that very thing throughout the Gospels . . .

I see Him say to a tax collector who was despised by his countrymen because he was working for Rome and ripping them off, "Follow Me." And Matthew, who would have been a forgotten figure in history, was transformed when He came in contact with the person of Jesus Christ.

I think of Simon the zealot—a political firebrand determined to overthrow the yoke of Rome. His life would have ended in obscurity had it not been for Jesus. But Jesus said, "Follow Me"—and Simon became a man for history.

Referred to as "the giant" because of his stature, Peter would have gone down as just another Galilean fisherman—except for the fact that Jesus decided to use him in ministry. And Peter became a giant of the faith because of the impact he made for eternity.

Matthew, Simon, Peter—these are "Bethlehem" men. If you and I simply say, "We know we're not people of Jerusalem or Athens, Rome or Hollywood, we're people of Bethlehem; but, Lord, we know You came for people like us, so leave Your mark on our lives," He will use us. Why? Because He loves to use the foolish things of the world to confound the wise, the weak things to show up the strong (1 Corinthians 1:27).

If you're feeling unworthy, insignificant, un-together—you are a perfect candidate for the Bethlehem miracle. If you allow Jesus to be born in your life, if you open the door of your heart to Him, you will be remembered for all eternity because your name will be written in the Lamb's Book of Life (Revelation 21:27). And, unlike, today's magazines, that Book doesn't change each year according to who's hot and who's not. You see, because Jesus died for our sins, our names are written in the Book of Life not with the fading ink of this world, but with the indelible blood of the Lamb.

6 After pronouncing grievous retribution in chapters 1 through 3, after promising glorious restoration in chapters 4 and 5, we now see God proclaiming generous reconciliation in chapters 6 and 7 . . .

Micah 6:1–4
Hear ye now what the LORD saith; Arise, contend thou before the mountains, and let the hills hear thy voice. Hear ye, O moun tains, the LORD's controversy, and ye strong foundations of the earth: for the LORD hath a controversy with his people, and he will plead with Israel. O my people, what have I done unto thee? and wherein have I wearied thee? testify against me. For I brought thee up out of the land of Egypt, and redeemed thee out of the house of servants; and I sent before thee Moses, Aaron, and Miriam.

Here we hear the heartbeat of a Father who says, "Why do you ignore Me when I have rescued and redeemed you throughout your history?"

Micah 6:5 (a)
O my people, remember now what Balak king of Moab consulted, and what Balaam the son of Beor answered him . . .

Perhaps nowhere is God's mercy to His people more clearly portrayed than in the account of Numbers 22 and 23, wherein God forbade Balaam to curse Israel.

Micah 6:5 (b)
. . . from Shittim unto Gilgal; that ye may know the righteousness of the LORD.

As He led them from Shittim to Gilgal—from their last lodging in the wilderness into their first lodging in the Promised Land, God provided for His people every step of the way.

Micah 6:6, 7

Wherewith shall I come before the LORD, and bow myself before the high God? shall I come before him with burnt offerings, with calves of a year old? Will the LORD be pleased with thousands of rams, or with ten thousands of rivers of oil? shall I give my firstborn for my transgression, the fruit of my body for the sin of my soul?

"What do you want from me?" is the exasperated cry of a rebellious child —insinuating that no matter how much is given Him, God is never pleased.

Micah 6:8
He hath shewed thee, O man, what is good; and what doth the LORD require of thee, but to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God?

Although their question was rhetorical, Micah's answer to God's people is wonderfully practical as he reduces the six hundred thirteen commandments of the law to three . . .

For topical study of Micah 6:8 entitled "What the Lord Requires," turn to page* 839.

Micah 6:9
The LORD's voice crieth unto the city, and the man of wisdom shall see thy name: hear ye the rod, and who hath appointed it.

Before He can reconcile His people to Himself, God now reminds them of their failure to do what it was that He so plainly required of them . . .

Micah 6:10, 11
Are there yet the treasures of wickedness in the house of the wicked, and the scant measure that is abominable? Shall I count them pure with the wicked balances, and with the bag of deceitful weights?

The scales of justice were imbalanced—tipped in favor of the wicked and the wealthy.

Micah 6:12–14 (a)
For the rich men thereof are full of violence, and the inhabitants thereof have spoken lies, and their tongue is deceitful in their mouth. Therefore also will I make thee sick in smiting thee, in making thee desolate because of thy sins. Thou shalt eat, but not be satisfied . . .

The wealthy elite of Micah's day used their tongues to cheat and deceive. Thus, it is only fitting that God would use their own tongues—their own appetites—against them, as they would no longer be satisfied by the fruit of their labor.

Micah 6:14 (b), 15
. . . and thy casting down shall be in the midst of thee; and thou shalt take hold, but shalt not deliver; and that which thou deliverest will I give up to the sword. Thou shalt sow, but thou shalt not reap; thou shalt tread the olives, but thou shalt not anoint thee with oil; and sweet wine, but shalt not drink wine.

Reminiscent of Habakkuk's realization that judgment would decimate the agrarian economy of his day (3:17), Micah prophesies of the day when, carried into captivity, the people of God would be unable to reap their own harvest.

Micah 6:16
For the statutes of Omri are kept, and all the works of the house of Ahab, and ye walk in their counsels; that I should make thee a desolation, and the inhabitants thereof an hissing: therefore ye shall bear the reproach of my people.

Because they led the people of God deeper into idolatry, Omri and his son, Ahab, go down as two of the worst kings in Israel's history.

WHAT THE LORD REQUIRES

A Topical Study of MICAH 6:8

"What in the world do you want from me?" Wives ask their husbands this question and husbands their wives. Children pose it to their parents, employees to their bosses, and athletes to their coaches.

The people of Israel asked the prophet in Israel, "What does the Lord want from us? Does He want us to bring Him a sacrifice of young calves or rams by the thousands? How about costly rivers of oil or our firstborn sons? What does the Lord want from us, anyway?"

"He hath shown thee," Micah declared. "He's already given you His Word."

On the scene three hundred years before Micah, David understood that the Lord had already revealed His heart to His people very clearly in the law given to Israel . . .

> The law of the LORD is perfect, converting the soul: the testimony of the LORD is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the LORD are right, rejoicing the heart: the commandment of the LORD is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the LORD is clean, enduring for ever: the judgments of the LORD are true and righteous altogether. More to be desired are they than gold, yea, than much fine gold: sweeter also than honey and the honeycomb. Moreover by them is thy servant warned: and in keeping of them there is great reward.
> Psalm 19:7–11

"There's great reward in knowing and keeping the Law of the Lord," David declared. "It makes simple people wise. It gives understanding and light." This is not the case with many of our country's laws . . .

- In Massachusetts, you can be put in jail for one year if you are caught whistling underwater.

- In Tennessee, a woman can be sentenced to five years in jail if she calls a man on a telephone.
- In Texas, you'll pay a $500 fine if you are caught drinking milk from any other cow than your own.
- In West Virginia, it is illegal for a preacher to tell a funny story from the pulpit.

Likewise, people tend to think of the Old Testament law as outdated and irrelevant. But nothing could be farther from the truth. The National Institute of Health is currently studying Old Testament teachings concerning hygiene and sexual practices. Why? Because our country is currently scourged with AIDS and sexually transmitted diseases—new strains and viruses which seem to appear weekly.

"Let's take another look at what the ancient Hebrews did to ward off such diseases," says the NIH. And guess what. They're finding that the rules and dietary regulations embedded in the Mosaic Law make perfect medical sense, that in keeping them there is indeed great reward, that God knew best all along.

The problem is, we can know this to be true and still shy away from the law because it seems like there's so much to it. Indeed there is. According to rabbinical tradition, there are six hundred thirteen specific commandments given in the law. And if you're like me, that's a few too many to get a handle on. So the Lord in His great kindness simplified things when He inspired David to give somewhat of a summary in Psalm 15 . . .

> LORD, who shall abide in thy tabernacle? who shall dwell in thy holy hill? He that walketh uprightly, and worketh righteousness, and speaketh the truth in his heart. He that backbiteth not with his tongue, nor doeth evil to his neighbour, nor taketh up a reproach against his neighbour. In whose eyes a vile person is contemned; but he honoureth them that fear the LORD. He that sweareth to his own hurt, and changeth not. He that putteth not out his money to usury, nor taketh reward against the innocent. He that doeth these things shall never be moved.
> Psalm 15

David distills the six hundred thirteen commandments of the law to eleven. But even eleven might be too many. So a couple of hundred years later, the Lord simplified it even further here in Micah 6 . . .

To Do Justly . . .

To do justly simply means to do what's right.

A UCLA professor posed this question to his Medical Ethics class: How would you advise the following patient concerning pregnancy and the possibility of abortion? The father has syphilis. The mother has tuberculosis. Their first child was born blind. Their second child died at childbirth. The third child was born deaf. The fourth child contracted tuberculosis. Now the mother is pregnant again.

Seventy percent of the students said, "Abort the child."

"Congratulations," said the professor. "You just aborted Beethoven, for that was his family history."

There are a number of preachers and lawyers, doctors and philosophers saying, "There are no absolutes. Only the situation determines what's right and wrong." But that's not what God says. He says to do justly. Period.

You deposit two quarters in the paper box and accidentally grab two papers. Do you say, "Oh, well, I'll just leave the extra paper on top of the box for someone else"—or do you say, "I owe the publishing company fifty cents," and put another fifty cents in the box without taking another paper?

It's Thursday, garbage day. You know the regulation is thirty-five pounds per can. But you also know you have tons of trash. Do you stuff your can and jump on it to make room for your two hundred pounds of garbage, telling yourself that, for the last three weeks, you only put in ten pounds and so you're justified? Or do you hold to the thirty-five-pound requirement and take the rest to the dump?

The Lord requires us to do justly, to walk in integrity. But that doesn't always mean we'll be rewarded. Seeing a bee drowning in our backyard swimming pool, my daughter, Jessie, scooped him out and set him on the grass. After drying himself off, the bee flew away, rejoicing in his deliverance. The next day, my wife, Tammy, was in the backyard. She, too, saw a bee drowning and, remembering Jessie's example, scooped him out. This bee also dried himself off—then flew straight to Tammy and stung her.

Sometimes that happens. We do what's right and end up getting stung. But, because the Lord is not unfaithful to forget our works of righteousness

(Hebrews 6:10), He says, “Even though no one else notices, even though it may not be a big deal in the eyes of others, when you do justly, you’ll be rewarded eventually—even if you get stung in this life presently.”

To Love Mercy . . .

If you and I do justly, do you know what can happen very easily? We can stick up our noses and say, "Why is he sinning? Why isn't she doing better? Why can't everyone be as good as I?"

Listen again to what God says: Do justly, but love mercy. In other words, "You do what's right, but when it comes to others, look for every opportunity to show mercy." We are not by nature merciful. Our tendency is to want to get back at people who hurt us.

A skinny guy sat at the truck stop counter, enjoying his breakfast when suddenly three big bikers burst through the door, decked out in black leather and silver chains. Wanting to provoke a fight, they grabbed his plate and began scarfing down what was left of his breakfast. But the skinny guy just watched them. When they were done, he calmly paid the bill and walked out the door.

"Can you believe that wimp?" said the bikers to the waitress. "Not much of a man, is he?"

"Maybe not," she said, as she looked out the window. "But he's not much of a truck driver either. He just ran over three motorcycles."

That's our nature—but not God's. He wants us to love mercy, to revel in it, to recklessly look for every opportunity to share it.

Jesus gives us a profound insight into mercy when He says,

> Give, and it shall be given unto you; good measure, pressed down, and shaken together, and running over, shall men give into your bosom. For with the same measure that ye mete withal it shall be measured to you again.

Maybe you've heard television evangelists use this passage to say, "Give to my ministry and you'll be rewarded financially." But that's not what Jesus was saying. In verses 36 and 37, we see He was talking about mercy, saying the degree to which you substitute mercy for judgment is the degree to which men will be merciful to you.

While conversing with a lawyer at a dinner party, a doctor was interrupted by a woman asking for advice concerning an ache in her leg. Irritated by her interruption, the doctor gave her a piece of advice and sent her on her way.

"Tell me," he said to the lawyer, "do I have the legal right to bill her for the advice I gave her?"

"Certainly," said the lawyer.

Two days later, the doctor found a bill for $500 in his mailbox—for the advice the lawyer had given him.

Judge others and you'll be judged. On the other hand, if you show mercy and love and forgiveness and largeness of heart, people will show the same to you. I always love to be around gracious people, people who are eager to show mercy. How I want that quality in my own life.

To Walk Humbly . . .

To walk humbly means to walk in dependency.

Sixty-three percent of all accidents on stairways come from people going up the stairs. Why? Because people going downstairs tend to walk more carefully. So too, it is when we're on our way "up" in life that pride creeps in—a poison that manifests itself first and foremost in prayerlessness. Whenever we think we can live our lives on our own, we stop praying, and, thus, no longer walk humbly with God.

The year was 1911 when Bobby Leach became the first man to survive tumbling over Niagara Falls in an apple barrel. For the next six months, he toured the country, giving lectures on his feat—until he slipped on a banana peel and broke his neck. The Bible says that pride comes before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall (Proverbs 16:18). Whenever you're tempted to think you don't need to pray, that devotions are not important, that you are doing well—remember Bobby Leach because you don't know what banana peel is ahead of you.

God says, "This is what I require for your own benefit, for your own blessing: that you do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with Me." From six hundred thirteen commandments down to three. But if three are still too many for you to remember, Jesus makes it simpler still . . .

> Master, which is the great commandment in the law? Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment. And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.
> Matthew 22:36–39

Jesus reduces Micah's three commandments to two: Love God with all your heart and soul and mind and strength, and love your neighbor as yourself. On these two commandments hangs the entire law.

The use of the word, "hang," I believe, is far more than coincidental, for it is only because Jesus hung on the Cross that we can understand the two great commandments.

> But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.
> Romans 5:8

Nowhere are the two great commandments more perfectly fulfilled than at Calvary—where, in obedience to His Father, Jesus died for His neighbor.

Precious people, it all gets down to a single syllable: Love. Paul said, "If I have the tongues of men and angels but have not love, it's nothing. If I give my body to be burned because I'm so radical in service but I don't have love, it's to no avail. If I have enough faith to do miracles but have not love, it doesn't amount to a hill of beans. It all gets down to love" (see 1 Corinthians 13).

"Uh-oh," you say. "If it all gets down to love, I'm in trouble."

That's what Peter thought . . .

"Do you love Me, Peter?" Jesus asked.

"What can I say, Lord? I denied You. I disobeyed You. How can I say I love You?" Peter answered.

A second time Jesus said, "Peter, do you love Me?"

And a second time, Peter answered, "Lord, You know I like You."

The third time Jesus asked the question, He framed it a little differently, saying, "Peter, do you even like Me?"

"Yes, Lord, You know I like You," Peter answered.

"I'll accept that," Jesus said. "Feed My sheep" (John 21:15–17).

God so loved us that He gave His only Son to die for our sins—including our sin of not loving Him.

> Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy.
> Micah 7:18

From six hundred thirteen to eleven to three to one. Yet even when, like Peter, we fail, Jesus comes to us where we are with pardon and mercy.

He has shown thee what is good: Do justly, love mercy, walk humbly with God. If that's too hard to remember, it's all summed up in a single syllable: love. And if even that's too hard, rather than relying on your love for Him, rest in His love for you.

In Jesus' Name.

Micah 7:1

Woe is me! for I am as when they have gathered the summer fruits, as the grape- gleanings of the vintage: there is no cluster to eat: my soul desired the firstripe fruit.

"Woe is me!" Micah cries because the sight of the people, the prophets, the politicians, and the priesthood all polluted by their pursuit of prosperity and paganism pained his soul.

Micah 7:2 (a)

The good man is perished out of the earth: and there is none upright among men . . .

The Marines are always on the lookout for a few good men. Micah was unable to find even one.

Micah 7:2 (b), 3 (a)

. . . they all lie in wait for blood; they hunt every man his brother with a net. That they may do evil with both hands earnestly . . .

While Micah could find no one of integrity, there was no shortage of men who were bloodthirsty. Unfortunately, the same is true in our day.

Micah 7:3 (b)

. . . the prince asketh, and the judge asketh for a reward; and the great man, he uttereth his mischievous desire: so they wrap it up.

Not only is integrity consumed by the bloodthirsty, but Micah sees a judicial darkness as the giving and taking of bribes overshadow equity.

Micah 7:4
The best of them is as a brier: the most upright is sharper than a thorn hedge: the day of thy watchmen and thy visitation cometh; now shall be their perplexity.

Even the best of men is as dangerous as a hedge of thorns—which is why Jerusalem's watchmen would one day see the arrival of their enemy through whom the Lord would bring judgment to their city.

Micah 7:5 (a)
Trust ye not in a friend . . .

Not only does deceit lurk in every corner of society, but Micah goes on to say that even friends are not trustworthy.

Micah 7:5 (b)
. . . put ye not confidence in a guide . . .

Micah goes even further when he says, "Don't put your confidence in those who claim to be able to guide you—be they pastors or teachers, advisors or counselors."

A Bible school student was taught how to minister to people in the hospital—to stand near them so they wouldn't have to yell across the room, to hold their hands, to pray with them and share some Scripture. Upon graduation, the young man reported to work at his first church. He was only there a few weeks when one of his parishioners became seriously ill. Walking into the man's hospital room, the young pastor remembered what he had been taught. Standing very near the bed, he took the man's hand and began to pray with him. Noticing sweat breaking out on the man's brow and a green pallor coloring his skin, the pastor thought, "Oh, no! This man's dying. I better prepare him for heaven!"

Seeing the man try to mouth something, the pastor put his ear closer to hear the man's final words—only to hear him whisper, "You're standing on my oxygen cord."

Put not your confidence in guides, Micah says, because, although their heart may be right, they often will be the very ones who inadvertently cut off your oxygen supply!

Micah 7:5 (c)
. . . keep the doors of thy mouth from her that lieth in thy bosom.

Going further still, Micah says, "Be careful what you say even to your own mate because he or she may betray you, disappoint you, or not understand you."

There is a tendency in some quarters of the Christian community to place one's mate on such a high pedestal that we subconsciously expect him or her to meet all of our needs. When he or she doesn't, we go to marriage seminar after seminar and to buy self-help book after book only to wonder why our marriage isn't fulfilling to us. And the more we read about other marriages, the more we conclude that our own marriage is worse than we thought. So we work harder at it. But the harder we work, the more frustrated we become. Why? Because a wife or husband will never be able to truly satisfy us any more than a friend, hobby, or job will. Only the Lord can satisfy us. But this realization is being lost today—even in the church.

People work so hard on their marriages that they actually put more pressure on them, resulting in an endless, unnecessary cycle of stress. The solution? If a husband and wife seek first the kingdom of God and love the Lord first and foremost, they can just enjoy each other as they travel together toward heaven. But if they're expecting each other to be God and their marriage to be heaven, they'll find nothing but disillusionment and frustration. Seek first the kingdom, Jesus said—and everything else will fall into place (Matthew 6:33).

For the son dishonoureth the father, the daughter riseth up against her mother, the daughter in law against her mother in law; a man's enemies are the men of his own house.

Even your own family will disappoint you at one time or another, Micah declares. Observing a society lacking integrity and riddled with cruelty, friends that couldn't be trusted, marriages that were less than fulfilling, families that were disappointing—was Micah cynical and bitter? Quite the contrary, he was more hopeful than ever . . .

Micah 7:7, 8
Therefore I will look unto the LORD; I will wait for the God of my salvation: my God will hear me. Rejoice not against me, O mine enemy: when I fall, I shall arise; when I sit in darkness, the LORD shall be a light unto me.

The answer lies not in friends or family, society or country. All of them will disappoint you at one time or another. But there is One who you can absolutely count on to fulfill you, to befriend you, to be completely faithful to you. That One is God. "It's God I need," Micah declares. "It's the Lord I long for and He is here for me."

Micah 7:9
I will bear the indignation of the LORD, because I have sinned against him, until he plead my cause, and execute judgment for me: he will bring me forth to the light, and I shall behold his righteousness.

For thirty-six chapters, Job questioned God. When God answered him, the first words out of Job's mouth were, "Behold, I am vile" (Job 40:4).

"Woe is me!" Isaiah cried when he saw the Lord, "for I am undone because I am a man of unclean lips" (Isaiah 6:5).

"Depart from me," Peter said upon his realization that the Man in his boat was God incarnate, "for I am a sinful man" (Luke 5:8).

Any clear revelation of deity results in a realization of one's own depravity—and Micah was no exception. Speaking not only for the nation of Israel, but for himself, he says, "I will bear the indignation of the Lord because I have sinned against Him."

Micah 7:10

Then she that is mine enemy shall see it, and shame shall cover her which said unto me, Where is the LORD thy God? mine eyes shall behold her: now shall she be trodden down as the mire of the streets.

"He trusted in God; let Him deliver him now," the scribes and elders said of Jesus as He hung on the Cross for their sin (Matthew 27:43).

"Where is thy God?" taunted the enemies of the psalmist (Psalm 42:3).

"Where is the Lord thy God?" scoffed the Assyrians and Babylonians to the Jews?

But through the lens of history, we see the real questions are: Where are the scribes and elders? Where are the psalmist's foes? Where are the Assyrians and Babylonians? They are all gone—while God is still on the throne.

Micah 7:11
In the day that thy walls are to be built, in that day shall the decree be far removed.

Following their seventy-year captivity, the Jews were released to Jerusalem where, under the leadership of Nehemiah and Zerubbabel, they rebuilt her walls and temple.

Micah 7:12
In that day also he shall come even to thee from Assyria, and from the fortified cities, and from the fortress even to the river, and from sea to sea, and from mountain to mountain.

Upon their return from captivity, the Jews were to occupy their country from the Euphrates River to the Nile River, from the Mediterranean Sea to the ocean, from Mount Libanus to Mount Seir. This prophecy was literally fulfilled during Herod's reign when Jesus was born.

Micah 7:13
Notwithstanding the land shall be desolate because of them that dwell therein, for the fruit of their doings.

Although the Jews would return to their land, the fact that it had been desolate for their seventy-year captivity would serve as a reminder of the effects of their sin (Jeremiah 21:14).

Micah 7:14 (a)
Feed thy people with thy rod, the flock of thine heritage . . .

After suffering the consequences of her sin under the rod of her enemies, Micah prays that Israel would now be led by the rod—or shepherd's crook—of her God.

Micah 7:14 (b)
. . . which dwell solitarily . . .

No longer would Israel be dispersed among the nations. She would dwell in her own land according to the promise of God (Numbers 23:9; Deuteronomy 33:28).

Micah 7:14 (c)
. . . in the wood, in the midst of Carmel: let them feed in Bashan and Gilead, as in the days of old.

Bashan and Gilead were chosen by Reuben, Gad, and half of Manasseh because of the abundance of their pasture land (Numbers 32).

Micah 7:15–17
According to the days of thy coming out of the land of Egypt will I shew unto him marvellous things. The nations shall see and be confounded at all their might: they shall lay their hand upon their mouth, their ears shall be deaf. They shall lick the dust like a serpent, they shall move out of their holes like worms of the earth: they shall be afraid of the LORD our God, and shall fear because of thee.

Answering Micah's prayer, God calls to mind Israel's exodus from Egypt —a time when He moved miraculously and decisively to deliver His people from bondage. As He did then, so He would do again. Why? Read on . . .

Micah 7:18
Who is a God like unto thee, that pardoneth iniquity, and passeth by the transgression of the remnant of his heritage? he retaineth not his anger for ever, because he delighteth in mercy.

The reason God pardons sin as horrendous as Israel's and as hideous as mine is single: He delights in mercy. The justice of God took the wrath I deserved and poured it on Christ Jesus, His Son, who was slain for my sin. When Jesus cried from the Cross, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?" He was feeling the anger God should have hurled on me. Thus, God can say, "I delight in mercy"—not, "I have to develop it, discipline Myself to feel it, or determine to show it. No, I delight in mercy because the price of your sin was fully paid on the Cross by My Son."

Micah 7:19
He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.

Exploring the three-mile deep Mariana Trench off the coast of Indonesia, divers discovered that light becomes nonexistent in such depth. This means that God not only forgives our sins completely but tosses them into the one place in the world where they become totally invisible.

Micah 7:20
Thou wilt perform the truth to Jacob, and the mercy to Abraham, which thou hast sworn unto our fathers from the days of old.

God alone is as merciful as He is truthful. Friends and family disappoint us repeatedly. Pastors and guides step on our oxygen hoses unknowingly. Society lets us down constantly. Therefore, Micah says, "God alone is the One to whom I look, upon whom I rely, in whom I believe."

Does this mean I am to become cynical about people? No—for when I look to God, have hope in God, and walk with God, I'm free to accept people for the wretches we all are due to our fallen humanity. The more I understand this, the less I pressure you to be something you're not; the less I demand that my wife, my kids, my friends, church, family, boss, or country be that which they can never be. There is only One who is good, who passes over iniquity, who delights in mercy, who casts our sin into the depths of the sea.

After praying so intensely that it caused His blood vessels to burst, Jesus saw a company of men coming toward Him. Suddenly, from out of the company, one stepped forward and kissed Him on the cheek. Knowing exactly what Judas was doing (John 6:70), Jesus nonetheless said to him, "Friend, wherefore art thou come?"—even then giving Judas an opportunity to respond to His unfathomable love (Matthew 26:50).

- Jesus called Judas "friend." Amazing.
  Jesus calls me "friend" (John 15:15). Incredible.
- Who is our God?
  Micah was right. There is none like Him.

NAHUM

Background to Nahum

Written in 630 B.C., the Book of Nahum is a sequel to the Book of Jonah. Jonah was the prophet sent with a message to Nineveh, the capital city of the Assyrian empire. Nineveh was an awesome city so big that it took three days to walk across it (Jonah 3:3) and protected by a wall so thick chariots could race atop it. Interspersed in this massive wall were 1,200 towers from which soldiers were able to rain boulders, arrows, and spears on any enemy audacious enough to approach the seemingly impregnable fortress.

As for the inhabitants of Nineveh, there has not been a more cruel people in the history of the world. Consequently, when the Lord commissioned Jonah to preach repentance to this bloody, brutal people, Jonah went as far as he could in the opposite direction in fear that they would receive his message and experience God's forgiveness.

Eventually, however, Jonah ended up in Nineveh. Bleached white from the gastric juices of the whale's stomach, such a sight was he that when he preached, "Repent. Judgment comes in forty days," in the streets of Nineveh, the people listened to what he said and repented. The greatest revival in the history of the world followed as over 600,000 people repented and turned to God.

Now, one hundred fifty years later, we pick up the story in the Book of Nahum—a book that divides itself into three sections. In chapter 1, Nineveh's doom is declared. In chapter 2, Nineveh's doom is described. In chapter 3, Nineveh's doom is deserved.

NAHUM

1 Nahum 1:1
The burden of Nineveh. The book of the vision of Nahum the Elkoshite.

Nahum was the prophet raised up by the Lord to bring a message to Nineveh—the capital city of Assyria, which had once turned to God but had now drifted far from Him. His name means "comforter"—which is interesting to me because his message of gloom and doom, destruction and devastation, is anything but comforting. Was Nahum named amiss? Should the Lord have changed his name—like Marion Campbell did when he became John Wayne? Is Comforter an appropriate name for this individual? I think we will see that indeed it is.

Although we don't know for certain where Nahum lived, there is a town located on the northern shore of the Sea of Galilee—the town where centuries later Jesus would establish the headquarters for His ministry—named Capernaum, or Caper-nahum, meaning the town of Nahum. Some have suggested this was Nahum's hometown.

Nahum begins his prophecy with a revelation of the personality and power of God as seen in verses 2 through 7 . . .

Nahum 1:2
God is jealous, and the LORD revengeth; the LORD revengeth, and is furious; the LORD will take vengeance on his adversaries, and he reserveth wrath for his enemies.

God is love. But His love is not a sloppy sentimentality. His love is righteous and true. Thus, His very jealousy is part of His love, for He would not be loving if He were not jealous.

"I'm confused," you say. "I thought jealousy was a sign of carnality, a sin of the flesh." Jealousy is a sin as it relates to you and me (Proverbs 6:34)—but not as it relates to God.

You see, when I get jealous it is because I am worried someone is going to take something or someone from me. Not so with God. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit are completely content in and of themselves. God isn't saying, "If I lose Jon, My whole world will collapse and I'll be miserable." No, God is all-sufficient. He has need of nothing. This means His love for me is not based upon my satisfying Him or my fulfilling a void in His life. Therefore, because He needs nothing, God's jealousy is vastly different from man's.

God is jealous not because He's worried about His loss—but because He's concerned about our hurt. Think of it this way: If we were at the zoo and a cobra slithered out of its cage and was face to face with my kids, I'd be very jealous for them. It's not that I would worry that the cobra would steal them away from me or that they'd like the snake better than me. No, I would simply be concerned that the cobra would hurt them.

That's the kind of jealousy God has. "Kids," He says, "I'm not concerned that you'll hurt Me but that you'll be hurt in leaving Me. The cobra is sure to strike, so I will deal with those things that will hurt or harm you. I will take vengeance on My enemies in order to protect My children."

Nahum 1:3 (a)
The LORD is slow to anger . . .

God is jealous in the best sense of the word and He doesn't have a temper. I like that. Haven't you found that when your temper boils over, you always end up in hot water? I have! God is not like that. Over and over again, our Father identifies Himself as One who is slow to anger (Nehemiah 9:17; Psalm 103:8; Joel 2:13; Jonah 4:2).

Nahum 1:3 (b)
. . . and great in power . . .

Some people mistake the patience of God for apathy. "I'm sinning," they say, "and nothing's happening to me so God must not care." But that's a big mistake indeed. Although the people of Nineveh had responded to God initially, they returned to their evil practices eventually. For one hundred fifty years, God was slow to anger. But now He's about to demonstrate His power.

Nahum 1:3 (c)–6
. . . and will not at all acquit the wicked: the LORD hath his way in the whirlwind and in the storm, and the clouds are the dust of his feet. He rebuketh the sea, and maketh it dry, and drieth up all the rivers: Bashan languisheth, and Carmel, and the flower of Lebanon languisheth. The mountains quake at him, and the hills melt, and the earth is burned at his presence, yea, the world, and all that dwell therein. Who can stand before his indignation? and who can abide in the fierceness of his anger? his fury is poured out like fire, and the rocks are thrown down by him.

The awesomeness of God's judgment makes me appreciate all the more what Jesus Christ absorbed for me on the Cross of Calvary. When God poured out all of the wrath that should have been poured out on all of humanity, He poured it out on His Son who died in our place. What a price. When you read about the severity of God's judgment and wrath, you cannot help but grow greatly in your amazement that Jesus Christ took the rap for you, for me, for us.

Nahum 1:7 (a)
The LORD is good . . .

After Nahum declares God's power, a reminder is given: The Lord is good. I like that! When you're talking about the awesomeness of His judgment, always keep in mind that the Lord is good. The first verse I taught each of my kids was Psalm 73:1: Truly God is good. Why did I choose that particular verse? Not only because it's simple to learn but because it's foundational to their understanding of who God is.

The goodness of God is the first truth Satan attacks. "Has God said you're not to eat of that fruit?" he asked Eve. "He knows in the day you eat it, you'll have new revelation." In other words, "God is holding back something good from you, Eve" (Genesis 3:1–5).

And that's what Satan still does today. He slithers up beside you and hisses in your ear, "Isn't that a little narrow and ressstrictive? Issssn't there a more exciting way to live? Is God truly good?"

"I know mentally that God is good, but emotionally sometimes I doubt His goodness," said the psalmist. "But then I go into the sanctuary. And when I'm in God's presence with God's people, I'm reminded of His goodness all over again" (Psalm 73). Haven't you found the same thing to be true? You come to the place where God's people are studying and worshiping—and suddenly you see it again: God is good!

Nahum 1:7 (b)
. . . a strong hold in the day of trouble . . .

Do you know that life is hard? "As sure as sparks from a fire fly upward, man is born for trouble," Job declares (see Job 5:7).

"Many are the afflictions of the righteous," David echoes, "but the Lord delivers them out of them all" (Psalm 34:19).

Don't think you have troubles simply because you're a Christian. The unbeliever has just as many difficulties as you do. The difference is, you have access to the Problem Solver. You can turn to the Lord, the "stronghold in the day of trouble"—but he doesn't know he can.

Nahum 1:7 (c)
. . . and he knoweth them that trust in him.

God not only knows those who trust in Him, but He thinks about them. How often? As many times as there are grains of sand on the shores of the sea . . .

> O LORD, thou hast searched me, and known me. How precious also are thy thoughts unto me, O God! how great is the sum of them! If I should count them, they are more in number than the sand . . .
> Psalm 139:1, 17, 18 (a)

God says, "When I'm on the seashores of Waikiki, Bora Bora, or Tahiti, I'm thinking about you more often than the number of grains of sand beneath My feet."

Those who study such things tell us there are ten to the twenty-fifth power grains of sand on the seashore worldwide. They also tell us there are ten to the twenty-fifth power stars in the heavens. I find this more than coincidental, for God promised Abraham that his seed would be as the sand on the seashore and as the stars in the heavens (Genesis 22:17).

So next time you're at the beach, remember that there's a star for every grain of sand. And for every star, there's a thought about you in the heart and mind of your Father. In other words, you're always on His mind and in His heart.

Nahum 1:8 (a)
But . . .

In verses 2 through 7, we saw the personality and power of God revealed. Now we change direction. In verses 8 through 15, we'll see the prophecy and plan of God unveiled.

Nahum 1:8 (b)–10
. . . with an overrunning flood he will make an utter end of the place thereof, and darkness shall pursue his enemies. What do ye imagine against the LORD? he will make an utter end: affliction shall not rise up the second time. For while they be folden together as thorns, and while they are drunken as drunkards, they shall be devoured as stubble fully dry.

One of the most fascinating prophecies in the minor prophets is embedded in this passage for Greek historians tell us this is precisely what happened when, eighteen years after Nahum's prophecy was given, the emerging empires of the Medes to the north and the Babylonians to the south joined together to attack the city of Nineveh. With enough food growing within her city walls to feed her population indefinitely and with the Euphrates river flowing through the city itself to provide water, Nineveh successfully fended off three separate attacks over three years by simply shutting herself off from her attackers and hunkering down within her walls.

To celebrate her victory, the Ninevites threw a party—a drunken orgy that lasted for weeks. But, as they partied, the Lord began to send clouds over Nineveh. As rain fell, the Euphrates began to swell so much that it eventually caused the foundation of the mighty wall to crumble. The Medes and Babylonians stormed through the breaches and torched the city—precisely as Nahum had prophesied.

There is one come out of thee, that imagineth evil against the LORD, a wicked counsellor. Thus saith the LORD: Though they be quiet, and likewise many, yet thus shall they be cut down, when he shall pass through. Though I have afflicted thee, I will afflict thee no more. For now will I break his yoke from off thee, and will burst thy bonds in sunder.

So completely destroyed was the city that in 330 B.C., when Alexander the Great came marching through the area, there was not a single stone left on the spot where Nineveh once stood. Consequently, as the years passed, skeptics began to say there never was a Nineveh, that it was just a biblical tall tale. But in 1845, an archaeologist happened to hit something with his spade while digging in Iraq—and by the time the project was completed, the city of Nineveh was uncovered.

Nahum 1:14
And the LORD hath given a commandment concerning thee, that no more of thy name be sown: out of the house of thy gods will I cut off the graven image and the molten image: I will make thy grave; for thou art vile.

In addition to the city of Nineveh being wiped out, Nahum's prophecy that "no more of thy name be sown" was fulfilled completely—for who of us knows a single Assyrian?

Nahum 1:15

Behold upon the mountains the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace! O Judah, keep thy solemn feasts, perform thy vows: for the wicked shall no more pass through thee; he is utterly cut off.

The good tidings of which Nahum writes refer to the destruction of Nineveh. How can destruction be good news? Living in Judah, knowing the Assyrians were always ready to pounce on you and skin you alive, if someone said, "Assyria is wiped out," wouldn't you say, "That's good news!"? That's why Nahum was not misnamed. He was indeed a comforter —not to the people living in Nineveh, but to the people of Judah.

> How beautiful upon the mountains are the feet of him that bringeth good tidings, that publisheth peace; that bringeth good tidings of good, that publisheth salvation; that saith unto Zion, Thy God reigneth!
> Isaiah 52:7

Isaiah wrote this, looking forward to the kingdom age, when Jesus will come back and reign in Jerusalem.

> How then shall they call on him in whom they have not believed? and how shall they believe in him of whom they have not heard? and how shall they hear without a preacher? And how shall they preach, except they be sent? as it is written, How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things!
> Romans 10:14, 15

Paul uses the same text to speak not only of a future kingdom but of present salvation. Thus, the same prophetic word is seen in three different passages with three different applications—Nineveh's destruction, the future kingdom, and our salvation—all good news.

2 In chapter 1, Nineveh's doom was declared. Here in chapter 2, Nineveh's doom is described. In verses 1 through 8, we read of the pounding of Nineveh. In verses 9 through 13, we see the plundering of Nineveh.

Nahum 2:1 (a)
He that dasheth in pieces is come up before thy face . . .

In other words—as your margin might read—"the hammer is come up before thy face." Isaiah had prophesied the same thing years earlier when the Lord likened Assyria to a paddle, an instrument in His hand by which He disciplined the people of Israel. "But you have gone beyond that," declared the Lord. "You have prided yourselves in that you have destroyed My people. Therefore, I will destroy you" (Isaiah 10).

"With what measure ye mete, it shall be given you," Jesus said (Matthew 7:2). Because the Assyrians were quick to dispense judgment, judgment would fall upon them. Good lesson there. How you treat others will come back on you.

Nahum 2:1 (b)
. . . keep the munition, watch the way, make thy loins strong, fortify thy power mightily.

"Beware, Nineveh," said the Lord through Nahum. "The hammering blows of the Medes and Babylonians are about to fall on you—for they are instruments of My wrath."

Nahum 2:2
For the LORD hath turned away the excellency of Jacob, as the excellency of Israel: for the emptiers have emptied them out, and marred their vine branches.

"You have marred My people. You have emptied My branches. Now it's your turn to be emptied and marred," said the Lord to Nineveh.

Nahum 2:3, 4

The shield of his mighty men is made red, the valiant men are in scarlet: the chariots shall be with flaming torches in the day of his preparation, and the fir trees shall be terribly shaken. The chariots shall rage in the streets, they shall justle one against another in the broad ways: they shall seem like torches, they shall run like the lightnings.

With its references to chariots, streets, and speed, some have taken this passage as a prophecy concerning the age of the automobile. Although it's interesting, I don't think such is the case. But of the following prophecy, we can be sure . . .

Nahum 2:5, 6
He shall recount his worthies: they shall stumble in their walk; they shall make haste to the wall thereof, and the defence shall be prepared. The gates of the rivers shall be opened, and the palace shall be dissolved.

As Nineveh's walls crumbled from the force of the flooded Euphrates, the King of Assyria hid in his palace. He must have thought he would surely be safe there. After all, it was six hundred feet long, six hundred thirty feet wide, had eighty rooms, and was surrounded by gold and silver lions. His private armory, which held his shields and spears, horses and chariots, covered eighteen acres. But it eventually became evident that neither his palace nor his armory could save him. Realizing this, he committed suicide by lighting himself on fire, burning down his palace in the process.

Nahum 2:7
And Huzzab shall be led away captive, she shall be brought up, and her maids shall lead her as with the voice of doves, tabering upon their breasts.

With no historical mention of Huzzab, Queen of Nineveh, being burned in the fire that claimed her husband's life, it is assumed that she escaped and was carried away captive with the rest of her people.

Nahum 2:8
But Nineveh is of old like a pool of water: yet they shall flee away. Stand, stand, shall they cry; but none shall look back.

Panic gripped the city. The king was dead. The palace was dissolved. The enemy was flooding in.

Nahum 2:9
Take ye the spoil of silver, take the spoil of gold: for there is none end of the store and glory out of all the pleasant furniture.

After pounding the city of Nineveh, the Mede and Babylonian troops were commanded to plunder it.

Nahum 2:10 (a)
She is empty, and void, and waste: and the heart melteth, and the knees smite together . . .

Because they had rebelled against God, the knees of the Ninevites were knocking. Like the Ninevites, we, too, have rebelled against God. But instead of being fearful, we have the opportunity to be prayerful because we are forgiven of our rebellion by the blood of Calvary. Whenever your knees are knocking, kneel on them—and be reminded of the sin-cleansing, enemy-defeating power of the Cross.

Nahum 2:10 (b)–12
. . . and much pain is in all loins, and the faces of them all gather blackness. Where is the dwelling of the lions, and the feedingplace of the young lions, where the lion, even the old lion, walked, and the lion's whelp, and none made them afraid? The lion did tear in pieces enough for his whelps, and strangled for his lionesses, and filled his holes with prey, and his dens with ravin.

With an insatiable appetite, the king of Assyria had been "king of the jungle," devouring surrounding nations to feed his own "family."

Nahum 2:13
Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will burn her chariots in the smoke, and the sword shall devour thy young lions: and I will cut off thy prey from the earth, and the voice of thy messengers shall no more be heard.

"Behold, I am against thee." What terrifying words! Do you realize these are the very words of the Lord toward your relatives and neighbors, colleagues and friends who reject the Word of Jesus Christ? They might think they're partying; they might think they're cruising—but little do they know that it is only God's patience that is preventing His judgment. And when it comes, His judgment will be devastating and damning.

Never give up sharing the gospel, saints, for, "Behold, I am against thee" becomes, "If God be for us who can be against us?" (Romans 8:31) for anyone who simply embraces Jesus.

Nahum 3:1 (a)
Woe to the bloody city! . . .

The first reason the destruction of Nineveh was deserved was due to the cruelty of the Ninevites.

Nahum 3:1 (b)
. . . it is all full of lies and robbery . . .

The men of Jerusalem were sitting on the wall of the city when Rabshakeh came out with the mighty armies of Assyria, saying, "We're going to blow you away. No nation has stopped us. No god of any people has proven a match for our armies. However, if you come out and make a deal with us, we'll let you live in pleasant lands" (2 Kings 18). This was the Assyrians' typical method of operation. They would make deals with people and lure them out of their cities—only to loot their cities once the inhabitants were defenseless.

Nahum 3:1 (c)–3
. . . the prey departeth not; The noise of a whip, and the noise of the rattling of the wheels, and of the pransing horses, and of the jumping chariots. The horseman lifteth up both the bright sword and the glittering spear: and there is a multitude of slain, and a great number of carcases; and there is none end of their corpses; they stumble upon their corpses:

The cruelty of the Assyrians is beyond that of any other society in history. They would commit mass murder in every city they conquered, piling the skulls of their vanquished in huge pyramids outside the conquered cities as a warning of the consequence of standing in their way.

Nahum 3:4–7
Because of the multitude of the whoredoms of the well-favoured harlot, the mistress of witchcrafts, that selleth nations through her whoredoms, and families through her witchcrafts. Behold, I am against thee, saith the LORD of hosts; and I will discover thy skirts upon thy face, and I will shew the nations thy nakedness, and the kingdoms thy shame. And I will cast abominable filth upon thee, and make thee vile, and will set thee as a gazingstock. And it shall come to pass, that all they that look upon thee shall flee from thee, and say, Nineveh is laid waste: who will bemoan her? whence shall I seek comforters for thee?

Carnality was also a reason for Nineveh's destruction. Immorality was a part of it, but the major failing here is actually the idea of witchcraft. In both the Old and New Testaments, witchcraft is associated with drugs. The New Testament word translated "witchcraft" is actually pharmakeia—from which we get our word "pharmacy." In the taking of drugs, there's always a connection with the supernatural realm of the demonic world. And the Lord says, "Because you're involved with drugs and witchcraft and because you've spread your practices throughout the world, I will expose you to the world."

We have seen this very thing happen closer to home. One of the most advanced civilizations in world history was the Inca civilization. From their ruins in Central and South America, we know they were experts in brain surgery at a time when European cultures were still using leeches for bloodletting. Through genetic engineering, the Incans developed a singles bee that was prolific in the production of honey. The Incan postal system guaranteed two-day delivery to anywhere in their empire.

What happened to the Incas? They came across a little plant—the coca shrub—from which they were able to extract cocaine. And eventually the great Incan thinkers and philosophers, inventors, scientists, and architects lost all interest in developing their civilization or defending themselves. In so doing, they destroyed themselves—as will any civilization that glorifies drug use.

Nahum 3:8–10
Art thou better than populous No, that was situate among the rivers, that had the waters round about it, whose rampart was the sea, and her wall was from the sea? Ethiopia and Egypt were her strength, and it was infinite; Put and Lubim were thy helpers. Yet was she carried away, she went into captivity: her young children also were dashed in pieces at the top of all the streets: and they cast lots for her honourable men, and all her great men were bound in chains.

Stupidity is a third reason for the destruction of Nineveh. "No" was another name for the wealthy Egyptian city of Thebes which the Assyrians conquered only a few years prior to this in 633 B.C. Therefore, God is saying, "Don't you get the picture? Why do you think you can escape the fate of Thebes who also thought it was invincible?"

Nahum 3:11–13
Thou also shalt be drunken: thou shalt be hid, thou also shalt seek strength because of the enemy. All thy strong holds shall be like fig trees with the firstripe figs: if they be shaken, they shall even fall into the mouth of the eater. Behold, thy people in the midst of thee are women: the gates of thy land shall be set wide open unto thine enemies: the fire shall devour thy bars.

Homosexuality is a fourth reason for the destruction of Nineveh. From historical records, we know that the society of Assyria and the city of Nineveh in particular were caught up not only in homosexuality, but in bizarre, masochistic, and sadistic practices. That is why they were no more able to stand against their enemies than a ripe fig could cling to a shaken branch.

Nahum 3:14
Draw thee waters for the siege, fortify thy strong holds: go into clay, and tread the morter, make strong the brickkiln.

Here's Nahum mockingly giving directions to a people who are lacking any kind of leadership. But then he continues on a serious note . . .

Nahum 3:15, 16
There shall the fire devour thee; the sword shall cut thee off, it shall eat thee up like the cankerworm: make thyself many as the cankerworm, make thyself many as the locusts. Thou hast multiplied thy merchants above the stars of heaven: the cankerworm spoileth, and fleeth away.

In other words, "As quickly as locusts can level a field, so your boutiques and merchants' shops will be leveled in the day of destruction."

Nahum 3:17, 18
Thy crowned are as the locusts, and thy captains as the great grasshoppers, which camp in the hedges in the cold day, but when the sun ariseth they flee away, and their place is not known where they are. Thy shepherds slumber, O king of Assyria: thy nobles shall dwell in the dust: thy people is scattered upon the mountains, and no man gathereth them.

"When the going gets tough, Nineveh, your leaders are going to run and hide."

Nahum 3:19
There is no healing of thy bruise; thy wound is grievous: all that hear the bruit of thee shall clap the hands over thee: for upon whom hath not thy wickedness passed continually?

"Everyone who hears about your destruction will applaud," declared the Lord. And that's the way Nahum's prophecy ends.

Was the judgment, the doom, the destruction of Nineveh deserved? Yes, for the wrath of God is an important component of His love. Because they were doomed already by their corruption and disease, God in His love is absolutely justified in destroying such a society.

If a snarling dog came into my house baring its teeth and foaming at the mouth, would I have been justified in judging, in destroying the dog? Yes, because the dog was going to die anyway. He was diseased. He was rabid. He was doomed. But my kids didn't have rabies. And I would have had to protect them from the diseased dog. I would not be loving if I said, "Oh, well, so the dog has rabies. Come on, kids, be big-hearted. Pet the puppy. Give the doggy a kiss."

Love means doing what is right and best for the people about whom you care. Thus, God looked at the Assyrian society and said, "I'm giving you year after decade after century to turn back to Me. But if you refuse, I must destroy you in order to protect the people living round about you."

Our God is a consuming fire (Deuteronomy 4:24). This warms me because I know things are terribly wrong in our world. And being a consuming fire, God says, "I'll not allow sin to go on indefinitely. I am patient now for I am not willing that any should perish, that all should come to repentance (2 Peter 3:9). But there is coming a day in which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise; the elements shall melt with fervent heat; and the earth will be burned up (2 Peter 3:10). Yes, I'm patient. I'm giving people plenty of opportunity to turn to Me. But the day is coming when I will judge radically."

The consuming fire aspect of God's nature warms me—not only because the world around me will be made right but also because the worldliness within me will be consumed. If you are being disciplined by the Lord, rejoice because it means He's not going to allow corruption within you to go unchecked. He's the Great Physician who, with the fire of conviction and chastisement, will burn out the cancer of carnality before it destroys you eternally.

Would anyone knowingly go to a doctor who, not wanting to hurt or offend his patients, never told them there was anything wrong with them in spite of the fact that x-rays showed cancer growing within them? No. We want a doctor who will cut into us if necessary to save us physically. In the same way, our God is a consuming fire, a Great Physician, who will judge not only the world around us but the worldliness within us. This knowledge warms me.

But it also warns me . . .

> Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works? And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.
>
> Matthew 7:22, 23

> . . . but he that endureth to the end shall be saved.
>
> Matthew 10:22 (b)

> Wherefore the rather, brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure . . .
> 2 Peter 1:10 (a)

Nahum spoke to a city that was once revived, a city that had once turned toward God with fasting and sackcloth, with prayer and sincerity. But, as time went on, the Ninevites slid back into their old, carnal ways, and now Nahum says, "Thus saith the Lord: I am against you."

I do believe there will be people who will stand before the Lord and honestly be shocked to hear the words, "Depart from Me. I never knew you"

(Matthew 7:23).

"But back in 1968, I walked forward at a Billy Graham crusade," they'll say.

Or, "In 1953, I threw my pine cone on the fire at Camp Winnemukka. How can it be that You never knew Me?"

How can we who know God begin to slip away (Hebrews 2:1)? This happens when church is no longer important, when ministry happens only when it's convenient, when prayer no longer has priority, when Bible reading becomes a chore. It happens when, like Nineveh, you're no longer where you once were in your relationship with the Lord. And if you ignore the voice of the Comforter, of the Holy Ghost, saying, "Turn"—you can be in real trouble.

"This is scaring me," you say.

Good. I would rather see you walk in fear and trembling all the way into heaven than to be lulled into lethargy only to be awakened by the words, "I am against you."

Make your calling and election sure, dear saint. On your face before the Lord, ask Him to have mercy upon you. Embrace Him. Submit to Him. Follow hard after Him. He's a loving Father who will send the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, to be the Nahum in your heart, saying, "Turn away. Get right. Come back."

HABAKKUK

Background to Habakkuk

Habakkuk was the last of the minor prophets to preach in Judah, the southern kingdom, before the final Babylonian invasion. Led by Nebuchadnezzar, the Babylonians invaded Judah on three separate occasions before carrying the Jews back to Babylon and into captivity in 586 B.C. Ministering in the days immediately preceding Nebuchadnezzar's first invasion, Habakkuk must have written his book sometime around 609 B.C.

The times were troubling. The days were dark. There were ominous signs on the horizon. Having already formed an axis with the Medes to overthrow the Assyrians, the Babylonians would continue to rise in power under the leadership of their king, Nebuchadnezzar.

From internal evidence, we can assume that since Habakkuk began his ministry in 630 B.C., he ministered for a number of years before this book was penned. We don't know much about Habakkuk personally. However, on the basis of the last verse in the book, in which he writes, "To the chief singer on my stringed instruments," we can assume he was a priest before he was a prophet because it was the Levites, particularly the priests, who wrote the songs and played the instruments in the temple. If this be so, he would be in the same situation as a contemporary—a prophet named Jeremiah.

Jeremiah was also a priest before he was called to be a prophet. So these two men, both, it would seem, called from the priestly ministry into a prophetic ministry, ministered in the days immediately before the Babylonian invasion, when the southern kingdom would come crashing down. The priestly ministry was much more regimented than the prophetic ministry. Priests had certain prescribed activities they performed each day. They followed the Levitical calendar with its feasts and festivals.

The prophetic ministry, on the other hand, was anything but regimented and ordered. The prophets didn't have any kind of structure. They were moved by the Spirit of the Lord to do whatever, whenever, however He guided. Isaiah was told to make a point by taking off his clothes and walking through the land—getting peoples' attention and explaining to them the "naked" truth about their situation. Hosea was told to marry a prostitute as an illustration of God's redemptive ability in embracing people who are unfaithful to Him. Ezekiel was told to chop off his hair and throw it in the fire.

The prophetic ministry was a difficult one! These men were called to do radical things to get the attention of people who had grown so calloused and hard-hearted that God was willing to go to great extremes to get them to listen. If indeed Habakkuk had previously enjoyed being a minstrel in the temple, I'm not sure what his reaction was when he was called to be a prophet. I know what Jeremiah's was. He said, "Oh, Lord, not me. I am but a youth" (Jeremiah 1:6). He was probably thirty years old at the time, but he was trying to find any reason why he shouldn't be thrust into the bold ministry of a prophet.

Habakkuk is interesting because of all the prophets, he is the only one who, in his book, is not being initiated by God into the ministry but rather he is initiating a dialogue with God about the ministry. He's the initiator and God is the respondent.

At the beginning of his ministry, Habakkuk saw the people go through a revival of sorts in the days of King Josiah. Eight years old when he began to reign, Scripture records that, at the age of sixteen, Josiah sought the Lord "while he was yet young" (2 Chronicles 34:3). At age twenty, Josiah ordered the temple to be remodeled during the course of which a copy of the Law was found (2 Chronicles 34:14). Because the country had been so wicked previously that not a single copy of the Scripture could be found in the entire land, when this copy was uncovered in the temple, the people were amazed. As he read it, Josiah realized how far Judah was from where she should be. He wept before the Lord and called the people to seek Him and to observe the festivals and feasts of Israel once again. And a great revival seemed to follow.

But, in reality, no one can legislate spirituality. There was reformation but not regeneration. People went through the outward motions but their hearts were not right toward the Lord. They attended the services and enjoyed the festivals—but they did not respond to the Lord personally. So Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Jeremiah, and others were on the scene, calling the people to a true spirituality—not just a religiosity but a genuine relationship with God.

Josiah left the scene. Then came Jehoiakim. Jehoiakim was an evil king. Given a scroll by Jeremiah concerning how he should behave, Jehoiakim cut the scroll into pieces, and tossed them into the fire. Jeremiah wrote another scroll—only this time the message against Jehoiakim was stronger and the prophesied future of Judah bleaker (Jeremiah 36:32).

The spiritual climate was degenerating rapidly. The revival that had happened a few years previously did not affect the people on a deep level. The new king was wicked and the people were plunged into immorality, leaving Habakkuk to wonder, "Lord, why don't You judge Your people? Why aren't You working? Where are You?"

Habakkuk is a beautiful gem of a book, written by the prophet who started out wrestling with God and ended up worshiping Him.

The burden which Habakkuk the prophet did see.

Habakkuk means "wrestler." Therefore, he's been called the "doubting Thomas" of the Old Testament. In chapter 1, we'll see him wondering and wrestling. In chapter 2, we'll see him watching and waiting. In chapter 3, we'll see him worshiping and witnessing. In chapter 1, he begins in the valley. In chapter 2, he'll climb into the tower. In chapter 3, he ascends to the mountain. In chapter 1, he sighs. In chapter 2, he'll seek. In chapter 3, he'll sing. Thus, this book that bears his name is a great book for any of us who, at any time, wonder, "Where is God?"

Habakkuk 1:2
O LORD, how long shall I cry, and thou wilt not hear! even cry out unto thee of violence, and thou wilt not save!

"Lord, how long will I cry?" pleads Habakkuk. The second time he uses the word "cry" in verse 2, the Hebrew word is actually "scream." Thus, Habakkuk is actually saying, "I cry to You, Lord, but You don't hear me. I scream out before You, but You don't help me!"

Do you ever feel that way?

Habakkuk 1:3
Why dost thou shew me iniquity, and cause me to behold grievance? for spoiling and violence are before me: and there are that raise up strife and contention.

"I look around Jerusalem," says Habakkuk, "and all I see is violence and contention. Why aren't You doing anything about this, Lord?"

I think we feel the same way watching the nightly news. "Lord, can't You see what's happening?"

Habakkuk 1:4
Therefore the law is slacked, and judgment doth never go forth: for the wicked doth compass about the righteous; therefore wrong judgment proceedeth.

The Hebrew word translated "slacked" literally means "paralyzed." "The law is paralyzed," moans Habakkuk. "It's not working. The judicial system is not functioning."

Before he is executed, the average capital offender in this country will spend twenty-two years in legal procedures at a cost of 1.8 million dollars. So, if a guy kills someone, it costs our government 1.8 million dollars and twenty-two years of legal hoops before he actually is executed. Our system is paralyzed. Our judicial system is not working the way it was meant to—and history shows that when a society or a country cannot deal with its infection quickly and effectively, like a human body, it will die of infection.

Habakkuk 1:5
Behold ye among the heathen, and regard, and wonder marvellously: for I will work a work in your days, which ye will not believe, though it be told you.

"Don't accuse Me of not working, of not seeing," says God. "I am doing something, Habakkuk—but if I told you what it was, you wouldn't even believe it."

I'm convinced that's why God doesn't tell us what He's doing. He knows that if He told us what would be happening in our lives five years from now, we wouldn't believe it—or we would argue about it. In Isaiah 55:8 and 9, the Lord declares that His ways are not our ways, that His thoughts are higher than ours. This means God does not have an obligation to give us explanation about our expectation. His promise is simply relaxation.

"Be anxious for nothing," Paul would write, "but in everything with prayer and supplication let your requests be made known to God. And the peace of God which passes understanding shall keep your hearts and minds in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 4:7).

In other words, God says, "When you're anxious or uptight, I promise you not a peace that comes from your understanding but a peace that passes your understanding. I'm going to bypass your puny brain, so to speak, and infuse you with a deep peace in your heart."

Here, He's saying to Habakkuk, "You're accusing Me of indifference and inactivity, but if I told you what I was doing, you wouldn't believe it." And then, it's almost as if Habakkuk says, "Try me," because the Lord proceeds to explain something of what He's doing . . .

Habakkuk 1:6–11
For, lo, I raise up the Chaldeans, that bitter and hasty nation, which shall march through the breadth of the land, to possess the dwellingplaces that are not theirs. They are terrible and dreadful: their judgment and their dignity shall proceed of themselves. Their horses also are swifter than the leopards, and are more fierce than the evening wolves: and their horsemen shall spread themselves, and their horsemen shall come from far; they shall fly as the eagle that hasteth to eat. They shall come all for violence: their faces shall sup up as the east wind, and they shall gather the captivity as the sand. And they shall scoff at the kings, and the princes shall be a scorn unto them: they shall deride every strong hold; for they shall heap dust, and take it. Then shall his mind change, and he shall pass over, and offend, imputing this his power unto his god.

"Here's what's happening, Habakkuk. You think I'm doing nothing but in the north, I'm preparing a people that will come down more swiftly than leopards and more fiercely than lions. They're going to invade this land that you're complaining about. I'm going to use them as a rod in My hand to punish and to deal with the unbelief, the immorality, the inequity of your society."

What does Habakkuk do then? At first he was wondering why God wasn't working and judging his people. But now he's really wrestling . . .

Habakkuk 1:12

Art thou not from everlasting, O LORD my God, mine Holy One? we shall not die. O LORD, thou hast ordained them for judgment; and, O mighty God, thou hast established them for correction.

"Lord, You're missing my point entirely!" Habakkuk cries. "Yes, I was concerned about my people. But You can't use the Babylonians to judge us. They're worse than we are!"

Habakkuk 1:13–17
Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity: wherefore look-est thou upon them that deal treacherously, and holdest thy tongue when the wicked devoureth the man that is more righteous than he? And makest men as the fishes of the sea, as the creeping things, that have no ruler over them? They take up all of them with the angle, they catch them in their net, and gather them in their drag: therefore they rejoice and are glad. Therefore they sacrifice unto their net, and burn incense unto their drag; because by them their portion is fat, and their meat plenteous. Shall they therefore empty their net, and not spare continually to slay the nations?

"Lord, this is not a good solution," Habakkuk insists. "I know we are wicked—but we are much more righteous than the Babylonians who will descend upon us like cruel fishermen, scoop us up like fish into their nets, and attribute the victory to their gods. You can't allow this, Lord!"

Now, Habakkuk is really struggling. Not only is God not doing what Habakkuk thinks He should be doing with the people of Judah, but He seems to be saying that the Babylonians are going to be victorious in their conquest. And that isn't fair at all, Habakkuk protests.

We all can relate to this. "How come they got a new house?" we ask. "Now, Lord, You know that I have devotions regularly and come to church faithfully. But I haven't seen them at church for weeks! Why are You blessing them—when you should be blessing me?"

Like us, Habakkuk was a questioner—but we are about to see him do something oh, so wise in chapter 2.

2 After wondering and wrestling in chapter 1, Habakkuk begins to watch and wait in chapter 2.

Habakkuk 2:1
I will stand upon my watch, and set me upon the tower, and will watch to see what he will say unto me, and what I shall answer when I am reproved.

"I need an answer," said Habakkuk, "so I'm going to go up into my tower and seek My Father."

Please note three key components of this verse. The first is determination. When he needed an answer, Habakkuk said, "I will stand upon my watch." He didn't say, "Maybe I should spend some time with the Lord next week—or whenever it's convenient—or if I can break away from work—or if I can find some time." No, he said, "I need an answer and I'm determined to get one. I will seek the Lord."

The Lord promises that we shall find Him when we search for Him with all our heart (Jeremiah 29:13). But so often we lack determination. Oh, there's an acknowledgement in our minds that we should seek the Lord. There's an intention that we probably will seek the Lord sometime. But we don't get answers to the questions with which we wrestle because we lack this key component of determination.

Second, notice Habakkuk's isolation. He got away from his telephone, radio, and television and went up into a tower. He got away from all the distractions that would otherwise bombard him. I believe we don't hear the voice of God because there are so many other voices constantly ringing in our ears. If you really want to hear from the Lord, there is no alternative to a quiet time, a quiet place, and a quiet heart.

Finally, notice Habakkuk's expectation. He said, "I will see what the Lord will say to me," not, "what He might say to me," not, "what I hope He will say to me," not, "what I wish He would say to me," but "what He will say to me."

Hebrews 11:6 declares that without faith, it is impossible to please God for he that comes to God must believe that He is and that He is a rewarder of them that diligently seek Him. There are many ways to please God—but none apart from faith. If you don't believe God is going to speak to you and deal with you, you're not going to hear anything from Him.

How do you know if God will speak to you or not? Here is a very simple test: when you seek the Lord, do you have a journal with you—a pencil and paper before you? You see, if I don't really expect God to speak, I'll just kind of show up, casually slumped in my chair, saying, "Wonder if there's anything in the Word for me today . . . Probably not . . ."

We adopt a laid-back mentality in seeking God and then wonder why we never hear from Him. But those who expect to hear from God have pencil and paper in hand. They are on the edge of their chair or on their knees in a posture of expectancy rather than in a spirit of complacency and lethargy.

Habakkuk said, "I am going to seek God. I will get away and I will hear what He has to say to me." That's the kind of faith that honors God. That's the kind of faith that clears the wax of the world out of the ears of the inner man.

Habakkuk 2:2 (a)
And the LORD answered me, and said, Write the vision . . .

This is as if the Lord said, "Here it is, Habakkuk. You are in the place of determination, isolation, and expectation. You're ready to hear from Me. Take a memo."

Habakkuk 2:2 (b)
. . . and make it plain upon tables, that he may run that readeth it.

The language here is interesting because it can be interpreted or translated in two ways. The Lord could be saying to Habakkuk, "Write the vision and make it so plain that even the person who runs by quickly can read it easily—like a big billboard. Write this vision so concisely and clearly that the person who runs by you, Habakkuk, will understand it readily."

Or, it could mean, "Write the vision and make it plain so that the person with whom you share it can run with it."

I believe both meanings are embedded in this verse. The vision of your life should be so simple that the people who run by you can know what you're about. And you should be able to share it with others in order that they themselves might be able to run with it.

Habakkuk 2:3
For the vision is yet for an appointed time, but at the end it shall speak, and not lie: though it tarry, wait for it; because it will surely come, it will not tarry.

"Be patient, Habakkuk. Don't panic. I'm giving you the vision and it will come to pass in due time," the Lord says.

Habakkuk 2:4 (a)
Behold, his soul which is lifted up is not upright in him . . .

Whose soul is not upright?

The soul of the Babylonians.

In Daniel 4, we see Nebuchadnezzar cruising around the city of Babylon, saying, "Look what I have done." The Bible says that pride goes before destruction and a haughty spirit before a fall (Proverbs 16:18). And how Nebuchadnezzar would fall! For seven years, he acted like an animal. His hair grew like feathers on his back and arms; his fingernails grew like claws and he ate grass. At the end of seven years, he said, "There's only One who is worthy of honor—and that is God." Suddenly, his sanity was restored and he was returned to the position he held previously (Daniel 4:34–37).

Habakkuk 2:4 (b)
. . . but the just shall live by his faith.

This verse is a key component of New Testament understanding. The just shall life by faith—not puffed up with pride concerning their abilities or spirituality, but solely by faith. For Habakkuk, this was not the theological base of salvation that we understand from Paul when he quotes this verse in Romans and in Galatians, and from the writer to the Hebrews who quotes it in chapter 10. Rather, the context here for Habakkuk deals directly with his own situation specifically. That is, God is saying, "Habakkuk, the Babylonian is proud and puffed up. But the just shall live by faith. You, Habakkuk, are going to live by faith."

This is the hinge upon which this entire book swings. God is not saying, "You should live by faith," or, "I want you to live by faith," but, "you will live by faith." He's saying, "You won't always have answers to your questions, Habakkuk. You won't always have solutions to your problems. You are going to live not by intellect, sight, feelings, or touch. You're going to live by faith. That means, you won't always know what I'm doing, how I'm working, where I'm going, or why I'm doing what I'm doing. You will live by faith—like it or not!"

"That sounds cruel," you say.

Not at all.

God says to us throughout Scripture that our physical senses—our eyesight, touch, and hearing will be irrelevant in the ages to come. Faith is the currency of eternity and He wants us to be rich people. Therefore, He desires us to hear Him with the ears of faith, see Him with the eyes of faith, and touch Him with the hands of faith. He says to us, "I'm not going to appear before you like you want Me to because that won't do you any good in the ages to come. I want you to be a people who are spiritually developed and the only way I can do that is to force you to walk by faith."

God is weaning us, gang. Just as a mother lovingly weans her baby, our Father desires to wean us from the sights and sounds and feelings upon which we are so dependent in order that we might grow strong in faith. And since faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen (Hebrews 11:1), it's an entirely different dimension than anything we've known.

God says to Habakkuk, "I realize you're wrestling, but the just shall live by faith. I'm going to help you, Habakkuk, develop spiritually because it will come in handy in the next billion years to come. Let the Babylonians be puffed up with their military plans, their strategy, their economy, their ability —but the just shall live by faith, simply trusting Me."

Habakkuk 2:5
Yea also, because he transgresseth by wine, he is a proud man, neither keepeth at home, who enlargeth his desire as hell, and is as death, and cannot be satisfied, but gathereth unto him all nations, and heapeth unto him all people:

"Habakkuk, understand this about Nebuchadnezzar and the Babylonians: I'm going to let them have their fill but they will not be satisfied. The more they take, the more miserable they will be," the Lord declares. "I know what I'm doing."

What was true of the Babylonians is also true of us. No matter what we lust after—be it money or people, power or prestige—the funny thing about it is it never satisfies. It always demands more. If you're striving after prominence, position, power, or people, you will always say, "I'm almost there. Just a little bit more and I'll really be happy." But you will never be because you were created for an intimate, deep, real, rich walk with God. Forsake that to pursue your career, your hobby, or anything else—and you're in trouble.

Here, God is saying to an apoplectic Habakkuk, "Relax. I know what I'm doing. The Babylonians will fight and conquer but they won't have any satisfaction."

Habakkuk 2:6–8
Shall not all these take up a parable against him, and a taunting proverb against him, and say, Woe to him that increaseth that which is not his! how long? and to him that ladeth himself with thick clay! Shall they not rise up suddenly that shall bite thee, and awake that shall vex thee, and thou shalt be for booties unto them? Because thou hast spoiled many nations, all the remnant of the people shall spoil thee; because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein.

In search of satisfaction, the Babylonians would only experience retribution as the people they devoured would soon devour them. The Scripture tells us as believers to take heed that we don't bite and devour one another lest we be consumed by one another (Galatians 5:15).

Archaeologists in East Africa uncovered two saber-tooth tiger skeletons joined together at the teeth. Piecing together the evidence, scientists concluded that the tigers, embroiled in a bitter fight, inadvertently got their teeth stuck together and subsequently starved to death. It is a "pointed" illustration of what happens when we bite and devour each other: We'll get stuck and go down in the process.

Habakkuk 2:9–11
Woe to him that coveteth an evil covetousness to his house, that he may set his nest on high, that he may be delivered from the power of evil! Thou hast consulted shame to thy house by cutting off many people, and hast sinned against thy soul. For the stone shall cry out of the wall, and the beam out of the timber shall answer it.

Not only would retribution replace satisfaction for the Babylonians but they would also have no security. God is saying that the material things they were building would eventually fall apart.

Can you remember the new car you bought, the new house you moved into, or the new sound system you purchased? Initially, you thought, "Oh, this is great!" But I bet it wasn't too long before the dings appeared, the paint started to peel, or the CDs began to skip.

God is saying that the very things the Babylonians were doing would eventually fall apart.

Habakkuk 2:12–14
Woe to him that buildeth a town with blood, and stablisheth a city by iniquity! Behold, is it not of the LORD of hosts that the people shall labour in the very fire, and the people shall weary themselves for very vanity? For the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the LORD, as the waters cover the sea.

In other words, these people who are expanding their empire and doing their thing are going to get burned out in the very fire of their own energy.

I remember talking to a guy with Barre-Epstein Syndrome. He couldn't get up in the morning and was constantly tired. More and more people in their twenties, thirties, and forties are experiencing these symptoms. They're just burned out. They can't function. In the process of getting their lives together, they grew weary of life itself.

That's what God is saying about the Babylonians. The vain things they were pursuing were about to consume and destroy them.

Habakkuk 2:15
Woe unto him that giveth his neighbour drink, that puttest thy bottle to him, and makest him drunken also, that thou mayest look on their nakedness!

The Babylonians were being seductive in their partying—taking advantage of people and exploiting them sexually.

Habakkuk 2:16
Thou art filled with shame for glory: drink thou also, and let thy foreskin be uncovered: the cup of the LORD's right hand shall be turned unto thee, and shameful spewing shall be on thy glory.

In other words, "In your very act of trying to manipulate and seduce others, you're going to be manipulated and seduced yourselves. And you're going to see your own nakedness exposed."

Habakkuk 2:17–19
For the violence of Lebanon shall cover thee, and the spoil of beasts, which made them afraid, because of men's blood, and for the violence of the land, of the city, and of all that dwell therein. What profiteth the graven image that the maker thereof hath graven it; the molten image, and a teacher of lies, that the maker of his work trusteth therein, to make dumb idols? Woe unto him that saith to the wood, Awake; to the dumb stone, Arise, it shall teach! Behold, it is laid over with gold and silver, and there is no breath at all in the midst of it.

Here, God is saying, "These, Habakkuk, are the natural consequences of people who choose to worship idols of wood and stone rather than to walk with Me. I don't have to do anything. You're so worried about My reputation and about their situation, but it will take care of itself. Watch and see!"

And, as you study the Babylonian empire, you do indeed see the natural consequence of their sin. The Babylonians became a corrupt, vile, unhappy, dissatisfied people who are no longer on the face of the earth.

Habakkuk 2:20
But the LORD is in his holy temple: let all the earth keep silence before him.

"I know what I'm doing. I'm on the throne." This is a nice way of saying, "Be quiet, Habakkuk. Calm down." It's a loving way of saying, "Habakkuk, I don't have to tell you anything because the just shall live by faith. But, since you're asking, I'll tell you some principles about life. It's all going to backfire on them. I don't have to do anything. The results of their own lust and their own sin will inevitably come down upon their own heads."

NOTHING BUT FAITH

A Topical Study of HABAKKUK 2:4

In the year 1483, a baby boy was born to a poor coal miner in Eisleben, Saxony. As the boy grew up and observed the poverty of his father, this boy, named Martin, chose to pursue a different vocation. He decided to become a lawyer and, in 1501, entered the University of Erfurt, where he excelled in his studies.

As he came to the end of his schooling in 1504, an event took place that changed his life. While he was walking the campus grounds, a storm broke so forcefully that Martin fell on his face in fear. The thunder was deafening and lightning struck all around him. Instinctively, he cried out to the patron saint of coal miners, whose name he had heard invoked during his childhood, "Saint Anne! Save me from this lightning. If you save me, I will become a monk!" Shortly thereafter, the storm stopped.

Being a man of his word, Martin withdrew from Law school and entered an Augustinian monastery where he applied himself so diligently that he obtained his Doctorate of Theology within a few years. But the more he studied, the more troubled his heart became for, although he was becoming an expert in theology, he lacked peace personally. The question he repeatedly wrote in his diary was, "How can a man find favor with God?"

In search of this elusive peace, Martin devoted himself to an exceedingly pious lifestyle. He would fast for ten to fifteen days at a time. When temperatures dropped below freezing, he slept outside without a blanket. Between his studies, he beat his body until it was black and blue, hoping that somehow, by punishing his flesh, he could rid himself of the thoughts and motives he knew were not right. He went to confession so many times a day that the abbot finally said, "Martin either go out and commit a sin worth confessing or stop coming here so often."

Martin was introspective and continually plagued by what he knew of his own depravity and sinfulness. Once, while sitting at his desk writing theology, he felt the presence of Satan so tangibly that he grabbed a bottle of ink and hurled it across the room to where he thought the devil was standing.

The bottle crashed against the wall and left a mark that can still be seen today. Whipping, fasting, praying, confessing—Martin did everything possible to gain peace with this God he knew to be righteous, holy, and awesome.

Finally, in 1509, Martin decided to make a pilgrimage to Rome in hope of finding the peace for which he longed. He set out on foot and crossed the Alps. On his descent, he almost died of a high fever before making his way to a monastery at the foot of the mountains where the monks nursed him back to health. While there, a wise monk told him he needed to read the Book of Habakkuk. So Martin did just that. He read Habakkuk. It was a good word from that insightful monk, who perhaps had a sense of Martin's struggle. You see, Habakkuk was a struggler himself—just like Martin and just like the people today who say, "If God is good, why does He allow suffering? If there really is a devil, why doesn't God just obliterate him?"

So often, people who wrestle with God throw out questions—then grab their Frisbees, run out to play, and wonder why they don't get answers. If we would be more like Habakkuk and say, "I'm going to build a tower. I'm going to get away from the world. I'm going to seek the Lord and wait on Him until I get an answer"—how many more questions would be answered.

We are told that one verse in Habakkuk captured Martin's imagination. It went round and round in his head. He didn't know what it meant—but he couldn't get it out of his mind. The verse was Habakkuk 2:4: "The just shall live by faith."

Finally, Martin recovered sufficiently to continue his journey to Rome. Upon his arrival, he went to the Church of St. John, a cathedral typical of the day, filled with holy relics and artifacts. To this day, when you go to Rome and Jerusalem, you'll see various objects that people have a tendency to venerate and worship. One chapel in Rome claims to hold the skull of John the Baptist. The story is told of a tour guide who was leading a group through the chapel. One of the tourists interrupted and said, "Sir, we just came from Jerusalem. A church there has a skull also claimed to be John the Baptist's. But it was smaller and wider than the skull you have here."

Under pressure, the guide simply said, "Well, that was John's skull when he was younger."

The most important relic at the Church of St. John was the inside stairway. These stairs were believed to have been the same ones Jesus Christ climbed to stand before Pontius Pilate after He was scourged. Miraculously transported from Jerusalem, the stairs were adorned with glass mosaics marking the drops of blood that had supposedly fallen from the back of Jesus. Penitents who made the pilgrimage to St. John's would climb these stairs on their knees and beat themselves with whips as they stopped to kiss each one.

Martin was doing just that—whipping himself, climbing the stairs on his knees—trying to gain favor, trying to make an impression, trying to get the attention of God. He was halfway up when Habakkuk 2:4 hit him again: "The just shall live by faith." At last he understood. He put down his whip, stood up, walked down the stairs and back to the University of Wittenberg, where he began a movement known today as the Reformation—the single most important event in modern history.

The man's name, of course, was Martin Luther.

Luther went on to explore the revolutionary idea of "justification by faith." He wrote profusely about it and, a few years later, nailed his famous ninety-five theses to the door of the Wittenberg Castle Church. The leadership at Wittenberg wasn't real happy about what Luther said—particularly the idea that people didn't have to pay indulgences to the church in order to find absolution from their sin. After all, the money collected from indulgences was the money that financed the glorious cathedrals of the period.

So, the church leadership called together the Diet of Worms. The Diet of Worms was not the latest fad to lose weight. Rather, the word "diet" means "council" and it was held in the city of Worms. They discussed Martin Luther's theory and eventually excommunicated him as a heretic. But the populace caught the vision of what Luther was saying and they began to rejoice in the freedom they had in Christ Jesus. The Reformation was launched and Martin Luther went on to write theological treatises and commentaries that are still classics to this day. He wrote the hymn, "A Mighty Fortress Is Our God," and translated the entire Bible into German—a classic that remains the literary masterpiece of the Germanic tongue.

History books declare Martin Luther to be the most influential German to have ever lived—all because he saw the reality of Habakkuk 2:4 while kneeling on the steps at the Church of St. John. The just shall live—not by beating, not by praying, not by fasting—the just shall live by faith. He saw it, the world caught it, and the great Reformation was launched.

This verse impacted not only Habakkuk the wrestler and Luther the reformer but also Paul the revelator. You see, after Paul was saved on the Road to Damascus, he spent three years in the desert where he was given personal revelation by the Lord Jesus Christ. Paul took Habakkuk 2:4 and upon this single statement—the just shall live by faith—penned his two most important epistles: the Book of Romans and the Book of Galatians. Habakkuk 2:4 is quoted a third time in the New Testament in the Book of Hebrews, which I personally believe Paul wrote.

Hear Paul's heart. He declares the just shall live. What is life about? People want to know. Our neighbors, our kids, people we work with are wondering what living is all about. Who is going to live? The Book of Hebrews tells us the just shall live.

Jesus said, "I have come that you might have life and life abundantly" (see John 10:10). Yet people today are going through the motions, not knowing what real life is even about. The average person who lives to be seventy will have spent twenty years of his life sleeping, six years eating, five years dressing, two years on the telephone, three years waiting, and five months tying his shoes. After spending huge chunks of time waiting, tying shoes, or talking on the phone, people can't help but wonder what life is really about.

What's life about? The just shall live by faith, declares Paul.

> So, as much as in me is, I am ready to preach the gospel to you that are at Rome also. For I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek. For therein is the righteousness of God revealed from faith to faith: as it is written, The just shall live by faith.
> Romans 1:15–17

"I'm not ashamed to come and share the Gospel," said Paul. "It's good news. You're going to live—really live—both in this life abundantly and on into heaven eternally. The just shall live by faith."

The Just Shall Live by Faith

"The just?" you say. "There's the problem. I'm not just."

That's the whole premise of the Book of Romans. Who is just? Who is righteous? Is it the one who's keeping rules and regulations—beating his body, lying outside in freezing temperatures, fasting, confessing praying, studying? Is that who "the just" is?

Check out Paul's answer . . .

> As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. Where is boasting then? It is excluded. By what law? of works? Nay: but by the law of faith. Therefore we conclude that a man is justified by faith without the deeds of the law.
> Romans 3:10, 11, 27, 28

Paul says, "No one does good. None really seeks after God. People might try and impress you with their piety or flaunt their spirituality but it's not real. In ourselves, apart from Jesus living in us, there is none that doeth good. We're all corrupt. We're all polluted."

Then how can a man be made just? We are justified by faith. When the judge hits the gavel and says, "This man is guilty but we'll put him on probation," that is not justification. When the judge hits the gavel and says, "This man is guilty but I forgive him anyway," that is not justification. When the judge hits the gavel and says, "This man has never sinned. The charges are untrue. The accusation is unacceptable," that's justification.

You see, in Christ Jesus, we are more than just forgiven. We're justified. It's not that God simply says, "I forgive you and I'll put you on probation." He says, "I pronounce those of you who live by faith to be justified—as if you never sinned at all."

In other words, if you say, "Thank You, Lord. I know I'm not good. My rules, regulations, and piety don't make it. But I see Jesus on the Cross at Calvary, paying the price for my sins—every sin I've ever committed, am committing, or ever will commit—and I allow His blood to cleanse me"— you are justified in God's sight. Why? Because a wonderful thing happens to those who simply, by faith, believe that Jesus is the propitiation, the satisfaction, the Lamb slain. That is, the red blood of Jesus Christ strikes the blackness of our sin and makes it white as snow.

Is God blind to sin? Reverently, I say, "Yes. He is color blind because the red blood of Jesus Christ is a filter through which He sees righteousness, whiteness. It is the mystery, the glory, the liberty of justification. No wonder Paul said, "I'm not ashamed of the gospel. It is the power of God unto salvation!"

The just shall live—not by morning devotions, not by tithes and offerings, not by whippings and beatings, not by trying to be spiritual—but by faith.

Paul quotes Habakkuk 2:4 a second time. In Romans, the emphasis is on "the just." In Galatians, the emphasis is on "faith."

The Just Shall Live by Faith

> I marvel that ye are so soon removed from him that called you into the grace of Christ unto another gospel: Which is not another; but there be some that trouble you, and would pervert the gospel of Christ. But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed. As we said before, so say I now again, If any man preach any other gospel unto you than that ye have received, let him be accursed.
> Galatians 1:6–9

Here, Paul is addressing a group of believers in the city of Galatia, a town in modern-day Turkey. He's greatly concerned about them and tells them sternly, "I marvel that you are so soon removed from the good news of the gospel and have bought into other teaching."

The word "angel" in verse 8 is angelos in Greek and can either mean "angel" or "messenger." Thus, Paul could be referring to demonic angels or to any pastor, messenger, or teacher who says, "Faith is good, but there's another aspect to consider . . ." The latter is what was happening in Galatia. Judaizers—those who sought to mix Jewish Law with the Gospel of Jesus Christ—were teaching new Gentile believers that, in addition to faith in Jesus, they also had to adhere to the rites and customs of the Jewish Law.

Paul says, "I marvel that you have left the gospel of grace—the unmerited, unearned, undeserved favor of God—in order to become entangled in rules and regulations."

> Stand fast therefore in the liberty wherewith Christ hath made us free, and be not entangled again with the yoke of bondage. Behold, I Paul say unto you, that if ye be circumcised, Christ shall profit you nothing. For I testify again to every man that is circumcised, that he is a debtor to do the whole law.
> Galatians 5:1–3

"If you give in to this idea of outwardly trying to prove you are spiritual, you are debtor to the whole law," Paul says. "It's all or nothing!"

Because misery loves company, I find myself saying, "If I don't do a certain thing, they shouldn't do it, either. Otherwise, I'm going to let them know just how sinful they are." And I become a Judaizer. I become an inspector of people in order that I might mark them and hurt them rather than love, embrace, and bless them. I become a self-righteous prude who looks at everyone and says, "Why aren't they fasting like I fast? Why aren't they praying as long as I pray? Why don't they go to as many meetings as I go to? What's wrong with them?"

And I walk around in Pharisees' robes, saying, "I thank You, God, that I am not like other men" (Luke 18:11). But sooner or later (usually sooner!), I don't keep my own rules and I fall. Then I say, "I'm a wretch. God can never bless me. He will never use me. How can I even talk to Him?" And I put myself under such pressure that my whole Christian experience is either that of a self-righteous prude or one living in the pits of despair. Up and down, up and down I go. It's only faith that breaks the cycle.

The just shall live by faith. Faith says, "Lord, the work is complete. My sins—past, present, and future, are forgiven. I can approach You freely anytime I want to. I don't have to prove my spirituality. I can just love You—and I'm free!"

> For all the law is fulfilled in one word, even in this; Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. But if ye bite and devour one another, take heed that ye be not consumed one of another.
> Galatians 5:14, 15

Who can love? Not he who bites but he who blesses; not the one who is inspecting others but the one who realizes the just live by faith.

- That's what Habakkuk discovered. The Babylonian? He's proud but the just live by faith.
- That's what Paul learned. The entire law is fulfilled not in works but in love.

• That's what Martin Luther finally understood. It's not dos and don'ts but done—for Jesus completed the work.

Habakkuk the wrestler, Paul the revelator, and Luther the reformer were set free when they grasped the significance of Habakkuk 2:4. And so are you, who by faith, realize you are just.

"Yippee! If I'm free, I can just go out and party and do all kinds of things," you might say.

Yes, you can—if you want to ruin your health, your family, your business, and your witness. You see, we are not free to sin. We are free not to sin. There's a better way of living—which is what the Christian adventure is about as we study the Word together. My relationship with God and my relationship with you is not based upon anything other than faith in Christ Jesus. Period. Therefore, we should be people who say, "The just live by faith and if you embrace the Cross, I embrace you as my brother."

The just shall live by faith—so be free in the name of Jesus Christ!

Habakkuk 3:1, 2 (a)
A prayer of Habakkuk the prophet upon Shigionoth. O LORD, I have heard thy speech, and was afraid . . .

"I've heard Your Word. I get the point," Habakkuk said, realizing he had been corrected.

Habakkuk 3:2 (b)
. . . O LORD, revive thy work in the midst of the years . . .

"Let Your work live, Lord," Habakkuk says. "And the Babylonians? They'll experience the repercussions of their own sinfulness."

Habakkuk 3:2 (c)
. . . in the midst of the years make known; in wrath remember mercy.

"Yes, Lord, use them to punish us if that is Your plan for us. But don't forget mercy."

Habakkuk 3:3–15
God came from Teman, and the Holy One from mount Paran. Selah. His glory covered the heavens, and the earth was full of his praise. And his brightness was as the light; he had horns coming out of his hand: and there was the hiding of his power. Before him went the pestilence, and burning coals went forth at his feet. He stood, and measured the earth: he beheld, and drove asunder the nations; and the everlasting mountains were scattered, the perpetual hills did bow: his ways are everlasting. I saw the tents of Cushan in affliction: and the curtains of the land of Midian did tremble. Was the LORD displeased against the rivers? was thine anger against the rivers? was thy wrath against the sea, that thou didst ride upon thine horses and thy chariots of salvation? Thy bow was made quite naked, according to the oaths of the tribes, even thy word. Selah. Thou didst cleave the earth with rivers. The mountains saw thee, and they trembled: the overflowing of the water passed by: the deep uttered his voice, and lifted up his hands on high. The sun and moon stood still in their habitation: at the light of thine arrows they went, and at the shining of thy glittering spear. Thou didst march through the land in indignation, thou didst thresh the heathen in anger. Thou wentest forth for the salvation of thy people, even for salvation with thine anointed; thou woundedst the head out of the house of the wicked, by discovering the foundation unto the neck. Selah. Thou didst strike through with his staves the head of his villages: they came out as a whirlwind to scatter me: their rejoicing was as to devour the poor secretly. Thou didst walk through the sea with thine horses, through the heap of great waters.

Habakkuk not only heard a sermon from God but now he has a vision of God. There are two schools of thought concerning this passage. Some say it's a prophetic word speaking of the coming of Jesus Christ. They say it speaks about His coming from Teman in verse 3. Teman is Edom. In Isaiah 63, we are told that when He comes again, Messiah will move through the region south of Jerusalem, through Bozrah with his garments stained with red blood. He'll move north toward Jerusalem in power and glory.

Others view it historically. They say it speaks of the descent of God to Mount Sinai when the Law was given and it charts the movement of God in Old Testament history as He came down with the Law for the people. In addition, it charts the movement of His people as they wandered through Midian, through Teman, over mountains, and through the Red Sea on their way to the Promised Land.

So which is it? Is it prophetic concerning the coming of Jesus Christ? Or is it historic concerning the Old Testament movement of God and His people? I suggest it is both. I believe what the Lord is saying is both historic and prophetic. In other words, it's as if God is saying, "Habakkuk, look back and see how I have worked. Then look ahead and see that I am coming."

The result? For Habakkuk, it was a reminding of the past and a revealing of the future that he might be renewed in the present. For us, this passage tells us that if we review what God has done for us in the past and anticipate what He will do for us in the future, we'll have peace in the present. When you remember the glorious things God has done for you in past days and you remember that you're going to be in heaven with Him soon, you will have a tranquility, a stability, and a peace in your life presently.

Habakkuk 3:16
When I heard, my belly trembled; my lips quivered at the voice: rottenness entered into my bones, and I trembled in myself, that I might rest in the day of trouble: when he cometh up unto the people, he will invade them with his troops.

Habakkuk is sobered. Earlier, he said, "Lord, do something." Now, he says, "Lord, I tremble when I see what You will do. I asked for judgment in chapter 1, but I spoke quickly. Now I see that when You step, mountains melt; when You walk, the earth quakes."

Like Habakkuk, so often we say, "Come quickly, Lord Jesus"—but do we remember what that means for those left behind?

Habakkuk 3:17
Although the fig tree shall not blossom, neither shall fruit be in the vines; the labour of the olive shall fail, and the fields shall yield no meat; the flock shall be cut off from the fold, and there shall be no herd in the stalls:

"Even though my country will be devastated by the Babylonians, my stocks will crash, my bank account will close, and my house will burn—even though everything is troubling . . ."

Habakkuk 3:18 (a)
Yet I will rejoice in the LORD . . .

The Hebrew word translated "rejoice" literally means "to jump up and down." These words, spoken by a trembling Habakkuk on the eve of the destruction of his country, constitute one of the boldest declarations of faith to be found in all of Scripture.

Habakkuk 3:18 (b)
. . . I will joy in the God of my salvation.

The Hebrew word translated "joy" literally means "to spin around."

"Lord, You are my hope. I have seen You. I will rejoice in You. I will joy in You," Habakkuk declares.

"In everything give thanks," Paul told the Thessalonians (1 Thessalonians 5:18, italics added)—not for everything." I can give thanks in everything because I know that God can redeem the situation and can work out the problem. Although I may not be able to rejoice in the problem, I can always rejoice in the Lord.

Habakkuk 3:19 (a)
The LORD God is my strength, and he will make my feet like hinds' feet, and he will make me to walk upon mine high places. . .

"I was in the valley in chapter 1 and in the tower in chapter 2. Now I'm walking on top of the mountains in chapter 3," declares Habakkuk. "God, I see that what You're doing is right and I approve. It's hard and I don't always understand, but I trust in You."

Contrast, if you will, two prophets who struggled with God's will: Jonah and Habakkuk . . .

- Jonah ran from God when he heard what God would do.
  Habakkuk ran to God, wondering what God would do.
- Jonah saw the salvation of God to the Gentiles.
  Habakkuk saw the sovereignty of God through the Gentiles.
- Jonah's story ends in foolishness as he worries about a gourd.
  Habakkuk's story ends in faith as he trusts in God.

The difference between Habakkuk and Jonah—between you and the person who's despairing—is simply this: Jonah had to learn in the fish. Habakkuk learned in the high tower. You and I have a choice. God is going to teach us because the just shall live by faith. Where do you want to live? Where do you want to learn your lessons about faith?

I have a choice. I can either seek the Lord with determination and expectation in the tower—or I can get tossed around in the storm in the belly of the great whale and wonder, "Why is my life always going through storms? Why is there always seaweed around my head? Why do I always feel cramped? Why am I always in the dark?"

The reason people are always in the storm is because they're never in the high tower. The message here is simple: Habakkuk's problems were greater than Jonah's, his message much more difficult—but he ends in victory because he learned the secret of seeking God.

The Lord wants us to seek His face, to hear His voice, to see His vision that no matter what is happening around us, we might be oases of tranquility and peace that passes understanding. No matter how bad the news might be, He wants us to rejoice in Him. He is our strength and our joy.

Have you discovered that when you seek the Lord about a problem, by the time you're finished talking it over with Him, as you worship Him and spend time with Him, you forgot what you came for in the first place? His fellowship is so rich. No matter what happens, He is our joy. In seeking Him, we find what we longed for all along.

Habakkuk 3:19 (b)
. . . To the chief singer on my stringed instruments.

The wrestler becomes a worshiper, the sobber becomes a singer—and so will you if you learn the secret of the tower.

ZEPHANIAH

Background to Zephaniah

As Babylon began to flex her muscles and grow in power, the judgment of Jerusalem was imminent. Yet, faithful even to His faithless people, God's word of warning could be heard clearly through the voice of His prophets—of whom Zephaniah was one. Keep in mind that, although Zephaniah spoke specifically about the coming destruction of Jerusalem, more importantly he spoke prophetically of the day of the Lord—the seven-year period of time when God will pour out His wrath upon a Christ-rejecting, sinful world.

Thus, like so many of the prophets, Zephaniah spoke not only of a historical confrontation but of the future Tribulation. And in so doing, the book that bears his name holds practical application for our own situation. Zephaniah will speak of the decree of the Lord (1:1–6), the day of the Lord (1:7—3:8), and the deliverance of the Lord (3:9–20).

To our Western mind, day begins with morning and ends in darkness. To the Hebrew, however, day began in the evening (Genesis 1:5). In other words, day began in darkness and moved toward light. So it is that, although Zephaniah's day of the Lord dawns in the shadow, we will see it culminate in the brightness of Sonrise.

Like a Florida hurricane, a Mississippi flood, a California earthquake, a Minnesota snowstorm, and a Hawaiian volcanic eruption all rolled into one, the Book of Zephaniah can be hard to take. My prayer, however, is that, as it calls us to look beyond today and to live in the light of eternity, we will find it hard to forget.

Zephaniah 1:1 (a)
The word of the LORD which came unto Zephaniah . . .

Although Zephaniah and Jeremiah delivered the same message at the same time to the same people, the two men couldn't have been more different in temperament. Jeremiah was a poet, a lamenter, the "weeping prophet." He delivered his message like a skilled harpist—playing the minor melody of judgment as tears coursed down his cheeks. Not Zephaniah. If Jeremiah played a harp, surely Zephaniah wielded a hammer. He held nothing back as he delivered God's message with relentless force and power.

Yet God used them both. Today, the Lord has a plan custom-made for you. When you hear or see someone whose ministry has a different flavor than yours, don't feel like you have to duplicate his style—for regardless of whether you feel more comfortable gripping a hammer or plucking a harp, God will use you just as He has made you.

Like that of so many Old Testament prophets, Zephaniah's message was twofold as it concerned not only the situation of his day but of a day yet to come. The word of the Lord given to Zephaniah was a word of judgment, with verses 2 through 4 detailing who God would judge and verses 5 and 6 explaining why He would judge.

Zephaniah 1:1 (b)
. . . the son of Cushi, the son of Gedaliah, the son of Amariah, the son of Hizkiah . . .

Other prophets either neglect to mention their genealogies altogether or they record two or three generations at the most. Not Zephaniah. He opened his book by tracing his lineage four generations—all the way back to his great-great grandfather, Hizkiah—or, as we know him, Hezekiah. This gives us a possible clue as to why Zephaniah recorded his family tree so carefully. Perhaps, under the inspiration of the Spirit, he wanted to make it known that he was related to royalty, that he was the great-great grandson of one of the greatest kings of Judah.

Zephaniah 1:1 (c)
. . . in the days of Josiah the son of Amon, king of Judah.

As Hezekiah's great-great grandson, Zephaniah would have been a cousin to Josiah—giving him unique access to the king. Josiah being the king who, at the age of sixteen, had a genuine salvation experience, as he "sought after the God of David, his father" (2 Chronicles 34:3), it has been speculated that, because he was a cousin of Josiah, Zephaniah was instrumental in calling the people of Judah back to repentance.

However, the revival would prove to be rather shallow, for although the people went through the motions of religion, they lacked the emotion of relationship. Theirs was more an outward show of morality than an inward work personally. Thus, Zephaniah, who was perhaps instrumental in instituting the revival under Josiah's reign, would be instrumental in warning the people of judgment a mere thirty years later.

Zephaniah 1:2
I will utterly consume all things from off the land, saith the LORD.

"The land" in Scripture refers specifically, though not exclusively, to the nation of Israel. Although the Lord will bring judgment upon the entire world inclusively, it will center upon the people of Israel specifically, for it is during that time that they will begin to be shaken up, recognize Jesus Christ as their Messiah, and turn to Him in great numbers.

Zephaniah 1:3, 4 (a)
I will consume man and beast; I will consume the fowls of the heaven, and the fishes of the sea, and the stumblingblocks with the wicked; and I will cut off man from off the land, saith the LORD. I will also stretch out mine hand upon Judah, and upon all the inhabitants of Jerusalem . . .

In addition to bringing judgment upon Israel, God also promised judgment upon the animal kingdom. Why? Because Romans 8 declares that when Adam fell, even the animal realm was infected and polluted by his sin and rebellion. That is why all nature is groaning, waiting for the day of redemption when things shall be right once again—when the lion will lie down by the lamb, when the poison will leave the ivy, when the earth will return to harmony.

Truly, the animal kingdom is off-kilter. Referring to the breed as "the drug-user's best friend," New York City passed a decree rendering the breeding of pit bulls illegal within the city limits. Like the pit bull, all of creation has been affected by sin. Therefore, it is necessary for the Lord to bring judgment upon all living things in order to return this world to the way it was meant to be.

Zephaniah 1:4 (b)
. . . and I will cut off the remnant of Baal from this place . . .

Baal—the god of the intellect—was being worshiped.

Zephaniah 1:4 (c)
. . . and the name of the Chemarims with the priests;

Chemarims were priests who dressed in long black robes and black hats and practiced the occult. Mom and Dad, be observant. Is there "blackness," a darkness, a feeling of oppression about the posters your kids buy or the shirts they wear? If so, these things could very well be directly linked to demons and activity of the occult.

Zephaniah 1:5 (a)
And them that worship the host of heaven upon the housetops . . .

This refers to those who charted the stars from their rooftops and charted their lives according to astrology.

Zephaniah 1:5 (b)

. . . and them that worship and that swear by the LORD, and that swear by Malcham;

Not only would God judge those who worshiped Baal and who tuned into astrology—but He was about to judge those who worshiped Moloch, the god of pleasure, as well.

Zephaniah 1:6
And them that are turned back from the LORD; and those that have not sought the LORD, nor enquired for him.

Three groups were identified and indicted. Those like the Chermarims were into outright idolatry, worshiping Baal and following astrology. A second group merely flirted with spiritual idolatry—acknowledging the Lord one day and bowing before the god of pleasure the next. Finally, there were those who were brazen in their apostasy and refused to seek the Lord at all.

Zephaniah 1:7 (a)
Hold thy peace at the presence of the Lord GOD: for the day of the LORD is at hand . . .

After speaking of the decree of the Lord, wherein God said, "I will judge man, the land, and everything therein because they're involved in idolatry, spiritual adultery, and apostasy," Zephaniah goes on to speak of the day of the Lord.

We are presently living in the day of man (1 Corinthians 4:3). In other words, within certain parameters, man is calling the shots and running the show. Therefore, when people say, "If God is a God of love, why is there starvation and war, rape and pollution?" tell them it's because we are living in the day of man. But the day of the Lord is coming when God will intervene. The day of the Lord dawns in the Tribulation—the seven-year period when He will pour out His wrath on our sinful world—and proceed on into the Millennium—the thousand-year period following the Tribulation when Christ will reign in Jerusalem with peace, prosperity, and righteousness.

There is a third day spoken of in Scripture: the day of Christ (2 Corinthians 1:14). The day of Christ or the day of the Lord Jesus (1 Corinthians 5:5), is the day of the Rapture—when Jesus will descend and, with a voice like a trumpet, summon us to meet Him in the clouds before He takes us to heaven for a seven-year "honeymoon" with Him (1 Thessalonians 4:16, 17).

Don't confuse the day of the Lord with the day of Christ, for if you fail to understand the differentiation between these two days, your understanding of prophecy will be skewed. The day of Christ immediately precedes the day of the Lord. The day of Christ pertains to the church. The day of the Lord pertains primarily to Israel. The day of Christ speaks of the Rapture. The day of the Lord speaks of the Tribulation.

Zephaniah 1:7 (b), 8
. . . for the LORD hath prepared a sacrifice, he hath bid his guests. And it shall come to pass in the day of the LORD's sacrifice, that I will punish the princes, and the king's children, and all such as are clothed with strange apparel.

Continuing his description of the day of the Lord and beginning with the upper class, Zephaniah describes the people of that day in verses 7 through 14. Too materialistic to listen to Zephaniah's word of warning, they were caught up in their "strange apparel"—in their wardrobes and their appearance. We see the same thing today as people spend more time tending to their bodies than to their souls.

Zephaniah 1:9
In the same day also will I punish all those that leap on the threshold, which fill their masters' houses with violence and deceit.

The lower class was too sinful to listen to Zephaniah. Servants were ripping off their masters, perhaps excusing their actions by saying, "It's okay to steal from our masters because they're so rich and we're so poor."

We hear the same defense given today whenever "the little guy" justifies wrongdoing against his employer, big corporations, or the government on the basis of disparity of wealth. “I will punish them,” said the Lord. And what was offensive to Him in Zephaniah’s day remains so today.

Zephaniah 1:10, 11
And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD, that there shall be the noise of a cry from the fish gate, and an howling from the second, and a great crashing from the hills. Howl, ye inhabitants of Maktesh, for all the merchant people are cut down; all they that bear silver are cut off.

The fish gate was the gate through which the fishermen entered the city of Jerusalem. Maktesh was the primarily place of business within the city. Therefore, this verse speaks of the working class. While the upper class was indicted for being too material and the lower class for being too sinful, the working class was singled out as being too vocational—more concerned about making money and climbing the corporate ladder than about seeking the Lord.

Zephaniah 1:12, 13
And it shall come to pass at that time, that I will search Jerusalem with candles, and punish the men that are settled on their lees: that say in their heart, The LORD will not do good, neither will he do evil. Therefore their goods shall become a booty, and their houses a desolation: they shall also build houses, but not inhabit them; and they shall plant vineyards, but not drink the wine thereof.

“Settled in their lees” refers to the process of winemaking used in Zephaniah’s day whereby a winemaker would allow wine to settle for a period of time before pouring it into another vessel, leaving the dregs behind. If the winemaker poured the wine from vessel to vessel too soon, the “lees,” or dregs would still be afloat in the wine. But if he waited too long, the wine would take on the taste of the dregs. Thus, it was a very exacting process that was repeated up to seven times until the wine was crystal clear.

With this in mind, hear the Lord saying, “I will punish the men that are settled on their lees,” for not only were the people of Zephaniah’s day too material, too sinful, and too vocational—they were too comfortable. Sitting still in their barrels, unruffled and untouched, they had taken on a bad flavor and were beginning to stink.

Saint, that's why God suddenly pours you, as well. Your life is going along just fine—until your boss says, "You're out of here," or your girlfriend says, "Pack sand."

"How can this be?" you ask. "I thought God loved me." He does. In fact, He loves you so much that He won't allow you to get too comfortable or too settled because He knows if you do, your life will become clouded with lees and you will lose the clarity you once had. So things get shaken up as He pours you from one vessel to another. And you are left saying, "What's going on? I'd better seek the Lord." And you wait upon Him with renewed intensity.

> Zephaniah 1:14–17
> The great day of the LORD is near, it is near, and hasteth greatly, even the voice of the day of the LORD: the mighty man shall cry there bitterly. That day is a day of wrath, a day of trouble and distress, a day of waste-ness and desolation, a day of darkness and gloominess, a day of clouds and thick darkness, A day of the trumpet and alarm against the fenced cities, and against the high towers. And I will bring distress upon men, that they shall walk like blind men, because they have sinned against the LORD: and their blood shall be poured out as dust, and their flesh as the dung.

In Revelation 6:12–17, we see how the day of the Lord described here by Zephaniah perfectly parallels the day of the wrath of the Lamb described by John. This is important because Paul declared that God has not appointed us to wrath but to obtain salvation by our Lord Jesus Christ (1 Thessalonians 5:9).

There are those who teach that believers will go through the Tribulation before being caught up in the Rapture. I believe this is yet another passage of Scripture that undermines this premise because, although Jesus warned us that in this world we would have tribulation as the enemy attacks us constantly (John 16:33), He didn't say we would go through the Tribulation eschatalogically. Do you suppose the Father would allow us to experience the tribulations that come from the enemy daily and the Tribulation that will be poured out from heaven? I don't. You see, the believer endures tribulations now. But the unbeliever will go through tribulation when the wrath of the Lamb is poured out upon a world that rejected Him.

Zephaniah 1:18 (a)
Neither their silver nor their gold shall be able to deliver them in the day of the LORD's wrath . . .

I remember reading a newspaper article with the headline reading "A-Bomb No Tax Shelter?" It said the following: If you think nuclear warfare will keep you from having to pay taxes, think again. "In the event of an emergency such as a nuclear attack, the Internal Revenue Service will continue to collect taxes," said IRS Chief, Frank Keith. Although the IRS Employee Manual acknowledges tax collection might initially suffer during such a time period, the IRS's post-bomb plan is such that, within thirty days, the Agency would expect to resume collection of taxes. According to the manual, "many workers shall be reassigned regardless of, and without any effect on the current position or grades of the employee." On the premise that collection of delinquent accounts would be most adversely affected if not impossible in a disaster area, "service shall concentrate on those areas where people are still living."

The day of the Lord is coming to be sure—but the IRS thinks even that won't stop them!

Zephaniah 1:18 (b)
. . . but the whole land shall be devoured by the fire of his jealousy: for he shall make even a speedy riddance of all them that dwell in the land.

Susan was three years old. Lying in her bed, she opened her eyes to find the stern face of a man peering down at her. As she screamed out in fright, the man quickly shuffled out of the room. Hearing her daughter's scream, Susan's mother ran into her room and held her tightly. Meanwhile, the man's voice could be heard talking to an accomplice on the telephone. He quickly reappeared, snatched Susan out of her mother's arms, ran down the stairs, and into a waiting car. Susan screamed as the car sped through town to a large building. Carried to the fourth floor of the ominous edifice, Susan was placed on a bed and given a shot of a powerful drug. Just before she passed out, Susan looked into the face of yet another stranger—seconds before he unsheathed a knife and ripped into her stomach.

"Give those men the death penalty," we would cry.

But wait.

The man who tore Susan away from her mother was her father. Aware that his daughter had been groaning all night, the call he made was to a doctor who said, "Bring her in immediately." The large building was a hospital. The drug was an anesthetic. The knife was a scalpel. The girl was saved.

From Susan's three-year-old perspective, the events of the evening were understandably terrifying. When people read Zephaniah and Revelation, when they read about the day of the Lord and the wrath of the Lamb, they say, "How could God be so brutal?" But theirs is a three-year-old perspective for, in reality, it's a loving Father who shall "devour the land by the fire of His jealousy."

You see, God is not jealous because He's angry with you or mad at this world. He is not jealous of you. He's not saying, "You hurt My feelings and now I'm going to get back at you." No, He's jealous for you, knowing that the world you live in is groaning in the middle of the night and in need of radical surgery.

Therefore, not only prophetically but presently—when things are falling apart and coming down all around you—remember that God your Father is jealous for you. He sees that, although you might think it's painful and cruel, your situation is necessary to make you into the man or woman He knows you desire to be. The process isn't easy—surgery never is. But sometimes it's imperative.

And if you begin to wonder if you can really trust the One who bears the knife—look at His hand. You'll see a hole where a nail pierced it. And this nail print in the hand of Your Master Physician says, "From before the foundation of the world, I loved you enough to die for you, to go to hell for you, to pay the price for your sins. If I loved you that much, can't you trust what I'm doing presently?"

The day of the Lord is a difficult, dark day indeed. Yet it is absolutely necessary to prepare us for the coming of the kingdom, the light, the Son. The day of trouble in your own life is not easy, but trust Him. He's worthy. He knows exactly what He's doing.

2 Here, in chapter 2, we see the pleading of the day of the Lord . . .

Zephaniah 2:1
Gather yourselves together, yea, gather together, O nation not desired;

With whom is the Lord pleading? A nation not desired.

While there are those who argue that the church will indeed go through the Tribulation, I believe this is yet another verse that makes that scenario most unlikely. You see, in Ephesians 1:6, Paul used the word charitoo, or "accepted" in reference to the church. The only other place in Scripture charitoo is used is in Luke 1:28 in reference to Mary.

Who, then, is the nation not desired? Israel.

Why is Israel not desired? Because it is she who will bear the brunt of the cataclysmic event referred to in the Old Testament as Jacob's trouble (Jeremiah 30:7)—the Tribulation. Truly, the Lord will plead with Israel during the Tribulation when He dispatches angels to travel across the skies and declare salvation for His people, as He sends Elijah and perhaps Moses to Jerusalem to perform miracles among His people and while He raises up 144,000 Jewish evangelists anointed by the Spirit to preach the reality of Christ Jesus to His people.

Zephaniah 2:2, 3
Before the decree bring forth, before the day pass as the chaff, before the fierce anger of the LORD come upon you, before the day of the LORD's anger come upon you. Seek ye the LORD, all ye meek of the earth, which have wrought his judgment; seek righteousness, seek meekness: it may be ye shall be hid in the day of the LORD's anger.

The nation not to be desired is told to seek the Lord that she might be hid in the day of Tribulation. According to Revelation 12, a good portion of the nation of Israel will seek the Lord when, in the middle of the Tribulation period, antichrist will reveal his true colors by going into the temple and demanding to be worshiped. During the ensuing war in which antichrist will fight against Israel, the Lord will hide His people in a place already prepared for them in the wilderness. Isaiah 16 tells us its name: Petra.

Located in present-day southern Jordan and carved out of a rock, Petra is a huge city that can hold a million or more people. Buildings, temples, and places to dwell are already chiseled out of the sides of this walled metropolis. Years ago, an avid student of Bible prophecy, W. E. Blackstone, assembled a group of businessmen who brought hundreds of thousands of New Testaments into Petra. Thus, when the Jews arrive, they're going to be blessed to find copies of the New Testament awaiting them. We get a preview of that day here in verse 3, when many people—not only Jews but Gentiles as well—will cry, "Oh, Lord, this is not just some weird theology. It's reality—and I've been left behind!"

With bullets flying over his head and bombs exploding round about him, the World War II infantryman jumped into a foxhole. As he ducked down in an effort to shield himself from the shrapnel and flack, the tip of a shiny silver object buried in the dirt caught his eye. Pulling it out, he saw it was a crucifix. With bullets still buzzing and bombs still bursting, a chaplain jumped into the same foxhole.

Looking at the chaplain, the soldier held up the crucifix and said, "Am I ever glad to see you! How do you work this thing?"

The old adage is true. There are no atheists in foxholes. While it is easy to question the existence of God in the quietness of a library, postulating between puffs on a pipe, when bullets fly and bombs explode, God suddenly becomes reality. The same will be true in the day of the wrath of the Lamb. People who were once proud of their atheism will remember the words believers shared with them and will be among the many who call upon the name of the Lord in that day.

Zephaniah 2:4
For Gaza shall be forsaken, and Ashkelon a desolation: they shall drive out Ashdod at the noon day, and Ekron shall be rooted up.

After outlining the pleading in the day of the Lord, Zephaniah goes on to delineate the places in the day of the Lord. Located in the Gaza Strip, Gaza, Ashkelon, Ashdod, and Ekron were four of the five primary Philistine cities. This area will be wiped out in the day of the Lord as it comes under severe judgment in the Tribulation.

Zephaniah 2:5–7
Woe unto the inhabitants of the sea coast, the nation of the Cherethites [Cretes]! the word of the LORD is against you; O Canaan, the land of the Philistines, I will even destroy thee, that there shall be no inhabitant. And the sea coast shall be dwellings and cottages for shepherds, and folds for flocks. And the coast shall be for the remnant of the house of Judah; they shall feed thereupon: in the houses of Ashkelon shall they lie down in the evening: for the LORD their GOD shall visit them, and turn away their captivity.

The word, "Palestinian" is a derivative of the word "Philistine." Thus, the Lord is uttering an indictment and a word of judgment against the Philistines of Zephaniah's day as well as the Palestinians of the day yet to come.

Zephaniah 2:8–10
I have heard the reproach of Moab, and the revilings of the children of Ammon, whereby they have reproached my people, and magnified themselves against their border. Therefore as I live, saith the LORD of hosts, the God of Israel, Surely Moab shall be as Sodom, and the children of Ammon as Gomorrah, even the breeding of nettles, and saltpits, and a perpetual desolation: the residue of my people shall spoil them, and the remnant of my people shall possess them. This shall they have for their pride, because they have reproached and magnified themselves against the people of the LORD of hosts.

Located across the Jordan River from Israel in present-day Jordan, Moab and Ammon were destined for destruction. Why? "Because they went against My people," said the Lord.

Gang, here's how to stir up the judgment of the Lord real quick: Attack His people. Over and over again in the Old Testament, whenever a nation had the audacity or stupidity to come against Israel, they paid radically—even if it was one of God's own who did it . . .

As they wandered through the wilderness, the Israelites grew thirsty once again. Murmuring against Moses, they accused him of bringing them to the wilderness to die. Having led this group for many years, Moses was understandably exhausted. He looked at his congregation and said, "You rebels. Must we fetch you water out of this rock?"—and he struck the rock (Numbers 20:10).

"I don't like you calling My people rebels," God said. "They're My children. Therefore, I can call them what I want, but you can't. Because of this, you'll not enter the land of promise" (see Numbers 20:12).

What kept Moses out of the Promised Land?

He came down on God's people.

Were they out to lunch?

Yes.

Were they deserving of his wrath?

Most definitely.

But the Lord is very concerned when people—whether they're Moabites, Ammonites, or even a great man like Moses—come down on His precious family, His bride. Like Moses, we will end up outside the fullness of God's blessing in our walk presently if we attack God's people maliciously—if we malign other churches, other denominations, other individuals.

Zephaniah 2:11–14

The LORD will be terrible unto them: for he will famish all the gods of the earth; and men shall worship him, every one from his place, even all the isles of the heathen. Ye Ethiopians also, ye shall be slain by my sword. And he will stretch out his hand against the north, and destroy Assyria; and will make Nineveh a desolation, and dry like a wilderness. And flocks shall lie down in the midst of her, all the beasts of the nations: both the cormorant and the bittern shall lodge in the upper lintels of it; their voice shall sing in the windows; desolation shall be in the thresholds: for he shall uncover the cedar work.

Nineveh, the capital of the Assyrian empire, was thought to be indestructible. But the Lord said, "I'm going to destroy it down to its very foundations." Indeed He did when it was decimated by the Babylonians in 612 B.C.

Zephaniah 2:15
This is the rejoicing city that dwelt carelessly, that said in her heart, I am, and there is none beside me: how is she become a desolation, a place for beasts to lie down in! every one that passeth by her shall hiss, and wag his hand.

Zephaniah prophesied that people would say, "Unbelievable!" This is where Nineveh was? Nothing's left but a place for beasts to lie down!" You see, although Nineveh was considered absolutely impregnable, when the Lord allowed the Tigress River to swell, the foundations of the city crumbled. The walls then came down and the enemy rushed in.

It's funny what can bring us down. Nineveh wasn't destroyed by the millions of soldiers who came against her. No, she was brought down by mere rain. Truly, the Lord can humble us in the most amazing ways. I remember reading about an experiment conducted in space to learn more about how protein crystals grow in a weightless environment. The results survived millions of miles of outer space travel only to be rendered useless when, on its way to UC Riverside in California, its container accidentally tipped over on an airport x-ray machine conveyer belt.

You may think your life is together. "I've got my future mapped out. There's no stopping me now. I don't need to seek the Lord or walk with Him. I'm captain of my destiny," you might say—until some airport attendant turns your Styrofoam ice chest upside down—or until the river begins to swell and suddenly, like Nineveh, you who were once so proud, so sure, so certain will crumble and fall.

3 Continuing to talk about the day of the Lord, Zephaniah shifts his focus from the Moabites and Ammonites in the Gaza Strip to Jerusalem herself—a city that should have been totally submitted to the Lord, but that had become far removed from Him.

Zephaniah 3:1
Woe to her that is filthy and polluted, to the oppressing city!

Regardless of the noble goals of groups like Friends of the Earth or Save Our Planet, the fact remains that, because man is polluted inwardly, there will always be pollution outwardly—for that which is inside a person will eventually be worked out from within him. When, for a brief time, the deity of Jesus was allowed to shine forth on the Mount of Transfiguration, Peter said, "Oh, Lord, it is good for us to be here" (Mark 9:5). So too, if the glory, goodness, and grace of God shine forth from your life, people will say, "It's good for us to be with you." If, however, there's nothing but bitterness and anger inside, sooner or later, those around you will say, "Let's get out of here."

Zephaniah 3:2, 3
She obeyed not the voice; she received not correction; she trusted not in the LORD; she drew not near to her God. Her princes within her are roaring lions; her judges are evening wolves; they gnaw not the bones till the morrow.

The official slogan for the twenty-fifth anniversary of the birth of the nation of Israel said a great deal about where she put her trust—for, plastered on posters and printed on postage stamps, was this telling declaration: Science Shall Bring Peace to This Land.

Zephaniah 3:4
Her prophets are light and treacherous persons: her priests have polluted the sanctuary, they have done violence to the law.

The word "treacherous" means "uncertain." Haven't you discovered that you can go crazy if you try to keep up with each new study that comes out concerning exercise and nutrition? That is why I'm so glad we hold in our hands the Word of the One who never changes. His is a Word we never have to apologize for or amend. We don't have to remove chapters, erase passages, or update the information. God's Word is a sure foundation.

Zephaniah 3:5 (a)
The just LORD is in the midst thereof; he will not do iniquity: every morning doth he bring his judgment to light, he faileth not . . .

Even though people are foolish and fickle, even though they neither call upon nor trust in Him, the Lord is still in the midst of them. He is faithful even when His people are faithless (2 Timothy 2:13). Don't you love God for that? Even when we are squirming and floundering, flopping and failing, God is faithful, morning by morning—making His ways known to us, blessing and convicting us, nudging and correcting us. God is faithful, no matter what!

Zephaniah 3:5 (b)
. . . but the unjust knoweth no shame.

To me, one of the most damning aspects of our culture is the fact that people actually flaunt their sin. While there has always been sin in the world, the difference between our society and those that preceded us is that people now take pride in sin.

Zephaniah 3:6–8
I have cut off the nations: their towers are desolate; I made their streets waste, that none passeth by: their cities are destroyed, so that there is no man, that there is none inhabitant. I said, Surely thou wilt fear me, thou wilt receive instruction; so their dwelling should not be cut off, howsoever I punished them: but they rose early, and corrupted all their doings. Therefore wait ye upon me, saith the LORD, until the day that I rise up to the prey: for my determination is to gather the nations, that I may assemble the kingdoms, to pour upon them mine indignation, even all my fierce anger: for all the earth shall be devoured with the fire of my jealousy.

The word "indignation" in the Old Testament is synonymous with "tribulation" in the New Testament. Thus, this passage parallels that of Revelation 6 through 19 which speaks of the judgment of the nations during the Tribulation.

After seeing the decree of the Lord in 1:1–6 and the day of the Lord in 1:7—3:8, we are about to see the third and final section of Zephaniah's book: the deliverance of the Lord—a section I love for in it we see the light break forth and the Son rise. Watch for this in four ways: the regathering of Israel (verses 9 and 10), the repenting of Israel (verses 11 through 13), the rejoicing of Israel (verses 14 and 15), and the Redeemer of Israel (verses 16 through 20).

Zephaniah 3:9 (a)
For then . . .

When will the deliverance of the Lord take place?
Not until after judgment is poured out.

Zephaniah 3:9 (b)
. . . will I turn to the people a pure language, that they may all call upon the name of the LORD, to serve him with one consent.

Perhaps the "pure language" spoken of here refers to the rebirth of the Hebrew tongue. This much, however, is sure: with one consent, all people will call upon the name of the Lord.

For topical study of Zephaniah 3:9 entitled "The Language of the Kingdom," turn to page* 879.

Zephaniah 3:10
From beyond the rivers of Ethiopia my suppliants, even the daughter of my dispersed, shall bring mine offering.

When modern-day Israel was birthed as a nation in 1948, among the dispersed Jews from all over the world who returned to the land were a black-skinned people from Ethiopia called the Falashas. Although they wore prayer shawls, carried the Torah, and celebrated the three major feasts of Judaism, the Falashas were nonetheless a mystery to the Jews in Israel—until they learned the Falasha tradition that said when the Queen of Sheba returned from her visit with Solomon (1 Kings 10:13), along with the gifts Solomon bestowed upon her, she brought Judaism back with her. As a result, unbeknownst to the rest of the world for centuries, there was a group of people living in Ethiopia who were practicing Jews.

So it was that several years ago, when Ethiopia underwent famine, the Israelis quietly airlifted tens of thousands of these Falashas out of Ethiopia to safety. And so it was that one year later, the Knesset ruled that these people —whose name is actually a derivative of the word "palestine"—were to be granted citizenship with all corresponding rights and privileges.

Zephaniah 3:11, 12
In that day shalt thou not be ashamed for all thy doings, wherein thou hast transgressed against me: for then I will take away out of the midst of thee them that rejoice in thy pride, and thou shalt no more be haughty because of my holy mountain. I will also leave in the midst of thee an afflicted and poor people, and they shall trust in the name of the LORD.

Following the miraculous regathering of Israel, there will be a massive repentance by Israel. What a glorious day that will be!

Zephaniah 3:13
The remnant of Israel shall not do iniquity, nor speak lies; neither shall a deceitful tongue be found in their mouth: for they shall feed and lie down, and none shall make them afraid.

The word "not" in verse 13 is emphatic. In the day of the repentance of Israel, there will be no iniquity, no lies, no deceit.

When asked the most important language to learn, C. H. Spurgeon replied, "Learn the language of No. It will be of greater value to you than learning Greek and Hebrew combined." Truly, when temptations knock at our door, like a repentant Israel, the best thing we can say is, "No."

Zephaniah 3:14, 15
Sing, O daughter of Zion; shout, O Israel; be glad and rejoice with all the heart, O daughter of Jerusalem. The LORD hath taken away thy judgments, he hath cast out thine enemy: the king of Israel, even the LORD, is in the midst of thee: thou shalt not see evil any more.

Following the regathering of Israel and the repentance by Israel, there will be rejoicing in Israel. This, very possibly, will be reflected even in her music. Although Jewish music today is written primarily in a minor key, in the day of her rejoicing, I believe the Lord's presence in her midst will cause Israel to sing not only in a major way but in a major key.

Zephaniah 3:16, 17 (a)
In that day it shall be said to Jerusalem, Fear thou not: and to Zion, Let not thine hands be slack. The LORD thy God in the midst of thee is mighty; he will save, he will rejoice over thee with joy . . .

How I love this verse! Here, we see the Redeemer of Israel in her midst—and He is rejoicing. We have a tendency to think God is worried about us. We picture Him with furrowed brow and frowning face. We envision Him watching, wondering, and wringing His hands, reacting to our every mistake. We hear Him saying, "Is Jon going to make it? I'm not sure, but I'm ready to belt him if he gets out of line." Yet nothing could be further from the truth! The Lord in our midst is rejoicing, singing, and resting because He sees us in our glorified state. That is, He already sees the finished product.

Suppose I put some ants in one end of a shoebox, some peanut butter at the other end, and a few barriers and blockades in the middle. If I sat for awhile and watched the ants, I would see them begin their journey, scratch their heads, and wonder if they would ever make it. I would see them struggle and crawl, fight and fall as they questioned all the while if anything was worth such effort. Before long, however, even though many ants would still be struggling and striving in their journey, I would see huge smiles break out on the faces of the first ones to reach the peanut butter and I would know they would all get there eventually.

God sees us marching through time. We wonder if we will make it, convinced that our neighbor probably won't. We snap at each other; we get uptight and worried—but all the while God is rejoicing because He sees the peanut butter. Our vision is obstructed and shortsighted indeed for we can only see our way to the next obstacle. Not so with God. He sees all of time and eternity at once. Yes, He sees our failing; surely He sees our faltering; but He also sees our finishing. He sees us already in glory with Him. That is why He can rejoice over us with great joy.

Zephaniah 3:17 (b)
. . . he will rest in his love . . .

He will rest in His love—not in our flaky love for Him, but in His steadfast love for us. Therefore, because He's resting in His love for you, regardless of how you think you might be doing, you can rest, as well.

Zephaniah 3:17 (c)
. . . he will joy over thee with singing.

In verse 14, Israel was entreated to sing. Here in verse 17, the Lord joins in.

Zephaniah 3:18, 19 (a)
I will gather them that are sorrowful for the solemn assembly, who are of thee, to whom the reproach of it was a burden. Behold, at that time I will undo all that afflict thee: and I will save her that halteth, and gather her that was driven out . . .

Do you feel like you're limping through life? Driven out by someone you love? Take heart: the Lord is One who saves you by His grace as He gathers you to Himself.

Zephaniah 3:19 (b), 20
. . . and I will get them praise and fame in every land where they have been put to shame. At that time will I bring you again, even in the time that I gather you: for I will make you a name and a praise among all people of the earth, when I turn back your captivity before your eyes, saith the LORD.

The book ends with the Lord saying to His "hammer-swinging" prophet, "As you close your prophecy, Zephaniah, make sure My people understand that I see the whole picture. Yes, there are difficulties ahead; yes, there are dark days looming; but I see the end result—when I will be in their midst, rejoicing, singing, and resting in My love."

Thus, perhaps the clearest division of the Book of Zephaniah is simply this: Chapter 1: Sad day. Chapter 2: Sad day. Chapter 3: Glad day.

Gang, the seventy or eighty years we spend on this planet are as bad as life will ever be for us. After that, it will only get better—unbelievably better—for the next trillion years. So, if you're sad, take heart and have hope. The glad day is coming, for the Lord's message to His people through Zephaniah prophetically is also His word to you presently: God will see you through. Therefore, rejoice!

THE LANGUAGE OF THE KINGDOM
ZEPHANIAH 3:9

I had the opportunity to spend some time in Europe, teaching a group of Eastern European pastors. My fellow teachers and I also spent time sharing with pastors in West Germany and Switzerland. During our time in Switzerland, our chauffer was an interesting man named Franz. A big, strong six-foot, five-inch, sixty-year-old, he spoke impeccable English. After complimenting him on his fine command of the English language, I learned that English was actually his ninth language. A German who had served under Hitler and was subsequently captured by the Allied Forces, he spent a year and a half in a prison camp where he began to teach himself English after retrieving a paperback Western that had accidentally fallen from the pocket of one of the guards.

"Let me get this straight," I said. "You taught yourself English just by reading a novel?"

"Yes," he said, laughing. "And the first and last chapters were missing—which made it a little bit harder."

For the life of me, I can't understand how he did that! Yet so proficient in English did he become that when the American forces arrived, he served as a translator between Germany and England and went on to become a United Nations representative for Switzerland. Being around Franz, I began to feel like a mental midget, for, although I majored in Greek in college, language is difficult for me. Consider, for example, the following exchange:

"Do you think the Seahawks will win the Super Bowl?"
"Fat chance. The Niners have it all wrapped up."
"Well, what about the Rams?"
"Not a chance. I tell you, the Niners will win it all."

"Fat chance" and "not a chance" are synonymous? No. They're opposites. Yet in the above context, they mean the same thing. That is why language can be perplexing and confusing, indeed! But Zephaniah tells us the day is coming when language barriers will be obliterated and we will be able to understand one another perfectly. After the seven years of the Tribulation are passed—when the Lord Jesus shall return to this planet to establish His millennial kingdom—we will all speak one language.

What will that language be? Some suggest it will be Hebrew. That's a real possibility for Hebrew is a pure language. Go to Israel today, and if you hear people curse or swear, it will be in English or German, Yiddish or Spanish because there are no swear words in the Hebrew language.

Not only is the Hebrew language pure, but it is also miraculous. You see, when Roman general Titus and his troops wasted Jerusalem in A.D. 70, the Jews scattered throughout the world. While they initially retained their language, as the centuries wore on, only the most conservative of their number continued to speak their mother tongue. Thus, Hebrew became what is known as a "dead" language. Like classical Greek or Latin today, although it was read and understood by scholars, it was not spoken conversationally by anyone.

Then, around the turn of the century, in the early days of the Zionist movement, the course of linguistic history did an about-face when a young man named Eleazar Ben Yehuda and his new bride set foot on the soil of Palestine. "Woman," he said to his wife, "you are now hearing the last English you will ever hear me speak. From this point on, I will speak only Hebrew—and so will you."

Although most people who knew him, thought him nothing more than an eccentric dreamer, Eleazar remained determined. Eventually fathering eleven children, he insulated them from all outsiders until they were seven or eight years old and completely immersed in the Hebrew tongue. As they were "released" into the outside world, their neighborhood friends initially wouldn't have any idea what they were saying. But after time, the neighborhood children would return home speaking Hebrew vocabulary, phrases, and idioms that fanned almost-dead embers of memory and emotion and which eventually ignited hearts throughout Palestine. On September 23, 1922, the League of Nations declared Hebrew the official language of Palestine. Three months later, Ben Yehuda died—but his dream was fulfilled for, unlike any other language in the history of the world, the Hebrew language had been reborn.

So, perhaps the language of the kingdom will be Hebrew. I don't know. But this I do know with absolute certainty: the language of the kingdom will decimate racial prejudice, cultural difficulties, and ethnic bigotry—for in that day, all will call upon the name of the Lord in unity. It won't, however, be the first time all humanity spoke with one tongue . . .

Division Linguistically

The year was somewhere around 2200 B.C. On the plains of Babylon, in a unified language, mankind said, "Let us make a name for ourselves. And lest we be scattered, let us build a tower whose top may reach unto the heavens" (Genesis 11:4). The tower they built was actually a ziggurat, a tower in which men of old studied the stars—not in pursuit of astronomy but of astrology—in order that they might chart the course of their lives. "We don't need to seek the Lord," they said in so doing. "Instead, we'll unify ourselves with this great building project and let the stars lead us."

Scripture records that the bricks in this tower were held together with slime (Genesis 11:3)—a material still used by man today. "Let's bring all people together," man says. "How? We'll join the bricks of education with the slime of humanism and build a tower that will supersede God Himself." Folks, there's nothing wrong with education—it's the slime of existential philosophies and gross immorality that is repugnant.

Back to Babylon—as the Lord saw this tower being built, Scripture records He went down and confused their language (Genesis 11:7). Suddenly, as they were building their tower, one guy said, "Hand me a brick," to which the other guy responded "Que?"—and in the ensuing tension and confusion, ethnicity was born; racial barriers were raised; cultural lines were drawn. A tragic day, indeed—but a necessary one because, turning his back on God, man was growing more and more wicked in his unity. Knowing such rebellion would destroy humanity altogether, God split up mankind for his own good. Consequently, we live in a time when the repercussions of man's rebellion on the plains of Shinar are still heard on the face of our planet today.

But the Lord gave the world a beautiful sneak preview of "coming attractions" when, for a very brief time, language barriers fell . . .

Unity Prophetically

A few thousand years after the events of Babel, a few weeks after Jesus died on the Cross, a few days after He had ascended into heaven, a group of disciples met together in Jerusalem, waiting and wondering, watching and praying. Suddenly, their meeting place was filled with the sound of a mighty, rushing wind. Tongues of fire began to hover over their heads and they began to speak in other tongues, praising God as they were filled with His Spirit (Acts 2:3, 4). Meanwhile, the hundreds of thousands—perhaps even a million—visitors who had flooded into Jerusalem from all parts of the world for the Feast of Pentecost heard the sounds coming from this upper room. "How can this be?" they wondered. "We are in Jerusalem, yet we are each hearing praise and prayer in our own languages!"

"This is that which was promised through the prophet Joel," Peter answered (Acts 2:16).

Thus, what transpired at Babel's high tower due to man's sinfulness and rebellion was reversed in Jerusalem's Upper Room because of God's mercy and grace.

At Pentecost, the gift of tongues ushered in a miraculous sense of unity. The same thing happens still today. Praying in the Spirit and speaking in tongues breaks down barriers. It is not the tongues movement that causes division, gang. It is the movement of the tongue—gossip, judgment, and criticism—that divides people. On the other hand, worshiping in the Spirit can bring about beautiful unity because words don't get in the way.

You see, many times, I don't know how to pray in English. "Pray that she'll say yes," he says. Or, "Pray that I'll get the job . . ." but I don't know if those things are what God wants, so how can I pray? I can pray in the Spirit and be in perfect harmony with the heart of my Father.

"I would that you all speak in tongues," Paul said (1 Corinthians 14:5). Yes, he did put very definite parameters on the public use of tongues—but he also strongly encouraged the private, devotional use of the prayer language because many times we just don't know how to pray.

The Kingdom Presently

Although we were historically divided linguistically, with the gift of tongues providing a picture of the unity we will experience prophetically, Zephaniah turns our eyes to the kingdom within us presently. "The kingdom of God," Jesus said, "is within you" (Luke 17:21). Because one can always tell what country a person is from by his accent or language, our language is perhaps the clearest indication of the kingdom to which we belong. Complaining and gossiping, cursing and murmuring, bitterness and unforgiveness are the language of the kingdom of darkness and death. Hope and joy, grace and peace, forgiveness and righteousness are the language of the kingdom of light and life. Which language comes out of your mouth?

When you wake to the sound of yet another rainy day, do you say, "It's raining again? How will I ever get my yard work done?" Or, do you say, "It's raining! I can't mow my lawn! The NCAA Final Four is on. Alright!"? You see, one is the language of the kingdom of hell—complaining, negative, and grumpy. The other is the language of the kingdom of heaven—thanksgiving, praise, and joy.

"Your speech betrays you," they said to Peter the night before Jesus was crucified. "You are from Galilee" (Mark 14:70)—and Peter was reminded that, regardless of what a man professes verbally, his speech betrays him in reality.

"Okay, I get the message," you say. "I'm going to clean up my act. I'm going to muzzle my mouth."

Good luck. If you're extremely disciplined, you might be able to reign in your tongue for a day or two—or even a week or three. But mark this: Jesus said "Out of the abundance of the heart, the mouth speaks" (Matthew 12:34). That is, whatever is in your heart will eventually work its way out through your mouth. Therefore, no matter how much discipline you have, if your heart is full of death, darkness will emerge. Conversely, if your heart is full of God's grace and glory, light will shine forth.

Why did Jesus shine on the Mount of Transfiguration (Matthew 17:2)? Because for that brief moment in time, the light of His deity was allowed to shine through the bounds of His humanity. What was always within Him was, for that short period, given freedom to emanate from Him.

"Wow!" Peter said. "It's good for us to be here," (see Matthew 17:4). And the same is still true. If you're speaking the language of the kingdom, if you're encouraging and loving, uplifting and endorsing, correcting and speaking truth, your family will sense it's good for them to be with you. If, on the other hand, those close to you are not saying, "It's good for me to be here" but rather, "Let me out of here," what should you do?

Turn to Isaiah 50 . . .

> The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary . . .
> Isaiah 50:4 (a)

We do a lot of talking. It has been estimated that the average person spends thirteen years of his life talking and in one year's time, speaks enough words to fill sixty 800-page books. We speak constantly—but do we speak the words of the learned?

What are "words of the learned"? They're the right words—not words of flattery but words of truth. Flattery is the epitome of selfishness because flattery says, "I care more about how you feel about me than I do about telling you the truth." People are funny. Pat us on the back and we swell up in the head. Jesus was not a back-slapper because He didn't want to be a head-sweller. Not given to flattery, He called the Pharisees and Sadducees exactly what they were (Matthew 23:16, 27).

How I long to speak the words of the learned. "If correction needs to be spoken, help me speak it, Lord. If encouragement can be given, allow me to give it. Let me speak the way You did—with the tongue of the learned."

How? Look again at Isaiah . . .

> . . . he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned.
> Isaiah 50:4 (b)

Jesus woke morning by morning, responding to His Father's loving wake-up call in order that He might receive specific instructions for the day ahead, in order that He would have the perfect word to speak to those with whom He would come in contact.

When the storm arose on the Sea of Galilee, Jesus was on the hillside before sunrise—praying (Mark 6:46). If Jesus needed devotions, I must need them, as well. If He needed to wait upon His Father morning by morning, I think it would be a good idea if I did. Jesus had it all together—yet He didn't miss an opportunity to spend time with His Father, to get the Word for the day in order to share it with a weary world.

Dear, precious people, I am convinced the Lord is looking today for men and women who will be quiet enough to hear a message from Him, bold enough to share it with others, and honest enough to live it themselves. If you start your day listening to God and meditating on His Word, your day will not be one of cursing, complaining, and gossiping. No, it will be a day of speaking words of the learned to those who are weary. But muzzling your mouth or disciplining your tongue will not change your language because external reformation only comes about by internal transformation.

How does such a transformation take place?

It happens in a quiet heart, a quiet time, and a quiet place in order that, through us, strength and truth, help and hope might be released to those around us.

Allow the King to reign in your heart morning by morning and you'll find yourself speaking light and life as the day unfolds. Meditate on His Word and you'll find yourself speaking words of the learned all week long. Worship Him with praise and adoration and you'll find yourself speaking the language of the kingdom to a weary world.

HAGGAI

Background to Haggai

Consisting of only 1,131 words in thirty-eight verses in two chapters, Haggai is the second shortest book in the Old Testament. Haggai may not have been very effusive—but he was surely effective, for he was able to mobilize and motivate a mass of directionless people to resume the undertaking of a great project.

You see, approximately sixteen years earlier, they had been freed from captivity in Babylon. Led by their political leader, Zerubbabel, and Joshua, the high priest, these people of God had traveled several hundred miles back to Jerusalem and immediately set about doing what the Lord had commissioned them to do. They began to build the temple—the place where God's name could be praised, the place they could assemble to honor His name. They began to lay the foundation, but became intimidated by their enemies and divided by internal contention. So for sixteen years, the work sat idle. Weeds began to grow on the foundation as the people gave up on the project and instead turned to the construction of their own houses.

Throughout history, we see the power of the spoken word. In fact, historians tell us the single most important factor in England's preservation against Hitler's relentless attack was the oratorical ability of Winston Churchill. He was able to encourage and inspire a nation that would have otherwise gone under. Martin Luther King, Jr. was another one who was able to inspire hundreds of thousands of workers to march for civil rights by the power of his words. But neither of these men could hold a candle to Haggai because he spoke under the inspiration of the Spirit of God.

The two chapters in his book contain three separate messages given by Haggai. In chapter 1, we see the message he gave in September. In the first nine verses of chapter 2, we see the message he gave in October. In the remainder of the second chapter, we see the message he gave in December. The September message was directed toward the peoples' hands. There, the word was simply, "Be productive." The October message was directed toward the people's hearts. There, the message was, "Be patient." The December message was directed to the peoples' heads, the minds. There, the message was, "Be prosperous."

Maybe you were once excited about the things of God, excited about serving the Lord but have since grown weary by the squabbling of God's people or the attacks of the enemy. So you have decided to concentrate on your own life instead, tending to your own little world. This book is for you—for no matter how long it's been, we see in these pages that it's never too late to get going again.

HAGGAI

Haggai 1:1 (a)
In the second year of Darius the king, in the sixth month, in the first day of the month, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet . . .

In each of his messages, Haggai tells us the exact time it was given to him to share with the people. There are important points in our lives that are punctuated by the interjection of a specific word given to us by the Spirit of God. Our lives are defined by these points. Therefore, it is important that our antennae are up, that our hearts are open to hear those specific instructions the Lord has for us.

You know the Lord is speaking to you about a given matter when there is an indelible impression on your heart, when you have a thought that you know is more than just your imagination, when there is a confirmation in Scripture or from other brothers or sisters.

Haggai 1:1 (b)
. . . unto Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, saying,

The word of the Lord came through Haggai to Zerubbabel and Joshua the high priest. The year was 520 B.C. Sixteen years earlier, Zerubbabel, the political leader, and Joshua, the high priest led a contingency of approximately 45,000 Jews from Babylon a few hundred miles south to Jerusalem after being held captive in Babylon for seventy years. When they arrived in Jerusalem, they were excited by the opportunity to rebuild the temple. But their progress was hindered both by external opposition and by internal division. Eventually, they turned their attention from the temple to construction of their own homes. For sixteen years, there was nothing built on the temple foundation they had laid. Thus, it served only as a reminder to the people of their inability to do what the Lord had asked them to do. So the Lord raised up Haggai to speak to Zerubbabel and Joshua and to inspire the people to be productive once again.

Haggai 1:2
Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, This people say, The time is not come, the time that the LORD's house should be built.

Notice that the people weren't saying the Lord's house shouldn't be built. They were simply saying that, due to the enemies on the outside and the contention within, this wasn't the time to do it. "We'll get to it later," they said. "We'll do it sometime—maybe even soon. But not right now."

The same thing can still happen. One of the favorite attacks of the enemy is to whisper in our ears, "Next month, next year—after you buy your house, develop your career, have your family—then you can really engage yourself in doing what the Lord has called you to do." But, gang, it's never the wrong time to do the right thing.

After Alexander the Great conquered the world by the age of thirty-three, he was asked by the historians who traveled with him to tell them the secret of accomplishing so much by such a young age. He is said to have responded that the secret lay in three words: Do it now.

What has God called you to do? What has He placed on your heart to accomplish in serving Him? What has He gifted you to do for His glory? Procrastination is what the enemy will use to hinder you from doing it. He won't say it's not worth it. He'll just tell you to do it later.

Haggai 1:3, 4
Then came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet, saying, Is it time for you, O ye, to dwell in your cieled houses, and this house lie waste?

"How is it that you have time to panel your houses but not to do what I have called you to do?" the Lord asks His people.

Haggai 1:5
Now therefore thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways.

"Consider" is a command the Lord will repeat five times in this short book. "Consider your ways. Search your heart," He says here.

Haggai 1:6
Ye have sown much, and bring in little; ye eat, but ye have not enough; ye drink, but ye are not filled with drink; ye clothe you, but there is none warm; and he that earneth wages earneth wages to put it into a bag with holes.

The people were working hard but they were neither satisfied nor getting ahead because no matter how hard they worked, they still felt empty within. That's always the way it is. The very process of trying to live for ourselves is counterproductive because everything we think we gain goes into a bag with holes in it. On the other hand, when we seek first the kingdom, everything else we need will be added unto us (Matthew 6:33).

Haggai 1:7–11
Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Consider your ways. Go up to the mountain, and bring wood, and build the house; and I will take pleasure in it, and I will be glorified, saith the LORD. Ye looked for much, and, lo, it came to little; and when ye brought it home, I did blow upon it. Why? saith the LORD of hosts. Because of mine house that is waste, and ye run every man unto his own house. Therefore the heaven over you is stayed from dew, and the earth is stayed from her fruit. And I called for a drought upon the land, and upon the mountains, and upon the corn, and upon the new wine, and upon the oil, and upon that which the ground bringeth forth, and upon men, and upon cattle, and upon all the labour of the hands.

The failure of the people to build the temple of the Lord resulted in drought in the land. The same can still be true today. If the oil of the anointing of the Spirit is absent from your life; if the wine—the joy of the Spirit—is missing; if there is a barrenness and dryness within, it could be an indication of a point of disobedience in our lives. The solution for us is the same as the solution in Haggai's day: simply to do what the Lord commanded us to do.

Mom and Dad, did you start family devotions and then slowly, as the months went by, did you say, "Our schedules are too busy, our kids are too restless. Maybe some day next year we'll get back to it?" Husband, have you neglected the promise you made to your wife to pray with her daily? Have you put off the foundational, simple things the Lord asked you to do? Take up the work again and experience the joy and anointing of the Spirit once more.

Haggai 1:12–15
Then Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, and Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, with all the remnant of the people, obeyed the voice of the LORD their God, and the words of Haggai the prophet, as the LORD their God had sent him, and the people did fear before the LORD. Then spake Haggai the LORD's messenger in the LORD's message unto the people, saying, I am with you, saith the LORD. And the LORD stirred up the spirit of Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and the spirit of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and the spirit of all the remnant of the people; and they came and did work in the house of the LORD of hosts, their God, In the four and twentieth day of the sixth month, in the second year of Darius the king.

According to verse 1, the message came on the first day of the month. Here, we see that on the twenty-fourth day of the month, the people were at work. This means that within twenty-three days, the people heard the word, gathered their materials, got organized, and continued that which they had begun sixteen years ago. Haggai is one of the blessed prophets in the Bible because, rather than being despised as most of the other prophets were, the hearts of the people were stirred. As a result, they rolled up their sleeves and got to work.

2 In chapter 2, we come to the October message, directed toward the peoples' hearts . . .

Haggai 2:1–3

In the seventh month, in the one and twentieth day of the month, came the word of the LORD by the prophet Haggai, saying, Speak now to Zerubbabel the son of Shealtiel, governor of Judah, and to Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest, and to the residue of the people, saying, Who is left among you that saw this house in her first glory? and how do ye see it now? is it not in your eyes in comparison of it as nothing?

To understand why the Lord is asking this question, we need to be reminded of the historical record as seen in Ezra 3. There, we read that when the people first came to Jerusalem and laid the foundation, the young men all shouted for joy. At the same time, however, the old men howled in grief. You see, the old men had seen the temple Solomon had erected—an ornate, impressive structure of gold and silver. They knew this new temple couldn't compare. There's always a great danger in looking back. That's why Paul said, "Forgetting those things which lie behind, I press on" (Philippians 3:13, 14).

"It's not like it was back in 1906," we say. "The Holy Ghost was really moving then." You can fall prey to this mindset even if you're only eighteen or twenty years old any time you start comparing the new with the old. The Lord is always looking ahead to new wine, to a new work of the Spirit (Matthew 9:17).

Haggai 2:4
Yet now be strong, O Zerubbabel, saith the LORD; and be strong, O Joshua, son of Josedech, the high priest; and be strong, all ye people of the land, saith the LORD, and work: for I am with you, saith the LORD of hosts:

"I am with you," the Lord says. And, truly, since He was with them, nothing could stand against them (Romans 8:31).

Haggai 2:5–7 (a)
According to the word that I covenanted with you when ye came out of Egypt, so my spirit remaineth among you: fear ye not. For thus saith the LORD of hosts; Yet once, it is a little while, and I will shake the heavens, and the earth, and the sea, and the dry land; And I will shake all nations . . .

There would indeed be a shaking of the nations. The Medes and Persians, who had conquered the Babylonians, would themselves be conquered by the Greeks. The Greeks would, in turn, be conquered by the Romans. And the Romans would rule the rest of the nations with an iron fist.

Haggai 2:7 (b)
. . . and the desire of all nations shall come: and I will fill this house with glory, saith the LORD of hosts.

Not only was the Lord with them but the desire of all nations would come. The "desire of all nations" is a name for Jesus. Although this temple would be remodeled by Herod, it was this temple that Jesus, the desire of all nations, would heal and teach from (Matthew 21:14; Mark 12:35).

Haggai 2:8
The silver is mine, and the gold is mine, saith the LORD of hosts.

The Lord lacks for nothing. Therefore, if He desired an ornate house, He could have had it.

Haggai 2:9
The glory of this latter house shall be greater than of the former, saith the LORD of hosts: and in this place will I give peace, saith the LORD of hosts.

That Jesus, the Prince of Peace, would walk and work in this temple makes its glory infinitely greater than Solomon's temple.

Haggai 2:10 (a)
In the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD by Haggai the prophet . . . .

Haggai's third message came in December—directed not toward the hands or the heart of the people but toward their heads, their minds.

Haggai 2:10 (b)–14
. . . saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Ask now the priests concerning the law, saying, If one bear holy flesh in the skirt of his garment, and with his skirt do touch bread, or pottage, or wine, or oil, or any meat, shall it be holy? And the priests answered and said, No. Then said Haggai, If one that is unclean by a dead body touch any of these, shall it be unclean? And the priests answered and said, It shall be unclean. Then answered Haggai, and said, So is this people, and so is this nation before me, saith the LORD; and so is every work of their hands; and that which they offer there is unclean.

Haggai was to pose two questions to the priests. "If a piece of meat that has been offered to the Lord accidentally touches some other object, does the object it touches become holy?"

"No," the priests answered.

Second, "If someone is ceremonially unclean because he touched a dead body, can he make others ceremonially unclean by touching them?"

"Yes," the priests answered.

Simply put, holiness cannot be passed on—but corruption and pollution can be. In other words, if you hang around sin, you can't help but be affected. But simply hanging around a church doesn't make you a Christian. You've got to be obedient to the Lord personally.

Haggai 2:15–17
And now, I pray you, consider from this day and upward, from before a stone was laid upon a stone in the temple of the LORD: Since those days were, when one came to an heap of twenty measures, there were but ten: when one came to the pressfat for to draw out fifty vessels out of the press, there were but twenty. I smote you with blasting and with mildew and with hail in all the labours of your hands; yet ye turned not to me, saith the LORD.

"Why is it that, when you go to the presses, you're only getting half as much wine as you hoped for?" the Lord asks. "Why is it that, when you harvest your crops, you're getting less than half of what you were anticipating? It's because you've been corrupted."

As Ezra tells us, the people had been holding their religious services—but for the past sixteen years, they had been disobedient to the single thing the Lord had told them to do. Consequently, everything they did was adversely affected. The same is still true. If the Lord has specifically told us to do something and we say, "Later," our disobedience will pollute and corrupt all of our undertakings. It's not that the Lord is punishing us. It's that He's nudging us back in the right direction. If you're wondering why things aren't working, it could be that God is chastening you not to punish you but to correct you.

Haggai 2:18, 19
Consider now from this day and upward, from the four and twentieth day of the ninth month, even from the day that the foundation of the LORD's temple was laid, consider it. Is the seed yet in the barn? yea, as yet the vine, and the fig tree, and the pomegranate, and the olive tree, hath not brought forth: from this day will I bless you.

"Consider now," the Lord said. "Use your heads. Realize that you can be prosperous by doing that which I told you to do. From the very day you start obeying, I'll start blessing."

Maybe it's been fifteen years since you started doing what the Lord called you to do but you have since neglected it. Do it now. Be obedient to what He's told you to do. If He's called you to pray, pray. If He's called you to study the Word with intensity, get back to studying. If He's called you to witness, witness. If He's called you to be a singer, write songs and sing. If He's called you to be hospitable, open your house regularly. If He's called you to the mission field, go. Don't say the time is not now. Neglecting to do what He's called you to do will lead to great emptiness in your life.

Haggai 2:20, 21 (a)

And again the word of the LORD came unto Haggai in the four and twentieth day of the month, saying, Speak to Zerubbabel, governor of Judah . . .

I bet Zerubbabel's knees were knocking at this point. "Oh, no," he must have thought. "Now I'm going to get a word against me. For sixteen years, I've been in charge of this project and nothing's been happening."

Haggai 2:21 (b)–23
. . . saying, I will shake the heavens and the earth; And I will overthrow the throne of kingdoms, and I will destroy the strength of the kingdoms of the heathen; and I will overthrow the chariots, and those that ride in them; and the horses and their riders shall come down, every one by the sword of his brother. In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, will I take thee, O Zerubbabel, my servant, the son of Shealtiel, saith the LORD, and will make thee as a signet: for I have chosen thee, saith the LORD of hosts.

"I know your heart must be heavy," the Lord said. "I know the work has not been going well these past sixteen years. But know this, Zerubbabel: I've chosen you and I know your heart is right. Therefore, you will be like a signet—in a position of great authority." Indeed he was, for in the genealogies of Jesus—Joseph's line presented by Matthew and Mary's presented by Luke—Zerubbabel's name is the only one in both lines (Matthew 1:12; Luke 3:27). Thus, his place in the lineage of Messiah is unique. In addition to this, most scholars believe that after the Lord shakes the nations in the Tribulation, Zerubbabel will hold a key position in the millennial kingdom.

It greatly encourages me that Haggai ends on this note, for in it the Lord seems to say, "David was prohibited from building the temple because his hands were bloody, but I counted to his credit the fact that he wanted to build it (2 Samuel 7). Zerubbabel, even though the building languished a bit, I see that your heart is right. And you will be rewarded accordingly."

Therefore, take hope, dear friends. If it's been sixteen years since you've done the work God called you to do, get going again. And know that if your heart is right, the Lord hasn't given up on you. On the contrary, He'll use you powerfully—just as we'll see Him do with Zerubbabel in the Book of Zechariah.

ZECHARIAH

Background to Zechariah

The year was 520 B.C. The Jews had just returned from a seventy-year captivity where they were held hostage in Babylon. Zerubbabel, their political leader, and Joshua, their spiritual overseer, had led the first contingent of approximately 42,000 back from Babylon to Jerusalem. Upon their arrival, they set out to rebuild the temple. Yet, although they began well, after a year, they had given up on the project. Facing intimidation by their enemies and division within their own ranks, they opted to build their own houses instead.

So the Lord sent two prophets to spark their passion, to reignite their devotion, to jump-start their conviction. "What do you mean it's not time to do the Lord's work?" Haggai asked. Haggai was a very pointed and practical kind of prophet whose message consisted of only thirty-eight verses. Zechariah, however, was of a much different flavor and personality. Speaking with visionary imagery, he goes on not for thirty-eight verses but for fourteen chapters as he calls the people to consider the vastness of God's program.

The Lord used both of these men in tandem to get His people going again. And in this we see once again the Lord's tendency to put different kinds of people together to do His work. In John 21, we read that, as they fished on the Sea of Galilee, John, being a mystic and perceptive person, was the first to realize that the Figure calling to them from the shore was Jesus. Hearing this, Peter immediately jumped overboard and swam to shore. John thought it through; Peter dove in—and the Lord used them both as they traveled together throughout the pages of the Book of Acts.

This encourages me greatly because I know that, regardless of the shortcomings in my personality, there's a place for me in the body. God isn't looking for cookie-cutter, carbon-copy Christians. Peter says we're living stones being fit together into a spiritual house (1 Peter 2:5). Therefore, trust the Lord to pair you with those who, although they may not be like you, will bring about growth with you and will complement your personality in a way that will bring great glory to Him.

Zechariah's book is similar to the Book of Daniel, another apocalyptic writer. Interestingly, Daniel was born in Jerusalem and carried away into Babylon where he wrote his prophecies while Zechariah was born in Babylon and moved back to Jerusalem where he wrote his prophecies. His book divides itself into three sections. In chapters 1 through 6, the prophet sees a vision. In chapters 7 and 8, the people ask a question. Finally, in chapters 9 through 14, the Prince comes with salvation.

In the eighth month, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying,

Zechariah means "Jehovah remembers." Berechiah means "Jehovah will bless." Iddo means "At the appointed time." Thus, in this very first verse, we see the prophecy that sets the stage for the entire book: Jehovah remembers and will bless at the appointed time. "God has not forgotten you," Zechariah will say. "He remembers the plans and promises He made to you. He will bless you at the appointed time—so don't give up."

Zechariah 1:2, 3
The LORD hath been sore displeased with your fathers. Therefore say thou unto them, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye unto me, saith the LORD of hosts, and I will turn unto you, saith the LORD of hosts.

"Turn to Me and I'll turn to you," the Lord says through Zechariah. James said essentially the same thing when he wrote, "Draw nigh to God and He will draw nigh to you" (4:8). That's a promise. If we will make the effort and expend the energy to draw near to the Lord, He promises He'll respond to us. Therefore, when people say that they've sought the Lord but that He didn't answer, I am reminded of Paul's word to the Romans: Let God be true and every man a liar. Either God is lying or we're not being totally truthful about seeking Him because He has promised that if we draw near to Him, if we even turn to Him, He will do the same to us.

Zechariah 1:4–6
Be ye not as your fathers, unto whom the former prophets have cried, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Turn ye now from your evil ways, and from your evil doings: but they did not hear, nor hearken unto me, saith the LORD. Your fathers, where are they? and the prophets, do they live for ever? But my words and my statutes, which I commanded my servants the prophets, did they not take hold of your fathers? and they returned and said, Like as the LORD of hosts thought to do unto us, according to our ways, and according to our doings, so hath he dealt with us.

"Look at your history," Zechariah says, "Don't be like your fathers who, although the prophets were among them, didn't respond to them. Act upon what the Lord is telling you."

Zechariah 1:7, 8 (a)
Upon the four and twentieth day of the eleventh month, which is the month Sebat, in the second year of Darius, came the word of the LORD unto Zechariah, the son of Berechiah, the son of Iddo the prophet, saying, I saw by night . . .

Here begins a series of eight visions—all apparently given to Zechariah in a single night.

Zechariah 1:8 (b)
. . . and behold a man riding upon a red horse . . .

In verse 11, we see this man identified as the angel of the Lord, or Jesus Christ Himself.

Zechariah 1:8 (c)
. . . and he stood among the myrtle trees that were in the bottom . . .

The myrtle tree is a symbol, a picture of the nation of Israel. Unlike the mighty cedars of Lebanon, myrtle trees only grow to a height of eight feet. So, Israel is seemingly insignificant both in population and geography. Yet, just as the myrtle tree is an evergreen, Israel has a remarkable tendency to continue on even though men like Pharaoh, Haman, Herod, and Hitler throughout history have tried to destroy her completely. The blossom of the myrtle tree releases a wonderful fragrance when crushed. The same is true of Israel. Whenever nations have sought to crush her, the fragrance of God glows from her. There is something special, unique, and supernatural about this nation—and here in this first vision, what an encouragement it must have been to the people to realize that the Lord Himself was standing among the myrtle trees, that He was in their very midst.

Zechariah 1:8 (d)–11
. . . and behind him were there red horses, speckled, and white. Then said I, O my lord, what are these? And the angel that talked with me said unto me, I will shew thee what these be. And the man that stood among the myrtle trees answered and said, These are they whom the LORD hath sent to walk to and fro through the earth. And they answered the angel of the LORD that stood among the myrtle trees, and said, We have walked to and fro through the earth, and, behold, all the earth sitteth still, and is at rest.

Who are these other beings surrounding the Lord, riding horses of various colors, walking to and fro through the earth? In Job 1, we read that Satan walks to and fro throughout the earth, causing tragedy and turmoil in the world. But it is encouraging to note that, at the same time Satan and his demons are going to and fro, angels are as well . . .

Determined to kill Elisha because of his ability to prophesy the location of every ambush they attempted to set up against the Jews, the Syrian king and his army went to Dothan to make an end of the prophet. The next morning when Elisha's servant awoke he said, "We're surrounded by Syrians. There's no hope!" But when Elisha asked the Lord to open his eyes, Gehazi saw that the Syrians were themselves surrounded by tens of thousands of angels with flaming swords and fiery chariots (2 Kings 6).

One of the names of the Lord seen repeatedly throughout Scripture is "Lord of hosts." What does the word host mean? Army. In other words, God is Lord of the armies. What armies? Angelic armies. Right now, although demons seek to hurt us, angels are surrounding us. If we could see what's really going on, it would blow our minds and bless our souls. The enemy is real, to be sure, but the forces of God are greater still.

Why were these angels sent in Zechariah's day? They were spying out the situation and came back to report to the Lord that the nations who had troubled the Jews were at peace and prospering. In other words, the very ones who had harmed the people of God seemed to be doing well.

Zechariah 1:12–17
Then the angel of the LORD answered and said, O LORD of hosts, how long wilt thou not have mercy on Jerusalem and on the cities of Judah, against which thou hast had indignation these threescore and ten years? And the LORD answered the angel that talked with me with good words and comfortable words. So the angel that communed with me said unto me, Cry thou, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; I am jealous for Jerusalem and for Zion with a great jealousy. And I am very sore displeased with the heathen that are at ease: for I was but a little displeased, and they helped forward the affliction. Therefore thus saith the LORD; I am returned to Jerusalem with mercies: my house shall be built in it, saith the LORD of hosts, and a line shall be stretched forth upon Jerusalem. Cry yet, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; My cities through prosperity shall yet be spread abroad; and the LORD shall yet comfort Zion, and shall yet choose Jerusalem.

The Lord says, "Although these nations were instruments in My hand to discipline My people, they have gone far beyond what I intended. They exceeded the boundaries I placed on them. Therefore, I am returning to Jerusalem not to judge my people but to show mercy to them."

Zechariah 1:18–21
Then lifted I up mine eyes, and saw, and behold four horns. And I said unto the angel that talked with me, What be these? And he answered me, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, Israel, and Jerusalem. And the LORD shewed me four carpenters. Then said I, What come these to do? And he spake, saying, These are the horns which have scattered Judah, so that no man did lift up his head: but these are come to fray them, to cast out the horns of the Gentiles, which lifted up their horn over the land of Judah to scatter it.

Zechariah's second vision refers to the powers and nations that had come against God's people. Whether these four horns refer to the four powers that had already caused them to scatter—the Assyrians, Medo-Persians, Babylonians, and Egyptians—or whether it speaks both historically and prophetically of the Babylonians and Medo-Persians as well as the coming Greeks and Romans, the Lord will "nail" those who come against His people.

The Lord likens His Word to a hammer (Jeremiah 23:29). Therefore, the weapon you and I need to use when the horns of the enemy, the powers of hell, come against us is the Word of God. It's our primary weapon, our key source of victory over the powers and forces of Satan. When Jesus was tempted in the wilderness, each time He said, "It is written . . . ." And Satan was rendered powerless (Matthew 4).

2 Zechariah 2:1, 2

I lifted up mine eyes again, and looked, and behold a man with a measuring line in his hand. Then said I, Whither goest thou? And he said unto me, To measure Jerusalem, to see what is the breadth thereof, and what is the length thereof.

In the third part of this vision, Zechariah sees a man with a tape measure in his hand, measuring Jerusalem, taking stock of the situation.

Zechariah 2:3–5

And, behold, the angel that talked with me went forth, and another angel went out to meet him, And said unto him, Run, speak to this young man, saying, Jerusalem shall be inhabited as towns without walls for the multitude of men and cattle therein:

For I, saith the LORD, will be unto her a wall of fire round about, and will be the glory in the midst of her.

Although Jerusalem will be built again and prominent once more, we see in verse 4 that it will be as a city without walls. In Ezekiel 38, we read that it is at the time when Jerusalem is without walls that Gog, or Russia, will attack. That is, the Russian invasion of Israel will happen at a time when Jerusalem is without walls, or, seemingly, experiencing a time of peace.

Zechariah 2:6–8
Ho, ho, come forth, and flee from the land of the north, saith the LORD: for I have spread you abroad as the four winds of the heaven, saith the LORD. Deliver thyself, O Zion, that dwellest with the daughter of Babylon. For thus saith the LORD of hosts; After the glory hath he sent me unto the nations which spoiled you: for he that toucheth you toucheth the apple of his eye.

Any nation—be it Babylon historically or Russia prophetically—that touches Israel touches the apple of God's eye. Physiologists tell us the quickest reflex in our entire body is the reflex to cover the eye when something is coming. That's how quick the Lord is to protect His own.

Zechariah 2:9–13
For, behold, I will shake mine hand upon them, and they shall be a spoil to their servants: and ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me. Sing and rejoice, O daughter of Zion: for, lo, I come, and I will dwell in the midst of thee, saith the LORD. And many nations shall be joined to the LORD in that day, and shall be my people: and I will dwell in the midst of thee, and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto thee. And the LORD shall inherit Judah his portion in the holy land, and shall choose Jerusalem again. Be silent, O all flesh, before the LORD: for he is raised up out of his holy habitation.

What a day it will be when Jesus Christ dwells and reigns in Jerusalem, when all things will be right. "Sing and rejoice," the Lord says in verse 10.

"Be silent, O all flesh," He says in verse 13. Worship covers the broadest spectrum of emotions and expressions. There's a time to sing and rejoice and another time to bow silently in awe and humility.

3 In chapter 3, we see the fourth part of Zechariah's vision.

Zechariah 3:1
And he shewed me Joshua the high priest standing before the angel of the LORD, and Satan standing at his right hand to resist him.

Here, we see Joshua standing before Jesus with Satan ready to resist, or accuse, him. According to Revelation 12:10, one of Satan's main occupations is accusing believers. In fact, the word, devil, actually means "slanderer."

When Satan talks to you about God, he lies. He tries to get you to think that God is some kind of cosmic killjoy who wants you to be miserable. He whispers in your ear that God is mad at you, disappointed in you, through with you. But when he talks to God about you, he speaks truth. "Look at Jon Courson," he says. "He's supposed to be Your child. But did You hear what he said? Do You know what he thought? Did You see what he did?"

Zechariah 3:2
And the LORD said unto Satan, The LORD rebuke thee, O Satan; even the LORD that hath chosen Jerusalem rebuke thee: is not this a brand plucked out of the fire?

As Jesus answers the accuser, He doesn't liken Joshua to a mighty redwood or a majestic oak. No, He says, "See this little twig? I plucked him out of the fire—just like I chose insignificant Jerusalem to be My capital city."

Our security and significance don't lie in who we are, gang, but in Whose we are. Ephesians 1:4 declares that, before the foundation of the world, God elected us and adopted us into His family. Before we did anything or were anything, God ordained that we would be part of His kingdom. Therefore, we don't have to convince ourselves or others that we're something we're not."

Zechariah 3:3
Now Joshua was clothed with filthy garments, and stood before the angel.

The people didn't think Joshua's garments were filthy. On the contrary, they thought his robes were beautiful, ornate, significant. But in the presence of the Lord, even his priestly robes became as filthy rags. Why? Isaiah gives us the answer . . .

> But we are all as an unclean thing, and all our righteousnesses are as filthy rags; and we all do fade as a leaf; and our iniquities, like the wind, have taken us away.
> Isaiah 64:6

All of our efforts at religiosity or generosity might make us seem like good people. But in the presence of the Lord—as our motives are suddenly exposed—all of our righteousness takes on the appearance of filthy rags.

The picture painted here is very important because Jesus, a Greater than Joshua, would come on the scene and tell the people that unless their righteousness exceeded that of the Pharisees, they couldn't enter the kingdom (Matthew 5:20). "Be ye therefore perfect," He said, "even as your Father in heaven is perfect" (Matthew 5:48). In other words, if you're going to try and make it into heaven on your own religious merit, good luck. You've got to be perfect. But once you see you are a sinner, clothed in filthiness, the door is opened for you to see your need for a Savior, a Redeemer. That's what salvation is all about—knowing we can't make it on our own. The entire purpose of the Sermon on the Mount was to drive us to Jesus not as a wise teacher or an astute philosopher but as our Redeemer, our Savior, our only hope.

Zechariah 3:4, 5

> And he answered and spake unto those that stood before him, saying, Take away the filthy garments from him. And unto him he said, Behold, I have caused thine iniquity to pass from thee, and I will clothe thee with change of raiment. And I said, Let them set a fair mitre upon his head. So they set a fair mitre upon his head, and clothed him with garments. And the angel of the LORD stood by.

Notice that the Lord didn't tell Joshua to go to his room and clean up. That's what we think the Lord says to us. When we hear the accusation of the slanderer, we think we have to somehow cleanse ourselves before we can ever pray, worship, or serve. Not so. As Joshua just stood passively, realizing his robes of religiosity were filthy, he heard the Lord say, "I will clothe him with robes that are righteous."

> I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.
> Isaiah 61:10

Salvation is not a matter of trying to clean up my act or ironing out my problems and wrinkles. It's a matter of realizing I'm a sinner and letting Jesus robe me with the garments of His righteousness.

> Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new. For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.
> 2 Corinthians 5:17, 21

This is essential to understand. You are the righteousness of God not because of what you do or don't do but because of where you are. When you opened your heart to Jesus, He came in you. But, more importantly, you were placed in Him. You are in Christ. Therefore, when the Father looks at us, He doesn't see us in our sin. He sees us in His Son.

> My little children, these things write I unto you, that ye sin not. And if any man sin, we have an advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous: And he is the propitiation for our sins: and not for ours only, but also for the sins of the whole world.
> 1 John 2:1, 2

In the heavenly scene, Satan is the prosecuting attorney, calling judgment upon me, pointing out the faults within me before God, the judge of all men. But when my name comes up, I have a defense lawyer, Jesus Christ, who steps up and says, "Father, I died for Jon and My blood has covered his sin. He is in Me."

Hearing this, the Father says, "Case dismissed for complete lack of evidence."

And I am free.

> Zechariah 3:6, 7
> And the angel of the LORD protested unto Joshua, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If thou wilt walk in my ways, and if thou wilt keep my charge, then thou shalt also judge my house, and shalt also keep my courts, and I will give thee places to walk among these that stand by.

"Don't be condemned about the temple lying in ruins for the past sixteen years," the Lord says to Joshua. "Don't let that slow you down, but keep going and you'll be used in even greater ways—among heavenly beings in the ages to come."

This life is simply preparatory for eternity, gang. If you walk with the Lord now, He will greet you in heaven with the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant . . . enter into the joy of the Lord" (Matthew 25:23) and you will rule and reign significantly with Him. If, on the other hand, you just cruise through life, living for your own self, your own pursuits, your own pleasures, when you get to heaven, although you'll be happy, your capacity to enjoy heaven will be greatly diminished.

Your usefulness and capacity to enjoy the ages to come are being determined right now. That's why Paul said, "When I became a man, I put away childish things" (1 Corinthians 13:11) and why he pressed on "toward the mark for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus" (Philippians 3:14). When Paul had a vision of heaven (2 Corinthians 12:2–4), his life was suddenly changed. He knew that only one thing mattered: obeying the leading and command of the Lord. What we do for ourselves will all burn. But what we'll never once regret is what we did for the kingdom.

Zechariah 3:8
Hear now, O Joshua the high priest, thou, and thy fellows that sit before thee: for they are men wondered at: for, behold, I will bring forth my servant the BRANCH.

Isaiah, Jeremiah, and Zechariah refer to Jesus as "the Branch." Thus, Zechariah is telling Joshua the best news of all: that Jesus is coming.

Zechariah 3:9 (a)
For behold the stone that I have laid before Joshua; upon one stone shall be seven eyes: behold, I will engrave the graving thereof, saith the LORD of hosts . . .

Seven eyes speak of complete vision—a full understanding, total wisdom.

Zechariah 3:9 (b), 10
. . . and I will remove the iniquity of that land in one day. In that day, saith the LORD of hosts, shall ye call every man his neighbour under the vine and under the fig tree.

The iniquity of the land was indeed removed in one day—the day Jesus died for the sins of the whole world (1 John 2:2). And the effects of iniquity will also be removed in one day. For on the day Jesus comes back, iniquity will be replaced by peace and prosperity—the way things were meant to be.

And the angel that talked with me came again, and waked me, as a man that is wakened out of his sleep,

Evidently, by this point, Zechariah was emotionally exhausted by the visions he had already seen. Yet an angel comes to him and rouses him from his deep sleep that the visions might continue. Even as Zechariah was awakened that he might be envisioned, so too, when we come to church or Bible studies or during our morning devotions, we need to say, "Send an angel if necessary to rouse me, Father. Don't let me slumber in lethargy. Don't let me snooze through this life. Awaken me."

After being prepared for the vision, Zechariah is presented with the vision . . .

Zechariah 4:2
And said unto me, What seest thou? And I said, I have looked, and behold a candlestick all of gold, with a bowl upon the top of it, and his seven lamps thereon, and seven pipes to the seven lamps, which are upon the top thereof:

In this vision, Zechariah would understand what this lampstand, or candlestick, was all about because he was not only a prophet but also a priest. Part of the priest's job in the tabernacle and temple was to fill the lamps with oil and to trim the wicks of the lampstand that stood in the holy place. But this was different from any lampstand Zechariah had seen before, for on top of this lampstand was a reservoir filled with oil that would flow through pipes to each lamp.

Zechariah 4:3
And two olive trees by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof.

On each side of this lampstand stood an olive tree which produced the oil for the reservoir that emptied into pipes through which the oil for the reservoir was carried. From verse 12, we know that these trees were connected to the reservoir in such a way that oil was provided directly. In other words, there was no need for harvesting and crushing the olives to make the oil for the lamps. Zechariah must have been rejoicing—no more chores!

Zechariah 4:4
So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord?

After being prepared for the vision and presented with it, now Zechariah is perplexed by it.

Zechariah 4:5
Then the angel that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord.

Zechariah freely admitted he needed understanding, that he didn't have all the answers. So now he will be told the purpose of the vision . . .

Zechariah 4:6
Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the LORD unto Zerubbabel, saying, Not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the LORD of hosts.

Throughout Scripture, oil is a picture of the Holy Spirit—and a perfect picture it is. Oil brings about lubrication and eliminates friction—just as the fruit of the Spirit is love (Galatians 5:22). In addition to being a source of illumination, oil brings about healing. Just as the good Samaritan poured oil in the wounds of the man who had been beaten, James instructed the elders to anoint with oil those who were sick (5:14). Oil is also the base of costly fragrances (Matthew 26:7). Truly, the Holy Spirit illuminates the Word for us. He reduces the friction between us. He heals our hurts. He is a soothing perfume that allows us to take on a fragrance that is very unlike our natural scent.

> Zechariah 4:7–10
> Who art thou, O great mountain? before Zerubbabel thou shalt become a plain: and he shall bring forth the headstone thereof with shoutings, crying, Grace, grace unto it. Moreover the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, The hands of Zerubbabel have laid the foundation of this house; his hands shall also finish it; and thou shalt know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you. For who hath despised the day of small things? for they shall rejoice, and shall see the plummet in the hand of Zerubbabel with those seven; they are the eyes of the LORD, which run to and fro through the whole earth.

Through Zechariah, the Lord said to Zerubbabel, "I know what you're thinking. Sixteen years have passed and the project you began is now stalled. But I have good news for you. I am going to complete that which I began. And your hands will be the hands I use to do it. Therefore, be patient. Don't despise the day of small things. Just be faithful. How will all of this come about? Not by your might or by your resolve. The stalled project will be completed by My Spirit. Just as the oil from the olive trees passes through the lamps apart from human effort, so too, I will work apart from anything man does."

I know there is a time in virtually all of our lives when the Lord lays something on our hearts. A promise is given. A dream is placed on our minds. A vision is set before our eyes. It might be a business or a marriage, a family or a ministry. We begin. We lay the foundation—but then the difficulties come. As the months and years pass by, we say, "It's not going to happen." And our hearts sink.

But, just as He said to Zerubbabel, the Lord would say to us, "I am going to allow the hands that laid the foundation to finish the work. You are going to bring the capstone—the finishing piece—with shouts of grace at the end. It's all by My grace. So don't despise the days of small things, of small beginnings. And don't give up."

Zechariah 4:11–14
Then answered I, and said unto him, What are these two olive trees upon the right side of the candlestick and upon the left side thereof? And I answered again, and said unto him, What be these two olive branches which through the two golden pipes empty the golden oil out of themselves? And he answered me and said, Knowest thou not what these be? And I said, No, my lord. Then said he, These are the two anointed ones, that stand by the LORD of the whole earth.

As Zechariah ponders the vision, he is told that the branches by which the oil of the Spirit flows are the two anointed ones. Historically, this speaks of Joshua and Zerubbabel. Prophetically, Revelation 11 refers to this verse in relation to the two witnesses who will be raised up in the Tribulation. But most importantly, symbolically, the two olives trees speak of the anointed Ones—Jesus Christ and the Holy Spirit. "I am the vine," Jesus declares. "Ye are the branches" (John 15:5). We're to be the branches through which the oil of the Spirit flows into the reservoir so that the light, the church, might burn brightly. Therefore, if we want to be filled with the Spirit, we must position ourselves as did Joshua and Zerubbabel—in the place of service. You will find that the church burns brighter, that the kingdom is expanded, and that your own life takes on significance when you do this.

When you realize it is only by the power of the Spirit that anything will happen, you'll quit trying to muscle your way through your ministry. Instead, you'll get on your knees before the Lord and say, "It's only by the work of Your Spirit, Lord, that anything will take place in my life." And it is then that the mountain will be removed; the lamp will burn; the temple will be completed—and the Lord will be glorified.

5 In chapter 5, we come to the sixth part of Zechariah's vision. The previous five parts had encouraged the people of Israel concerning the Lord's presence and future for them. But here, in chapter 5, the scene changes a bit. In chapter 4, Zechariah had been given the vision of a lampstand that would be continuously supplied with oil. For the lamps to burn brightly, however, the wicks would need to be trimmed. Thus, we see the chastening hand of the Lord in order that His people might burn brightly for Him.

Zechariah 5:1, 2
Then I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and behold a flying roll. And he said unto me, What seest thou? And I answered, I see a flying roll; the length thereof is twenty cubits, and the breadth thereof ten cubits.

This roll was a scroll thirty feet long and fifteen feet wide.

Zechariah 5:3, 4
Then said he unto me, This is the curse that goeth forth over the face of the whole earth: for every one that stealeth shall be cut off as on this side according to it; and every one that sweareth shall be cut off as on that side according to it. I will bring it forth, saith the LORD of hosts, and it shall enter into the house of the thief, and into the house of him that sweareth falsely by my name: and it shall remain in the midst of his house, and shall consume it with the timber thereof and the stones thereof.

This mammoth scroll was a record of sins both against God and man. It speaks so practically because we often say, "Lord, ignite me. I want to burn brightly. Fill me with the oil of Your Spirit." But so often the problem lies not in the need to be filled but in the need to be emptied. We seek to be empowered by the Spirit and wonder why it doesn't happen when, in reality, there needs to be a trimming, a cutting, a removing of wickedness.

Zechariah 5:5, 6 (a)
Then the angel that talked with me went forth, and said unto me, Lift up now thine eyes, and see what is this that goeth forth. And I said, What is it? And he said, This is an ephah that goeth forth. . . .

In the seventh part of his vision, Zechariah sees an ephah—a large basked used in harvesting.

Zechariah 5:6 (b)–9
. . . He said moreover, This is their resemblance through all the earth. And, behold, there was lifted up a talent of lead: and this is a woman that sitteth in the midst of the ephah. And he said, This is wickedness. And he cast it into the midst of the ephah; and he cast the weight of lead upon the mouth thereof. Then lifted I up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came out two women, and the wind was in their wings; for they had wings like the wings of a stork: and they lifted up the ephah between the earth and the heaven.

Just as the women in the basket are carried away, the whole world is caught up in the materialism and commercialization symbolized by Babylon in Revelation 18.

Zechariah 5:10, 11
Then said I to the angel that talked with me, Whither do these bear the ephah? And he said unto me, To build it an house in the land of Shinar: and it shall be established, and set there upon her own base.

Shinar is a name for Babylon. When Judah was carried into Babylon, the Jews were an agrarian people. But after spending seventy years in Babylon, they became merchants and remained in that role until Israel was rebirthed in 1948. At that time, young people moved back into Israel, lived on kibbutzim, and farmed the land once again. This is the foundation of Israeli society today—which explains why they are one of the world's largest exporters of fruit.

6 In chapter 6, we come to the eighth and final section of this vision . . .

Zechariah 6:1–8

And I turned, and lifted up mine eyes, and looked, and, behold, there came four chariots out from between two mountains; and the mountains were mountains of brass. In the first chariot were red horses; and in the second chariot black horses; And in the third chariot white horses; and in the fourth chariot grisled and bay horses. Then I answered and said unto the angel that talked with me, What are these, my lord? And the angel answered and said unto me, These are the four spirits of the heavens, which go forth from standing before the Lord of all the earth. The black horses which are therein go forth into the north country; and the white go forth after them; and the grisled go forth toward the south country. And the bay went forth, and sought to go that they might walk to and fro through the earth: and he said, Get you hence, walk to and fro through the earth. So they walked to and fro through the earth. Then cried he upon me, and spake unto me, saying, Behold, these that go toward the north country have quieted my spirit in the north country.

These four chariots align perfectly with Revelation 6, where we see that the red horse speaks of war; the black horse speaks of famine; the white horse speaks of a false peace; and the gray horse speaks of death. Brass is the material of judgment, as seen in the brass altar and brass serpent. In other words, judgment was coming.

Zechariah's vision in its entirety was to show the people that the Lord was with them, moving among them, removing sin from them, destroying the commercial system that had polluted them—and that He would bring judgment on the earth.

Prophetically, Zechariah's vision tells the story of Israel. In 1948, when she was brought back home again, the Lord was in the midst of the myrtle trees once again (1:7–11). The powers that came against her ended up being "hammered" themselves (1:18–21). In 1967, Jerusalem was "measured" when the city was brought under the Israeli flag (2:1–5). Like Joshua, Israel will see that she has need of being cleansed and robed by the blood of Jesus Christ (3:1–5). When that happens in the time of the Tribulation, her light will shine brightly (4:2–5). But, as seen in the flying scroll, those who do not acknowledge the reality of the redemptive work of Jesus Christ will be judged for their sins ((5:1–4). The commercial systems that manipulate and rip people off will be done away with (5:5–11), replaced by righteousness when, following the judgment of the Tribulation, Jesus rules and reigns from Jerusalem (6:1–8).

Zechariah 6:9–11
And the word of the LORD came unto me, saying, Take of them of the captivity, even of Heldai, of Tobijah, and of Jedaiah, which are come from Babylon, and come thou the same day, and go into the house of Josiah the son of Zephaniah; Then take silver and gold, and make crowns, and set them upon the head of Joshua the son of Josedech, the high priest;

Following the four chariots that speak of the Tribulation period, we see crowns which speak of the coming of Christ.

Zechariah 6:12 (a)
And speak unto him, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Behold the man . . .

Who else would say, "Behold the man"? Pontius Pilate, pointing to Jesus (John 19:5).

Zechariah 6:12 (b)
. . . whose name is The BRANCH . . .

As seen in Isaiah 11:1 and Jeremiah 23:5, "The Branch" is a prophetic name for Jesus.

Zechariah 6:12 (c)–15
. . . and he shall grow up out of his place, and he shall build the temple of the LORD: Even he shall build the temple of the LORD; and he shall bear the glory, and shall sit and rule upon his throne; and he shall be a priest upon his throne: and the counsel of peace shall be between them both. And the crowns shall be to Helem, and to Tobijah, and to Jedaiah, and to Hen the son of Zephaniah, for a memorial in the temple of the LORD. And they that are far off shall come and build in the temple of the LORD, and ye shall know that the LORD of hosts hath sent me unto you. And this shall come to pass, if ye will diligently obey the voice of the LORD your God.

Isaiah 52 calls Jesus the root coming out of dry ground. The ground would be dry indeed. For four hundred years, a prophet would not be heard in the land of Israel. For four hundred years God was silent—when suddenly, out of the dry ground, the Branch appeared. Looking ahead five hundred years to the First Coming of Christ, Zechariah says, "This One who is coming shall wear the crown of both king and priest." This would have been shocking in Zechariah's day for Old Testament law forbade anyone from holding the office of both priest and king.

Jesus is the only One who can rule with authority as a King and minister compassionately as a Priest. The first time Jesus came, He came as a Prophet. He taught the ways of God and revealed the heart of God. Then He ascended into heaven where He is now our Priest, where He ever lives to make intercession for us. He came as a Prophet, is in heaven as a Priest, and He's coming back as King.

7 In chapters 1 through 6, the prophet, Zechariah, saw a vision. Here, in chapter 7, the people will ask a question . . .

Zechariah 7:1–3
And it came to pass in the fourth year of king Darius, that the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah in the fourth day of the ninth month, even in Chisleu; When they had sent unto the house of God Sherezer and Regem-melech, and their men, to pray before the LORD, And to speak unto the priests which were in the house of the LORD of hosts, and to the prophets, saying, Should I weep in the fifth month, separating myself, as I have done these so many years?

For many years, the people had fasted on four specific days supposedly in order to seek the Lord and to repent from the sin that landed them in Babylon. Here, with the temple going up and good things happening, they ask if there is a need to keep fasting.

Zechariah 7:4–6
Then came the word of the LORD of hosts unto me, saying, Speak unto all the people of the land, and to the priests, saying, When ye fasted and mourned in the fifth and seventh month, even those seventy years, did ye at all fast unto me, even to me? And when ye did eat, and when ye did drink, did not ye eat for yourselves, and drink for yourselves?

"Were your fasts ever for Me?" the Lord asks, "or were you fasting simply to prove your own goodness?" The question is still one that must be asked. Why do we do what we do? Is it to assuage our guilt, showcase our goodness, or manipulate God?

Zechariah 7:7–10 (a)
Should ye not hear the words which the LORD hath cried by the former prophets, when Jerusalem was inhabited and in prosperity, and the cities thereof round about her, when men inhabited the south and the plain? And the word of the LORD came unto Zechariah, saying, Thus speaketh the LORD of hosts, saying, Execute true judgment, and shew mercy and compassions every man to his brother: And oppress not the widow, nor the fatherless, the stranger, nor the poor . . .

"Forget the rituals," the Lord declares. "I want you to show mercy and compassion—especially to the most vulnerable among you."

Zechariah 7:10 (b)

. . . and let none of you imagine evil against his brother in your heart.

"Let none imagine evil." We make great cases against people in our imaginations. Everything they say, we analyze. Everything they do, we question. This ought not to be. Let people accuse you of being naïve and too trusting if necessary. But don't imagine evil.

Zechariah 7:11–14
But they refused to hearken, and pulled away the shoulder, and stopped their ears, that they should not hear. Yea, they made their hearts as an adamant stone, lest they should hear the law, and the words which the LORD of hosts hath sent in his spirit by the former prophets: therefore came a great wrath from the LORD of hosts. Therefore it is come to pass, that as he cried, and they would not hear; so they cried, and I would not hear, saith the LORD of hosts: But I scattered them with a whirlwind among all the nations whom they knew not. Thus the land was desolate after them, that no man passed through nor returned: for they laid the pleasant land desolate.

It wasn't because the people weren't fasting that the land was made desolate. It was because they weren't showing mercy. Therefore, I believe the word of the Lord is simply this: If you wonder why your walk is dry, why your heart, soul, and spirit are desolate, it might not be because you need to pray longer, fast more, or study deeper. The real issue is never our displays of spirituality but rather our willingness to show mercy. Love is always the key.

Zechariah 8:1–4
Again the word of the LORD of hosts came to me, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; I was jealous for Zion with great jealousy, and I was jealous for her with great fury. Thus saith the LORD; I am returned unto Zion, and will dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and Jerusalem shall be called a city of truth; and the mountain of the LORD of hosts the holy mountain. Thus saith the LORD of hosts; There shall yet old men and old women dwell in the streets of Jerusalem, and every man with his staff in his hand for very age.

Due to His sovereignty rather than the people's religiosity, the Lord declares that Jerusalem would one day be known as a city of truth and holiness, a place where even old men would be able to walk the streets in safety.

> Zechariah 8:5
> And the streets of the city shall be full of boys and girls playing in the streets thereof.

G. Campbell Morgan said that when he wanted to catch a glimpse of the kingdom of God, he didn't go into a room where adults were praying but into the street where kids were playing. If you really want to know about the kingdom, watch little kids. Jesus said essentially the same thing when He placed a child in the midst of the disciples and said, "You must become as a child to enter into the kingdom" (Matthew 18:3). In the kingdom age, crime will be eradicated, allowing children to play without fear.

> Zechariah 8:6–9
> Thus saith the LORD of hosts; If it be marvellous in the eyes of the remnant of this people in these days, should it also be marvellous in mine eyes? saith the LORD of hosts. Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Behold, I will save my people from the east country, and from the west country; And I will bring them, and they shall dwell in the midst of Jerusalem: and they shall be my people, and I will be their God, in truth and in righteousness. Thus saith the LORD of hosts; Let your hands be strong, ye that hear in these days these words by the mouth of the prophets, which were in the day that the foundation of the house of the LORD of hosts was laid, that the temple might be built.

To these people who had grown weary of building the temple, Zechariah comes on the scene with the word of the Lord, saying, "What you're doing has huge significance. All of history is flowing down the channel of prophecy and the temple you're hesitating to build will be the very place from which the Lord will rule. A Branch will come. The kingdom shall be established. Old people will walk in dignity. Kids will play in safety. Every person will experience prosperity. Therefore, what you're doing will impact all of eternity."

If you're at a point where you're wondering why you should keep teaching Sunday school or carve out time for family devotions, why you should labor in this ministry or that calling, I believe the Lord would say to you that what you're doing is of great significance to Him. It might seem small to you, but don't despise the day of small things because it's a foundation for what He will do—culminating in the coming of Christ, in the establishing of His kingdom. We have a huge destiny, gang. Let us press on, robed in His righteousness, empowered by His Spirit, seeing the big picture of where it's all going.

Zechariah 8:10–15

For before these days there was no hire for man, nor any hire for beast; neither was there any peace to him that went out or came in because of the affliction: for I set all men every one against his neighbour. But now I will not be unto the residue of this people as in the former days, saith the LORD of hosts. For the seed shall be prosperous; the vine shall give her fruit, and the ground shall give her increase, and the heavens shall give their dew; and I will cause the remnant of this people to possess all these things. And it shall come to pass, that as ye were a curse among the heathen, O house of Judah, and house of Israel; so will I save you, and ye shall be a blessing: fear not, but let your hands be strong. For thus saith the LORD of hosts; As I thought to punish you, when your fathers provoked me to wrath, saith the LORD of hosts, and I repented not: So again have I thought in these days to do well unto Jerusalem and to the house of Judah: fear ye not.

Whereas previously there had been a complete lack of prosperity, under the Lord's care, the land would flourish once again.

Zechariah 8:16, 17
These are the things that ye shall do; Speak ye every man the truth to his neighbour; execute the judgment of truth and peace in your gates: And let none of you imagine evil in your hearts against his neighbour; and love no false oath: for all these are things that I hate, saith the LORD.

Here, the people are cautioned against the sins that apparently drew them away from the work in the first place.

Zechariah 8:18, 19
And the word of the LORD of hosts came unto me, saying, Thus saith the LORD of hosts; The fast of the fourth month, and the fast of the fifth, and the fast of the seventh, and the fast of the tenth, shall be to the house of Judah joy and gladness, and cheerful feasts; therefore love the truth and peace.

The Lord would change the people's fasts into feasts.

Zechariah 8:20–23
Thus saith the LORD of hosts; It shall yet come to pass, that there shall come people, and the inhabitants of many cities: And the inhabitants of one city shall go to another, saying, Let us go speedily to pray before the LORD, and to seek the LORD of hosts: I will go also. Yea, many people and strong nations shall come to seek the LORD of hosts in Jerusalem, and to pray before the LORD. Thus saith the LORD of hosts; In those days it shall come to pass, that ten men shall take hold out of all languages of the nations, even shall take hold of the skirt of him that is a Jew, saying, We will go with you: for we have heard that God is with you.

Can you imagine ten men grabbing every Jew, saying, "Take us to your temple. Let's go pray!"? When Jesus comes back, when Israel is prospering and feasting, there will be no more "Middle East Problem." Instead, Israel will be nothing but a blessing—a place where everyone will want to be.

9 In chapter 9, we come to the final section of the book. The flow is noticeably changed because many years have passed. Zechariah is writing now not as a young man but as a seasoned prophet. His emphasis is not so much on the temple, which has long been completed, or on theological questions but on the coming of Jesus Christ. This should not be surprising for it seems to me that the older we get in the Lord, the simpler life becomes as we realize it's all about Jesus.

This section has been called a treasure house of prophetic truth because in it we see the entire scope of the Lord's work both in His First Coming and His Second Coming as it relates to the people of Israel. Centuries earlier, when, at one hundred twenty years of age, Moses stood on the summit of Mount Pisgah and looked from the top of the mountain into the Land of Promise, the Lord supernaturally showed him the entire land. Zechariah is also on a prophetic mountain peak. He sees the whole plan being unfolded of what the Lord is doing. This section covers as much prophetic ground as any section in the Bible. It gives a sweeping survey, a fantastic view of the Lord's coming.

Like all of the Old Testament prophets, however, Zechariah didn't have the understanding we do—that the Lord's coming would be in two parts. We know that Jesus came first as the Babe of Bethlehem, as the suffering Servant. But we also know He will come a second time as the King of kings. The Old Testament prophets didn't understand this. In talking about the coming Christ, they would flip-flop between the First and Second Coming of Christ, not realizing there was a valley of time between the two. That is why people were confused in the day of Christ. They knew Messiah was to come and have dominion over the nations, that He was to usher in peace and prosperity. So they wondered why Jesus wouldn't take advantage of the opportunity when the people initially wanted Him to be their King (John 6:15). They couldn't comprehend that He came first to die.

Zechariah 9:1
The burden of the word of the LORD in the land of Hadrach, and Damascus shall be the rest thereof: when the eyes of man, as of all the tribes of Israel, shall be toward the LORD.

As Zechariah stands on his prophetic peak, the first thing he sees ahead is something we have already seen: the coming of Alexander the Great . . .

Zechariah 9:2–6
And Hamath also shall border thereby; Tyrus, and Zidon, though it be very wise. And Tyrus did build herself a strong hold, and heaped up silver as the dust, and fine gold as the mire of the streets. Behold, the Lord will cast her out, and he will smite her power in the sea; and she shall be devoured with fire. Ashkelon shall see it, and fear; Gaza also shall see it, and be very sorrowful, and Ekron; for her expectation shall be ashamed; and the king shall perish from Gaza, and Ashkelon shall not be inhabited. And a bastard shall dwell in Ashdod, and I will cut off the pride of the Philistines.

Beginning with Damascus, these are all cities that were conquered by Alexander. In fact, this is the very path he took as he came down from Greece approximately one hundred fifty years after this prophecy was given.

Zechariah 9:7, 8
And I will take away his blood out of his mouth, and his abominations from between his teeth: but he that remaineth, even he, shall be for our God, and he shall be as a governor in Judah, and Ekron as a Jebusite. And I will encamp about mine house because of the army, because of him that passeth by, and because of him that returneth: and no oppressor shall pass through them any more: for now have I seen with mine eyes.

In talking about the journey of Alexander, Zechariah points out that, when he came to the area of Jerusalem, the Lord would camp in front of Jerusalem, that He would be a protection for her. Indeed, history shows that, when Alexander came cruising into the region, the high priest and a group of elders went out to meet him. Opening the Scriptures to Daniel 8:7 and 8, they showed him how Daniel actually predicted his arrival in the region. So amazed by this was Alexander that, instead of destroying Jerusalem, he offered a sacrificial lamb for his own sins.

Zechariah 9:9 (a)
Rejoice greatly, O daughter of Zion; shout, O daughter of Jerusalem: behold, thy King cometh unto thee: he is just, and having salvation . . .

When Jesus came riding into Jerusalem the week before He was crucified, the people cried, "Hosanna!" or, literally, "Save now!" Indeed, Jesus came having salvation, able to do just that—but the people didn't realize that the salvation He offered was not political but eternal.

Zechariah 9:9 (b)
. . . lowly, and riding upon an ass, and upon a colt the foal of an ass.

At the age of thirty-three, Alexander rode upon his mighty steed, Bucephalus, surrounded by soldiers whose shields were shining, whose spears were glistening. Yet Zion's King, also thirty-three, came riding on a donkey. Why did Jesus ride on a donkey? Why didn't He come with an impressive display of might? Because in so doing, He is humble, touchable, relatable. In fact, so seemingly ordinary was Jesus that, even though He had been in the public eye for thirty-three years, the soldiers evidently needed Judas to identify Him (Mark 14:44).

Zechariah 9:10
And I will cut off the chariot from Ephraim, and the horse from Jerusalem, and the battle bow shall be cut off: and he shall speak peace unto the heathen: and his dominion shall be from sea even to sea, and from the river even to the ends of the earth.

Now we shift to Jesus' Second Coming—when, at last, there will be disarmament and the peace in Jerusalem for which everyone longs.

Zechariah 9:11
As for thee also, by the blood of thy covenant I have sent forth thy prisoners out of the pit wherein is no water.

We were those prisoners in a pit with no water. We were rescued by Jesus.

Zechariah 9:12–17
Turn you to the strong hold, ye prisoners of hope: even to day do I declare that I will render double unto thee; When I have bent Judah for me, filled the bow with Ephraim, and raised up thy sons, O Zion, against thy sons, O Greece, and made thee as the sword of a mighty man. And the LORD shall be seen over them, and his arrow shall go forth as the lightning: and the LORD GOD shall blow the trumpet, and shall go with whirlwinds of the south. The LORD of hosts shall defend them; and they shall devour, and subdue with sling stones; and they shall drink, and make a noise as through wine; and they shall be filled like bowls, and as the corners of the altar. And the LORD their God shall save them in that day as the flock of his people: for they shall be as the stones of a crown, lifted up as an ensign upon his land. For how great is his goodness, and how great is his beauty! corn shall make the young men cheerful, and new wine the maids.

This is a reference to what the Lord would do when He used the sons of Zion—specifically the Maccabees—to overcome the sons of Greece. When Alexander died, his empire was split up and one of the descendants of one of the rulers was a man named Antiochus Epiphanes, a picture of antichrist. A terrible ruler, he slaughtered the Jews by the thousands and demanded to be worshiped—until a group of Jewish men who would become known as the Maccabbees launched a victorious guerilla war against him.

10 Zechariah 10:1

Ask ye of the LORD rain in the time of the latter rain; so the LORD shall make bright clouds, and give them showers of rain, to every one grass in the field.

In Israel, there were historically two rainy seasons. The first was from October through December and was called the former rain. The latter rains fell in April and May. These rainy seasons caused Israel to be a land of lush vegetation. After the Jews were dispersed by the Romans in A.D. 70, the Turks gained control of the region and began to tax the people there according to the number of trees on their property. It didn't take people long to figure out that it was in their best interests to chop their trees down. As a result, the ecology changed. The soil eroded. There was no more evaporation. The latter rains stopped altogether and the former rains were so drastically diminished that the land became arid and dry. That is why, when they became a nation again, the first project of the Israeli government was reforestation. They still plant millions of trees every year. The ecology is beginning to change and the latter rains have returned.

Spiritually, the latter rain speaks of the outpouring of the Spirit that will take place in the last days (Joel 2:23–28). We are living in a time when the Holy Spirit is being poured out afresh. Yet, although we can observe this and study it, we will not experience it unless we ask the Lord to send the latter rain upon us personally.

I think of Noah. Talk about rain! For forty days and forty nights rain fell upon him. Wondering if the storm had abated, he let out a dove. Throughout Scripture, the dove is a picture of the Holy Spirit. When the dove found no place to land, it returned to Noah and in Genesis 8:9, we read that he pulled the dove in unto him. Noah didn't sit in the ark with folded hands saying, "Dove, if you want to land on me, I'm open." That's the way some people approach the Holy Spirit. And then they wonder why the Holy Spirit never empowers or uses them. Noah reached out and grabbed the dove and brought it to himself. We must do the same. How? Simply by asking.

> If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children: how much more shall your heavenly Father give the Holy Spirit to them that ask him?
> Luke 11:13

When the Holy Spirit was poured out on the disciples in the Upper Room, they had been praying and waiting for ten days (Acts 2). We no longer have to wait for the Holy Spirit. He's already been given. But we must wait on the Holy Spirit. That is, we must say, "Lord is there something in my life preventing You from pouring out Your Spirit upon me?" If you want a fresh anointing, a greater empowering for service, talk to the Lord about it—all you have to do is ask, and He'll take it from there (Matthew 5:6).

> Zechariah 10:2–4
> For the idols have spoken vanity, and the diviners have seen a lie, and have told false dreams; they comfort in vain: therefore they went their way as a flock, they were troubled, because there was no shepherd. Mine anger was kindled against the shepherds, and I punished the goats: for the LORD of hosts hath visited his flock the house of Judah, and hath made them as his goodly horse in the battle. Out of him came forth the corner, out of him the nail, out of him the battle bow, out of him every oppressor together.

This speaks of Christ's First Coming. Isaiah tells us He was the Cornerstone, rejected of men (8:14, 28:16). He is the nail, the One upon whom men could hang their lives. Instead, man hung Him on a cross. But in His Second Coming, He will come back as the battle bow, the conquering King, ruling in majesty.

> Zechariah 10:5, 6
> And they shall be as mighty men, which tread down their enemies in the mire of the streets in the battle: and they shall fight, because the LORD is with them, and the riders on horses shall be confounded. And I will strengthen the house of Judah, and I will save the house of Joseph, and I will bring them again to place them; for I have mercy upon them: and they shall be as though I had not cast them off: for I am the LORD their God, and will hear them.

Even though they rejected Him as the Cornerstone, even though they nailed Him to the cross, when all of the nations are ready to crush and annihilate Israel, the Lord will come—no longer riding upon a donkey but upon a white horse as a conqueror to rescue the people of Israel at the very moment it appears they will be annihilated at Armageddon.

Zechariah 10:7
And they of Ephraim shall be like a mighty man, and their heart shall rejoice as through wine: yea, their children shall see it, and be glad; their heart shall rejoice in the LORD.

Immediately preceding the Lord's return, there will be a regathering of His people . . .

Zechariah 10:8–10
I will hiss for them, and gather them; for I have redeemed them: and they shall increase as they have increased. And I will sow them among the people: and they shall remember me in far countries; and they shall live with their children, and turn again. I will bring them again also out of the land of Egypt, and gather them out of Assyria; and I will bring them into the land of Gilead and Lebanon; and place shall not be found for them.

"I'm going to whistle for them," the Lord declares. "I'm going to bring My people back to the land and there will be so many of them that it will barely be able to contain them." In 1948, Israel did what no other nation in history has been able to do. The Lord began whistling and the Jews began returning. Zechariah was seeing this happen prophetically—and it would indeed happen just as he said.

Zechariah 10:11, 12
And he shall pass through the sea with affliction, and shall smite the waves in the sea, and all the deeps of the river shall dry up: and the pride of Assyria shall be brought down, and the sceptre of Egypt shall depart away. And I will strengthen them in the LORD; and they shall walk up and down in his name, saith the LORD.

The Jews would indeed "pass through the sea with affliction." When they saw the clouds of the holocaust forming, many Jews got into boats and headed to Palestine. But when the British mandated that no more Jews would be allowed entrance, one of the great tragedies of history occurred when their boats were turned back.

The seasoned saint, Zechariah, standing in the place of seeing prophecy passing before him is once again calling the people of God to see the big picture. And he calls us to do the same. We're headed for heaven, gang. Never grow weary of reading the prophets. They call us to remember where we're headed. We want something practical. We want to read about how to have a better marriage, how to raise better kids, how to find a better job. But the prophets speak of the mystical rather than the practical because you'll be a better husband if you remember you're headed for heaven, a better mom if you remember you'll live eternally. John tells us it was because Jesus knew from whence He came and where He was going that He was able to wash the feet of those who were too busy jockeying for position to serve one another (John 13:5). That is why our Father sent prophet after prophet to talk about the mystery of eternity, to remind us to set our hearts on things above (Colossians 3:2).

11 Zechariah has been called by many commentators, "the prophet of hope." I think that's a good description because he came to encourage God's people to finish the task they had begun, to realize their high and holy calling. But he is also the prophet of truth. And here in chapter 11, he speaks of some difficult days and tough times as God would chasten His people for their own good.

Zechariah 11:1–3
Open thy doors, O Lebanon, that the fire may devour thy cedars. Howl, fir tree; for the cedar is fallen; because the mighty are spoiled: howl, O ye oaks of Bashan; for the forest of the vintage is come down. There is a voice of the howling of the shepherds; for their glory is spoiled: a voice of the roaring of young lions; for the pride of Jordan is spoiled.

Zechariah is saying, "There's trouble coming. Beginning in Lebanon with the cedars burning, going down to Bashan—the Golan Heights—and into the Jordan valley, there's going to be fire raging, a howling heard." Indeed, this is exactly what happened. Within forty years after Israel had rejected Messiah, the Romans marched down through Lebanon, through the Jordan Valley and on into Jerusalem itself.

Zechariah 11:4, 5
Thus saith the LORD my God; Feed the flock of the slaughter; Whose possessors slay them, and hold themselves not guilty: and they that sell them say, Blessed be the LORD; for I am rich: and their own shepherds pity them not.

Both the political and religious leaders of Israel sold out the flock, becoming wealthy by cutting deals with the Romans.

Zechariah 11:6
For I will no more pity the inhabitants of the land, saith the LORD: but, lo, I will deliver the men every one into his neighbour's hand, and into the hand of his king: and they shall smite the land, and out of their hand I will not deliver them.

Why would the Lord allow His people to be sold out by their own leaders? Zechariah acts out the answer to this question . . .

Zechariah 11:7
And I will feed the flock of slaughter, even you, O poor of the flock. And I took unto me two staves; the one I called Beauty, and the other I called Bands; and I fed the flock.

Zechariah acts out this parable by shepherding a flock using two staffs, calling one Beauty and the other Bands, or, literally, Unity. I believe Beauty speaks of Jesus Christ who is altogether lovely (Song of Solomon 5:16) and Unity of the Spirit (Ephesians 4:3).

Zechariah 11:8
Three shepherds also I cut off in one month; and my soul lothed them, and their soul also abhorred me.

As Zechariah acts out this parable, he takes on three wicked shepherds. I suggest these shepherds represent the three wicked shepherds Jesus battled: the Pharisees, Sadducees, and the Herodians. The Pharisees represented legalism. The Sadducees were liberals who didn't believe in angels or the Resurrection. The Herodians were a political group, thinking they could usher in the kingdom through political action. And all three missed the Good Shepherd, the only true Shepherd, in their midst.

Zechariah 11:9
Then said I, I will not feed you: that that dieth, let it die; and that that is to be cut off, let it be cut off; and let the rest eat every one the flesh of another.

After removing these three evil shepherds, Zechariah declares that he will feed the flock no more. Why did Zechariah give up? For the same reason the prophecy was given in verse 6 that the land would be ravaged—because the people said concerning Jesus, "We will not have this Man rule over us" (Luke 19:14). The Good Shepherd came to them with beauty and unity. But they rejected Him. So the Lord let them have their way.

It is a sobering thought that the Lord will let us have our way. If we insist on having our way, He just might let us. And we'll find we don't like the very thing we are demanding.

Zechariah 11:10

And I took my staff, even Beauty, and cut it assunder, that I might break my covenant which I had made with all the people.

Jesus came to give the kingdom to His people, to bring peace to His people, but they would not have Him. Therefore, the opportunity was lost for the Jewish nation. Beauty was broken when the One who is altogether lovely was rejected.

Zechariah 11:11, 12
And it was broken in that day: and so the poor of the flock that waited upon me knew that it was the word of the LORD. And I said unto them, If ye think good, give me my price; and if not, forbear. So they weighed for my price thirty pieces of silver.

"Pay me what you think I'm worth," Zechariah said, after giving up his flock. And it was decided that he would receive thirty pieces of silver. Matthew 26:15 and 27:9 tell us this prophecy speaks of Jesus. What was thirty pieces of silver? According to Exodus 21:32, it was the price of a dead or wounded slave. Although this would have been insulting to Zechariah culturally, it was exacting prophetically, for it relates to Jesus perfectly . . .

Zechariah 11:13
And the LORD said unto me, Cast it unto the potter: a goodly price that I was prised at of them. And I took the thirty pieces of silver, and cast them to the potter in the house of the LORD.

In the small town of Carioth, a boy grew up. Educated and refined, in his twenties, he began following an itinerant Rabbi named Jesus of Nazareth. Chosen by the Master to be one of His twelve disciples, he was the only one from the southern part of the nation. People from the north were thought to be uncouth, unteachable, unyielding. Eleven of the men Jesus chose were from Galilee in the north. Judas of Carioth was not one of them. No doubt he spoke with the accent of an intellectual sophisticate. Maybe that is why he was appointed treasurer of the group. No doubt it would seem that at the beginning of Jesus' ministry, Judas would be His right-hand man.

But we know, of course, that Judas was, in fact, His betrayer. Why did Judas betray Jesus? Perhaps it was because he was disillusioned with Jesus. Maybe he thought that when Jesus was made king, he would have the prestigious post of Secretary of the Treasury. But when Jesus began to say that His kingdom was not of this world, when He purposely went to small towns that had no political importance, Judas' heart must have sunk.

The same thing can happen to us. When Jesus doesn't work the way we think He should, we can become disillusioned and vulnerable to a degree of betrayal, as well. When Jesus sat at the Last Supper and told His disciples that one of them would betray Him, they didn't say, "It's Judas." He wasn't even suspected. Instead, they looked to themselves and said, "Is it I?" I must ask this question, as well. "Am I using You to do my own thing, Lord? Search my heart."

After realizing he had betrayed innocent blood, Judas brought the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders. When they refused to take it, he cast the money down on the floor of the temple. In Matthew 27:10, we read that a potter's field was purchased with this money—exactly as Zechariah prophesied. Thus, a prophecy given five hundred twenty years earlier was fulfilled to the letter.

Culturally, being paid the price of an injured slave was insulting to Zechariah. Prophetically, however, it was exactly. But personally, it is incredibly comforting. You see, the potter's field was the field outside the house of the potter wherein broken or flawed pottery and clay were thrown. The potter's field was the least valuable piece of property in the area because, filled with pottery accumulated over centuries, the soil was useless. In Jeremiah 18, God likens Himself to a Master Potter and us to lumps of clay He shapes into vessels for His use. If, however, we refuse to respond to the shaping He desires to do in our lives, as worthless pieces of pottery, we find ourselves in the potter's field.

Yet what did Jesus do? The money that was used to betray Him was then specifically used to buy the most worthless piece of property, the place filled with cracked pots and marred vessels. That's what Jesus always does. His blood purchased people like you and me—people with nicks and chips, flaws and failures—and reshapes, remolds, renews us. If I were Jesus, I would have bought beachfront property. He, however, bought me.

If you feel broken, remember Zechariah's prophecy—and never forget Jesus' unspeakable love.

Zechariah 11:14
Then I cut asunder mine other staff, even Bands, that I might break the brotherhood between Judah and Israel.

Once Jesus was rejected, the Spirit was grieved. The Spirit's work is to unify brothers, but rejecting Jesus grieves, quenches, nullifies the work of the Spirit. So the bond between Judah and Israel, between the southern tribes and the northern tribes, was broken.

Zechariah 11:15, 16
And the LORD said unto me, Take unto thee yet the instruments of a foolish shepherd. For, lo, I will raise up a shepherd in the land, which shall not visit those that be cut off, neither shall seek the young one, nor heal that that is broken, nor feed that that standeth still: but he shall eat the flesh of the fat, and tear their claws in pieces.

God's people rejected the Good Shepherd. But another shepherd will come on the scene who won't care for those who are hurting, who won't seek those that are young, who won't heal those who are broken. Who is this one? It speaks of antichrist.

I am come in my Father's name, and ye receive me not: if another shall come in his own name, him ye will receive.

John 5:43

Jesus came as a Servant—loving, healing, caring, and blessing. Yet the people said, "We will not have this Man rule over us" (Luke 19:14). If this happened to Jesus, we can be sure it will happen to us. In other words, the more servant-like you become, the less you'll be appreciated. So if you feel that no one cares about you, no one thinks of you, no one acknowledges what you're doing, you're in good company. They didn't acknowledge Jesus, either.

Zechariah 11:17 (a)
Woe to the idol shepherd that leaveth the flock! . . .

Antichrist is called an idol shepherd because we are told in 2 Thessalonians 2 that he will set up an idol of himself in the temple and demand to be worshiped.

Zechariah 11:17 (b)
. . . the sword shall be upon his arm, and upon his right eye: his arm shall be clean dried up, and his right eye shall be utterly darkened.

At some point after antichrist demands to be worshiped, he'll be blinded and paralyzed in an assassination attempt.

> And I saw one of his heads as it were wounded to death; and his deadly wound was healed: and all the world wondered after the beast. And they worshiped the dragon which gave power unto the beast: and they worshiped the beast, saying, Who is like unto the beast? . . .
> Revelation 13:3, 4 (a)

Evidently, it will appear as though antichrist comes back from the dead after he is assassinated. Therefore, thinking he's supernatural, many will worship him.

12 Zechariah 12:1

The burden of the word of the LORD for Israel, saith the LORD, which stretcheth forth the heavens, and layeth the foundation of the earth, and formeth the spirit of man within him.

The spirit of man is formed within man as man is conceived and develops in the womb. This would refute both the Mormon belief that spirits are "waiting" to be brought into the world and the abortionist's contention that unborn babies are nothing more than bones and tissue.

Zechariah 12:2, 3
Behold, I will make Jerusalem a cup of trembling unto all the people round about, when they shall be in the siege both against Judah and against Jerusalem. And in that day will I make Jerusalem a burdensome stone for all people: all that burden themselves with it shall be cut in pieces, though all the people of the earth be gathered together against it.

Those who try to come against Jerusalem will be destroyed. Therefore, the people of the world will be perplexed as they ponder what to do about the problem of Jerusalem. We are seeing this fulfilled to a certain degree even in our day.

Zechariah 12:4
In that day, saith the LORD, I will smite every horse with astonishment, and his rider with madness: and I will open mine eyes upon the house of Judah, and will smite every horse of the people with blindness.

As the armies of the world converge, the Lord says there will be tremendous confusion as He strikes horses and riders with madness and blindness.

Zechariah 12:5
And the governors of Judah shall say in their heart, The inhabitants of Jerusalem shall be my strength in the LORD of hosts their God.

Even the outlying regions of Jerusalem recognize that it is a city uniquely chosen and blessed by God.

Zechariah 12:6, 7

In that day will I make the governors of Judah like an hearth of fire among the wood, and like a torch of fire in a sheaf; and they shall devour all the people round about, on the right hand and on the left: and Jerusalem shall be inhabited again in her own place, even in Jerusalem. The LORD also shall save the tents of Judah first, that the glory of the house of David and the glory of the inhabitants of Jerusalem do not magnify themselves against Judah.

The Lord is going to give the outlying regions of Judah victory first lest they feel left out or of less value.

Zechariah 12:8
In that day shall the LORD defend the inhabitants of Jerusalem; and he that is feeble among them at that day shall be as David; and the house of David shall be as God, as the angel of the LORD before them.

The weakest of the Israeli soldiers will be like David, quite an impressive soldier who leapt over walls and took on giants.

Zechariah 12:9, 10 (a)
And it shall come to pass in that day, that I will seek to destroy all the nations that come against Jerusalem. And I will pour upon the house of David, and upon the inhabitants of Jerusalem, the spirit of grace and of supplications: and they shall look upon me whom they have pierced . . .

John knew about the piercing of Jesus and is the only Gospel writer to describe this event . . .

When Jesus therefore had received the vinegar, he said, It is finished: and he bowed his head, and gave up the ghost. The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon the cross on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was an high day,) besought Pilate that their legs might be broken, and that they might be taken away. Then came the soldiers, and brake the legs of the first, and of the other which was crucified with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs: But one of the soldiers with a spear pierced his side, and forthwith came there out blood and water.

John 19:30–34

Why was Jesus pierced as He hung on the Cross of Calvary? Following are six reasons which I believe are significant for you and me . . .

First, Jesus was pierced to fulfill prophecy. When a man was hung on a cross, the nails through his wrists would cause such excruciating pain that the pectoral muscles would be paralyzed and breathing would stop. The only way he could stay alive was to stand upon the nail in his feet, thereby forcing air into his lungs before relieving the weight on his feet, only to repeat the process for each breath. When the Romans wanted to kill a man, they would break the legs, thus ending the victim's life through suffocation. But when they came to break the legs of Jesus, He was already dead. So, to ensure His death, a soldier thrust a spear into His side—exactly as prophesied five hundred years earlier by Zechariah.

Not only was this a fulfillment of prophecy, but it was in keeping with typology. Concerning the Passover lamb—a picture of the Lamb of God, Jesus Christ—Exodus 12 and Numbers 6 forbade the breaking of its bones.

Third, the piercing of Jesus' side revealed His heart emotionally. That is, the blood and water that poured forth were indicative of coronary thrombosis —a broken heart. Being spat at, mocked, cursed, and yet dying for the very people who were doing this, Jesus' own heart was breaking—not for Himself but for those who would find themselves in hell for their refusal to accept the work He was accomplishing on their behalf at that very moment.

Fourth, the piercing of Jesus' side shows us the sacraments' priority. The water that flowed speaks of baptism; the blood, of Communion. "He that believeth and is baptized shall be saved," Jesus declared. Paul would say that many in the church at Corinth were weak and sickly—even to the point of death—because they didn't give worth to the Lord's Table (1 Corinthians 11:29, 30).

Fifth, the piercing of Jesus' side shows us a great mystery. Blood and water are the elements of birth. As Jesus hung on the Cross, the church was born. Just as Adam's bride was formed from Adam's side (Genesis 2:21, 22), when the spear entered the side of the last Adam (1 Corinthians 15:45), the bride of Christ was born.

Finally, the piercing of Jesus' side speaks of our salvation in totality. Salvation has two aspects: regeneration and sanctification. The penalty of sin has been removed through the blood of Jesus Christ. But the power of sin that hounds us daily is overcome by the power of the Spirit, pictured as water throughout the Word.

> For whatsoever is born of God overcometh the world: and this is the victory that overcometh the world, even our faith. Who is he that overcometh the world, but he that believeth that Jesus is the Son of God? This is he that came by water and blood, even Jesus Christ; not by water only, but by water and blood. . . .
> 1 John 5:4–6 (a)

The blood cleanses us from the penalty of sin. And the water, a type of the Spirit, gives us power over sin. Both are necessary. And both are freely available because of the piercing proof of Jesus' love on the Cross.

> Zechariah 12:10 (b), 11
> . . . and they shall mourn for him, as one mourneth for his only son, and shall be in bitterness for him, as one that is in bitterness for his firstborn. In that day shall there be a great mourning in Jerusalem, as the mourning of Hadadrimmon in the valley of Megiddon.

As the battle of Armageddon unfolds and it looks like Jerusalem won't survive, Jesus will come back. Centuries earlier, when King Josiah, a beloved king in Judah, died in the valley of Megiddo, there was great mourning in the land (2 Chronicles 35:24, 25).

> Zechariah 12:12–14

And the land shall mourn, every family apart; the family of the house of David apart, and their wives apart; the family of the house of Nathan apart, and their wives apart; The family of the house of Levi apart, and their wives apart; the family of Shimei apart, and their wives apart; All the families that remain, every family apart, and their wives apart.

The house of David speaks of the kings. The house of Nathan speaks of the prophets. The house of Levi speaks of the priests. Kings, prophets, priests, and people—every part of Israeli society will mourn as they realize that they were the ones who pierced the very One who had come to save them.

13 Zechariah 13:1

In that day there shall be a fountain opened to the house of David and to the inhabitants of Jerusalem for sin and for uncleanness.

The fountain that would cleanse Israel from her sin began flowing when a soldier thrust a spear into Jesus' side as He hung on the Cross of Calvary.

Zechariah 13:2, 3

And it shall come to pass in that day, saith the LORD of hosts, that I will cut off the names of the idols out of the land, and they shall no more be remembered: and also I will cause the prophets and the unclean spirit to pass out of the land. And it shall come to pass, that when any shall yet prophesy, then his father and his mother that begat him shall say unto him, Thou shalt not live; for thou speakest lies in the name of the LORD: and his father and his mother that begat him shall thrust him through when he prophesieth.

When Israel at last recognizes her Messiah, neither idolatry nor false prophecy—two sins that plagued her continually—will be tolerated.

Zechariah 13:4, 5
And it shall come to pass in that day, that the prophets shall be ashamed every one of his vision, when he hath prophesied; neither shall they wear a rough garment to deceive: But he shall say, I am no prophet, I am an husbandman; for man taught me to keep cattle from my youth.

False spirituality will be replaced by integrity and humility.

Zechariah 13:6
And one shall say unto him, What are these wounds in thine hands? Then he shall an swer, Those with which I was wounded in the house of my friends.

I am amazed that Jesus would call Judas "friend" even as Judas betrayed Him (Matthew 26:50). I am more amazed that He would call those who crucified Him friends. But I am most amazed that He would call me His friend (John 15:15). Satan will tell you the Lord is disgusted with you. But that's a lie, for if you desire to love Him, to serve Him, to walk with Him, even though you might stumble and struggle, the Lord calls you His friend.

Zechariah 13:7 (a)
Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the LORD of hosts . . .

Who is the "fellow," the equal of the Lord of hosts? The Good Shepherd, Jesus Christ.

For topical study of Zechariah 13:7, see "Smitten Shepherd . . . Scattered Sheep" below.

Zechariah 13:7 (b)–9
. . . smite the shepherd, and the sheep shall be scattered: and I will turn mine hand upon the little ones. And it shall come to pass, that in all the land, saith the LORD, two parts therein shall be cut off and die; but the third shall be left therein. And I will bring the third part through the fire, and will refine them as silver is refined, and will try them as gold is tried: they shall call on my name, and I will hear them: I will say, It is my people: and they shall say, The LORD is my God.

The Lord says, "Because My people wouldn't acknowledge Me, because they wouldn't take My hand of friendship, I will turn My hand on them. Two-thirds will die." In the Tribulation period, antichrist and the nations of the world will turn against the Jews. As a result, two-thirds of them will die.

I remember when my daughter, Mary Elizabeth, was about two years old. About to cross a busy intersection with her, I said, "Mary, hold Daddy's hand."

"No," she said.

"Mary, we can't cross the street unless you hold my hand," I said.

"No," she insisted.

So, instead of holding my hand, she felt my hand—spanking her. Why? Because I love her.

She cried. And then she held my hand.

That's what the Lord will do to His people. "I came offering the kingdom to you," He said. "But you refused. I'm not giving up on you, however. I'm going to refine you as silver and gold are refined in the fire of tribulation. It will be costly and difficult for you, but in that day, those who remain will say, 'The Lord is my God.' And they'll be brought into the fullness of the kingdom."

SMITTEN SHEPHERD . . . SCATTERED SHEEP

A Topical Study of ZECHARIAH 13:7

In 1969, when Crosby, Stills, Nash, and Young sang, "We've got to get back to the garden," they struck a chord with many in our generation. Initially, it seems the baby-boom generation tried to get back to the garden through convocation. That is, they gathered together—first at Woodstock. Bob Dylan, Judy Collins, Led Zeppelin, and others joined in what was supposed to be a festival of garden-like peace. Songs were sung; love was shared. It seemed to go so well that our generation tried it again at Altamont. But this time, the vibe wasn't as good. People were high on LSD. Fights broke out. And by the time Altamont was over, six people had died.

So, after convocation, we tried to get back to the garden through inspiration. In the middle and late sixties, everyone put a flower in their hair and flocked to San Francisco—only to find that, by the early seventies, the same people who were once wearing loves beads and carrying peace signs were now wearing brass knuckles and carrying switchblades as Haight-Ashbury became one of the great crime centers of the West Coast.

When inspiration failed, people tried simplification. There was a move to get out of the city and into the country—to get back to the garden through a simpler lifestyle. The problem is, as many of us discovered, gardens have weeds. And it took a long time to weed the garden, split the wood, and carry the water. So people decided rural living wasn't for them as the hippies gave way to yuppies.

The yuppies introduced gentrification—moving back to the city to reclaim run-down areas. But the longing for the garden remained. Why? I suggest it's because the garden was our first home . . .

> And the LORD God formed man of the dust of the ground, and breathed into his nostrils the breath of life; and man became a living soul. And the LORD God planted a garden eastward in Eden; and there he put the man whom he had formed. And out of the ground made the LORD God to grow every tree that is pleasant to the sight, and good for food; the tree of life also in the midst of the garden, and the tree of knowledge of good and evil.

Genesis 2:7–9

After God created man, He placed him where He knew man would be happiest—in a garden. No wonder, then, that there is an intrinsic desire to live more simply, to be at peace with nature in a garden. It's the way we're made. Genesis goes on to tell us that man walked with God in the cool of the day, just enjoying talking to his Creator. Things were right. But, because God desired for man to have a loving relationship with Him, He had to give man the opportunity to rebel against Him. Love must have a choice if it is to be true love. So in the garden, God planted the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, If they ate of the fruit of this tree, it would be a sign to God that they chose to rebel against Him. Adam and Eve chose to eat of the fruit—and the results, of course, were tragic . . .

And the LORD God said, Behold, the man is become as one of us, to know good and evil: and now, lest he put forth his hand, and take also of the tree of life, and eat, and live for ever: Therefore the LORD God sent him forth from the garden of Eden, to till the ground from whence he was taken. So he drove out the man; and he placed at the east of the garden of Eden Cherubims, and a flaming sword which turned every way, to keep the way of the tree of life.

Genesis 3:22–24

Once man rebelled against God, he was driven out of the garden—the place where he was most content to be, the place where he was meant to be. "Lest man eat of the tree of life and live forever in his sinful, fallen state, I'm going to drive him out of the garden," God said. And in the gate of the garden, God stationed a cherubim with a flaming sword to keep man out of the garden, away from the tree of life.

From that point on, man has been longing, craving, desiring to get back to the garden, where he might walk with God in the cool of the day once again and live the way he was meant to. But how can he? There's a sword preventing him from going back to Eden.

Thousands of years after that event, the people of God living in the land of Israel heard a prophet named Zechariah say, "Awake, O sword, against my shepherd, and against the man that is my fellow, saith the LORD of hosts."

What sword was Zechariah speaking of? I suggest it was the very sword that blocked the entrance to the Garden of Eden, the very sword that kept man out of where he desired to be. I suggest that the sword that keeps people out of the garden is the sword that was buried in the side of Jesus Christ. The sword that would keep me out of the place of fellowship, peace, tranquility, and eternal life was buried in His side as He hung on the Cross for my sin.

Five hundred years after Zechariah gave this prophecy, we see Jesus. Hours away from His death on the Cross, He left the Upper Room and crossed the small Kidron Valley on His way to a garden called Gethsemane.

> And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives. Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.
> Matthew 26:30, 31

Quoting Zechariah, Jesus said, "Instead of causing My followers to rejoice, My absorbing the sword will cause them to scatter because they will be offended, because they won't like what's happening."

Jesus brought offense not infrequently in His ministry. When He said that unless people ate of His body and drank of His blood, they could have no part of Him, John said many were offended in Him and followed Him no more (6:53–66). Matthew tells us people were offended in His hometown, asking, "Isn't this Joseph the carpenter's son? What's the big deal?" (13:55–57). Even John the Baptist was evidently offended when He asked if Jesus was the One he should be looking for (Matthew 11:2–6).

This shouldn't be that surprising. You see, we think of the Cross as something that moves us emotionally and inspires us spiritually, a symbol of something exceedingly precious. But in Jesus' day, wearing a gold cross around one's neck would be similar today to wearing a gold hypodermic needle, symbolizing death by lethal injection.

> But we preach Christ crucified, unto the Jews a stumblingblock, and unto the Greeks foolishness; But unto them which are called, both Jews and Greeks, Christ the power of God, and the wisdom of God.
> 1 Corinthians 1:23, 24

The Greek word translated "stumblingblock" is skandalon. In other words, the idea of Christ crucified was scandalous, offensive. Therefore, because they were scandalized, Jesus said people would scatter.

Maybe you are in a similar place. Maybe you have scattered or wandered from the Lord because you didn't understand what He was doing. Maybe you have said, "What do You mean, Lord? I prayed about this and it didn't come to pass. I trusted You for that and it didn't happen. I was expecting the other and it fell through. Why isn't my father healed? Why isn't my child saved? Why hasn't the job opened up?"

Even Jesus' closest followers couldn't understand what He was doing. So they scattered. Have we? When we wonder where He's coming from, what He's saying, or what He's doing, we need only to remember that this same Jesus absorbed the sword of judgment for us. Whenever I doubt His love, question His words, or wonder at His ways, it always gets back to Zechariah 13. If I realize that He's the only One who would die for a sinner like me, even though I might not understand what He's doing, I can trust Him.

> But God commendeth his love toward us, in that, while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us.
> Romans 5:8

Jesus absorbed the sword of judgment. He opened the way for us not only to walk with Him in the garden presently but to live eternally. He loves you more than you can ever understand. Therefore, trust Him. The One who absorbed the sword will only do what's best for you in everything that comes your way.

14

Zechariah 14:1 (a)
Behold, the day of the LORD cometh . . .

The day of the Lord is the time when the Lord intervenes directly, physically, obviously in human history. In Hebrew culture, the day begins with the setting rather than with the rising of the sun. Therefore, although the day of the Lord begins in the darkness of the Tribulation, it ends in the glorious brightness of Jesus' Second Coming.

Zechariah 14:1 (b), 2
. . . and thy spoil shall be divided in the midst of thee. For I will gather all nations against Jerusalem to battle; and the city shall be taken, and the houses rifled, and the women ravished; and half of the city shall go forth into captivity, and the residue of the people shall not be cut off from the city.

The day of the Lord begins with hardship and brutality as the nations of the world come against Israel. Specifically, this speaks of the invasion of the Middle East by antichrist, the leader of a united Europe, when he brings his armies into Israel to consolidate his control of the world.

Zechariah 14:3
Then shall the LORD go forth, and fight against those nations, as when he fought in the day of battle.

As the nations converge around Jerusalem, there is a series of wars, culminating in the valley of Megiddo, or Armageddon. As the nations converge in an attempt to annihilate Israel, the Lord will return and physically fight for Israel, the people He cares about so deeply.

Zechariah 14:4 (a)
And his feet shall stand in that day upon the mount of Olives, which is before Jerusalem on the east . . .

When the nations are ready to annihilate Israel and destroy Jerusalem, Jesus will come and His feet will stand on the Mount of Olives, the same mountain from which He ascended (Acts 1:11, 12).

Zechariah 14:4 (b)
. . . and the mount of Olives shall cleave in the midst thereof toward the east and toward the west, and there shall be a very great valley; and half of the mountain shall remove toward the north, and half of it toward the south.

When Jesus comes back, there's going to be a cataclysmic event, for, as He sets His scarred feet upon the Mount of Olives, it will split in two.

Years ago, when Sheraton Hotel Corporation was looking at the Mount of Olives as a potential site, an environmental impact study showed that, due to a major fault running right through the Mount of Olives, they could not continue construction. In other words geologists "discovered" what Scripture had known for 2,500 years.

Zechariah 14:5
And ye shall flee to the valley of the mountains; for the valley of the mountains shall reach unto Azal: yea, ye shall flee, like as ye fled from before the earthquake in the days of Uzziah king of Judah: and the LORD my God shall come, and all the saints with thee.

When the Mount of Olives splits, it will actually provide a way of escape for the people of Jerusalem. In earlier times, the Lord parted the Red Sea in order that His people could escape to safety. In the last days, He'll part not a sea but a mountain for His people to escape from the armies surrounding them.

Zechariah 14:6, 7
And it shall come to pass in that day, that the light shall not be clear, nor dark: But it shall be one day which shall be known to the LORD, not day, nor night: but it shall come to pass, that at evening time it shall be light.

When Jesus comes back, when His kingdom is established, not only will there be changes on earth but in the heavens, as well.

Zechariah 14:8 (a)
And it shall be in that day, that living waters shall go out from Jerusalem . . .

In the impact study done, not only was a fault discovered in the Mount of Olives that would cause a split from east to west, but seismologists also said a massive amount of water would break through if the quake were severe enough. Ezekiel speaks of the same river having its beginning in the temple area (47:1).

Zechariah 14:8 (b), 9
. . . half of them toward the former sea, and half of them toward the hinder sea: in summer and in winter shall it be. And the LORD shall be king over all the earth: in that day shall there be one LORD, and his name one.

Half of the river flowing from the Mount of Olives will flow toward the Dead Sea. The other half will flow toward the Mediterranean.

The reason the Dead Sea is presently so deadly, the reason it cannot support life of any kind is because, although seven million tons of water gush into it every day, there is no outlet. And, because of that, the water is stagnant. In our Christian experience, along with input there must be outflow. If we're just taking in the Word, we'll become like the Dead Sea unless we share it with others.

When Jesus comes back, the Dead Sea will undergo a change. It will be flooded with a new source of water that will flow into it. Ezekiel 47 says that wherever this new river flows, there will be healing. That's always the way it is. Wherever the work of the Spirit flows, things change. The water of life—the Spirit of God—always brings healing.

Zechariah 14:10
All the land shall be turned as a plain from Geba to Rimmon south of Jerusalem: and it shall be lifted up, and inhabited in her place, from Benjamin's gate unto the place of the first gate, unto the corner gate, and from the tower of Hananeel unto the king's wine-presses.

When Jesus comes back, the entire city of Jerusalem will be elevated.

Zechariah 14:11
And men shall dwell in it, and there shall be no more utter destruction; but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabited.

Today, Jerusalem is a thorny problem politically. But when Jesus comes back, it will be a place of peace and safety.

Zechariah 14:12
And this shall be the plague wherewith the LORD will smite all the people that have fought against Jerusalem; Their flesh shall consume away while they stand upon their feet, and their eyes shall consume away in their holes, and their tongue shall consume away in their mouth.

The flesh of those who come against Israel will melt. Their eyes will run down their sockets. Their tongues will curl up. I find it more than coincidental that scientists tell us this is exactly what would happen physiologically if people were exposed to massive amounts of radiation.

Zechariah 14:13
And it shall come to pass in that day, that a great tumult from the LORD shall be among them; and they shall lay hold every one on the hand of his neighbour, and his hand shall rise up against the hand of his neighbour.

As the plague is unleashed, there will be panic in the armies surrounding Jerusalem.

Zechariah 14:14

And Judah also shall fight at Jerusalem; and the wealth of all the heathen round about shall be gathered together, gold, and silver, and apparel, in great abundance.

When the Jews left Egypt, they were loaded down with treasures. So too, in this time, they will be loaded with the wealth of the nations that came to destroy her.

Zechariah 14:15
And so shall be the plague of the horse, of the mule, of the camel, and of the ass, and of all the beasts that shall be in these tents, as this plague.

This plague—be it atomic or supernatural—will affect every living thing.

Zechariah 14:16
And it shall come to pass, that every one that is left of all the nations which came against Jerusalem shall even go up from year to year to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, and to keep the feast of tabernacles.

After the battle of Armageddon, in the Kingdom Age, there will be glorious times of celebration and worship for the nations who survive the Tribulation.

Zechariah 14:17
And it shall be, that whoso will not come up of all the families of the earth unto Jerusalem to worship the King, the LORD of hosts, even upon them shall be no rain.

The nations who don't have time to worship will experience drought. People today who don't make time to worship will experience a dryness in their souls.

Zechariah 14:18, 19

And if the family of Egypt go not up, and come not, that have no rain; there shall be the plague, wherewith the LORD will smite the heathen that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles. This shall be the punishment of Egypt, and the punishment of all nations that come not up to keep the feast of tabernacles.

With only scant rainfall at best, the Egyptians might have been able to do without rain. But they, of all nations, would dread a return of the plagues (Exodus 6—12).

Zechariah 14:20, 21
In that day shall there be upon the bells of the horses, HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD; and the pots in the LORD's house shall be like the bowls before the altar. Yea, every pot in Jerusalem and in Judah shall be holiness unto the LORD of hosts: and all they that sacrifice shall come and take of them, and seethe therein: and in that day there shall be no more the Canaanite in the house of the LORD of hosts.

When Jesus comes back to rule and reign, no longer will there be a division between secular and spiritual. No longer will there be separation and fragmentation. Instead, there will be wholeness. At last, there will be holiness. What a day that will be!

WHY WORSHIP?
A Topical Study of ZECHARIAH 14:16–19

The text before us declares that when Jesus comes back, when His kingdom is established, the Feast of Tabernacles will once again be celebrated every year. First seen in Leviticus 23, the Feast of Tabernacles was to take place in the seventh month—equivalent to our October. God declared that His people were to come together and to celebrate for seven days as they lived in lean-tos constructed of boughs and branches. In other words, the entire nation was to have a gigantic camp-out. When the children asked the meaning of this, their fathers would tell them the story of how God brought their forefathers out of Egypt and into the Land of Promise, how He provided for them and protected them along the way.

As Jesus establishes His kingdom, this feast will be reinstated. All of the people who make it through the Tribulation will be ordered by the Lord to come to Jerusalem yearly to celebrate. Any of the nations who don't want to expend the energy to come will experience drought and plague. In other words, there will be drought and difficulty for those who think they don't need to gather to worship corporately.

Prophetically, that's what will happen when Jesus comes back. But I want us to consider this word as it relates to you and me very practically. It seems as though in the day in which we live people increasingly say, "I don't need to go to church. I'm doing fine without attending Bible study. There's no reason for me to take Communion regularly. I talk to God all the time as I drive to work. Therefore, I don't need to meet with God's people." But, just as Zechariah prophesied, people who think they don't need their sisters and brothers will inevitably experience drought within their hearts, plagues and problems in their lives.

"Don't forsake assembling together," the writer to the Hebrews warns, "especially as you see the end drawing near" (see Hebrews 10:25). Watching the news and realizing the events we see are signs of the end times should cause us to congregate together to worship the King more than ever.

Worship Delights the Father

Something unique happens when we get together to worship the Lord. We experience an outpouring of His Spirit in a dimension unlike that of any other time or place. “O, magnify the Lord with me and let us exalt His name together,” David declared (Psalm 34:3). Corporate worship brings an understanding and perception of the Lord like nothing else I know. Thus, worship is essential for our own growth and understanding—but also because it delights the Father.

This should not be surprising. After all, as parents we take great delight in seeing our own kids enjoying one another. In the same way, our heavenly Father loves to see His kids hanging out together. That’s why David declared, “Behold, how good and pleasant it is for brethren to dwell together in unity” (Psalm 133:1).

Worship Dethrones the Flesh

When I worship the King with the congregation of God's people, the Lord inhabits the throne in my heart to a much greater degree. As the temple was dedicated, we read in 2 Chronicles 5:13 that when the people began to play their horns and sing their songs, they made one sound as they worshiped the Lord. Something was happening. Diverse people with a wide range of personalities were miraculously unified. No longer were they a bunch of individuals. Now they were merged into one. The flesh was dethroned.

When I bow my knee and lift my hands in praise with my brothers and sisters, something wonderful happens. I lose my identity. I become one with them in a wonderful, miraculous mystery. How tired I am of myself—of my problems and petty concerns. How I need to come into a place where I can lose myself in the identity of the body of Christ.

Worship Develops the Body

Even in the body of Christ, we can find divisions creeping in. We can differ in philosophy and clash in personality. But when we meet together to worship the King corporately, all of those divisions miraculously, mysteriously, and beautifully dissipate. And, as a result, the body is free to minister and to serve in unity.

Worship Defeats the Enemy

As King Jehoshaphat prepared to do battle, the Spirit of the Lord came upon a Levite named Jahaziel, who said, "Thus saith the LORD unto you, Be not afraid nor dismayed by reason of this great multitude; for the battle is not yours, but God's" (2 Chronicles 20:15). Hearing this, Jehoshaphat was moved to send forth not the army, but a choir singing, "Praise the Lord for His mercy endures forever." Hearing this, the enemy forces were so confused that they began to unsheathe their swords and destroy one another (2 Chronicles 20:23, 24).

The enemy is still distracted and defeated in the place of praise because the sound of praise to him is as irritating as a dentist's drill. Satan flees when he hears praise ascending. Praise is powerful. That's why worship is vital.

Worship Defines Priority

There is a tendency today to emphasize worship—but in many cases, it's worship for worship's sake. Therefore, let us be careful that we never fall into the subtle trap of worshiping worship. When the wise men brought gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh to Jesus, they didn't come to get something from Him. They weren't hoping to get victory over the flesh, defeat the enemy, or develop unity. Nor were they worshiping Him because of what He had done for them, for at that point, He had done nothing for them. They came to worship Him for one reason: simply because He was worthy. The more I learn of Jesus, the more I have no choice but to worship Him because He is so abundantly worthy.

Five hundred years after Zechariah's prophecy was given, Jesus Himself went to the Feast of Tabernacles. In John 7, we read that on the eighth day, the great day of the feast, something interesting happened. You see, every day of the feast, the priests would take pitchers to the pool of Siloam outside of the city and fill them with water. Then they would reenter the city and empty the pitchers as an illustration of God's provision of water for them during their wilderness wandering. But on the final day of the Feast, although the priests would proceed to the pool of Siloam, or literally, "Sent One," they would come back with empty pitchers, signifying that they were still waiting for Messiah, the "Sent One" to come. As the priests returned with their empty pitchers, this Scripture would be read:

> For I will pour water upon him that is thirsty, and floods upon the dry ground: I will pour my spirit upon thy seed, and my blessing upon thine offspring:
> Isaiah 44:3

Then the priest would ask for silence as the people prayed for Messiah to come.

But on the eighth day of this particular feast, a Man's voice could be heard, crying out from the crowd of perhaps one million, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink. And out of his innermost being shall gush forth torrents of living water" (see John 7:37, 38). And, although the crowd in attendance that day would, by and large, reject His invitation, it still stands today. Therefore, come to Jesus and drink deeply. He is our passion and priority—the only One who can satisfy us completely. Because He is truly worthy of our worship both now and eternally, let us be those who worship Him in unity.

HOLINESS UNTO THE LORD

A Topical Study of Zechariah 14:20, 21

As we come to the end of Zechariah's prophecy, we are reminded that when Jesus comes, things will be right at last for in that day, "Holiness to the Lord" will be engraved on the bells of the horses. In other words, in that day, bumper stickers won't be cute, clever, or carnal. They will read: Holiness to the Lord.

The average person equates holiness with heaviness, with a piety that causes severity. Nothing, however, could be further from the truth. Sin erodes a person, destroys a family, and brings ruin physically and financially, relationally and vocationally. Holiness, on the other hand, means "wholeness" and restores man to what he was meant to be. Therefore, when the Father says, "You shall be holy, for I am holy" (Leviticus 11:44), I believe He does so with a smile on His face and a sparkle in His eye. He's not saying, "You'd better be holy because I don't want anyone to have any fun." No, He's saying, "Holiness will bring you happiness to the greatest degree."

In the passage before us, I find it interesting that it will be horses that will carry the message of holiness. You see, horses were greatly regulated and sometimes even forbidden to God's people. In Deuteronomy 17, we read that kings were forbidden to multiply horses to themselves. In Isaiah 31, the Lord indicted His people for trusting the horses they bought from Egypt to protect them from the Assyrians. Synonymous with tanks in our day, horses were important to the defense of a nation. But to God's people, they would be detrimental because He wanted them to trust Him rather than their own military strategy. "Some trust in chariots, and some in horses," David wrote, "but we will remember the name of the LORD our God" (Psalm 20:7).

When Jesus comes back to rule and reign, however, horses will be allowed. And in this, I see a wonderful lesson for us. That is, there might be something you long for presently but that the Lord is withholding because He knows it will turn your heart away from Him. However, when He is truly ruling and reigning in your life, that which you long for will be engraved with "Holiness unto the Lord" just as the bells on the horses will be. In other words, it will assume its proper priority in your life. In that day, you shall have horses because rather than turning you from the Lord, they will actually magnify Him.

In Romans 14, Paul declares that the kingdom of God is not meat or drink externally but righteousness, peace, and joy presently. This means the Lord wants us to be holy even now. How can you walk in wholeness, in holiness practically? As Zechariah tells us, it won't be by your might nor by your power but by God's Spirit (4:6). It's not a matter of trying to be holy, but a matter of allowing the Spirit to fill you completely.

On their first visit to the East Coast, a group of Eskimos watched in amazement as motorboats with water skiers in tow skimmed across a lake. "How can those boats go so fast?" one asked.

"The man on the end of the string pushes really hard," the other answered.

All too often, we think we have to be the man on the end of the string, pushing ourselves really hard if we're going to make any progress in holiness. Paul, however, says it is God who works in us both to will and to do of His good pleasure (Philippians 2:13).

When the Philistines captured the ark of the covenant, they placed it in the temple of their fish-god, Dagon. The next morning, they discovered that their god had fallen before the ark of the covenant, which represented the presence of God. So they propped their god up once again. The next morning, however, they found Dagon again prostrate before the ark of the covenant—but this time his head and his hands had fallen off. "Either Dagon has to go or the ark must be returned," they said. So the ark was sent back to Israel (1 Samuel 5).

The principle is a powerful one for you and me. That is, how do I deal with the "Dagons" in my life? How do I deal with the sin and carnality that prevent me from being holy? Not by trying to be more ethical, more moral, or more spiritual, but by bringing in the presence of God. When the ark comes in, Dagon falls. When the presence of God fills my heart, sin topples. The key is not to do battle against the darkness. The key is simply to turn on the light.

Therefore, every time you hear a bell—be it a doorbell, a telephone, a buzzer, or an alarm clock, I encourage you to think of the bells on the horses in this passage. Think, "Holiness to the Lord." Pray, "Lord allow me to walk in wholeness presently even as I will in heaven eternally"—and listen for the sound of Dagon toppling in defeat.

MALACHI

Background to Malachi

Written in about 400 B.C., the Book of Malachi brings down the curtain on the Old Testament. And as the curtain comes down, the voice of God rings out. Of the fifty-five verses that comprise this book, forty-seven are spoken by God directly. That's a higher percentage than that of any other book in the Bible. Truly, God's voice penetrates and resounds through the book before us.

Malachi is the only prophet to end his prophecy with a warning. Other prophets ended on a note of hope. But in Malachi, the Old Testament closes with a warning because it's setting the stage for the blessing, the redemptive work of Christ Jesus as seen in the first book of the New Testament—the Gospel of Matthew.

It had been a hundred years since Zechariah and Haggai had been on the scene encouraging the people of Judah to finish the work of reconstructing the temple that had been destroyed by the Babylonians in 586 B.C. Zechariah and Haggai encouraged the people to return to work—and the people responded. The temple was rebuilt; the walls were restored. Yet success had its own dangers because, after the temple was rebuilt and the walls restored, the people began to kick back a bit. And as they did, their cutting edge was lost. They began to lose their fire and passion. Oh, they weren't committing big, blatant sins. But a mediocrity had crept into them. So the Lord sent Malachi to speak to His people concerning the lukewarm state of their hearts.

Malachi 1:1
The burden of the word of the LORD to Israel by Malachi.

As with Joel, we don't know very much about Malachi personally. But we do know his name means "Messenger" and, in a sense, that is all we need to know for it's not the messenger but the message that matters. It's the message that makes the difference.

If you heard a knock on your door and opened it to find a FedEx driver standing there with an envelope in his hand addressed to you, you wouldn't ask him about his ancestors, his favorite foods, or his political leanings. Your interests would lie with the message he carried for you. The enemy, however, comes to each of us and whispers, "Who do you think you are, witnessing? Who do you think you are to be teaching or serving?" The enemy's tactic is to condemn us constantly in an effort to neutralize us (Revelation 12:10). But we must realize that it's the message with which we've been entrusted that matters. Therefore, be faithful in what the Lord has given you to do. Pass on what He's entrusted to you. Don't get sucked into the lie that, because you're not spiritual enough, you can't do or say anything on behalf of the Lord.

Malachi 1:2, 3
I have loved you, saith the LORD. Yet ye say, Wherein hast thou loved us? Was not Esau Jacob's brother? saith the LORD: yet I loved Jacob, And I hated Esau, and laid his mountains and his heritage waste for the dragons of the wilderness.

Jacob and Esau were twin brothers yet Paul tells us that before either one of them had opportunity to do anything good or evil, God sovereignly chose Jacob to be part of His family. Many people have a problem with this passage. I have a problem with it, too. My problem, however, is not that the Lord hated Esau but that He loved Jacob. And even harder for me to understand is the fact that He loved and chose me. The One who knows me best loves me most. Amazing!

Malachi 1:4
Whereas Edom saith, We are impoverished, but we will return and build the desolate places; thus saith the LORD of hosts, They shall build, but I will throw down; and they shall call them, The border of wickedness, and, The people against whom the LORD hath indignation for ever.

Jacob went on to have twelve sons who became the Twelve Tribes of Israel. Esau, his twin brother, left the Promised Land, headed southeast into a desert region called Edom and founded a country called Edom—a nation that constantly waged war against the people of God.

Malachi 1:5
And your eyes shall see, and ye shall say, The LORD will be magnified from the border of Israel.

"When did You love us?" the people had accusingly asked the Lord in verse 2. Here, He says, "Look over the border of Israel and see that while you are blessed, the land of Edom is impoverished."

When depression knocks, instead of answering the door, I believe we simply need to stand on our tiptoes and look around at our world, our neighbors, our colleagues, and our own society to see that people are impoverished and hurting, depressed and enslaved by their own carnal desires. We have been blessed, gang. Yes, we have struggles and trials—but we are a people of destiny. God has a purpose and a plan for us. He has forgiven us. He has liberated us. He's blessed us. Therefore, don't hang your head and say, "When has God loved me?" Instead, stand on your tiptoes. As you contrast your situation with that of those around you, you'll say, "Lord, thank You that I'm part of Your family."

Malachi 1:6
A son honoureth his father, and a servant his master: if then I be a father, where is mine honour? and if I be a master, where is my fear? saith the LORD of hosts unto you, O priests, that despise my name. And ye say, Wherein have we despised thy name?

"In what way have we defiled Your name?" the priests arrogantly ask God—and their question itself is justification of the charge just as it will be when people ask Jesus, "What do You mean You never knew us?" in the last days (Matthew 7).

Malachi 1:7, 8
Ye offer polluted bread upon mine altar; and ye say, Wherein have we polluted thee? In that ye say, The table of the LORD is contemptible. And if ye offer the blind for sacrifice, is it not evil? and if ye offer the lame and sick, is it not evil? offer it now unto thy governor; will he be pleased with thee, or accept thy person? saith the LORD of hosts.

Contrary to the requirements of the Law, the people were sacrificing bulls and lambs and rams that were diseased and blind. In other words, they were bringing God their leftovers. God, however, desires the firstfruits (Exodus 23:19). Don't bring God what's left over of your time or finances, energy or ability. Bring Him the best and watch Him bless the rest.

Malachi 1:9, 10
And now, I pray you, beseech God that he will be gracious unto us: this hath been by your means: will he regard your persons? saith the LORD of hosts. Who is there even among you that would shut the doors for nought? neither do ye kindle fire on mine altar for nought. I have no pleasure in you, saith the LORD of hosts, neither will I accept an offering at your hand.

"Shut the doors of the temple," the Lord says. "Stop the hypocrisy altogether."

Malachi 1:11
For from the rising of the sun even unto the going down of the same my name shall be great among the Gentiles; and in every place incense shall be offered unto my name, and a pure offering: for my name shall be great among the heathen, saith the LORD of hosts.

To the Jews who prided themselves in their religiosity and exclusivity, the Lord says, "I will step out of the boundaries of your religious activity and do something among the Gentiles. My name will be praised from the time the sun rises until it goes down every day." In other words, all of the nations of the world would have in them pockets of true believers so that wherever the sun is shining on the planet, there are people who love the Lord and call upon His name.

Malachi 1:12, 13
But ye have profaned it, in that ye say, The table of the LORD is polluted; and the fruit thereof, even his meat, is contemptible. Ye said also, Behold, what a weariness is it! and ye have snuffed at it, saith the LORD of hosts; and ye brought that which was torn, and the lame, and the sick; thus ye brought an offering: should I accept this of your hand? saith the LORD.

"Concerning His Table, the Lord said, "Do this in remembrance of Me" (Luke 22:19). But, like the people in Malachi's day, do we tire of it?

For as often as ye eat this bread, and drink this cup, ye do shew the Lord's death till he come. Wherefore whosoever shall eat this bread, and drink this cup of the Lord, unworthily, shall be guilty of the body and blood of the Lord. But let a man examine himself, and so let him eat of that bread, and drink of that cup. For he that eateth and drinketh unworthily, eateth and drinketh damnation to himself, not discerning the Lord's body. For this cause many are weak and sickly among you, and many sleep.

1 Corinthians 11:26–30

Many people are spiritually anemic and perhaps even physically weak because they haven't given worth to the Lord's Table. Communion is central to the life of the body—both corporately and personally. It's more than just a little piece of bread and cup of juice. It is a mystery and a miracle to those who give it worth.

Malachi 1:14
But cursed be the deceiver, which hath in his flock a male, and voweth, and sacrificeth unto the LORD a corrupt thing: for I am a great King, saith the LORD of hosts, and my name is dreadful among the heathen.

The people weren't being indicted for their lack. They were being indicted for their failure to give back to the Lord the best of what He had already given them. In any area of our walk, the Lord only asks of us that which He has already provided. Jesus didn't condemn the widow for giving only two mites. He commended her as He did no other for giving what she had (Mark 12:42–44).

A MARVELOUS MYSTERY

A Topical Study of MALACHI 1:1–5

The passage before us is one that should bring comfort to the people of God. Instead, it has often caused confusion among the people of God. It should cause a glorious warming of our hearts. Instead, it often causes troubling to our heads. It should be a delight to the believer. Instead, it often results in distress for the believer for the passage before us deals with the controversial doctrine of divine election.

The background of this passage is that the people of God were doubting whether the Lord really loved them. "I have loved you," He declared—to which the people cynically responded, "When have You loved us?" (verse 2).

Here, in this passage, the Lord says, "Look just beyond your borders to the land of Edom." Edom was a neighboring country to the southeast of Israel. Although Edom was significant historically, she was impoverished financially and doomed eternally. "Look to Edom," the Lord says, "and you will see how I have loved you. I have made you significant historically and I have a plan for you eternally. Contrast that with your brothers beyond your border who are troubled and distressed."

The Edomites were indeed the brothers of Israel, for they shared a common ancestry. You see, approximately 1,600 years previously, God had tugged on the heart of a man named Abraham. Abraham lived in the Chaldees, or present-day Iraq. Although he worshiped the moon, as did the rest of the people in his city of Ur, God said to him, "Leave your land and I will make of you a great nation" (Genesis 12:2). The fulfillment of this promise began when, at ninety years of age, Abraham's wife, Sarah, miraculously gave birth to a son named Isaac. When Isaac's wife, Rebekah, became pregnant and inquired of the Lord concerning the rumbling in her womb, the Lord told her she would give birth to two nations and that the elder of her sons would serve the younger (Genesis 25:23). This was very unusual, for in that culture, the older brother was the recipient of the birthright and blessing—both spiritual and material blessings and leadership. Here, however, there would be a reversal.

> And not only this; but when Rebecca also had conceived by one, even by our father Isaac; (For the children being not yet born, neither having done any good or evil, that the purpose of God according to election might stand, not of works, but of him that calleth;) It was said unto her, The elder shall serve the younger. As it is written, Jacob have I loved, but Esau have I hated. What shall we say then? Is there unrighteousness with God? God forbid. For he saith to Moses, I will have mercy on whom I will have mercy, and I will have compassion on whom I will have compassion. So then it is not of him that willeth, nor of him that runneth, but of God that sheweth mercy.
> Romans 9:10–16

Paul says that God elected and selected, blessed and brought forth the descendants of Jacob not because of anything Jacob had done—for it was before they were even born that God chose Jacob and hated Esau. And therein lies the problem. People frequently say, "That's not fair." But Ephesians 1:4 says the same thing is true of us. God chose us before the foundation of the world. If you are a believer it is not because you willed it or earned it but simply because God desired it.

> For whom he did foreknow, he also did predestinate to be conformed to the image of his Son, that he might be the firstborn among many brethren. Moreover whom he did predestinate, them he also called: and whom he called, them he also justified: and whom he justified, them he also glorified.
> Romans 8:29, 30

Who God foreknew, He predestined. Who He predestined, He called, or elected. Who He elected, He justified. Who He justified, He glorified. It's all based on His knowledge. Because love is not love without choice, God gives people the choice to choose Him. He foreknows those who will and chooses them. He elects us based upon His foreknowledge—and yet He leaves the choice with us. Those who don't want to know the Lord won't.

> For God so loved the world, that he gave his only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth in him should not perish, but have everlasting life.
> John 3:16

> All that the Father giveth me shall come to me; and him that cometh to me I will in no wise cast out.
> John 6:37

> . . . And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely.
> Revelation 22:17 (b)

God invites everyone, yet He already knows those who will accept His invitation.

> Ye have not chosen me, but I have chosen you . . .
> John 15:16 (a)

> There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God.
> Romans 3:11

The Lord chose us that we might choose Him. If I had all knowledge, I would buy a lottery ticket because it wouldn't be gambling. I would select the winning numbers with certainty. Therefore, it would be a wise investment. So too, the fact that God, who knows everything, chose you means you are a wise investment in His estimation. Knowing this does three things for me . . .

Election makes me less and less of a worrier. I know the Lord is going to see me through. I know I'm going to live with Him in eternity. Therefore, I don't have to sweat out my salvation presently. "Being confident of this very thing," Paul declared, "that He who has begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ" (Philippians 1:6).

Election makes me more and more of a worshiper. When I realize that I am saved not by anything I do or don't do but solely because God sovereignly chose me, I have no other choice than to fall on my knees and say, "Thank You, Lord."

Election makes me a little bit wiser as a worker. It is the wise servant who prays, "Lord guide me to those You have already elected. Guide me to the place where You have already put it in someone's heart to turn to You."

God never said to Rebekah when she was carrying her twins, "I love one and hate the other." Nor did He say this when they were grown men. It wasn't until centuries passed that God revealed this through the prophet Malachi and explained it through the apostle Paul. Did God choose correctly? He always does (Revelation 16:7). Esau would sell his birthright for a pot of stew, marry heathen wives, and father a people who would wage war against Israel. Jacob, on the other hand, although he was tricky indeed, had a heart for God.

Never doubt the love of God, gang. Like Jacob, no matter how tricky you've been in the past or how often you stumble even now, because He chose you to choose Him, just as He did with Jacob, He'll see you through.

2 Malachi 2:1
And now, O ye priests, this commandment is for you.

It was the priests who were leading the people astray. Had they honored the Lord in their sacrifice and worship, the people would have followed.

Malachi 2:2–6
If ye will not hear, and if ye will not lay it to heart, to give glory unto my name, saith the LORD of hosts, I will even send a curse upon you, and I will curse your blessings: yea, I have cursed them already, because ye do not lay it to heart. Behold, I will corrupt your seed, and spread dung upon your faces, even the dung of your solemn feasts; and one shall take you away with it. And ye shall know that I have sent this commandment unto you, that my covenant might be with Levi, saith the LORD of hosts. My covenant was with him of life and peace; and I gave them to him for the fear wherewith he feared me, and was afraid before my name. The law of truth was in his mouth, and iniquity was not found in his lips: he walked with me in peace and equity, and did turn many away from iniquity.

"Who is on the Lord's side?" Moses said as God's people worshiped the golden calf (Exodus 32:26). It was in answering this call that the tribe of Levi was uniquely set apart as priests. Here, their zeal is contrasted with the tepid commitment of the priests in Malachi's day.

Malachi 2:7–9
For the priest's lips should keep knowledge, and they should seek the law at his mouth: for he is the messenger of the LORD of hosts. But ye are departed out of the way; ye have caused many to stumble at the law; ye have corrupted the covenant of Levi, saith the LORD of hosts. Therefore have I also made you contemptible and base before all the people, according as ye have not kept my ways, but have been partial in the law.

The call of a priest was to stand before God on behalf of the people and to stand before the people on behalf of God. These priests, however, were so caught up with religion that they weren't providing a true representation of God's Law.

In Acts 20, Paul told the elders to feed the flock of God. Religious activity is not what ministers are called to do. Bazaars and board meetings are not the calling of true ministry. In the early church, even service was delegated to others in order to free the elders to devote themselves to prayer and the study of the Word (Acts 6).

Malachi 2:10, 11

Have we not all one father? hath not one God created us? why do we deal treacherously every man against his brother, by profaning the covenant of our fathers? Judah hath dealt treacherously, and an abomination is committed in Israel and in Jerusalem; for Judah hath profaned the holiness of the LORD which he loved, and hath married the daughter of a strange god.

What is the holy institution the Lord loves? I believe this speaks of the holy institution of marriage. The first miracle Jesus ever did was at a wedding (John 2). In so doing, I believe He was putting His stamp of approval not only on the institution of marriage but on the marriage ceremony itself.

Malachi 2:12
The LORD will cut off the man that doeth this, the master and the scholar, out of the tabernacles of Jacob, and him that offereth an offering unto the LORD of hosts.

The man who was unequally yoked with a heathen woman, who violated the Word of God concerning marriage was to be cut off from the tents of Jacob, from the blessings of God.

Malachi 2:13, 14
And this have ye done again, covering the altar of the LORD with tears, with weeping, and with crying out, insomuch that he regardeth not the offering any more, or receiveth it with good will at your hand. Yet ye say, Wherefore? Because the LORD hath been witness between thee and the wife of thy youth, against whom thou hast dealt treacherously: yet is she thy companion, and the wife of thy covenant.

In Malachi's day, Jewish men were divorcing their wives to marry heathen women. "This ought not to be," God said. "I will not honor their sacrifices even if they come with tears to the altar." Peter would say virtually the same thing when he told New Testament husbands to honor their wives lest their prayers be hindered (1 Peter 3:7).

Marriage is not based upon emotion. It's based upon covenant, or commitment. When you get married, you vow to spend the rest of your life together—for better or worse, in good times and bad, through success and setback, in happiness and hardship—regardless of how you feel at any given period.

Malachi 2:15
And did not he make one? Yet had he the residue of the spirit. And wherefore one? That he might seek a godly seed. Therefore take heed to your spirit, and let none deal treacherously against the wife of his youth.

God delights in godly children. In divorce, however, it's the kids who end up paying the price.

Malachi 2:16 (a)
For the LORD, the God of Israel, saith that he hateth putting away . . .

God hates neither the person who's been divorced nor the one who has divorced. He does, however, hate divorce.

Malachi 2:16 (b)
. . . for one covereth violence with his garment, saith the LORD of hosts: therefore take heed to your spirit, that ye deal not treacherously.

The Hebrew word translated "violence" can either mean "violence" or "bitterness." Divorce always results in one if not both of these emotions. That's why God hates it and why it must be avoided at all costs.

Malachi 2:17
Ye have wearied the LORD with your words. Yet ye say, Wherein have we wearied him? When ye say, Every one that doeth evil is good in the sight of the LORD, and he delighteth in them; or, Where is the God of judgment?

The priests were distorting God's Word by saying that God loves those who do evil. While God does indeed love sinners (Romans 5:8), He doesn't commend or approve of evil. The same lie was hurled at the apostle Paul when his enemies distorted his teaching concerning grace and forgiveness to say that he was encouraging sin. There are always those who want to distort God's Word and find a single verse or phrase that gives them license to justify wrong behavior or thinking. That's why I'm so committed to going through the entire Bible. That way, we're not just taking a phrase or a sentence, but getting the full counsel of God's Word.

3 Malachi, or "Messenger," carried a rather severe message as he told the people of God they had grown lukewarm in their love toward God. Here in chapter 3, the Lord gives a promise that He will rectify that situation.

Malachi 3:1 (a)
Behold, I will send my messenger, and he shall prepare the way before me . . .

The "messenger of the covenant" is a reference to Jesus for He is the Messenger of the new covenant of grace. "You've been distorting the Word," God says, "but I'm going to send the Word made flesh to straighten out the situation."

Malachi 3:1 (b)
. . . and the Lord, whom ye seek, shall suddenly come to his temple, even the messenger of the covenant, whom ye delight in: behold, he shall come, saith the LORD of hosts.

Jesus would indeed "suddenly come to His temple." When He was brought into the temple to be dedicated, only two people recognized that the Babe being dedicated that day was Messiah. One was Simeon. Luke tells us he lived for the coming of this Messenger, the consolation of Israel (2:25). The other one who recognized that Jesus was Messiah was a woman named Anna. Anna had been married for seven years when her husband died. She spent the rest of her days in the temple, giving herself to prayer and fasting. On this day, when the Lord came suddenly as a Babe into the temple, she was eighty-four years old.

Simeon and Anna tell me that whether in prosperity or adversity, the Lord is seen by those who watch for Him. Therefore, I encourage you to look for the Lord's appearance as you go through your day. Most likely, He won't come in the way you expect. But, like Simeon and Anna, with eyes of faith you'll recognize His appearance.

Malachi 3:2–5
But who may abide the day of his coming? and who shall stand when he appeareth? for he is like a refiner's fire, and like fullers' soap: And he shall sit as a refiner and purifier of silver: and he shall purify the sons of Levi, and purge them as gold and silver, that they may offer unto the LORD an offering in righteousness. Then shall the offering of Judah and Jerusalem be pleasant unto the LORD, as in the days of old, and as in former years. And I will come near to you to judgment; and I will be a swift witness against the sorcerers, and against the adulterers, and against false swearers, and against those that oppress the hireling in his wages, the widow, and the fatherless, and that turn aside the stranger from his right, and fear not me, saith the LORD of hosts.

When Jesus comes, He will judge and correct, convict and adjust. Things would not continue on indefinitely as the people mistakenly thought at the end of chapter 2. How many years would it be from the time Malachi gave his prophecy until the time of Jesus? Four hundred years. So often, we get impatient after four years, four months, or four days. The Lord's not in a hurry like we are. Why? The next verse tells us . . .

Malachi 3:6
For I am the LORD, I change not; therefore ye sons of Jacob are not consumed.

"I'm consistent," the Lord declares. Never mistake God's patience for approval or impotence. Everything is going according to His timing.

Malachi 3:7
Even from the days of your fathers ye are gone away from mine ordinances, and have not kept them. Return unto me, and I will return unto you, saith the LORD of hosts. But ye said, Wherein shall we return?

How would the people return? In this case, it would be through giving. Why? Giving is not God's way of raising money. It's His way of raising kids. You see, because we're sinners, each of us has the tendency to be selfish, small, greedy, and material. But God is a giver (John 3:16) and He wants His children to be like Him.

In the Bible, there are over four hundred fifty verses on faith and over five hundred fifty verses on prayer. But there are over 2,100 verses on giving. One of every ten verses in the New Testament deals with giving, money, or possessions. Of the thirty-eight parables Jesus taught, sixteen deal directly with giving, money, or possession. Why is the Lord so emphatic about this? Because Jesus said that wherever a man's treasure is, there will his heart be also (Luke 12:34). He wants us to give to Him—not because He needs our money but because He wants our heart.

Malachi 3:8, 9
Will a man rob God? Yet ye have robbed me. But ye say, Wherein have we robbed thee? In tithes and offerings. Ye are cursed with a curse: for ye have robbed me, even this whole nation.

"How shall you return to Me?" the Lord says. "Consider this: You've been robbing Me." You see, the hearts of the people were held back to the same degree their tithes and offerings were.

The word tithe simply means "tenth." The first ten percent of every dollar I receive is the Lord's. Therefore, if I don't tithe, I'm actually robbing God. In giving my tithe, on the other hand, I'm sanctifying the remaining ninety percent. Tithing acknowledges in a very real way that every good and perfect gift comes from God (James 1:17).

The tithe is the Lord's (Leviticus 27:30). "Legalism!" some object. "As New Testament believers, we are free from the Law." Yes, we are. But tithing began before the Law was ever given. In Genesis 14, Abraham gave a tithe to Melchizedek, a picture or type of Jesus Christ, well before the Law was given. In Old Testament times, tithing was actually about twenty-three percent of one's income. There was a ten percent tithe to the Levites, a ten percent tithe to the Lord directly, and a ten percent tithe every three years to the pool. In addition, one-sixtieth of all crops were to be given to the Lord.

> Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone.
> Matthew 23:23

The scribes and Pharisees were meticulous about tithing—but the problem is they neglected the weightier matters of justice, mercy, and faith. While they were to give heed to those matters, Jesus said they were "not to leave the other undone." In other words, they were to continue tithing. Therefore, tithing is far more than simply a requirement of the Law. Not only did it precede the Law, but it was confirmed by Jesus.

Malachi 3:10 (a)
Bring ye all the tithes into the storehouse . . .

The tithe is to be brought into the storehouse. That is, we are to tithe to the place where we are being shepherded and fed. The tithe should not be given randomly to this cause, that group, or the other individual. You won't find an example of that anywhere in the Word. You can do that with offerings. But the tithe needs to be consistently brought to the storehouse.

I believe the ministry of the local church has been restricted because people have been giving to all sorts of causes rather than to the church. In the Book of Acts, we see the church helping the poor, the church sending out missionaries, the church planting other outreaches. Those who were sent out from the church were submitted and accountable to the church. We see this even in Paul's ministry concerning the issue of circumcision. As seen in Acts 15, Paul didn't say, "I don't care what you guys think. I have my own ministry." No, there was a linkage and a mutual covering as the church met together to discern the Lord's mind.

In my understanding of Scripture, the tithe needs to go into the storehouse where the leadership dispenses the funds.

"But I want to control where my money goes," some say.

That's the beauty of tithing. You can't! Remember Ananias and Sapphira? The Lord is certainly capable of dealing with those who mishandle this responsibility. When we tithe, we're not supporting anyone. We're not getting credit from anyone. We're simply giving to God in humility.

Malachi 3:10 (b)
. . . that there may be meat in mine house, and prove me now herewith, saith the LORD of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

Throughout the Word God says, "Trust Me." But in the area of giving, He says, "Prove Me. Bring Me your tithes and offerings and see if I won't bless you in such a way that you can't even contain it."

Malachi 3:11, 12
And I will rebuke the devourer for your sakes, and he shall not destroy the fruits of your ground; neither shall your vine cast her fruit before the time in the field, saith the LORD of hosts. And all nations shall call you blessed: for ye shall be a delightsome land, saith the LORD of hosts.

Do you ever feel like your paycheck is just being eaten up? Through Haggai, the Lord said, "You put your money into bags with holes. Your budget isn't working because, although you're building your own houses, you've neglected My work" (1:6). Tithing makes good sense because God isn't going to be your debtor. You'll never be able to give more to Him than He'll give back to you. He'll never "owe you one."

Malachi 3:13–16

Your words have been stout against me, saith the LORD. Yet ye say, What have we spoken so much against thee? Ye have said, It is vain to serve God: and what profit is it that we have kept his ordinance, and that we have walked mournfully before the LORD of hosts? And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered. Then they that feared the LORD spake often one to another: and the LORD hearkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written before him for them that feared the LORD, and that thought upon his name.

"It's a waste of time to serve the Lord," the people said. But even as they did, those who feared the Lord said otherwise—and the Lord took careful note.

For topical study of Malachi 3:16 entitled "God's Amazing Memory," turn to page* 929.

Malachi 3:17
And they shall be mine, saith the LORD of hosts, in that day when I make up my jewels and I will spare them, as a man spareth his own son that serveth him.

What is a jewel? A piece of worthless material that has withstood long periods of pressure and heat followed by a period of cutting and polishing. Jesus told of a man who sold everything he owned to buy a field not for the field itself but for the treasure he knew was buried in it (Matthew 13:44). What is the treasure? You are. You're the jewel the Lord is developing. You're the treasure He died to purchase. Even in the lukewarm environment of Malachi's day, people who called on the Lord were jewels to Him.

Malachi 3:18

Then shall ye return, and discern between the righteous and the wicked, between him that serveth God and him that serveth him not.

Those who said it was vanity to serve God (verse 14) would see the vanity of their own words when Jesus comes back for His gems, His jewels, His treasure.

GOD'S AMAZING MEMORY

A Topical Study of MALACHI 3:16

Computers cannot think logically. They depend completely on memory—but their memories are amazing. A computer can multiply two five-digit numbers in one trillionth of a second. Even though they are able to do this using memory alone, their memories can't hold a candle to the memory of our heavenly Father—for He can remember everything and anything He desires.

In Malachi 3, even as the prophet was indicting the people for their lukewarm relationship with God—a people who had doubted His love and defiled His altar, a people who had devalued His Word and distorted His truth—we read that there were those who feared God and spoke one to another of Him. We also read that the Lord recorded them in a book of remembrance.

A Book of Remembrance

According to our text, whenever people speak about the Lord, He hearkens. The Hebrew word translated "hearken," is the same word that describes the ears of a dog perking up when he hears the voice of his owner. In other words, when the Lord hears His name being talked about, His ears perk up. He tunes in and makes note.

Does God write it down so He won't forget it? No, God doesn't forget anything He desires to remember. Why, then, does He keep a book of remembrance? I suggest it's for the same reason we keep photo albums and scrapbooks. It's not so that we won't forget, but rather because we enjoy certain events in our lives so much that we want to relive them again and again. I suggest our Father is compiling a huge scrapbook of all the times we spoke about Him—and when we get to heaven, He's going to invite us to look at them with Him. And in so doing, we'll be amazed that He would care enough to record every conversation we shared about Him, every witness we gave of Him.

A Bottle of Tears

In Psalm 56, we find that there's a special component of this book of remembrance. David had been called and anointed to be king of Israel. Therefore, Saul, the present king, was out to destroy him. So David fled from the presence of Saul into the wilderness, eventually finding himself in the Philistine city of Gath. When the men of Gath saw David, they closed the gates behind him and said, "Isn't this David—the one who has killed thousands?" When David heard these rumblings, he realized he was in danger in Gath, as well. So he went to the gates of the city and feigned madness. When the king of the Philistines saw this, not wanting a crazy man on his hands, he ordered that David be let out (1 Samuel 21). It was at this time, when he felt his life was in danger both by Saul and the Philistines, that David wrote this psalm . . .

> Thou tellest my wanderings: put thou my tears into thy bottle: are they not in thy book? When I cry unto thee, then shall mine enemies turn back: this I know; for God is for me. In God will I praise his word: in the LORD will I praise his word. In God have I put my trust: I will not be afraid what man can do unto me.
> Psalm 56:8–11

Evidently, God's book of remembrance also contains a bottle of our tears. When you weep, when you feel forsaken and forgotten, when you feel as though no one understands or cares about you, know this: the tears you cry are caught by the Lord and stored in a bottle. You see, in Old Testament times, women actually collected their tears in "tear bottles." A woman's tears were a precious possession because they spoke of times of deep joy and tragedy, the most important moments of her life. The tear bottle was normally given to the man she would marry.

The woman who washed Jesus' feet with her tears and dried them with her hair probably did so by emptying her tear bottle in an act of tender devotion.

"If You knew what kind of woman this is, You wouldn't allow her to do this," Jesus' host, Simon, thought.

But Jesus said to Simon, "Don't you know that the one who is forgiven much loves much?" In other words, "What she has done is precious. With your hardheartedness and religiosity, your heart is far from Me. But in pouring out her tears, this woman is actually pouring out her heart as an act of worship to Me" (Luke 7:42–47).

Precious people, concerning the things you've been crying over, the events you're confused about, the difficulties and struggles and burdens that cause your heart to break, know this: the Lord has been collecting your tears. He might not answer all of your questions right now. He might not explain why He allowed those difficulties or tragedies presently. But He knows the day is coming when He will wipe away every tear, when your joy will obliterate all sorrow (Revelation 21:4).

I wonder if sometimes it must be hard for the Father to keep quiet. I wonder if sometimes He wants to say, "Here's what I'm doing . . . ." He remains disciplined in His silence, however, because He knows it's necessary for us to go through seasons of weeping . . .

> Blessed is the man whose strength is in thee; in whose heart are the ways of them. Who passing through the valley of Baca make it a well; the rain also filleth the pools.
> Psalm 84:5, 6

Baca means "weeping." Therefore, the psalmist says that blessed is the man who goes through the valley of weeping and makes it a spring for others to be refreshed. Paul would say the same thing to the church at Corinth . . .

> Blessed be God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Father of mercies, and the God of all comfort; Who comforteth us in all our tribulation, that we may be able to comfort them which are in any trouble, by the comfort wherewith we ourselves are comforted of God.
> 2 Corinthians 1:3, 4

In both of these passages, it's as if the Lord says, "I'm going to allow you to go through hurts and difficulties. I will store your tears in a bottle. I care deeply and will wipe them away eventually. But presently, they're going to be valuable for you to relate to others who follow in your footsteps as you relate to them, share wisdom with them, and are a comfort for them.

A Bowl of Prayers

> And when he had taken the book, the four beasts and four and twenty elders fell down before the Lamb, having every one of them harps, and golden vials full of odours, which are the prayers of saints. And another angel came and stood at the altar, having a golden censer; and there was given unto him much incense, that he should offer it with the prayers of all saints upon the golden altar which was before the throne.
> Revelation 5:8; 8:3

The prayers we pray are evidently stored in golden bowls. At a certain point, it's as if those bowls get filled up with our prayers and begin to "tip"—and that's when things begin to happen. For example, for centuries, people have been praying, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done. Come quickly, Lord." And every time that prayer is offered, it goes into the golden bowl. At a certain point, that bowl will be filled and will tip and then the kingdom will become reality. His will will be done presently. I'm not simply talking about the prophetic picture, but also practically and personally.

Do you ever wonder why sometimes your prayers are answered immediately and other times you have to pray a million times? I believe some bowls need only a single prayer to make them tip. I think of Elijah on Mount Carmel. In 1 Kings 18, we see the prophets of Baal confronted by Elijah, the man of God. They prayed from morning to evening. They danced and thrashed their bodies—but nothing happened. When it was Elijah's turn, he simply said, "Lord, let these people know I have done these things according to Your Word. Send fire from heaven and consume the bull on the altar." Evidently, it only took two sentences for that particular bowl to tip because fire came down immediately (1 Kings 18:36–38).

And yet, as the story goes on, when Elijah prayed for rain, it took seven seasons of intense prayer before even a cloud appeared (1 Kings 18:44). One would think praying for rain would require less intensity than praying for fire. Yet fire required only a two-sentence prayer while rain required repeated, intense prayer. Therefore, I believe sometimes it takes just a little bit of prayer to tip the bowl of blessing. Other times, God wants to teach us how to connect with Him, how to persevere through difficulty, how to stretch our faith as He prepares us for the ages to come.

To the people who feared His name in Malachi's day, it's as if God said, "I'm listening. I'm recording your conversations. I'm gathering your tears. I feel your hearts and I will wipe away every tear. But presently it's important that you go through these difficulties that others might be refreshed. Your prayers are being stored in bowls and, at the right time, answers will come. It might be soon—but it might take a while because I want to teach you how to partner with Me."

The Lord remembers every tear I shed, every prayer I pray, every word I share about Him. There's only one thing God does not remember. He doesn't remember my sins . . .

> This is the covenant that I will make with them after those days, saith the Lord, I will put my laws into their hearts, and in their minds will I write them; And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more.
> Hebrews 10:16, 17

There's a book of remembrance, a bottle of tears, a bowl of prayers—but the bunches of my blunders are not remembered. Why? Because the blood of Jesus Christ washed them away.

> As far as the east is from the west, so far hath he removed our transgressions from us.
> Psalm 103:12

> He will turn again, he will have compassion upon us; he will subdue our iniquities; and thou wilt cast all their sins into the depths of the sea.
>
> Micah 7:19

God has actually erased His memory bank concerning our sin. He is not waiting to "get us back" for the mistakes we've made, for the sins we've committed. He's not waiting to get us back because He gave His back when He was beaten before He went to the Cross.

Our sins are gone, gang. That's the gospel. That's the good news.

For, behold, the day cometh, that shall burn as an oven; and all the proud, yea, and all that do wickedly, shall be stubble: and the day that cometh shall burn them up, saith the LORD of hosts, that it shall leave them neither root nor branch. But unto you that fear my name shall the Sun of righteousness arise with healing in his wings; and ye shall go forth, and grow up as calves of the stall.

"And now we call the proud happy; yea, they that work wickedness are set up; yea, they that tempt God are even delivered," the people said in the previous chapter (verse 15). But when Jesus, the Sun of righteousness, comes again, this will be reversed, for those who rebel against God and are out to destroy His people will feel the heat of His wrath while those who fear Him will feel the warmth of His healing.

Malachi 4:3, 4

And ye shall tread down the wicked; for they shall be ashes under the soles of your feet in the day that I shall do this, saith the LORD of hosts. Remember ye the law of Moses my servant, which I commanded unto him in Horeb for all Israel, with the statutes and judgments.

As the last book of the Old Testament draws to a close, the Lord says, "Remember the Law of Moses"—for it would be this law that would eventually point people to Jesus (Galatians 3:24).

Malachi 4:5

Behold, I will send you Elijah the prophet before the coming of the great and dreadful day of the LORD:

The scribes understood that this verse spoke of the coming of Messiah. Therefore, Jesus' disciples asked Him why the scribes said that before Messiah came, Elijah would come.

"Elijah is coming and has already come," Jesus answered (Matthew 17:10–12).

John the Baptist came in the same spirit, with the same power and the same kind of ministry as Elijah. But he wasn't literally Elijah. When will Elijah come? Revelation 11 tells us two witnesses will come on the scene in the Tribulation period who will have the power to stop the rain, to cause plagues to fall on those who come against them, and to speak fire to any who attack them. One will be Elijah—the man who prayed both drought and fire down from heaven (1 Kings 17; 2 Kings 1). Most likely, Moses will be the other—no stranger himself to plagues (Exodus 7—11).

Malachi 4:6
And he shall turn the heart of the fathers to the children, and the heart of the children to their fathers, lest I come and smite the earth with a curse.

Elijah will come with a ministry of getting things right, of setting things straight lest the Lord comes with a curse. That's the way the Old Testament ends. How does the New Testament end? "The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all." The Old Testament ends with a curse. The New Testament ends with grace.

The Old Testament ends with a curse because, in essence, it's the Law of God being given to proud and pompous mankind who think they're pretty good. But the Law, God's standard of righteousness and holiness, actually strikes and curses us when we realize we can't keep it. So it is the Old Testament Law that sets the stage for the New Covenant—when He who knew no sin would be made sin for us that we might be made the righteousness of God in Him (2 Corinthians 5:21).

The grace of our Lord Jesus Christ be with you all.

Amen.

BETWEEN THE TESTAMENTS

THE SILENT YEARS

Between the Testaments

As the Old Testament curtain comes down, we move into the Book of Matthew. But as we go to the New Testament, we find ourselves unsettled a bit. Four hundred years have passed between the time of Malachi and Matthew and the scenery has changed substantially.

Most noticeably, the language of the people is different. Hebrew has been replaced by Aramaic and Greek. We also see that the temple, the cornerstone of Old Testament history, has a totally different appearance architecturally. In addition to this, people study the Scriptures in buildings called synagogues scattered throughout the country. No longer is a Jewish king ruling in Jerusalem. Instead, an Edomite sits on the throne.

Things certainly seem different. What's going on?

The changes actually began as far back as 586 B.C. In that year, Nebuchadnezzar came down from Babylon and destroyed the city of Jerusalem. The walls were knocked down, the temple was burned, and the people of Judah were carried into Babylon where they were held captive for seventy years. The prophet Jeremiah had warned the people that this is what would happen because they had neglected God's Word and had clung to the worship of idols.

Evidently having their fill of idols in Babylon, the capital city of idolatry, when the Jews were free to leave Babylon seventy years later, they were never again drawn to idolatry—a national characteristic that remains yet today. Although most of the Jews were allowed to leave Babylon and return to Jerusalem, the majority chose to remain in Babylon. Although they had turned their back on the Babylonian idols, they established businesses in Babylon and prospered commercially. So when they had the opportunity to go home, only a small minority actually returned. The rest were content in their material prosperity.

Wanting to worship the Lord even though they were in Babylon, the Jews established synagogue worship. Because they couldn't worship at the temple, they decided that a synagogue would be built wherever there were seven Jewish males in residence. Every Sabbath day would find the Jews in these synagogues being instructed in Old Testament teachings. The Jews who did eventually trickle back to Jerusalem brought synagogue worship with them. That is why, when you get to the Gospels, you read about Jesus consistently going into the synagogue (Luke 4:16).

In addition to the change in where people worshiped, there was a change in the language they spoke. When the Jews were carried into captivity, the Hebrew language was replaced by Aramaic and Greek. Aramaic was used for common communication, Greek for commerce and culture. The Jews living in Babylon who never made their way back to Jerusalem wanted the Old Testament Scriptures in a language they could understand since Hebrew was no longer spoken. So seventy men convened in Alexandria, Egypt, and translated the Old Testament from Hebrew into Greek. The resulting translation is known as the Septuagint. The group of men who translated the Septuagint became known as the scribes. Because they translated and painstakingly copied the Scriptures, these men became authorities in Old Testament laws and teaching. That is why, when you come to the Gospels, you see scribes in a place of religious prominence.

Following Greek domination of the world, the Romans came into power. In the year 63 B.C., a Roman general named Pompey beat the area of Israel into bloody submission. Having established Roman dominance in the area, Pompey announced a governor, called a king, would rule the area and answer to Rome. That is why, when you come to Matthew, you find an Edomite rather than a Jew on the throne in Jerusalem. At four feet, four inches, Herod was a small man who wanted to do big things. Therefore, in addition to constructing massive palaces and fortresses, he ordered extensive remodeling of the temple—a project that would take eighty-five years to complete. It is this remodeling project the disciples refer to in Mark 13.

Practically, these changes speak to me very definitely. You see, for four hundred years, with no prophet on the scene, it appeared as though God was not working. There was no prophet saying, "Thus saith the Lord . . ." There were no miracles performed. There were no supernatural events. There was only a strange eerie silence—or so it seemed. But behind the scenes, God was allowing certain situations to unfold. The stage was being set . . .

Politically—with the Pax Romana in effect at the time of Jesus' birth—the world was unified as never before. Oh, it was a forced peace to be sure —but it created an environment where the gospel could travel quickly throughout the empire on Roman highways.

Philosophically, the world was ready for something meaningful after Greek mythology proved to be empty.

Linguistically, the entire world was unified by a common language. Because Greek was spoken in every region, the New Testament could travel without any language barriers or obstacles.

Spiritually, after silence for four hundred years, the people of God were waiting to hear something—anything—from Him.

Why does this speak to me? Because sometimes I go through four hundred hours or four days, weeks, or even months when I don't hear very much from the Lord. I hear others say, "The Lord told me . . ." or, "The Lord spoke to my heart the other day and said . . . ." And I wonder, What about me, Lord?

Do you ever wonder if the Lord still cares about you—or if you're so out to lunch that you'll never hear from Him again? The four hundred years between Malachi and Matthew tell me that if our Father caused the stage to be quiet for four centuries, He can do the same thing in my life for four months. If you're going through a season of silence, take advantage of the opportunity to worship the Lord even if you don't feel Him close at hand. Stick around. Stay tuned. Don't give up. The Incarnation is coming.

> God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son . . .
> Hebrews 1:1, 2 (a)

In "sundry times and diverse manners," God spoke through the prophets. But in these last days, He has one final word to say: Jesus. Jesus is God's final, ultimate Word. It's as if He says, "I'm not going to give you words any longer. I'm giving you the Word made flesh" (John 1:14).

Believer, all you need to know about living and dying, about God and the Word, about marriage and parenting, about witnessing and worshiping—all you need to know about everything and anything is found in Jesus. Before Jesus came, although man had partial truth about God, it was difficult to determine the full truth. Like the proverbial blind men describing an elephant, each was able to describe a portion, but none the whole.

People wonder about God. Those who only think of Him as powerful think He's only out to judge people. Those who only think of Him as loving think He winks at sin. It's only as we look at Jesus that we get the full picture.

> Hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son, whom he hath appointed heir of all things, by whom also he made the worlds; Who being the brightness of his glory, and the express image of his person, and upholding all things by the word of his power, when he had by himself purged our sins, sat down on the right hand of the Majesty on high;
> Hebrews 1:2, 3

Jesus is the express image of the Father. That's why He said he who had seen Him had seen the Father (John 14:9).

We can argue about God indefinitely. We can discuss God theologically. But Jesus came on the scene to settle the issue completely. In Him, we see the love of God and the righteousness of God, the holiness of God and the humility of God, the power of God and the patience of God working together perfectly. I believe that's why there are four Gospels. It's as though the Father is saying, "Don't miss Jesus. You'll see Me in Him."

FOREWORD

There are so many commentaries on the Bible that are available today. Even though most are expositional, or exegetical, they often seek to be so exacting with the letter of the law or the possible meaning of a particular word that they lack life and inspiration. It is hard to find a good devotional commentary on the Bible, one that brings both understanding and life to the passage, so that you are inspired to worship the Lord as you gain new insights into the truth of His love and grace toward us.

This commentary is one that does just that.

In Nehemiah chapter eight, we are told that the people were gathered together and they read in the book of the law of God distinctly, and gave the sense, and caused them to understand the meaning. I find that this perfectly describes what Jon has done in his commentaries, and is the greatest need in the church today. In Nehemiah's day, this method of commentary brought great conviction upon the people and a genuine turning to God. The ultimate result was that the people went their way rejoicing because they understood the words that were declared unto them.

I am convinced that you also will go your way rejoicing after reading the insights that the Holy Spirit has given to Jon on the scriptures.

Jon Courson's APPLICATION COMMENTARY

MATTHEW

Background to Matthew

About fifty years after Jesus ascended into heaven, one of His followers, a man named Matthew, picked up his pen and began to write about Him. Matthew had a great appreciation for Jesus—perhaps because of his occupation at the time Jesus called him. As a tax collector, Matthew would have been hated by the people of Israel, not only because he worked for the despised Romans, but because the Jews would have perceived him to be dishonest. Each tax collector was assigned to raise a certain amount of money from his particular region, and any amount he could raise above that figure was his to keep. So here is Matthew—looked down upon by some, hated by most, a pariah. And here comes Jesus saying to him, "Follow Me."

Matthew immediately left his desk and began to follow Jesus. Amazed that Jesus would reach out to a man like him, Matthew opened his heart to Jesus. We then read in the next verses how he opened his home. Immediately, he had all of his tax-collecting buddies and all of the prostitutes (the only people who would hang out with the tax collectors) over to his house to introduce them to Jesus. Seeing Jesus eating in the home of Matthew with prostitutes and tax collectors, the Pharisees were scandalized. But, of course, Jesus would begin to teach those self-righteous Pharisees that the Son of Man came to seek and save those who were lost.

It always interests me how sinners were very comfortable around Jesus as He taught them about the kingdom, about the love of the Father, and about Old Testament Scriptures. Sinners loved to be around Jesus. It was the religious people—the Pharisees and the scribes—who had such a tough time with Him that they eventually ordered Him to be crucified.

I am sometimes concerned because I find that we get too comfortable around religious people. But sinners? When they see us coming, they often run from us as fast as they can in fear that we're going to come down hard on them, preach at them, or turn our backs and walk away from them. Pray about spending a little more time with people who don't know the Lord. Share with them the things you're learning as though they are already believers. Do you know what you'll discover? Amazed that you're not judging them, they'll be attracted to Jesus just as they were in the days of Matthew. Let the Pharisees sniff and the scribes scoff, but you be like Matthew, a man who opened his heart and then his home. After opening his home, Matthew also opened his hand. A keeper of records by vocation, it's only fitting that he would grab the pen to which he was so accustomed, and use it to keep a new, important record of the teachings and deeds of Jesus, his Hero, and his Leader.

Truly, the Lord uses whatever is in one's hands presently to do His work in ministry. As God called Moses in the wilderness, He said, "Moses what's in your hand? A rod. That's what I'll use as an instrument of authority in your ministry."

"What's in your hand, David? A slingshot. Let's go get Goliath!"

"Peter, what's in your hand? A net. I will make you a fisher of men."

I think too often we wish we had other gifts, skills, or trades, and we think, "If I could only play guitar, there would be no stopping me!" But take it from one who's bought more than one guitar. It doesn't work that way, folks! Use what's in your hand right now, and the Lord will use you.

The Gospel Matthew recorded is essential. You see, if you went from Malachi to Mark, you would go from the Old Testament promises to the New Testament promises, but you would have some very great questions. "Wait a minute," you'd say. "What do I do with all of these promises in the prophets concerning the people of Israel, the apple of the Father's eye, the chosen people—the Jews? How do the promises of the kingdom—given throughout the Old Testament by God's prophets—work out?"

Matthew is a bridge-builder, spanning the gap between the Old Testament promises and the New Testament promises. How? By quoting the Old Testament constantly, much more than the other Gospel writers.

- In Matthew's Gospel, the Old Testament is quoted or alluded to 129 times.
- "The kingdom of heaven," a phrase used only by Matthew, is seen 32 times.
- The phrase, "that it might be fulfilled," used only by Matthew, appears 9 times.
- The phrase, "that which was spoken," in reference to the Old Testament, is used 14 times, only by Matthew.

What's Matthew doing? He's constantly drawing upon the Old Testament prophets and relating them to their fulfillment in a Person—Messiah—Jesus Christ. Matthew's Gospel was written primarily, though not exclusively, for the Jews.

Mark, on the other hand, written primarily to the Romans, is a very fast-moving book, only sixteen chapters long. The Roman attention span was somewhat limited, much like that of Americans. So there aren't a lot of long discourses in Mark's Gospel, not a whole lot of heavy teachings, but rather stories that catered to their "video mentality."

As Luke was written to the Greeks, and John was written to the whole world, we see each one of the Gospels has a different audience in mind. Matthew's audience was Jewish; thus, he addresses Jewish questions.

As you read through Matthew's Gospel, you will notice it does not unfold chronologically, but rather topically. There are five main sections in Matthew, each one consisting of a discourse, or body of teaching, a demonstration of how Jesus worked it out practically, and a debate with people questioning, wondering, and talking.

We'll see a discourse, a demonstration, and a debate in each of the following five sections:

- The King revealed in chapters 1 through 10, where Matthew writes about the kingdom and the King of the Jews.
- The King resisted in chapters 11 through 13, when opposition to Jesus begins to surface.
- The King retreating in chapters 14 through 20, where Jesus takes His disciples and pulls them aside to give them personal instruction.
- The King rejected in chapters 21 through 27, as the people say, "We will not have this Man to rule over us."
- And finally, the King resurrected in chapter 28.

MATTHEW

1 Because every Jewish king must have a record of his right to the throne, Matthew launches out by giving the genealogy of Jesus Christ—a genealogy so interesting that we could spend years studying it. In the interest of space, however, I will point out just one or two things in order that we can move through the first chapter of Matthew before the next millennium arrives!

Matthew 1:1

The book of the generation of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham.

Matthew begins by saying Jesus is the rightful Heir to the throne of Israel both racially and royally.

Racially, He is the Son of Abraham. In the Book of Genesis, God made a promise to Abraham that through his seed the entire world would be blessed. Paul would later say the word God used was "seed," not "seeds," and that the "Seed" was Christ Jesus.

Royally, He is the Son of David. One day David said to the prophet Nathan, "I want to build a house for God."

"Far out!" Nathan said.

But that night, the Lord spoke to Nathan, saying, "David can't build Me a temple because his hands are full of blood. He's a man of war, not a man of peace. Go tell David he can't build, but tell him this: Although he can't build Me a house, I will build him a house."

Our God has a way of tempering our disappointments with even greater blessings that we had no idea were coming, and that's exactly what happened with David. The house God built through him was the Messiah—One who will reign forever in a kingdom without end.

The Jews knew the Messiah must be of the seed of Abraham and a Son of David. Did you know there is only one Jew able to make such a claim? In A.D. 70, when the Romans sacked Jerusalem, all of the genealogical records of the Jewish people were destroyed. Thus, there is no Jew today who can claim with certainty and authority to be a Son of Abraham and a Son of David except Jesus. His genealogy recorded in this first chapter of Matthew is the only preserved genealogy that fits both requirements.

To the Jewish student, this is heavy. "You mean there is a Jew who can really trace His genealogy back to Abraham?" Yes. His name is Jesus of Nazareth. There is something in this genealogy that must have blown the mind of the Jew who studied this through. There are four women named: In verse 3, Tamar is mentioned; in verse 5, Rahab and Ruth are listed; in verse 6, we find Bathsheba.

This would be a mind-blower because, you see, Jewish men prayed this prayer daily: "God, I thank You that I was not born a Gentile, a dog, or a woman." It was a tremendously male-oriented kind of society, where women's names were never included in genealogies. What's the Lord doing? He's saying, "The kingdom I'm establishing is different from the kingdom the Jews are expecting." Paul would later write that in Christ there is neither male nor female, for Jesus is the great liberator of women (Galatians 3:28).

Study history. Wherever the gospel has been rejected, women have been treated poorly, even in sophisticated societies. Consider the Grecian culture, for example. The Greeks, perhaps the most sophisticated society in history, believed every man should have three women: a legitimate wife to bear his children, a woman to talk to so he wouldn't have to talk to his wife, and a lover to satisfy his physical needs. But wherever the gospel has gone, women have been elevated.

Because the Jews placed a high priority on family responsibility, much like the Mormons do today, Tamar's name in verse 3 would have been a real shocker to the mind of the Jewish reader. You might remember her from the thirty-eighth chapter of Genesis.

Judah, one of the twelve sons of Jacob, had three sons—Er, Onan, and Shelah. The oldest son, Er, married Tamar, and Scripture records that Er did wickedly before the Lord and was smitten, or killed. The cultural practice, which was later recorded in Deuteronomy 25, was such that if a man died and left a woman without child, the younger brother was to marry her and raise offspring in the name of the deceased brother. This happened in order that his heritage might continue and the property might be passed along. So when Er died, Onan was obligated to marry Tamar.

But Onan refused to impregnate her. Therefore, because of the hardness of his heart in saying, "I'm not going to allow her to raise children in my brother's name," the Lord smote him as well. Now Er is dead. Onan's gone, and Judah says, "I've got one son left. Do I want to give my last son to this gal? I mean, her record isn't very good." Understandably concerned as a father, he says, "Listen, Tamar, wait until Shelah gets a little bit older, and then I'll give him to you."

But the years went on, Shelah grew up, and Judah didn't keep his promise. So Tamar took matters into her own hands. She took off her widow's garments, veiled herself as a harlot, and sat beside the road Judah traveled frequently. Judah, noticing this harlot whom he hadn't seen before, approached her and sought to make a deal with her. He didn't have his wallet with him, so she said, "Give me your ring, your staff, and your bracelet, and that will do for now. You can give me the sheep you owe me later." They had sexual relations, and he left her with his ring, his bracelet, and his staff. He had no idea, of course, with whom he was dealing, since she was completely veiled.

A few months later, the news is out in the town and in the community: Tamar, the widow of Er and Onan, the daughter-in-law of Judah, has played the whore. She's pregnant. Judah said, "Let her be burned."

She answered him, "Do you know whose staff this is, whose ring this is, and whose bracelet this is?"

Judah's jaw must have dropped as he said, "Oh no! You mean that was you? I have done wrong in that I have not given you my son." Judah realized he was at fault in failing to care for his family in a way that was traditionally and customarily proper. In holding back his son, Judah had robbed Tamar of her rightful seed.

It's a sordid story to say the least. Can't you see the Lord saying, "Let's put Tamar in the genealogy for these Jews who are so proud of their male superiority and their sense of family responsibility"?

The Jews not only valued family responsibility, but they also valued sexual purity. And guess who is number two in the genealogy? A prostitute named Rahab. In the days of Joshua, when the spies came to scope out Jericho, it was Rahab who hid them and covered up for them. She is honored not only by appearing here in the genealogy of Jesus Christ, but in the listing of the Hall of Faith found in Hebrews 11. Rahab was a tremendous woman because, in spite of her limited knowledge and understanding, she risked everything, believing that the God of Israel was the True and the Living God.

Not only were the Jews concerned about family responsibility and moral purity, but the third big issue was racial superiority. So determined were they that their racial line remain free from pollution, they believed that if you, as a Jew, even accidentally brushed against a Gentile, you would have to go home immediately, take off your garments, burn them, take a bath, get dressed again, and go on your way. And guess who's in the genealogy—a Gentile, a Moabitess!

Third, Matthew draws attention to Bathsheba, referred to in verse 6 as "she that had been the wife of Uriah." To the Jews, so proud of their history and particularly of their great King David, this reminder of his affair with Bathsheba and his subsequent murder of her husband, Uriah, must have been a particularly painful one. But the inclusion of Bathsheba in this genealogy is further indication that the Holy Spirit, through the pen of Matthew, desired to shake the Jews out of their pseudo-spiritual complacency to alert them of the coming Messiah.

What does this say to me theologically? It says the stage is already set for the Lord to do a new work. "My kingdom is the kingdom of heaven, not the kingdom of the nation Israel." It's much broader than Israel. It's a whole new thing. The Lord declares, "Behold, I make all things new." But personally, it reminds me that these words should never pass from our lips again: "The Lord can't use me because I have sinned greatly, I've shirked my family responsibilities, and I've messed up my family."

The Pharisees may stick up their noses and say, "How can this be?" Let them! Know this: He does all things new, and He's included people like Rahab along with people like you and me. He's the Friend of Sinners. Your family may have had failures in the past, either thirty years ago or three minutes ago. Your morals may be questionable, you might be a Moabitess, feeling you haven't had the education theologically, or haven't been "Christianized" culturally.

So what? Join Tamar and Rahab. Join Ruth, who simply looked at Naomi and said, "Naomi, you're a child of Israel, and wherever you go, I'll go.

Your God will be my God. Your people shall be my people. And where you die, I'll die there as well. I'm going to start traveling with you."

The names go on for fifteen verses—tracing the genealogy of Jesus through Abraham and David and on down to Joseph.

Matthew 1:16

And Jacob begat Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom was born Jesus, who is called Christ.

Notice, students, that Matthew doesn't say, "And Jacob begat Joseph of whom was born Jesus," which was the wording he used in the first fifteen verses. No, he specifically breaks the order by telling us very clearly that Jacob begat Joseph (not Joseph the father of Jesus, but Joseph the husband of Mary). Joseph was not the father of Jesus, but His foster-father.

Matthew 1:17

So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

I am so grateful for the genealogy of Jesus. We can't pick our relatives, but Jesus did. He knew exactly who was going to be in His lineage before the foundation of the world. And He chose people like those listed here to give us great hope no matter who we are, no matter where we're at. I hope, if the Lord tarries, that we will saturate ourselves in the Gospel, the Good News, that Jesus takes people like Matthew the tax collector, and Mary Magdalene the streetwalker, Tamar and Rahab, David and Bathsheba. And He delights in rescuing and rebuilding them. And even after they fail yet again, as we will see in Matthew, He never gives up on them. Neither will He give up on you.

I once read an article that talked about a group of psychologists who were studying the victims of the Holocaust, including those who survived concentration camps like Auschwitz and Treblinka. They found that 40 percent of the survivors who had adjusted well and had gone on successfully in their lives versus the 60 percent who were still struggling shared one common denominator that set the world of psychology topsy-turvy. That is, the 40 percent who had adjusted well did not, when asleep, dream about their past experiences. Until this study, the traditional rap in psychology had been to follow this advice: If you want to get over your hurts, you need to dwell on, relive, and work out the past. Instead, because of what they called "the Auschwitz Studies," psychologists found that the people who were still working through the horrors of the holocaust were not doing well, while those who were healing were those who had been able to say, "That's a closed chapter in my life. That was then. This is now. I'm going on."

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

Romans 8:1

The Cross completed the work. If you're reliving the failures of yesterday, last Monday, or last month, you're missing the Good News of the gospel. The genealogy of Jesus says, "I'm doing something new." Go your way rejoicing, saint. You have been included in His family.

Matthew 1:18

Now the birth of Jesus Christ was on this wise: When as his mother Mary was espoused to Joseph, before they came together, she was found with child of the Holy Ghost.

Joseph, the foster-father of Jesus, whose genealogy has just been given to us, was espoused to Mary. What does it mean to be espoused? An espoused couple was legally considered husband and wife, although the relationship would not be consummated until the marriage festival. During the espousal period, which lasted for one year, if either one felt, "Oh, I cannot live with her," or, "I can't stand him," they could divorce each other during that time. This is the period in which Joseph and Mary are right now. It is during this time that Mary, perhaps fifteen years of age, as most scholars believe, finds herself pregnant.

Matthew 1:19

Then Joseph her husband, being a just man, and not willing to make her a publick example, was minded to put her away privily.

When Mary came to Joseph and said, "I'm pregnant," he could have charged her with immorality. But Joseph showed mercy. This is why I like Joseph. He is a moral man who stands for rightness, but he is also merciful, which is a rare combination. Most people are either moral or merciful. God, make us men like Joseph! Give us his morality, but also his mercy.

Matthew 1:20 (a)

But while he thought on these things, behold, the angel of the Lord appeared unto him in a dream . . .

Joseph was also logical, yet mystical. Scripture says, "he thought on these things." He was a thinker, but when he went to sleep, he became a dreamer. Most men are logical; however, some are overly mystical. But here's Joseph with a beautiful balance of both. I personally think Joseph should get more press during the Christmas season! He's a tremendous example of being moral, but merciful, and logical, yet mystical.

Matthew 1:20 (b)

. . . saying, Joseph, thou son of David, fear not to take unto thee Mary thy wife: for that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Ghost.

Over and over again, we men, like Joseph, need to hear this message from the Lord: "Fear not." When the women we love become wise by growing in the Lord, something is conceived in them of the Holy Ghost. Perhaps they come back from a prayer meeting and they are just elated in the Lord. Perhaps they begin a new Bible study, where they become excited about the Lord. If we are not careful, we will "think on these things" but then say, "I don't know if this is good for my wife, because she is getting a little too spiritual." And we'll begin to squirm a bit when our wives tell us that a passion for Jesus is being conceived within them because, although they don't express it and maybe haven't even articulated it, the fact remains that to some men, Jesus can be the other Man in his wife's life.

"You mean you're getting up early now and praying? When did that start?" we ask. "What about my oatmeal? You want to go to church again? We went last month!"

Somehow in women, who are oftentimes innately more spiritually sensitive than men, the Holy Spirit can begin to conceive something of Jesus. And we guys can start to fear. But the Lord would say to you and to me as husbands, "Fear not! Don't worry!" Husband, the more your wife falls in love with that other Man, the Son of Man, Jesus Christ, her capacity will expand exponentially to love you along with loving Jesus.

A couple had celebrated their golden anniversary with a big party. Presents were exchanged, and congratulations were expressed before they got in their car and drove home. When they got home, the woman made her way into the kitchen. As was her custom, she brewed some tea and took out a loaf of bread, one of which she had baked daily for years. She cut off the heel, warmed it, and buttered it for her husband before cutting another slice for herself. Then she served him the warm piece of bread.

Now this man, who had been married for fifty years, loved his wife greatly, but the stress of the day had taken its toll. He blew up and said, "Honey, I love you, and you know that, but quite frankly, this is the last straw. For more years than I can count, you have baked bread for me every day. But you always give me the heel. You always pass off that crusty piece of bread on me. I've had it! I won't take it anymore!"

She looked at him, blinked back the tears, and said, "But honey, that's my favorite piece."

She was giving him the best.

And, guys, if you want your wives to give you the best in any area, let them be expanded in the Lord. Don't fear!

Matthew 1:21 (a)

And she shall bring forth a son, and thou shalt call his name JESUS . . .

Jesus is the name of our Savior. This is His only name as far as His human name goes. Jesus is neither His first name, nor is Christ His last name. No, Jesus is His full human name, which was a common name in that day, probably the most common name in all of Israel. "Joshua" was the Hebrew form, and "Jesus" the Greek form.

We read that Christ is not His human name, but His official name. Christos is the Greek form and means "anointed." In the Old Testament, three groups of people were anointed with oil: prophets, priests, and kings. Jesus is the Prophet who came to declare the Word (Deuteronomy 18:18). He is our faithful High Priest (Hebrews 2:17). He is the King of kings (Revelation 17:14).

Matthew 1:21 (b)
. . . for he shall save his people from their sins.

Remember, Joshua was the successor of Moses, and Moses represented the Law. Because Moses could not lead the people of God into the Land of Promise, the responsibility was given to Joshua, or Jesus. It's the same name. So, too, the Law cannot bring people into the fullness of God's blessings. The Law was provided to prepare us and point out to us that we are sinners in need of a Savior who can save us from our sins and bring us into the Land of Promise.

Matthew 1:22, 23
Now all this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.

Emmanuel is Jesus' name descriptively, but it was never spoken to Him directly. You'll never read in Scripture about someone saying, "Emmanuel, come over here please." You'll hear them say, "Jesus," "Rabbi," or "Master," but never Emmanuel. This name Emmanuel is a descriptive title of the earthly ministry of Jesus Christ—God with us. Jeremiah 33:16 tells us when we see Him in the kingdom, His name will be Jehovah-Tsidkenu. When you see Jesus, you're not necessarily going to call Him "Jesus" or "Christ" or "Emmanuel," but "Jehovah-Tsidkenu" or, "The Lord Our Righteousness." This is great! When I see Jesus, I'm not going to say, "Jesus! Here I am! Aren't I wonderful?" No, I'm going to say, "Jehovah-Tsidkenu, You are my righteousness. It's not me. I have failed miserably. I botch it constantly. You are my righteousness. It's Your blood that allows me to embrace You and sit beside you. I fall at Your feet and worship You because You are my righteousness." Jesus is His human name, Christ His official name, Emmanuel His descriptive name, and Jehovah-Tsidkenu His prophetic name.

Matthew 1:24, 25

Then Joseph being raised from sleep did as the angel of the Lord had bidden him, and took unto him his wife: And knew her not till she had brought forth her firstborn son: and he called his name JESUS.

Joseph married Mary, but he refrained from having sexual relations with her until after Jesus was born. To me, this absolutely refutes the Catholic teaching that Mary was a virgin perpetually. The word here is he knew her not until she had birthed Jesus. We know that at least two of the writers of the New Testament, James and Jude, were the offspring of Joseph and Mary. Mary was not a perpetual virgin. She was, however, an extremely special lady.

Regarding the life of Mary, there are two common views: She is either exalted too greatly, as I believe the Roman Catholic Church presents her, or not honored adequately, as I believe she appears in the Protestant Church. She is a blessed lady, indeed; but it is the One who came from her, Jesus, who is truly the Blessed One.

2 If you followed the development of the Stealth Bomber, you know this aircraft, which looks like a bat, is really beautiful and quite impressive.

With a price tag of five hundred million dollars, it had better be impressive! On its maiden test flight, the Stealth circled successfully for several hours, and preliminary tests indicated it would be able to slip through even the most sophisticated radar. There was an interesting footnote regarding these tests: Where the plane flew, dogs barked. The Stealth emitted a noise the frequency of which could be detected by any garden variety German shepherd. We spend half a billion bucks on these technological wonders, and all you have to do to detect them is get yourself a dog. When you hear him bark, you'll know the Stealth's flying by!

I appreciate our country, and I'm thankful to be an American, but I don't have a lot of confidence in any human government. Not only is the political process vulnerable to corruption, but even our most advanced technology is outdated as soon as it goes into mass production.

I am relieved that the answer is not the Stealth Bomber, but Jesus Christ, our Hope. He is the solid Rock upon which we stand. What we really need in this world is not more sophisticated military technology, but for Jesus to come back personally. When He returns, Scripture says He will rule with a rod of iron. This means He's going to rule rightly and effectively with authority.

Matthew's mission is to present Jesus as such a King. The question is, if Jesus had a right to the throne of Israel, did anyone acknowledge this? It's one thing for Him to say, "I am the King, and here is My heritage." But it is something else altogether to have someone else ratify and recognize such a right. Matthew chapter 2 answers this very concern. In chapter 1, we saw the heritage of the King. Now chapter 2 shows us homage to the King paid by those who did, in fact, recognize His royalty.

Matthew 2:1

Now when Jesus was born in Bethlehem of Judaea in the days of Herod the king, behold, there came wise men from the east to Jerusalem.

Jesus was born in the days when Herod was king of Judaea. Standing only four feet four inches tall, Herod was a short man who wanted to prove he was a big guy. He became a master builder, erecting palaces, fortresses, and entire cities. He built Masada, Herod's royal citadel; aqueducts; and remodeled the temple in Jerusalem. He made monuments of great grandeur to his name and to his legacy. However, he was also a cruel and vicious individual who murdered his wife and three sons in the same evening, prompting Caesar Augustus to say, "It is safer to be Herod's pig than his son."

Well into his seventies, and realizing no one would mourn his death, Herod ordered the arrest of one hundred of the leading men of Jerusalem. He put them in prison and demanded that the moment he died, those hundred men were to be killed instantly. In his reasoning, he stated, "If the city won't mourn for me, let it mourn for those who die with me." The men were arrested, and Herod eventually died, but his final order was never carried out.

Herod was actually an Edomite, and not a Jew at all. The Edomites were the descendants of Esau. Jacob and Esau, who began warring in their mother's womb, continued their battle throughout history. This war began between the sons of Jacob—Israel versus the sons of Esau—the Edomites. And here we find them still at war in Matthew chapter 2 as a son of Esau, Herod, is trying to slaughter a Son of Jacob, Jesus.

How did Herod become king? He was a conniver who gained political influence through his dealings with Mark Antony of Cleopatra fame. A powerful person in Rome at that time, Mark Antony appointed Herod king of Judaea. This enabled Herod to become the potentate of Judaea, although in actuality, he was a puppet of Rome. It was during this period when Herod was king that the wise men, or magi, came from the East.

Matthew 2:2 (a)

Saying, Where is he that is born King of the Jews? for we have seen his star in the east . . .

Regardless of how many Christmas movies you've seen, or how many Nativity scenes you might have, there is no reason to believe there were only three wise men. There may have been three hundred. There's no way to know for sure. We do know, however, they came from the East. We know these magi were astrologers, studying the stars to determine the future. They were also interpreters of dreams. They were likely to have been residing in the area of Babylon when they saw a star and followed it, believing it to be the sign of the coming King of the Jews. What made them think this to be true? I suggest it was due to another man who resided in Babylon five hundred years prior to this who was also an interpreter of dreams.

His name? Daniel.

In the seventh chapter of the book that bears his name, Daniel wrote that "One would come, called the Ancient of Days, to rule and reign upon the earth; and that He would have everlasting dominion." In fact, Daniel gave the very date this One would ride into Jerusalem. So these wise men, these magi, were most likely very familiar with Daniel's writings, prophecies, and teachings. And no doubt they were watching for the Ancient of Days to appear.

Isn't it great the way the Lord appears to people wherever they're at? The magi studied the stars, and the Lord said, "Okay, I'll speak to them in the stars and reveal to them the true Star, the Star of Jacob, as Balaam declared Him to be in Numbers 24:17." Because the magi were into astrology, God used the stars to draw them to the Son.

Matthew 2:2 (b)

. . . and are come to worship him.

Notice the magi weren't coming to get something from Jesus. After all, He was only a baby, a toddler there in Bethlehem. Nor were they coming because of what He had done for them; for at that point, He had done nothing. They came to worship Him solely because of who He was.

Do you ever come to church saying, "Lord, I'm going to worship You because I've got this business deal coming down next week, and I need Your help," or, "I'm feeling depressed, and I know if I worship, I'll get high emotionally and spiritually"?

There are, indeed, blessings to be found in worship, but they shouldn't be our motivation to worship. Why should we worship the Lord? Because He is the King of kings, the Creator of all things, the reason for life, the destiny of life. He is the smitten Rock, the Alpha and the Omega, the Lily of the Valley, the Fairest of Ten Thousand, the Bright and Morning Star. An understanding of who Jesus is should be motivation enough for us to worship Him. For truly, "Thou art worthy O Lord, to receive glory and honour and power" (Revelation 4:11).

Matthew 2:3

When Herod the king had heard these things, he was troubled, and all Jerusalem with him.

Herod was upset because he realized there might be a true King, a Son of David, a Jew around whom the nation of Israel could rally. Herod realized he could be dethroned, Edomite that he was. But why was all Jerusalem troubled? Because Jerusalem was aware of the political ramifications of what these magi were saying. The birth of a new king introduced the possibility that the people in Israel, and perhaps those in the entire eastern world, would have someone to support and to whom they would willingly submit. Intimidated by this, Caesar would send down his legions into Jerusalem. The city would be trampled, and blood would be shed. Recognizing the makings of a revolution, those closest to Herod foresaw terrifying consequences.

Matthew 2:4–6

And when he had gathered all the chief priests and scribes of the people together, he demanded of them where Christ should be born. And they said unto him, In Bethlehem of Judaea: for thus it is written by the prophet, and thou Bethlehem, in the land of Juda, art not the least among the princes of Juda: for out of thee shall come a Governor, that shall rule my people Israel.

These scribes were aware of Micah 5:2, which said that Jesus Christ would be born in an insignificant little city five miles outside of Jerusalem. Yet, it amazes me that they didn't even bother to make the short journey to Bethlehem to see what was happening. The wise men spent months, perhaps years, traveling across the desert—spending much money and expending great energy to seek the Lord. The scribes who knew the Word wouldn't even get on their feet to see what was happening a mere five miles away. Isn't there a warning for you and me in this? Sometimes we think knowing the Scriptures is good enough. But it's doing, not merely knowing the Word, that counts. You and I can easily become like these scribes, saying, "Well, we know what is happening. We know what we should be doing, and that's good enough." No, the blessing is in doing, not just in knowing.

The scribes told Herod he would find the Christ in Bethlehem. Bethlehem today is a major disappointment for tourists because they go expecting to see something special, but when they get there, all they see is a typical Middle Eastern city.

They go into the church of the Nativity, assuming it will be awesome. But as they walk in, they see the church itself divided into three sections (Catholic, Eastern, and Russian Orthodox) because these three groups have been fighting for centuries over who should control the site. And there are objects hanging from the ceiling that look like Christmas tree ornaments in a garage sale. With church groups fighting and dusty relics hanging, no wonder Bethlehem appears to be disappointing.

But you know what? It's perfect!

You see, when Jesus was born in Bethlehem, He was born in a stable, or a cave, which was used as a stable. It wasn't the picturesque setting we often have in our minds. No doubt, it was dirty. There were cow pies on the ground and flies buzzing overhead. It had to be so. Jesus came to a real world as a real Man to help real people. And Bethlehem mirrors reality today.

Bethlehem—a very appropriate place for the Bread of Life to be born, for 'Bethlehem' means 'House of Bread.' Bethlehem was an unimpressive little city then and is an unimpressive little city still. But because Jesus was born there, more songs have been sung about, more poetry written about, more photographs taken of, more trips made to this insignificant little city than any other. Bethlehem is one of the best-known places in the world today for only one reason: Jesus was there.

And so too with you and me. Jesus comes into little people like us—people who are somewhat dusty and not at all that impressive—and He makes us great, not because of who we are, but because of whose we are. We are His.

Matthew 2:7, 8

Then Herod, when he had privily called the wise men, inquired of them diligently what time the star appeared. And he sent them to Bethlehem, and said, Go and search diligently for the young child; and when ye have found him, bring me word again, that I may come and worship him also.

"You wise guys, go ahead and find Him, and when you have located Him, come and tell me that I may go and worship Him as well." Herod said this, not because he sincerely desired to worship the Christ, but because he was determined to exalt his own position, to establish his own authority, to eliminate the Babe of Bethlehem.

Matthew 2:9–11 (a)

When they had heard the king, they departed; and, lo, the star, which they saw in the east, went before them, till it came and stood over where the young child was. When they saw the star, they rejoiced with exceeding great joy. And when they were come into the house . . .

Notice the magi came into the house, not the stable because Jesus was probably about a year and a half old by the time they made it all the way to Jerusalem. So when you set up your Nativity scene next Christmas, put your wise men four blocks away because it took them a long time to arrive!

Matthew 2:11 (b)

. . . they saw the young child with Mary his mother, and fell down, and worshipped him: and when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.

Worship is always costly. It might cost you your so-called dignity. It might cost you financially as you learn to tithe and to give. It might cost you your friends or your family. The magi came worshiping with costly gifts. Gold indicates they acknowledged Jesus as King, since gold is a metal associated with kingly rule. By bringing frankincense, the spice used by priests, the wise men not only acknowledged Jesus as a mighty King, but as a Priest. Myrrh being the spice used in burials, the wise men acknowledged Jesus would be a martyred Prophet. The three-fold office of Jesus, the Messiah, is seen in the gifts of the wise men: gold for a Mighty King, frankincense for a Ministering Priest, myrrh for a Martyred Prophet.

Matthew 2:12

And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way.

The wise men were students not only of stars but of dreams, so it was fitting that they were warned in a dream about Herod's true intentions. At Jesus' birth, Gentile magi acknowledged Him as King. At Jesus' death, Pilate, a Gentile, commanded a placard reading "King of the Jews" be posted on His Cross. Although the Jews said, "We will not have this man rule over us," and rejected His kingship, there were those who did indeed acknowledge Jesus as King.

Matthew 2:13, 14

And when they were departed, behold, the angel of the Lord appeareth to Joseph in a dream, saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and flee into Egypt, and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. When he arose, he took the young child and his mother by night, and departed into Egypt.

Evidently, Mary and Joseph used the gifts of the wise men to finance their trip to Egypt, where Jesus would be protected from Herod's wrath.

Matthew 2:15

And was there until the death of Herod: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken of the Lord by the prophet, saying, Out of Egypt have I called my son.

Egypt being a type of the world, Jesus journeyed into Egypt that He might free us from Egypt.

Matthew 2:16–18

Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, in Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her children, and would not be comforted, because they are not.

After Jesus was born and then taken safely into Egypt, Herod ordered the extermination of all male children two years old and younger. Swords flashed, mothers screamed, blood flowed in the streets, and we see the other side of the Christmas story.

Matthew 2:19

But when Herod was dead, behold, an angel of the Lord appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt.

I wish the Lord would call me to the ministry of sleeping. Four times in two chapters, the Lord spoke to Joseph in his sleep!

Matthew 2:20–23

Saying, Arise, and take the young child and his mother, and go into the land of Israel: for they are dead which sought the young child's life. And he arose, and took the young child and his mother, and came into the land of Israel. But when he heard that Archelaus did reign in Judaea in the room of his father Herod, he was afraid to go thither: notwithstanding, being warned of God in a dream, he turned aside into the parts of Galilee: And he came and dwelt in a city called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

Nazareth was not the most picturesque or prominent spot. In fact, the word Nazareth literally means "bean town" or "sprout town." We would call it "hick town" today, which is why Nathanael, upon hearing of a Messiah from Nazareth, asked, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth? Is it possible that Messiah would actually come from a place like that?"

Isaiah writes that Messiah would come forth as "a rod out of the stem of Jesse" (11:1). In other words, Messiah would come as a "sprout" out of the stem of Jesse—from "sprout town," a Sprout. Wherever you're living, or wherever you're from, remember that Jesus can relate to your situation. He chose to be a Nazarene, to be from Sprout Town, to be one of us.

BEDLAM IN BETHLEHEM

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 2:16–18

In the second chapter of Matthew, we come, of course, to the birth of the King of kings, Jesus Christ.

> Thus saith the LORD; A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping; Rachel weeping for her children refused to be comforted for her children, because they were not.
> Jeremiah 31:15

> Then Herod, when he saw that he was mocked of the wise men, was exceeding wroth, and sent forth, and slew all the children that were in Bethlehem, and in all the coasts thereof, from two years old and under, according to the time which he had diligently inquired of the wise men. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, in Rama was there a voice heard, lamentation, and weeping, and great mourning, Rachel weeping for her chil dren, and would not be comforted, because they are not.
> Matthew 2:16–18

When the Babylonians invaded Judah in 586 B.C. and carried the Jews captive into Babylon, Jeremiah 40 tells us that the deportation headquarters were in Ramah, a city five miles north of Bethlehem. Inspired by the Spirit, Matthew refers to that event as a picture of its ultimate fulfillment here in the story of the Nativity, six hundred years later. For once again there was weeping in Ramah, as Rachel—the mothers of Israel—wept for the children a crazed Herod had ordered annihilated in his attempt to kill the Christ Child.

"Peace on earth, goodwill towards men" was sung by the angels in the heavens on the night of Jesus' birth. But there's another side to the Christmas story. No longer, "O Little town of Bethlehem, how still we see thee lie," but "O little town of Bethlehem, how deep we hear thy cry."

Soldiers marching in the streets replaced shepherds running through the streets. And piercing swords replaced "Peace on earth" when a Silent Night became a screaming night.

Picture yourself there, mothers. Roman soldiers marching through your town, grabbing your children, piercing swords through their hearts or decapitating them, while you scream and lament without help and without hope. That's the other side of Christmas, for the Babe of Bethlehem brought bloodshed to Bethlehem, fulfilling the prophecy of Jeremiah 31:15 concerning weeping and lamentation, sorrow and suffering. No wonder in Matthew 10, Jesus gives us these words concerning His ministry:

> Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me. And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.
> Matthew 10:34–38

The coming of Christ still causes pain. When you open up your heart to the Babe of Bethlehem, understand that pain and separation are sure to follow.

> And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets; and he called them. And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him.
> Matthew 4:21, 22

You who give your lives to Jesus Christ, know this: It may result in a division among family. I'm not talking about leaving them physically, but about the pain of their inability to understand where you're at or what you're doing. Many parents would rather have their children smoke pot than come to church. "You're not becoming a Jesus freak, are you?" they say. "Anything but that!" There will be a division among friends. The sword comes, and suddenly, the group you hung out with is no longer so inclined to include you in their plans. "Oh, you used to be so much fun," they'll say. "What happened?"

There will also be a division among the flesh. If you are truly sincere about following this Babe of Bethlehem, the flesh must die. And the flesh doesn't die easily. It screams and cries, "Satisfy me." But you who are serious must say, "The sword has come. I will no longer give in to my fleshly impulses and desires. I will not be dominated by my flesh and by the sins of society."

> The story is told that in the first century, when Hadrian, emperor of Rome, waged war against the Christians in the empire, a group of forty believers gathered to worship. Soldiers surrounded them and said, "Upon order of the emperor, your worship of this so-called King of the Jews must cease immediately, or you will be executed."
> "Do what you will," answered the forty, "even if it costs our lives."
>
> So the Roman soldiers took them into a mountainous region. It was wintertime, and the small lake in the area was completely frozen over. The captain of the guard said, "Here is one more opportunity for you to deny Jesus Christ—or we will place you on that lake all night until your bodies freeze."
> "It is better to freeze for a night than to burn in hell for eternity," answered the brave believers.
>
> So the forty believers took their places on the ice. With teeth chattering and knees knocking, they sang "Forty Brave Soldiers for Christ" as the Romans looked on and mocked them. Occasionally, the captain would call out, "Come to your senses, men. Deny Jesus just for a moment. Come and be warmed by the fire and be saved." But the believers would not budge, and kept singing "Forty Brave Soldiers for Christ, forty Brave Soldiers for Christ." After an hour or so, one Christian stood up, able to endure the pain no longer. He ran toward the soldiers, saying, "I deny Jesus the Christ." And he was welcomed to be warmed by the fire. He couldn't pay the price, and he turned his back on the Babe of Bethlehem.

What about you? What would happen if suddenly you were absolutely forbidden to name the Name of Jesus Christ? Would you be willing to suffer, to be tortured, or to die?

> Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword.
> Matthew 10:34

> Remember the word that I said unto you, The servant is not greater than his lord. If they have persecuted me, they will also persecute you; if they have kept my saying, they will keep yours also.
> John 15:20

> Thus saith the LORD; A voice was heard in Ramah, lamentation, and bitter weeping . . .
> Jeremiah 31:15 (a)

But wait! There's an asterisk, a footnote we must consider. You see, the Jews knew that even as Jeremiah wept over a nation about to be destroyed, he also gave Israel a hope imbedded in chapters 30—33.

> Thus saith the LORD; Refrain thy voice from weeping, and thine eyes from tears: for thy work shall be rewarded, saith the LORD; and they shall come again from the land of the enemy. And there is hope in thine end, saith the LORD, that thy children shall come again to their own border.
> Jeremiah 31:16, 17

"Don't cry," says the Lord. "I hear the weeping that is going on in Israel, but you don't see what's coming. Refrain from your crying. Your children shall return—stronger than ever. The nation shall survive, and it shall prosper. The kingdom shall be established. The desert shall blossom. And you will have peace and prosperity unlike any other nation in the history of the world."

And I say the same thing to you this day. Yes, sometimes following the Savior means sword, suffering, and sorrow. Yes, there is a cost. Yes, it can mean difficulties. But I also say, "Refrain from your weeping because the blessings to come are even greater."

You who have felt forsaken by your family because they think you're a fanatic, know this: You have a new family that is eternal—a family with the same values and heart and priorities as yours; brothers and sisters who care about you, older brothers and sisters who will be fathers and mothers to you. This is the meaning behind the dialogue in Mark 10.

> Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.
> Mark 10:28–30

A hundred fold? How can that be? This is how: If my house burned down today, I know there are a hundred people who would take us in—at least for a while! In my church family, I have a hundred houses. I have land. I have brothers. I have friends, sisters, and mothers. This is much better than me just having my own little trip. I have something much bigger. It's called the family of God.

Your Friend will be faithful. If my friends forsake me, so be it. I have exchanged friends who are fickle for a Friend who will never fail me—even when I fail Him. Jesus called Judas "friend" even in the moment of betrayal. That's the kind of Friend I want.

Your flesh? Let it die.

> He that findeth his life shall lose it: and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

What good could you do dying, you ask? Remember the forty believers on the lake in northern Italy? After one of their brothers left and turned away, they still sang, only they changed their song to, "Thirty-nine Brave Soldiers for Christ." One of the Roman soldiers observing this scene was so moved that he ran out upon the lake and said, "No. Forty Brave Soldiers for Christ. Forty Brave Soldiers for Christ."

If you live for your family, your friends, or your flesh, you'll lose everything. But if you give up your life and say, "Lord, I'm following You. I'm dying to self. Let the sword strike where it will," you'll find life. That's the irony of Christianity: The more you die, the more you live. Follow the Babe of Bethlehem. Yes, there will be weeping; yes, there will be sorrow. That's what Jeremiah 31:15 prophesied. But don't forget verse 16. Good things are coming. You who have paid the price and taken up the Cross, refrain from weeping. There can be hurts and sorrows, but the blessings you have presently and those that lie ahead are oh so much greater.

They really are!

3 For four hundred years, the Jews had not heard a single prophet calling to them in the name of the Lord. Then, seemingly out of nowhere, came John.

Matthew 3:1–4

In those days came John the Baptist, preaching in the wilderness of Judaea, and saying, Repent ye: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand. For this is he that was spoken of by the prophet Esaias, saying, The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight. And the same John had his raiment of camel's hair, and a leathern girdle about his loins; and his meat was locusts and wild honey.

John preached in the wilderness, which was appropriate because Israel was going through dry, desert times spiritually. He came on the scene wearing not the fine flowing robes of the priests in all their glory, but camel's hair—the equivalent of torn Levi's—big leather belt around his waist, grasshopper legs hanging out of his mouth.

Matthew 3:5, 6

Then went out to him Jerusalem, and all Judaea, and all the region round about Jordan, And were baptized of him in Jordan, confessing their sins.

Fearlessly and boldly John said, "Repent! Change direction. The kingdom is at hand. Get ready. The time is now!"

> Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist . . .
> Matthew 11:11 (a)

No wonder Jesus said of all those born of women, John was the greatest. People came from miles and miles, in those days no small feat, to hear him, sensing he spoke with accuracy and authority. But catch this—Jesus went on to say,

> . . . notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.
>
> Matthew 11:11 (b)

Do you know whom Jesus is talking about? He's talking about you. Jesus said you're greater than John with all of his power and authority. Why? Because you have seen things John couldn't.

John would later question and wonder, "If You are truly the Messiah, Jesus, why don't You do something to establish Your authority?" John struggled and stumbled and didn't see things all that clearly. You do. You understand Jesus came as the Suffering Savior before He will come again as the Conquering King. The Lord has placed you in His kingdom, and Jesus Himself said the least in the kingdom is greater than this greatest of prophets.

What a privilege! I feel so honored that God would place us in this era and include us in His kingdom. He could have had us born centuries before Christ and made us great prophets calling down fire from heaven, raising the dead, healing the lepers. Instead, He said, "I'm going to do something greater. They're going to be part of My church."

Matthew 3:7

But when he saw many of the Pharisees and Sadducees come to his baptism, he said unto them, O generation of vipers, who hath warned you to flee from the wrath to come?

Now, I don't believe John was giving a word of condemnation here, but rather a word of surprise. Amazed, he asked, "Oh, generation of snakes. Who has brought you here, you proud legalists and you liberal intellectuals?" I can even hear a chuckle in John's voice as he said this.

Matthew 3:8

Bring forth therefore fruits meet for repentance.

"It's not simply a matter of getting dunked," John warned. "It's a way of living. If your repentance is sincere, fruit will be produced in your life."

Matthew 3:9–12

And think not to say within yourselves, We have Abraham to our father: for I say unto you, that God is able of these stones to raise up children unto Abraham. And now also the axe is laid unto the root of the trees: therefore every tree which bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. I indeed baptize you with water unto repentance: but he that cometh after me is mightier than I, whose shoes I am not worthy to bear: he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost, and with fire: Whose fan is in his hand, and he will thoroughly purge his floor, and gather his wheat into the garner; but he will burn up the chaff with unquenchable fire.

Many people want the power of the Spirit, but they are not interested in the fire, the purity. Acts chapter 8 tells of a man named Simon, a sorcerer, or magi in Greek, who performed tricks before the people. When he saw the power of the Holy Spirit dispatched by the disciples, and when he saw people getting filled with the Holy Ghost, he approached Peter and said, "Could I buy that trick from you? Here's some money, tell me how you do that!"

Peter answered Simon, "I perceive you are in the gall of bitterness and in bondage to iniquity," as he gave him a very stern rebuke and a serious warning.

I sense there are still those two kinds of wise men: the wise, wise men and the foolish, wise men. Some come to worship Jesus solely because of who He is. Others say, "I want the power to hold people captivated and spellbound." But the baptism of Jesus in the Spirit is a baptism of fire—which speaks of purity. It's a dying to self, a cleansing of motives. Many folks want that power, but they don't want a changed lifestyle.

Matthew 3:13–17

Then cometh Jesus from Galilee to Jordan unto John, to be baptized of him. But John forbad him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfil all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway out of the water: and, lo, the heavens were opened unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove, and lighting upon him: And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

In this passage, we see a perfect picture of the Trinity—the Holy Spirit descending upon the Son, while the voice of the Father is heard. The Trinity had been hinted at throughout the Old Testament, beginning with the first verse.

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth.

The Hebrew word translated "God" is "Elohim." "El" is the singular form of the word; "Elohim" is the plural form. Here in the baptism of Jesus, the Trinity is not only alluded to linguistically, but illustrated physically—the Son baptized, the Spirit descending, and the Father speaking. We see it, yet it is a great mystery. There are not three Gods. There is one God, one God in three Persons. How can this be?

Saint Patrick was one who tried to illustrate this idea in nature. He used the shamrock as a picture of the Trinity—three leaves, but one shamrock.

Others have said, "Look at man—body, soul, and spirit. One man can be father, son, and brother, yet he is still just one person."

Still others have said, "Look at water. It can be liquid, solid, or gas." And scientists tell us that at absolute zero degrees, for a split second, water can be all three at once.

Countless examples have been used throughout history in an attempt to explain the idea of three in one, the concept of the Trinity. Why is the Trinity such an important concept? I struggled for many years with this question.

"Lord, why three?" I asked. "Why didn't You keep it real simple and avoid this confusing Trinity concept? We are accused of being polytheistic. We're confused in our prayers. We get all tangled up. Why didn't You keep it simple, just You, just One?"

In recent years, however, I have come into an understanding of the Trinity, which for me personally has made all the difference. God the Father, God the Son, and God the Spirit dwelled together in ages past—a billion years before years even began—perfectly content. The Father loved the Son. The Son honored the Father. The three of Them dwelled together in complete harmony, in total satisfaction. They are, and always will be, family. But they're only One.

What does this mean? Contrary to much of today's teaching, it means God didn't need me. God went through billions and zillions of years without man. And you know what? He got along just fine. He doesn't need us, folks. So great is God's love that He gave His only Son to die and plunge into hell in order to redeem you. He's in love with you to be sure, but He doesn't need you. And that takes all of the pressure off because when love is demanding, it isn't love.

- "I need you. I must have you."
- "Where have you been? Who were you talking to?"
- "Where are you going? Who are you going with? Can I come?"

When love is not "trinitarian" in nature, it becomes smothering and restrictive. It causes tension and anxieties, and you feel caged in and cooped up.

Many of us erroneously picture God wringing His hands, pacing the clouds, worried about whether we're going to make it. He's not. He's very happy, totally fulfilled, and perfectly content. Yet He is so magnanimous and expansive that He has chosen to create us, love us, and walk with us. It's not a demand. It's not a need. It's an invitation.

How this blesses me! "You didn't need me, Lord. You don't need me now. But You still love me. You still want me to live with You forever. Wow!"

> Come unto me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me; for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find rest unto your souls.
> Matthew 11:28, 29

There is One who loves you, who is not uptight about you, or burdensome upon you. He is meek and lowly. And the mystery of the Trinity gives me rest in my love relationship with Him.

THE BAPTISM OF JESUS

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 3:13–17

Because John's mother and Jesus' mother were cousins, John knew Jesus quite well. And although he did not yet understand that his second cousin was the promised Messiah, he knew Jesus was without sin. That is why, in the midst of baptizing others, John was suddenly aware of his own sinfulness when Jesus approached him.

"There's no fault in you," declared John. "You should be baptizing me."

But Jesus immediately said, "Allow it to be so, for in so doing, we will fulfill all righteousness. It's the right thing to do." Why? If baptism was a sign of repentance, why would Jesus, who was sinless, say, "It's important for Me to be baptized by you"?

I suggest four reasons for your consideration.

1. Jesus' Baptism Was an Affirmation of John's Ministry

In joining the masses and coming to the Jordan to be baptized, Jesus was saying, "Even though John knows he's a sinner, even though John is aware of his inadequacies, I approve of his service for Me. And his message of repentance is a valid one." When Jesus began His public preaching, repentance was His message as well. In coming to the Jordan, Jesus was affirming John's ministry—both the man and the message.

2. Jesus' Baptism Is an Identification with Us Personally

He who knew no sin took our sin, died for us, and identifies with us in baptism. Jesus was immersed, and so are we. Consequently, there is an identification and a bonding.

3. Jesus' Baptism Was a Declaration to His Father Prophetically

In submission to the Father's plan, Jesus came to die. Romans 6 teaches that baptism is a picture of death and burial. In baptism, Jesus was saying, "I know I have come to die. And, Father, I am submitted to that plan of death and burial." But because baptism doesn't end in the water, because He was pulled out again, which speaks of resurrection, Jesus also declared this to His Father, "Yes, I am submitted to Your plan—I will die. But I will also rise again through Your power."

4. Jesus' Baptism Is an Illustration of the Trinity

After Jesus came out of the water, the Holy Spirit descended upon Him in the form of a dove, and the voice of the Father was heard from the heavens.

The baptism of Jesus was an affirmation of John's ministry, an identification with us personally, a declaration to the Father prophetically, and an illustration of the Trinity practically.

When I read of Jesus' baptism, my mind goes back about twenty-three hundred years earlier to the story of a man whose name means "Comforter." You know him by the name of Noah. Noah was surrounded by a world that was corrupt and defiled. But Scripture tells us that Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord. And God told Noah, "I'm going to drown this corrupt, wicked world. I'm going to be merciful."

Merciful? Yes.

In sending the Flood, God was doing quickly and mercifully what man was doing slowly and painfully. Noah's society, immersed in the occult and caught up in perversion, was destroying itself. So God sent the Flood. For forty days it rained, and the world was drowned. At the end of forty days, the rain stopped, and Noah let out a raven and a dove. The raven, a scavenger, had plenty to pick on. Carcasses were everywhere, so the raven didn't come back. But the dove, a bird of purity, circled, and finding no place to set her foot, came back and landed on Noah.

The picture is incredible to me. A man called Comfort, surrounded by water, in which the polluted world has been drowned, and the dove comes upon him. Could this have registered in the minds of those who observed the baptism of Jesus? It certainly does for me, and through it, I understand something of the significance of baptism—a dying to the world around us and a resurrection to newness of life as Paul declared in Romans 6:4.

I am not stretching the analogy, because in 1 Peter 3:21, Peter writes that Noah and the Flood are a picture of baptism. But wait—there was another man who was submerged in water, baptized radically, whose name literally means "dove." You know him by his more familiar name of Jonah. Jonah was rebelling against the Lord when he went through a most interesting baptism. He wasn't only immersed in water. He was thrown in! For three days, he was at the bottom of the sea in the belly of a great fish, where he was broken as he cried out to God and repented from his sin. And suddenly, he was resurrected as the whale had the "urge to re-gurge" him on the beach at Assyria.

Jonah's baptism was not a drowning of the world around him. It was a drowning of the rebellion and selfishness within him. Jonah had his own agenda, but through his baptism, he surrendered it. That's also what baptism is about. Not only are you dying to the world that surrounds you, but to the selfishness within you. Baptism says, "Lord, I will go wherever You lead. Do whatever You desire. Whatever that might mean, I trust You. You are my God and my King."

You might be saying, "This is all very fine theoretically. But I was baptized six months ago, or six years ago, or sixty years ago, and I have failed miserably."

So did Noah. After emerging from the ark, Noah got drunk and exposed himself in a manner that caused a problem in his sons felt to this day. The sinfulness that should have been eradicated from Noah's world resurfaced when he was drunk in his tent.

What about Jonah? Jonah preached, and the greatest revival in history took place as the entire city of Ninevah turned to the Lord. Yet what did Jonah do? He went up on a hillside and pouted, angry because four hundred thousand Ninevites got saved. He failed miserably because the selfishness that should have been drowned in the belly of the whale re-emerged.

During Noah's baptism, it rained for forty days. After Jonah's baptism, he emerged and preached, "forty days until Ninevah is destroyed." Following Jesus' baptism, He was led into the wilderness for forty days. Although all three had times of trial, only One emerged victorious. Only One made it successfully. Only One was baptized and moved on to total and complete victory. Was it Jonah, the great prophet? No. Noah, the man of faith? No. Only Jesus.

Jesus, in His forty-day temptation, overcame Satan. He didn't fail. And because of His victory, baptism not only says, "I am dying to the sin around me, and I am dying to the sin within me," but most importantly, it says, "I believe in the One who died for me."

You see, gang, when you are baptized, it doesn't mean you are going to be perfect from that point on. It means you acknowledge that you are perfectly forgiven and perfectly loved, that Jesus Christ paid the price for every sin you ever have done, are doing, or will ever do. The One who was baptized and was victorious through those forty days of trial and testing is now living in you.

Thus Paul writes,

> I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.
> Galatians 2:20

That's the gospel—Jesus Christ victorious, living in me. I don't know when you were baptized, but I encourage you to reaffirm your baptism in your own heart. Be like Noah. Watch the world drown, and rise above it. Be like Jonah. Die to your selfishness, and walk in newness of life. And if you have failed like Noah did, like Jonah did, like we all have, know this: Jesus is your Victory. He who knew no sin became sin for you. You are perfectly forgiven. Enjoy your salvation, and live to that calling.

4 Chapter 3 closed with the account of the water baptism of Jesus Christ. Indeed, this was when He was baptized in the Holy Spirit as well, for although Jesus had been conceived by the Spirit, and had the Spirit residing within Him, at the time of His water baptism, the Spirit came upon Him to empower Him for ministry. This was a crucial moment in the life of Jesus, and I believe we need to experience such a moment in our lives if we want to minister and serve effectively. How? Simply by saying, "I need to be filled with Your Spirit, Lord. I need Your Spirit to come upon me, to empower me." And in faith we receive it at that time. Then we move on to minister effectively, for it is truly "not by might, nor by power, but by my spirit, saith the LORD of hosts" (Zechariah 4:6).

So here is Jesus. The Holy Spirit has come upon Him. He has heard a voice from heaven, and no doubt, He must have been on a real high. Then chapter 4 begins.

Matthew 4:1

Then was Jesus led up of the Spirit into the wilderness to be tempted of the devil.

It is often true that after the blessings come the battles. On the heels of His baptism, the Spirit led Jesus into the wilderness, where He would encounter the enemy.

Matthew 4:2 (a)
And when he had fasted forty days and forty nights . . .

Fasting for forty days was not unknown to those who studied the Scriptures and to the people of Israel familiar with their history. Exodus 34:28 says when Moses was given the Law on Mount Horeb, he neither ate nor drank for forty days. In 1 Kings 19, we read Elijah also fasted for forty days after the Lord sent an angel who gave him a certain kind of food that was able to sustain him for that period of time. Moses and Elijah both fasted forty days. Jesus fasted forty days, and later in Matthew's account, we will see how we are to act when we fast as well.

We live in a society addicted not only to alcohol and lust, but to all sorts of things. I suggest to you the reason could be because, as a society, we have ignored the simple principle of fasting, of saying no to the appetites of our bodies on a regular basis. If you feel an addictive pull in some area of your life, try saying no to your stomach's demands for a meal for a day or a week. When you deny the physical to concentrate on the spiritual, a dynamic occurs that I believe will very definitely help you overcome evil.

Matthew 4:2 (b)
. . . he was afterward an hungred.

After forty days in the wilderness seeking His Father and denying His flesh, Jesus was hungry. Physiologists tell us that when one fasts for that length of time, he loses his appetite completely. His hunger returns only when he is on the verge of death. Therefore, at this point, in His fortieth day, Jesus was literally starving to death. Physically, His body systems were crying out, and He was about to die if not nourished soon. It was at this point that Satan came to tempt Him. Now before we consider the temptation of Jesus, I want you to remember that it was the Spirit who led Him into the wilderness. Why would the Spirit lead Jesus into the place where temptation was certain? I believe there are two reasons, both important for us to understand.

Jesus was led into the wilderness to reveal who He is. First Corinthians 15:45 declares that Jesus is the last Adam. I am reminded of the first Adam in the Garden of Eden who was also tempted directly by Satan.

> The first Adam was in a beautiful garden. The last Adam was in a barren, forsaken desert. The first Adam ate freely of things except one forbidden fruit. The last Adam ate nothing for forty days. The first Adam was physically strong. The last Adam was on the verge of death. The first Adam blew it. He was the ultimate "Adam Bomb." He gave in to the temptation of Satan and thereby plunged all of humanity into a lost and hopeless situation. The last Adam, Jesus Christ, did not bomb out. He came through, and in so doing, He reveals to us who He is, the One who conquered sin.

Jesus was led into the wilderness not only to reveal to us who He is, but also to relate to us as we are. The Book of Hebrews puts it this way:

> Wherefore in all things it behoved him to be made like unto his brethren, that he might be a merciful and faithful high priest in things pertaining to God, to make reconciliation for the sins of the people. For in that he himself hath suffered being tempted, he is able to succour them that are tempted. For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin.
> Hebrews 2:17, 18; 4:15

No matter what sin you're struggling with, no matter what temptation seems to attack you constantly, Jesus is a merciful High Priest who prays for you effectively because He feels with you sympathetically. He is not shocked by your sin, for according to Hebrews 4:15, He has been tempted in all points as we are—and "all" in Greek means all. As our compassionate High Priest, Jesus says, "I understand why you are so critical or negative, lustful or cynical, hateful or vengeful, lazy or slothful." He understands because He was tempted in all points as we are—yet without sin. He became like us that He might relate to us, and be strength for us in time of temptation.

Matthew 4:3

And when the tempter came to him, he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread.

In the wilderness, there are multiplied millions of round limestone rocks that look remarkably like little loaves of bread. No doubt, as Jesus fasted, those rocks must have taken on the appearance of bread. And now Satan comes to Him and says, "If You're the Son of God, turn these stones into bread."

What is the Enemy doing here? He's questioning the Father's provision. During Jesus' baptism, God identified Him as His beloved Son. Now Satan comes on the scene, challenging the very words God had spoken, saying, "If You really are the Son of God, why are You hungry? If You are the Son of God, why is this happening?"

Satan does the same thing in your life and mine when he comes to us and says, "If you are a child of God, where's the Father's provision? Why are those bills piling up? Why is there a lack in your life physically or materially?"

He comes to us and whispers in our ears, "Do something in your own power. Exercise your faith. Make it happen now." But God would have us be patient. We are His children. And He promises He will meet our needs as we pray for our daily bread. Most of us want to reach the Promised Land without ever going through the wilderness. We want to get there immediately, but the Father says, "No. There's a time of preparation. Wait. Don't panic. I will provide."

Like the man who prayed, "Lord, is it true that to You a million years is like a second?"

"Yes," the Lord answered.

"Wow. Is it also true that a million dollars is like a penny?"

"Yes."

"Well, Father, could I have a penny?"
"Sure. Just a second."

We need to realize the Lord's timing is different from ours. Jesus knew this. He would not push or rush the Father by taking things into His own hands. He would wait. And soon—perhaps only hours later—angels would come to Him. Instead of eating dry little loaves of bread, He would dine on angel food cake! How often I settle for bread because I try to do things in my own energy instead of waiting for the Father's perfect timing and the angel food cake.

Matthew 4:4

But he answered and said, It is written, Man shall not live by bread alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

"The issue," Jesus said, "is not the material realm. More important than physical food is the spiritual food I find in God's Word." Jesus said that it's not the material realm that is important. Man shall not live by bread alone. For you who are involved in the argument over inspiration of Scripture, please note that Jesus quoted Deuteronomy and said, "every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God" (8:3). It's not just the thoughts that are inspired. Jesus quoted Deuteronomy and declared that every word proceeds out of the mouth of God and is inspired by God. Every word is God-breathed.

Matthew 4:5, 6

Then the devil taketh him up into the holy city, and setteth him on a pinnacle of the temple, and saith unto him, If thou be the Son of God, cast thyself down: for it is written, He shall give his angels charge concerning thee: and in their hands they shall bear thee up, lest at any time thou dash thy foot against a stone.

Quoting Psalm 91, verses 11 and 12, Satan now questions the Father's protection. "Do You believe Your Father will really protect You, Jesus? Prove it. Prove it to Yourself, prove it to me, and prove it to all of Israel. Go to the pinnacle of the temple and jump down. Doesn't Psalm 91 declare that God will give His angels charge over You to keep You from even stubbing Your toe?"

Satan quotes Scripture, but always omits a phrase or two in the process. Psalm 91, verse 11 actually says, "For he shall give his angels charge over thee, to keep thee in all thy ways"—in all God's ways. Jesus knew this and answered accordingly.

Matthew 4:7

Jesus said unto him, It is written again, Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God.

"The Father will provide for Me, and the Father will protect Me, but I'm not going to test Him in order to satisfy you or anyone else. Scripture says, Satan, that I am not to test God."

Don't take Scripture out of context. Don't test God. If you lie on the freeway saying, "I'm going to prove right now that God is with me and that He will keep me," He'll keep you, all right—in heaven!

Don't tempt the Lord. Don't say, "I wonder how far I can go and not get hurt. I wonder how much I can be like the world without really being in the world." Don't do it. Don't jump off the temple to prove your spirituality, your liberty, or your maturity. Jesus said, "I'm not going to give in to this temptation. I know My Father is with Me. I know He will protect Me. I don't have to prove it."

Matthew 4:8–10

Again, the devil taketh him up into an exceeding high mountain, and sheweth him all the kingdoms of the world, and the glory of them; and saith unto him, All these things will I give thee, if thou wilt fall down and worship me. Then saith Jesus unto him, Get thee hence, Satan: for it is written, Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve.

Lastly, Satan questions the Father's promise. The Father had promised all things to His Son. But Satan came to Jesus saying, "The world is mine to give You if You worship me."

How did Satan gain control of the world? Originally, God gave man dominion over the earth, but when Adam sinned in the Garden of Eden, he turned the title deed of planet earth over to Satan. Satan, therefore, had the right to say to Jesus, "I'll give You the whole world right now. You don't have to go the way of the Cross. It isn't necessary for You to plunge into hell. I'll give the world to You if You'll simply fall down and worship me. Take a shortcut! The promise of the Father? Who knows when it will be fulfilled or even if it will be fulfilled. Fall down, and You can have it all now!"

And God promises to you, single brother, that He is going to bless you. He whispers the promise in your heart that at the right time, He is going to send someone with whom you can walk in the way of the Lord. But Satan comes to you and says, "Are you sure that promise is going to come to pass? Let me give it to you now. Oh, I know she isn't a Christian, but you can influence her in the right direction. She'll go to church with you. No big deal. It'll be fine."

Satan comes to us and begins to question whether we can trust the Father's promise that if we delight ourselves in Him, He will give us the desires of our heart. "Why are you hungry? Where is your Father's provision?" He says. "Jump! Or do you doubt your Father's protection? Make it happen now! Don't wait for your Father's promise."

If you analyze the temptations that come your way, I think you will find every one will fall into one of these three categories: you will be tempted to deny the Father's provision, to doubt the Father's protection, or to despair of the Father's promise.

Matthew 4:11

Then the devil leaveth him, and, behold, angels came and ministered unto him.

How did Jesus overcome Satan? First, He quoted Scripture. Whether He was dealing with questions of provision, protection, or promise, in all three cases, Jesus quoted Scripture. This encourages me because I can do the same thing. When the Enemy attacks, I can quote Scripture. So can you! You can do exactly what Jesus did. If you don't have one, I recommend The Jesus

Person Pocket Promise Book, which contains eight hundred promises from the Word, written in categories to fit every situation. Eight hundred promises for you to utilize when the Enemy says, "The Father is not providing for you. He's not really going to protect you. That promise is not meant for you."

Quote Scripture. But notice when Jesus said, "Man shall not live by bread alone," He was saying, "I am not going to live by bread alone. The material realm is not going to have priority for Me." When He said, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord thy God," He was saying, "I am not going to do it because the Word forbids it." When He said, "Thou shalt worship the Lord thy God, and him only shalt thou serve," He was saying, "I will serve My Father and Him alone."

Many Christians are under the mistaken impression that by simply quoting Scripture, Satan is going to run away. But Satan himself can quote Scripture. So can the demons. The power lies in submission to the Word, not in recitation of it. Satan flees when he hears us say, "I will do it," not, "I can quote it."

Notice the three Scriptures quoted are all from Deuteronomy 6 and 8—a relatively small portion of Scripture. Personally, I believe Jesus was having His devotions in that particular passage when the temptations came His way. Meditating upon the Word of God is crucial because Satan comes to me when I least expect him. He doesn't say, "Jon, I'm going to meet you in three days. Get ready." No, he watches and waits until he sees I am in a place of weakness, frustration, tension, fatigue, or transition, and—boom!—he'll strike. Ephesians 6 says the Word of God is the Sword of the Spirit. Learn the Word. Meditate upon the Word. Stay in the Word. And like Jesus, in submission to the Word, you'll beat back the Enemy.

Matthew 4:12

Now when Jesus had heard that John was cast into prison, he departed into Galilee. . . .

Galilee, located in northern Israel, was a province comprised of two hundred four villages and over fifteen thousand people. It was called "Region of Death" by the Jews in Jerusalem because, throughout Israel's history, the Gentiles would constantly wage war in this area. Consequently, there were many mixed marriages and a great deal of Gentile influence within Galilee. The "cool" Jews went to Jerusalem. Jesus said, "I'm going to Galilee where all the outcasts are—the people who are looked down on, the people who have funny accents—that's where I'll be."

Matthew 4:13

And leaving Nazareth, he came and dwelt in Capernaum, which is upon the sea coast, in the borders of Zabulon and Nephthalim.

I don't blame the Lord for making His headquarters in Capernaum! Nestled on the edge of the Sea of Galilee, it's a beautiful beach town.

Matthew 4:14–16

That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, The land of Zabulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles; the people which sat in darkness saw great light; and to them which sat in the region and shadow of death light is sprung up.

Jesus set up His headquarters among those who were sitting in a darkened region, in the midst of the ones who were looked down upon by their countrymen. The same is still true today. Jesus looks for those who feel unworthy, on the periphery, in the dark. The person who feels most out of it is the one within whom Jesus is most ready to set up His headquarters.

Matthew 4:17

From that time Jesus began to preach, and to say, Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand.

The phrase "the kingdom of heaven" appears thirty-two times in Matthew's Gospel, while "the kingdom of God" is used only five times. Since the two phrases are basically interchangeable, why would Matthew be the only one to use "the kingdom of heaven," while Mark, Luke, and John refer to the "kingdom of God"? The reason is because the Jewish people were looking for a literal, physical, temporal, material kingdom based in Israel. In writing about "the kingdom of heaven," Matthew is saying, "Jesus talked not about a physical kingdom, but a spiritual kingdom—the kingdom of heaven. It's bigger than just you Jews. It's larger in scope and entirely different in substance."

Matthew 4:18–22

And Jesus, walking by the sea of Galilee, saw two brethren, Simon called Peter, and Andrew his brother, casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And he saith unto them, Follow me, and I will make you fishers of men. And they straightway left their nets, and followed him. And going on from thence, he saw other two brethren, James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, in a ship with Zebedee their father, mending their nets; and he called them. And they immediately left the ship and their father, and followed him.

Here we see the call of James, John, Peter, and Andrew. We know from John's Gospel that at this point, these men already knew Jesus. Here, however, He is calling them into ministry.

"Follow Me," Jesus said. He didn't say, "Take a course in evangelism." He didn't say, "Study this book, go to this seminar, or practice this technique." He said, "If you hang out with Me, I'm going to be changing you, and inevitably you'll become like Me—a fisher of men."

Notice what Peter was doing when he was called. He was casting his net into the sea because Peter was bold and evangelistic in orientation. On the Day of Pentecost, it was Peter who preached. As a result, three thousand were saved—"caught up" in his glorious net of the gospel. John, on the other hand, wasn't casting nets, but mending them when Jesus called him. John, who would later become known as the "apostle of love," would go on to write epistles that would mend the church and mend people. I believe the Holy Spirit inspired these vignettes to illustrate how the disciples' eventual ministries were already seen in what they were doing naturally. God has a way of turning the natural into the supernatural through His grace and for His glory.

Matthew 4:23

And Jesus went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing all manner of sickness and all manner of disease among the people.

Note the order: teaching first, then preaching, and finally healing. Teaching consists of laying down principles and precepts. Preaching is for the purpose of stimulating and proclaiming. Healing is the manifestation, the outworking of teaching and preaching. I believe the reason so many healing ministries are unbalanced and harmful is because they lack foundational teaching. If Jesus is our example, teaching and preaching must precede healing.

Matthew 4:24

And his fame went throughout all Syria: and they brought unto him all sick people that were taken with divers diseases and torments, and those which were possessed with devils, and those which were lunatick, and those that had the palsy; and he healed them.

Those who were demonized, those who were paralyzed, those who were hurting—Jesus healed them all.

Matthew 4:25

And there followed him great multitudes of people from Galilee, and from Decapolis, and from Jerusalem, and from Judaea, and from beyond Jordan.

The towns named here cover a one hundred-mile radius. People would literally walk hundreds of miles to see Jesus. Next time you are tempted to complain about your long trip to church, remember this verse!

5 Matthew's Gospel presents Jesus as King, King of the Jews specifically, although not exclusively.

In chapter 1, Matthew outlined Jesus' heritage. As a descendant of David, Jesus was the rightful Heir to the throne of Israel. In chapter 2, we saw homage paid the King by wise men who came from the East to worship Him. Also in chapter 2, we saw hostility toward the King when Herod, feeling intimidated by the Babe of Bethlehem, sought to destroy Him. In chapter 3, we saw the heralding of the King as John the Baptist came on the scene, wearing camel skins, eating honey-coated locusts and saying, "Repent, for the kingdom of God is at hand." In chapter 4, we saw a challenge to the King when Satan tempted Him in the wilderness, a challenge that our King met head-on and from which He emerged victorious. Also in chapter 4, we saw the establishing of the headquarters of the King as Jesus taught and healed throughout Galilee. Here in chapter 5, as we continue seeing Jesus as King, we come to the constitution of His kingdom.

Matthew 5:1, 2

And seeing the multitudes, he went up into a mountain: and when he was set, his disciples came unto him: And he opened his mouth, and taught them, saying,

As the multitudes began hearing of Jesus, the last verse in chapter 4 says they came from one hundred miles or more to be with Him. Jesus, seeing the multitudes, climbed a hill, sat down, and prepared to teach. In Jewish culture, if you were preaching, you would stand. But if you were teaching or explaining, you would sit. That is why even today when a university wants to establish a certain teacher or course, it will call that position "the Chair," as in "the Chair of Philosophy" or "the Chair of Psychology." So, too, when the Pope speaks on doctrinal matters, he is always seated when he makes his proclamation. He is speaking "ex-cathedra," which literally means "from the chair."

So here, we see Jesus seated, ready to give an authoritative, important, significant teaching.

Matthew 5:3 (a)

Blessed . . .

Verse 3 introduces a well-known portion of Scripture called the Beatitudes. "Beatitude," literally beātus in Latin, means "happy," and every one of the following nine verses begins with the word "blessed" or "happy." Our United States Constitution guarantees the pursuit of happiness, but Jesus' constitution points out the pathway to happiness as He delineates the attitudes that lead to happiness. The Scriptures declare, "Blessed, or happy, is the people whose God is the Lord" (Psalm 33:12). David said, "Blessed, or happy, is the man whose sins are forgiven" (Psalm 32:1). I believe the Bible knows nothing of a dour, heavy Christianity. I believe Scripture indicates that the people of God should be the happiest, most joyful people on earth.

Matthew 5:3 (b)
. . . are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

The world says, "The first step to happiness is to be self-assertive and confident, to highly esteem yourself and feel good about who you are." That's not what Jesus said. He said, "Blessed, or happy, are those who are poor in spirit—who realize their own spiritual poverty." Anyone who truly sees the Lord will inevitably feel poor in spirit.

In the first five chapters of his book, Isaiah indicts the people of Judah and the surrounding nations, saying, "Woe unto you and you and you." But in chapter 6, when he saw the Lord high and lifted up, he said, "Woe is me!" When Peter realized who Jesus was on a boat in the Sea of Galilee, he said, "Depart from me; for I am a sinful man" (Luke 5:8). When John the revelator saw Jesus, he fell down as though he were dead (Revelation 1:17).

Matthew 5:4
Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

When you realize you're a sinner and when you mourn over your sin, the Lord will come to you and say, "I don't condemn you. Go your way and sin no more." That's what the woman caught in the act of adultery heard, as did the prostitute who fell at the feet of Jesus weeping. "Leave her alone, Pharisees," Jesus said. "The one who is forgiven much loves much." In the state of realizing our poverty and in our mourning, we truly enter into the kingdom and are comforted.

Matthew 5:5
Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

When you realize you're a sinner and when you mourn over your sin, the Lord will say to you, "I don't condemn you. Go your way and sin no more."

Meekness is not weakness. Meekness is strength under control. Praus, the Greek word translated "meek," is a term used to describe a powerful stallion broken and able to be ridden. Moses was known for his meekness in the Old Testament. Numbers 12:3 declares him to be the meekest man on the face of the earth. Jesus was known for His meekness in the New Testament. In the only autobiographical description of His personality, Jesus said, "I am meek and lowly in heart" (Matthew 11:29). So too, after a person realizing he is poor in spirit and begins mourning, he finds himself meek with his strength harnessed for the purposes of the King and for Him alone.

Matthew 5:6
Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Notice the order: First you're poor in spirit, then you're mourning over your sin, then you find yourself meek. Now that you've gotten rid of all that self-grandeur and self-glory, you find yourself hungering and thirsting because you're emptied of all that junk.

I am personally convinced the reason many people are not filled is because they have not been emptied. They are still full of themselves. Pride must go before you find yourself hungering and thirsting for righteousness.

My wife fixes me excellent meals, but if I stop off and score a couple of burgers before I head home (as I have been known to do on occasion), even though there's a wonderful meal spread on the table, I don't have an appetite for it because I'm full of burgers and shakes.

Some people have lost their appetite for the Word of God. They no longer desire to worship; they no longer crave rightness. They are no longer meek, or mourning, or poor in spirit because they are full of the burgers and shakes of self-importance. When you empty yourself of self, happy are you because you're going to hunger once more for righteousness.

Matthew 5:7

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

After you have gone through the emptying process and you're filled with God's love, you'll be merciful toward others—no longer judgmental, critical, or analytical. Truly, the more righteous a man is, the more merciful he will be. The more sinful a man is, the more harsh and critical he will be.

Matthew 5:8

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

There is a difference between having a clean heart and a pure heart. All of us who have embraced the Lord have clean hearts. But a pure heart is one not distracted by the things of the world. Think of it this way: All soap is clean. But only one is 99.44 percent pure. Ivory soap doesn't have deodorants, perfumes, additives, or colorings. Ivory is nothing but soap. Other soaps are clean, but they're not pure. The pure in heart shall see God.

- "Why don't I see God?" people ask. Could it be because you're no longer pure in heart?
- "Are you saying I'm lost?"

  No. But has your vision been obscured by a bunch of perfumes and additives, still clean, but no longer Ivory, deodorized and perfumed, but no longer pure?

Matthew 5:9

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Being a peacemaker doesn't mean wearing a peace symbol, marching against nukes, or marching for whales. I suggest to you that the finest peacemaking activity in which you can engage is introducing people to the Prince of Peace—Jesus Christ. What happiness is there that can compare to the joy of seeing a friend, relative, or neighbor open his heart to Jesus? Truly, it is then that we are blessed indeed.

Matthew 5:10–12

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake. Rejoice, and be exceeding glad: for great is your reward in heaven: for so persecuted they the prophets which were before you.

What? Persecution? Maybe you thought if a person possessed a "beatitude mentality"—if he was aware of his own poverty, if he mourned over his sin, if he was meek, if he hungered and thirsted after righteousness, if he had a pure heart, if he showed mercy—he would be popular. But such is not the case, for if the attitudes of meekness and mercy, poverty of spirit and righteousness of heart are being worked out in you, you will encounter persecution. You will have enemies. You will be slandered and misunderstood because in 2 Timothy 3:12, Paul says this, "Yea, and all that will live godly in Christ Jesus shall suffer persecution." That's a promise.

Jesus said, "Happy is the one who is persecuted. You're joining a great company, the company of the prophets. And, indeed, you will have profit in heaven—exceedingly great reward."

"Be happy," Jesus said, "because your reward in heaven is going to be great when men persecute you—and they will!" Notice one more thing before we leave these verses. It says, "and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake." Many times Christians are being persecuted not because they're living righteously, but because they're weird. Weirdness doesn't count!

These are the attitudes that will lead to happiness and fulfillment: poverty of spirit, mourning over sin, meekness that no longer struts, but submits, hungering and thirsting for righteousness, mercy, purity of heart, peacemaking, persecution—this is the pathway to happiness.

Matthew 5:13

Ye are the salt of the earth: but if the salt have lost his savour, wherewith shall it be salted? It is thenceforth good for nothing, but to be cast out, and to be trodden under foot of men.

Salt promotes thirst, and as the salt of the earth, we should be making those around us thirsty for the living water of Jesus Christ. People should say, "There's something about you that creates in me a thirst for what you're enjoying."

Salt also preserves and heals. Therefore, if our culture is putrefying and decaying, we then, as the church, should hold back from indicting our society or critiquing our political leaders and begin preserving by repenting. "Lord, have we lost our saltiness? Have we lost our flavor and our effectiveness?"

Second Chronicles 7:14 declares, "If my people, which are called by my name, shall humble themselves, and pray, and seek my face, and turn from their wicked ways; then will I hear from heaven, and will forgive their sin, and will heal their land." It begins with us, gang. We are the salt.

Matthew 5:14–16

Ye are the light of the world. A city that is set on an hill cannot be hid. Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick; and it giveth light unto all that are in the house. Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.

Whenever Jesus did a miracle, people didn't ask Him to pose for a picture or to embark on a speaking tour. They simply glorified the Father. How I respect and admire Jesus for being able to work in such a way that He didn't draw attention or glory to Himself, but only to His Father.

Matthew 5:17–19

Think not that I am come to destroy the law, or the prophets: I am not come to destroy, but to fulfil. For verily I say unto you, Till heaven and earth pass, one jot or one tittle shall in no wise pass from the law, till all be fulfilled. Whosoever therefore shall break one of these least commandments, and shall teach men so, he shall be called the least in the kingdom of heaven: but whosoever shall do and teach them, the same shall be called great in the kingdom of heaven.

"I am not coming to destroy the law, but to fulfill it. I am not seeking to weaken it, but to establish it."

> Wherefore the law was our schoolmaster to bring us unto Christ, that we might be justified by faith. But after that faith is come, we are no longer under a schoolmaster. For ye are all the children of God by faith in Christ Jesus.
> Galatians 3:24–26

People think, "Well, I'm pretty good."

"Oh?" says the Law. "Here's your standard."

And suddenly, as they read through the Law, they realize they're sinners in need of a Savior.

Matthew 5:20 (a)

For I say unto you, That except your righteousness shall exceed the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees. . . .

This statement would have shocked those who heard it because, according to a popular Jewish saying of the time, "If only two men made it into heaven, one would be a scribe, and the other a Pharisee." The scribes were scholars who studied, interpreted, and commented endlessly upon the Law. The word "pharisee" literally means "separated one." Numbering seven thousand, this company of men kept the minutest details of the Law.

We look at the scribes and Pharisees rather humorously today, but no one did then. They were the Billy Grahams, Chuck Swindolls, and Jack Hayfords —the spiritual giants of their day. And Jesus said even their righteousness wasn't good enough.

Matthew 5:20 (b)

. . . ye shall in no case enter into the kingdom of heaven.

This is the key to the Sermon on the Mount. Jesus is saying, "If you think you can make it into the kingdom without Me as your Savior, you'd better be awfully good. In fact, you'd better be perfect."

So when people say, "I live by the Sermon on the Mount," I say, "Oh? Good luck, because Jesus told us in that sermon to be perfect, that unless our righteousness exceeds that of even the most holy men, we will never enter the kingdom."

The Sermon on the Mount, perhaps the most misunderstood passage in all Scripture, is meant to bring us to the realization that there is no way anyone can keep its lofty standards. It is meant to make everyone equally guilty. It is meant to drive us to Jesus.

And once it has driven us to Christ, the Sermon on the Mount directs us in Christ, causing us to pray, "Lord, I thank You that Your blood has cleansed me when I have failed. But the standard is now before me. Help me to live in Your kingdom mentality—in poverty of spirit and purity of heart; in mourning and meekness and mercy—through Your strength, for I have a long way to go."

Our tendency is to compare ourselves with each other. That's what the Pharisees did. Compared to everyone else, they might have thought they looked pretty good.

One day after a wedding, I walked out to greet some of the people, and there was a guy who was over seven feet tall. He was huge! I had forgotten how big a seven-footer really is! When I'm around toddlers, I'm pretty big. But when I was around this guy, I was a runt! So, too, compared to the standards Jesus presented, the Pharisees were spiritual runts just like everyone else. That is why this sermon would have been so shocking.

Matthew 5:21, 22 (a)

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not kill; and whosoever shall kill shall be in danger of the judgment: But I say unto you, That whosoever is angry with his brother without a cause shall be in danger of the judgment. . . .

"Anger" is only one letter short of "danger" because danger always lurks beneath anger. You might be able to disguise it temporarily, but if anger is brewing inside you, it will lead to danger, for murder begins in the heart.

Matthew 5:22 (b)

. . . and whosoever shall say to his brother, Raca, shall be in danger of the council: but whosoever shall say, Thou fool, shall be in danger of hell fire.

Is anger ever right? Yes.

Be ye angry, and sin not: let not the sun go down upon your wrath.

Ephesians 4:26

There is a place for righteous anger, but there is only one appropriate way to vent it. What did David say concerning his enemies? He said, "Lord, may their bones be broken and their skull cracked open. May their teeth be kicked in" (see Psalm 58:6). Since everything in the Old Testament physically is a picture of things in the New Testament spiritually, we are to wage war with violence, but not against flesh and blood.

For we wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities, against powers, against the rulers of the darkness of this world, against spiritual wickedness in high places.

Ephesians 6:12

There is a place, indeed, to get angry and wage war against the demons. With fasting and prayer, we should come against the forces that pollute, pervert, and destroy. Watch out, though, for unrighteous anger, when you call people idiots and fools. Jesus said that's equivalent to murder, for when you speak angrily or judgmentally of people, you murder a part of them.

Matthew 5:23, 24

Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest that thy brother hath ought against thee; leave there thy gift before the altar, and go thy way; first be reconciled to thy brother, and then come and offer thy gift.

Does this mean we should track down every person who has something against us? For some of us, that would be a full-time job! I believe the key to understanding this is found in the phrase, "Therefore if thou bring thy gift to the altar, and there rememberest . . ." When you are at the altar and there, in the place of prayer, the Lord says, "This man or that woman has something against you, go get it right," then you must do as the Spirit leads.

Matthew 5:25, 26

Agree with thine adversary quickly, whiles thou art in the way with him; lest at any time the adversary deliver thee to the judge, and the judge deliver thee to the officer, and thou be cast into prison. Verily I say unto thee, Thou shalt by no means come out thence, till thou hast paid the uttermost farthing.

The legal system in Jesus' day required the plaintiff to personally track down the defendant. In other words, if you had something against someone, it would be your job to find him and bring him in physically before the judge. This is why Jesus here says, "If you are on the road with your adversary—if he has captured you—cut a deal with him before you get to court. Apologize! Get it right because once the matter reaches court, you could get cast into prison and remain until you pay the last penny." But how can you pay the last penny when you're in prison? You have no way to make money. That's the point. If you let the incident become a big deal by not dealing with it immediately, promptly, in humility, and with transparency, you'll never escape it.

I think many of us have found this to be true at one point or another. When we had the opportunity to deal with a situation, we chose not to because of pride, and then it grew and grew over the days and months and years, until it became so complicated and confusing that there was no way out. Jesus said,

"Avoid this. Be wise. When you are on the road, when you're talking with your adversary, when you're still communicating, be humble, lest you find yourself imprisoned with no way of escape."

Matthew 5:27, 28

Ye have heard that it was said by them of old time, Thou shalt not commit adultery: But I say unto you, That whosoever looketh on a woman to lust after her hath committed adultery with her already in his heart.

The issue isn't only what you're doing outwardly; it's what's going on in your heart internally. We have all been angry at some time or another, thus we're all murderers. We have all looked with lust in our heart, thus we're all adulterers. Truly, there is none righteous, no not one.

Matthew 5:29, 30

And if thy right eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell. And if thy right hand offend thee, cut if off, and cast it from thee: for it is profitable for thee that one of thy members should perish, and not that thy whole body should be cast into hell.

One of my friends, a wonderful Christian brother, is a blind man. Yet, his number one problem is lust. Therefore, Jesus is not talking about physically poking out an eye or chopping off a hand. Rather, He's saying, "Deal violently and directly with any part of your being—your activities, your hobbies, your schedule—that is leading you to sin. It's destructive, so deal with it decisively."

Matthew 5:31

It hath been said, Whosoever shall put away his wife, let him give her a writing of divorcement.

The Pharisees were basically divided into two camps: the school of Shammai and the school of Hillel. Those who followed Shammai were very conservative, saying that on the basis of Deuteronomy 24, divorce could be granted only in the case of uncleanness, which they interpreted to be sexual immorality or adultery. The followers of Hillel were very liberal, saying uncleanness is much broader than simply adultery or immorality. If a woman, for example, put too much salt and pepper on her husband's eggs, which made him lose his temper, she had made him sin, and therefore was unclean —a legitimate reason for divorce. Or, if a man saw a woman who was more righteous or virtuous than his wife, he had the right to divorce her because she was now unclean by comparison. The followers of Shammai said a written bill of divorce must be given. The followers of Hillel said all that was required was for the husband to look at his wife and say, "I divorce you," three times. Consequently, not unlike today, divorce was occurring for the most frivolous reasons.

Matthew 5:32

But I say unto you, That whosoever shall put away his wife, saving for the cause of fornication, causeth her to commit adultery: and whosoever shall marry her that is divorced committeth adultery.

Based on the original text, I strongly believe this verse means that, although God's plan is that two people remain married until death separates them, those who divorce and remarry, in effect, do commit adultery. However, they don't live in adultery. Therefore, God forbid that we should say, "All manner of sin is forgiven all man except for one: divorce." That's not what Jesus said. He said, "All manner of sin is forgiven all men except the blasphemy of the Holy Spirit—the rejection of Jesus Christ" (see Matthew 12:31). We're all sinners, gang. We've all missed the mark. Look around you and you'll see a murderer sitting next to you and a bunch of adulterers in front and behind you. We're all sinners. We all need a Savior.

Matthew 5:33–37

Again, ye have heard that it hath been said by them of old time, Thou shalt not forswear thyself, but shalt perform unto the Lord thine oaths: But I say unto you, Swear not at all; neither by heaven; for it is God's throne: Nor by the earth; for it is his footstool: neither by Jerusalem; for it is the city of the great King. Neither shalt thou swear by thy head, because thou canst not make one hair white or black. But let your communication be, Yea, yea; Nay, nay: for whatsoever is more than these cometh of evil.

Your words should be so solid that a simple yes or no should be sufficient. The minute you have to say, "I swear!" they're not.

Matthew 5:38–42

Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also. And if any man will sue thee at the law, and take away thy coat, let him have thy cloke also. And whosoever shall compel thee to go a mile, go with him twain. Give to him that asketh thee, and from him that would borrow of thee turn not thou away.

If you lived in Jesus' day, a Roman soldier could come to you at any time and tap you on the shoulder with his spear. You then would be required by law to carry his armor or baggage for up to one mile. Here, Jesus says, "Blow his mind. Go with him two miles. And if someone wants your coat, give him your undercoat as well. If they hit you on the cheek, turn the other cheek."

There have been those throughout history who have found that what Jesus was saying was potent and dynamic—that turning the other cheek actually puts one in control. The entire subcontinent of India was freed from the powerful British rule because Ghandi read this verse, and although he was not a believer, he believed in what Jesus said. He inspired an entire nation to turn the other cheek, and it blew the Brits away. After all, what can you do if someone won't fight back? You can beat them with clubs, you can fire guns on them, but the morale of your own army is destroyed in the process. So eventually, the British got on their ships and sailed home.

Martin Luther King, Jr. found the same thing to be true when he mobilized the Blacks in Alabama. If the protesters had fought back, the U.S. Marshals would have felt justified in firing their guns indiscriminately, and the Civil Rights movement would have died. But peaceful resistance won out, and an entire people experienced liberation.

In your family, at work, in your neighborhood—wherever you might be—take the words of Jesus literally. Don't fight back, for he who doesn't fight back controls the situation.

Matthew 5:43, 44 (a)

Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbour, and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies . . .

If you've ever lashed out at someone who refused to fight back, you know how small it made you feel. Don't fight back. Love back. Nothing will disarm your enemy so easily.

But you say, "She has hurt me or has trampled on me. I can't love back."

In the next verse, Jesus tells you how.

Matthew 5:44 (b)

. . . bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you, and pray for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.

Bless them! When the person who bugs you the most comes down on you, look at him and say, "The Lord bless you. The Lord be with you. The Lord make His face to shine upon you and give you peace." Pronounce blessing upon him; do good to him; pray for him.

I'll tell you a secret: If you pray for your enemies—for the people who bug you the most—you will experience power in your life and an ability to love them that will blow you away. Why? When you pray for your enemies, two things happen: They change and you change. It might take some time, but slowly yet surely, you'll see a change. If I'm praying every day for the guy I can't stand, something amazing happens. I become involved with him and interested in him. As I pray for him, there is a linkage established through prayer.

Matthew 5:45–48

That ye may be the children of your Father which is in heaven: for he maketh his sun to rise on the evil and on the good, and sendeth rain on the just and on the unjust. For if ye love them which love you, what reward have ye? do not even the publicans the same? And if ye salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? do not even the publicans so? Be ye therefore perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect.

"Be ye perfect? You mean never be angry because that's equivalent to murder? Never say anything more than yes or no without defending or explaining? Turn the other cheek when people are attacking me? Bless those who hurt me? Be perfect? "Rabbi, if what You say is true, if this is what was meant in the Old Testament Law, then no matter how I come across outwardly with my robes, my pious postures, and my religious activities, I'm lost. No wonder You said righteousness must exceed that of the scribes and Pharisees. I'm a Pharisee—and I'm a sinner."

"Great!" Jesus would answer. "That's right where I want you. I will now help you live the way of the kingdom constitution as I, the King, take up residence within you."

Soon we'll see Jesus face-to-face. He's coming back. And when we see Him, the Bible says we shall be like Him (I John 3:2). We shall indeed be perfect. And what a day that will be!

6 Jesus continues His Sermon on the Mount, the constitution of His kingdom. In chapter 5, He addressed inner attitudes. Here in chapter 6, He will discuss outward activities.

Matthew 6:1, 2

Take heed that ye do not your alms before men, to be seen of them: otherwise ye have no reward of your Father which is in heaven. Therefore when thou doest thine alms, do not sound a trumpet before thee, as the hypocrites do in the synagogues and in the streets, that they may have glory of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

In the area of praying, giving, and fasting, Jesus will talk about the hupokrites, or hypocrites. Hupokrites is a Greek word that means "mask-wearer." Hupokrites were actors in the Greek theater who wore masks, very exaggerated in form, with huge smiles and frowns so that even people in the back row could see what kind of emotion was being portrayed. We get the word two-faced from this same idea.

Jesus said, "Don't be hypocritical in your giving." How did the hypocrites give? Originally, there was an area at the side of the temple courtyard called the Chamber of the Secret. People would go there and drop gifts designated for the poor in a large chest called the Trumpet. Later, the poor would come to the Chamber of the Secret and receive gifts from the Trumpet. It was all done very discreetly, with humility and honesty. But as the years went on, the Pharisees decided it wasn't practical to go all the way to the temple to give alms to the poor. So instead, they tied a small brass or silver trumpet to their belts. Then, whenever they wanted to give to the poor, they stood on a street corner and blew their trumpets. Upon hearing this, the poor people in the area would gather around the generous Pharisee as he distributed his alms with great flourish, while everyone around said, "My! Look how righteous he is!"

Jesus called the Pharisees hypocrites because they gave not out of concern for the poor, but that they might be seen by men.

Matthew 6:3, 4

But when thou doest alms, let not thy left hand know what thy right hand doeth: That thine alms may be in secret: and thy Father which seeth in secret himself shall reward thee openly.

Notice, Jesus doesn't say, "If thou doest alms," but "When thou doest alms." The assumption is we will give. The only question is, how will we do it? Share secretly, and your Father will reward you openly.

Matthew 6:5

And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray standing in the synagogues and in the corners of the streets, that they may be seen of men. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward.

The Pharisees designated the third hour, the sixth hour, and the ninth hour as times of prayer. In other words, at nine o'clock in the morning, at noon, and at three o'clock in the afternoon, they would faithfully gather in the synagogues or in the temple to offer their prayers. We are told in the Book of Daniel that he, a man of God, opened his windows toward Jerusalem and prayed three times a day. But the Pharisees were not doing it to seek the Lord, but rather to be seen by men. How do we know this? On their way to prayer meetings, the Pharisees would stop on the corner of the street and begin to offer long and verbose prayers. In so doing, they were saying, "We are so eager to pray, we can't wait to get to the synagogue."

And people would say, "Oh, wow! Look how righteous they are!"

We still do that in our own subtle ways, don't we? "Yes, as I was praying this morning at three o'clock, the Lord brought you to my heart." And we subtly let people know we are in a place of continual prayer. Jesus said, "Don't do it. That's hypocrisy."

Matthew 6:6

But thou, when thou prayest, enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut thy door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

The Father, who sees in secret, will bless you openly and eternally.

Matthew 6:7

But when ye pray, use not vain repetitions, as the heathen do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking.

Jesus encourages us to be short and concise in our prayers. To me, this is fantastically liberating because I fall prey to thinking, The longer I pray, the more impressed God will be.

In Ecclesiastes 5, Solomon says that God is in heaven. You are on earth. Therefore, let your words be few. You know, I crack up at my own prayers sometimes. "Well now, Father," I hear myself praying, "I just pray right now for my wife, Tammy. She has this particular need, and I just pray You would . . ." As if the Lord is up in heaven saying, "Tammy? Oh yeah, Tammy. Now what need does she have?" We don't need to inform the Lord, nor convince the Lord. We just need to connect with the Lord.

Matthew 6:8–13

Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth what things ye have need of, before ye ask him. After this manner therefore pray ye: Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name. Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven. Give us this day our daily bread. And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors. And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil: For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

As we sing and pray this most famous of all prayers, are we, like the Pharisees, guilty of meaningless repetition? Yes—if we're saying it without thinking. But the Scriptures do not forbid meaningful repetition. Jesus is not saying repetition in and of itself is wrong. How do I know? In Matthew 26, when Jesus made the same request of His Father three times in the Garden of Gethsemane, Matthew writes, "And He spake the same words yet again" (see v. 44). Thus, I believe there is such a thing as meaningful repetition, and I believe this prayer prayed word for word can be potent and powerful, mystical and wonderful, if prayed with an engaged mind and a sensitive heart.

For topical study of Matthew 6:9–13 entitled "The Perfect Prayer," turn to page 34.

Matthew 6:14, 15

For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your heavenly Father will also forgive you: But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses.

When people fail, don't rub it in. Rub it out. Forgive them. How? I personally believe when you pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," the very act of articulating, "as we forgive our debtors," releases forgiveness at that moment. That might sound a bit mystical, but many of us have found it to be very practical. When you say, "Father, I am now forgiving my debtors," in the very act of praying it, you'll experience it.

Matthew 6:16–18

Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast. Verily I say unto you, They have their reward. But thou, when thou fastest, anoint thine head, and wash thy face; That thou appear not unto men to fast, but unto thy Father which is in secret: and thy Father, which seeth in secret, shall reward thee openly.

The Pharisees—the ones who blew the trumpet when they gave their gifts and prayed on street corners because they couldn't wait to get to church—fasted every Monday and Thursday. You could always tell when they were fasting because they walked around with long faces, drawn cheeks, unbrushed teeth, and uncombed hair.

Jesus said when you fast, comb your hair, wash your face, brush your teeth, and don't let people know. Your Father who sees in secret will reward you. Fasting is an important discipline often neglected by American Christians. In the Scriptures, we see fasting primarily for two reasons.

The first is for direction. Both examples in the Old Testament are found in the books of Ezra and Nehemiah. In the New Testament, we see the examples not only in the life of Jesus but also in the Book of Acts. When people desired to know God's will or direction, they fasted.

Physiologists tell us when there is no food in the stomach, there is greater blood flow to the brain. You can actually think clearer when you're not digesting burgers and fries. Once you overcome those first pangs of hunger, your thinking processes are more focused and clearer than ever. On the other hand, if you have two Whoppers and a couple of shakes, all you want to do is sleep!

Second, people fast not only for direction, but for liberation. When you feel oppressed, bound, or hassled by some sin or problem, fasting is a powerful weapon in your spiritual arsenal. Why? When you say no to your stomach and start praying instead, something dynamic begins to happen. Saying no to your physical appetites helps you say no to the other temptations that hassle you. If you are plagued by temptation, I encourage you to begin to explore the discipline of fasting. When your stomach starts demanding, just say "No," and start praying. You will find a power and a liberty that will help you overcome whatever temptations are seeking to enslave you. There's real power in fasting. If you need direction, if you hunger for liberation, skip lunch, and seek the Lord.

Matthew 6:19–21

Lay not up for yourselves treasures upon earth, where moth and rust doth corrupt, and where thieves break through and steal: But lay up for yourselves treasures in heaven, where neither moth nor rust doth corrupt, and where thieves do not break through nor steal: For where your treasure is, there will your heart be also.

Giving is not God's way of raising cash. It's God's way of raising kids. Every time I give, I am giving away part of my stinginess and selfishness. God doesn't need my money, but I need to give. The Lord wants my heart, not my money, and He knows that wherever my treasure is, that's where my heart will be. If I have financial investments, I will follow the stock market carefully. If I hold real estate, I will follow the housing market with genuine interest. If I have treasure in heaven, guess where my heart will be? It is profoundly interesting to me that Jesus didn't say, "Where your heart is, there your treasure will be." Instead, He said, "Put your treasure in heaven, and your heart will inevitably follow."

How can we be more heavenly-hearted? By sending our treasure ahead.

Matthew 6:22, 23

The light of the body is the eye: if therefore thine eye be single, thy whole body shall be full of light. But if thine eye be evil, thy whole body shall be full of darkness. If therefore the light that is in thee be darkness, how great is that darkness!

Because the eye is the channel through which comes illumination, if you have an evil eye, your whole body shall be full of darkness. Proverbs 28:22 says, "He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him." Who has an evil eye? The one who lives for riches. It's not wrong to have things, but if you live for things, your eye is evil, and your life will be dark.

> Charge them that are rich in this world, that they be not highminded, nor trust in uncertain riches, but in the living God, who giveth us richly all things to enjoy.
> 1 Timothy 6:17

Paul didn't say, "Sell your goods." He said, "Don't trust in them."

Matthew 6:24

No man can serve two masters: for either he will hate the one, and love the other; or else he will hold to the one, and despise the other. Ye cannot serve God and mammon.

Mammon is more than just nickels, dimes, and dollar bills. Jesus identifies mammon as a master. I believe mammon is a god, a demonic force who wants you to be focused on him, in bondage to him, and all wrapped up in him. The entire monetary system in our world right now is incredible.

Truly, it is a religion requiring great faith. I was reading an article some time ago that said if suddenly a whistle was blown in the economic community and all accounts had to be settled immediately, only 10 percent of the debts and 10 percent of the cash would be real. In other words, if the music stopped in the world of financial musical chairs, nine out of ten people would be left without a chair because 90 percent of the transactions that happen in the economic world are backed by nothing. Zip. Zero. It's all faith.

> Even the dollar bill in your wallet, except for a very rare one, doesn't say Silver Certificate anymore. It's a U.S. Government Note, backed by nothing.

Economics is a risky religion. And Jesus said, "You cannot serve God and mammon. You've got to make a choice."

> Matthew 6:25
> Therefore I say unto you, Take no thought for your life, what ye shall eat, or what ye shall drink; nor yet for your body, what ye shall put on. Is not the life more than meat, and the body than raiment?

Does this verse mean we shouldn't care at all what we wear or about investments or monetary matters? No. The meaning here is that we are to take no anxious thought, or literally, "Take no worry." The word worry means literally "to strangle." If you're worried about what you're wearing, eating, or drinking—about what you have or don't have materially—your personality will be tied in knots and strangled.

I once read that it takes sixty trillion droplets of fog to cover seven city blocks. Now sixty trillion droplets, or seven city blocks' worth of fog, can close down airports and tie up cities. Yet, if you condensed those sixty trillion fog droplets, you would end up with only half a glass of water.

That's a good picture of what worry is all about. You begin with something little, only half a glass of water. But you start thinking about it and wrestling with it, wondering, How is this going to work out? How am I going to do that? And before long, you can't see straight, and your airport is shut down. You're not hearing from the Lord, and you're not soaring with the Lord as you once did because you're all fogged in. Jesus said, "Don't take any anxious thought whatsoever. Don't let worry strangle you. Don't end up in a fog."

Matthew 6:26

Behold the fowls of the air: for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your heavenly Father feedeth them. Are ye not much better than they?

First Peter 5 says we are to cast all of our anxieties upon God. How?

Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by prayer and supplication with thanksgiving let your requests be made known unto God. And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.

Philippians 4:6–7

Be anxious for nothing. Pray about everything. Be thankful in all things. That's the key. Jesus wants us to be a carefree people.

Matthew 6:27–31

Which of you by taking thought can add one cubit unto his stature? And why take ye thought for raiment? Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these. Wherefore, if God so clothe the grass of the field, which to day is, and to-morrow is cast into the oven, shall he not much more clothe you, O ye of little faith? Therefore take no thought, saying, What shall we eat? or, What shall we drink? or, Wherewithal shall we be clothed?

Styles change quickly. I was thinking about this one day when I saw a couple walking through downtown Medford, Oregon. Their clothes were totally out of fashion, but walking hand in hand, there was a glow about them because of their radiant smiles. And I thought, There goes one of the best-looking couples I have ever seen. Don't get all hung up on fads and fashions. Jesus tells us to check out the flowers. Even Solomon couldn't rival their splendor.

> (For after all these things do the Gentiles seek:) for your heavenly Father knoweth that ye have need of all these things. But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and his righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you. Take therefore no thought for the morrow: for the morrow shall take thought for the things of itself. Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof.

Seek first the kingdom, and everything else will fall into place. Every one of you is proof of this, for truly God has provided. We may have spent nights worrying, and yet the Lord has been faithful even when we've been foolish. That's why Jesus told us not to worry about tomorrow. Today has enough challenges of its own. Just deal with today, and above all, seek first the kingdom.

THE PERFECT PRAYER

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 6:9–13

As far as we know, the disciples never asked Jesus to teach them to preach, to prophesy, or to cast out demons. There is no record of them asking how to worship or witness or how to build a ministry or lead their families. The one thing the disciples asked of Jesus directly was, "Lord, teach us to pray."

Why? I believe it is because, after watching Jesus for several years, the disciples were convinced prayer was the secret of His ministry and the foundation of all He did.

In Luke 11, Jesus gave His disciples the same prayer, virtually word for word, that He had given two years earlier, recorded here in Matthew. He didn't say, "The prayer I taught two years ago was for the multitudes, but for you disciples, here's something heavier." Or, "The prayer I taught in the Sermon on the Mount was at the beginning of My ministry, but now two years later, here is something more meaty." It was as though He was saying, "Don't you recall what I taught you two years ago?" as He gave this prayer verbatim to them once again.

This revolutionized my thinking. I had always been under the impression that the Lord's Prayer was simply an example or a model that we could study and learn from, but it was not necessarily to be prayed verbatim. While I still believe the Lord's Prayer is a wonderful model and a perfect example, I have come to believe it is more than that. I believe it is actually sacramental.

"Sacrament" refers to that which comes from the outside and works its way in. Baptism, the Lord's Table, and the marriage ceremony are all sacraments because they are external demonstrations that signify internal transformation. I have discovered personally that the Lord's Prayer is sacramental—or close to it. That is, by praying the Lord's Prayer from memory word for word externally, something wonderful, mystical, and beautiful happens internally.

"Wait!" you say. "Didn't Jesus teach against meaningless repetitions?"

Yes, in Matthew 6:7, Jesus did warn about vain and meaningless repetitions. If I say the Lord's Prayer with my mind a million miles away and my heart not sensitive to the Spirit, it will profit me nothing. But, when I say it meaningfully—concentrating, thinking, contemplating, and meditating—when I pray this prayer as the Lord gave it to His disciples in Luke 11 and to the masses in Matthew 6, I have discovered it has a very powerful and potent effect upon me personally. I believe it will upon you as well.

Two characteristics of this prayer strike me. I am amazed first by its completeness. It is wonderful because it covers all of our needs and all of God's worthiness. Secondly, I am impressed with its conciseness. Sixty-five words long, it only takes thirty seconds to pray.

We have fallen into the fallacy of thinking the strength of prayer is in direct proportion to the length of prayer—even though Jesus went out of His way to say that we wouldn't be heard for our "much speaking." Jesus' prayers were complete, but concise. If I asked the Lord to teach me to pray, I would think He would give me a one hundred-page book at the very least. But He didn't. He simply gave a prayer sixty-five words long.

I am reminded of the time Moses' sister Miriam was struck with leprosy. Moses looked to the Lord and said, "Heal her now, O God, I beseech thee" (Numbers 12:13). Eight words, and the Lord healed her.

Now, we also know Moses was so in love with God that he spent forty days and forty nights seeking His face in the desert. Thus, I'm not discounting or diminishing the importance of those lengthy chunks of time when you seek the Lord. But in our daily prayer life, I think we need a readjustment in our thinking.

When I have repeatedly prayed the Lord's Prayer word for word, I have found a liberty, an empowering, and a joy that have been really special and refreshing to me. I can pause in my car before going to my next appointment (already late) and say,

> Our Father which art in heaven, Hallowed be thy name.
>
> Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done in earth, as it is in heaven.
>
> Give us this day our daily bread.
>
> And forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors.

> And lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil:
> For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

Then it's out my door and into the meeting with the sense that the Lord is with me and the bases are covered. Notice six elements of this prayer. The first component, verse 9, concerns God's Person. The second, verse 10, concerns God's purpose. Third, God's provision is seen in verse 11. Fourth, God's pardon is in verse 12. Fifth, God's protection is in the first half of verse 13. And sixth, God's preeminence is in the last half of verse 13.

First, God's Person . . .

Our Father . . .

When Jesus taught this prayer, He must have shocked those who were listening to Him when He said, "Our Father." The word for "Father" is "Abba," meaning "Papa." Keep in mind that in the Old Testament, God was addressed as Elohim, the Strong One; El Shaddai, the Mighty One; and Yahweh, the unspeakable word that meant, "I AM THAT I AM."

Why did Jesus suddenly say, "When you pray, call God Daddy, Papa, Abba, Father?" Was He no longer the Powerful, Unspeakable, Omnipotent God of the Old Testament? Did God change? No. God didn't change. We did.

> But as many as received him, to them gave he power to become the sons of God, even to them that believe on his name.
> John 1:12

We were adopted into His family. If you are truly a child of God, He is still the Unspeakable One, the Almighty One, the Omnipotent One, but because you have been adopted into His family, to you He is also Abba. Notice also, He's not just my Father, but He is Our Father. He's the Presbyterian's Father, the Pentecostal's Father, the Catholic's Father, and the Lutheran's Father. Regardless of their denomination, Christians, hand in hand, pray, "Our Father," not only now, but throughout the ages.

I can't hit like Babe Ruth, paint like Michelangelo, or sing like George Beverly Shea. But you know what? I can pray like John Knox, like Martin Luther, and like Charles Spurgeon, because I can pray the same prayer they prayed. It is the perfect prayer because it came from the perfect Pray-er—Jesus Christ. You can pray this prayer daily, hourly, whenever you like. And you will find yourself in incredible company with the great saints of the ages, with believers of all other flavors, who all love God and address Him as Father because of their relationship to the Son.

. . . Which art in heaven . . .

As my Father, I relate to Him. But because He's in heaven, I reverence Him.

Be not rash with thy mouth, and let not thine heart be hasty to utter any thing before God: for God is in heaven, and thou upon earth: therefore let thy words be few.

Ecclesiastes 5:2

I like that! Solomon reminds us we don't have to pray with lofty terminology or sanctimonious tones. Yes, we must be reverent because God is in Heaven. But we can be real because He's our Father.

. . . Hallowed be thy name . . .

"Hallowed" is a word that has been lost in our language because the concept has been lost from our lives. It means "to make holy, separated, transcendent."

"O Lord, hallowed, holy is Your Name. Everyone around me, everything that touches me, all that is within me has been tainted and eroded by sin. But You are holy. Hallowed is Your Name." Second, notice not only God's Person, but also His purpose.

Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven.

There are only two kinds of people: those who are in harmony with God's purpose, saying, "Thy will be done," and those who live for themselves, saying, "My will be done."

God is terrifyingly fair. If you say, "My will be done," He will allow that to happen. If you say, "I don't want God," He will allow you to be damned. If you say, "I want my way," He will give you your way.

We have a choice to make. We can either, as the Psalmist says, "Be still, and know that He is God," or we can say, "God, You be still and know that I am me."

The prophet Isaiah went to Hezekiah and said, "Hezekiah, the Lord wants you to know it's time for you to die. Prepare your house." The original text of Isaiah 38:2 tells us Hezekiah turned his face to the wall and chattered like a bird, "Let me live. Let me live." Finally, God said, "Okay, you got it. Your will be done." Hezekiah lived fifteen more years, and they were the fifteen most tragic years of his life. During that time, Hezekiah set the stage for the Babylonian invasion, and he fathered a son named Manasseh who grew up to be the most wicked king in the history of Israel. Hezekiah would have been so much better simply praying, "Thy kingdom come, Thy will be done, Father, on earth as it is in heaven."

Do you pray in simplicity, "Father, Thy will be done"? Or do you pray with a demanding mentality, "You listen to me, God. I want this"?

Ruth Bell Graham has said she is glad God did not listen to her foolish demands in her younger years, or she would have married the wrong guy fifteen times. But she showed wisdom when she ended her prayers with the Lord's Prayer, saying, "Thy kingdom come. Thy will be done."

Third, God's provision . . .

Give us . . .

Notice Jesus did not pray, "Give Me My bread," but "Give us our bread." There are no singular pronouns in the Lord's Prayer. For me, it's so freeing to think of my needs as "our needs." If I'm feeling tired, I pray, "Lord, give us strength, my brothers and sisters who are feeling fatigued today." If I'm sad, I pray, "Lord, lift our spirits today." There's wonderful, continual intercession when a person prays, "Our Father, give us this day, forgive us our debts, lead us not into temptation."

. . . This day . . .

Give us this day—not this month, not this year. Why does the Lord want us to pray day by day? Why can't we just sort of blanket our requests by saying, "Lord, give us this month our monthly needs," or "Give us this year our yearly bread"?

The Lord wants us to pray for our daily needs because prayer in and of itself is our greatest need. If the Father gave things to us on a monthly basis, we wouldn't pray very frequently. The Lord wants you and me to come before Him every day. Is it because He's on an ego trip? No. Is it because He has need of us? No. Because we have need of Him. He is our Bread.

. . . Our daily bread.

I think it's rather foolish for people to pray, "Give us this day our daily bread," but fail to take Communion. It's like praying, "Lord, send light," while keeping our eyes closed. "For this cause," writes Paul, "many are weak and sick and even dying unnecessarily" (see 1 Corinthians 11:30). I believe the ultimate answer to this request is found at the Communion Table, for truly He is our Bread. Don't let the pendulum swing too far, fundamental Protestant. Don't diminish the mystery of the Lord's Table by saying, "I don't believe Communion is really mystical or miraculous. It's not really necessary. It's optional."

No. It's foundational. It's essential. Check out the Book of Acts. Communion was a key component of the early church. Jesus Himself said, "Do this often in remembrance of Me. Be constantly fed and refreshed in Me."

Fourth, God's pardon . . .

And forgive us our debts . . .

"What is found in Christianity which is not found in any other religion?" This was the question asked at a seminar featuring several prominent Christian theologians. C. S. Lewis, the brilliant thinker and gifted author, was caught in traffic while the rest of the panel puzzled over this question. After about an hour, Lewis arrived, and the question was posed to him. "That's simple," he replied. "The forgiveness of sin."

Our past is buried in the sea of God's forgiveness and forgetfulness. He does not remember our sin anymore. And that is what makes Christianity absolutely unique.

. . . As we forgive our debtors.

In the expression of this prayer is the explosion of forgiveness. I might begin praying the Lord's Prayer with bitterness in my heart toward someone who hurt me six years ago, eight weeks ago, or ten minutes ago. But as I pray, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors," suddenly the resentment, the bitterness, the ill-will dissipates from me as I pray this prayer meaningfully.

Fifth, God's protection . . .

And lead us not into temptation . . .

The word "temptation" does not mean a drawing into sin, but into testing. Although Scripture records Abraham was tempted with a knife in his hand and his son on the altar (Genesis 22:1), the temptation was not to do evil. It was a testing. James 1:13 says that God cannot be tempted with evil, neither tempts He any man with evil. God does not tempt you.

What, then, is Jesus teaching us to pray here? "Lead us not into testing."

Wait a minute! Doesn't the Word declare that testing is good? Doesn't James say to count it all joy when you fall into various tests and trials, knowing that testing produces patience? Doesn't Peter say that tests purify us as gold purified in the fire? Why would we pray, "Lead us not into testing"? The answer is humility. Which of us would stand up today and say, "Lord, test me! I'm ready! Send testing my way, and watch me flex my spiritual muscles." Foolish is the person who would say such a thing! Thus, it's in humility that we constantly pray, "Lead us not into testing." But if I have prayed, "Lord lead us not into temptation," then should God take me through testing, I can embrace it joyfully, knowing He will not test me above what I am able (1 Corinthians 10:13).

. . . But deliver us from evil.

Satan is real, and we need God's protection.

I once read a story about George Adam Smith, a wonderful preacher and author, who was on a mountain-climbing tour of the Alps. On one particularly high peak, he ran to the very precipice and looked out over Switzerland. Suddenly, a strong gust of wind came up that threatened to blow him over the edge. From several feet away, his guide called to him, "Mr. Smith! On your knees, sir! The only way you're safe up here is on your knees!"

It has been rightly said that Satan trembles when he sees the weakest saint upon his knees. Jesus taught us to pray, "God, protect us. Lead us not into trials and testing. And deliver us from the evil one."

Finally, we come to the last component—God's preeminence.

For thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory, for ever. Amen.

This concise and potent prayer ends in an explosion of praise, literally reading, "For thine is the kingship, and the weight or substance. It's all Yours. You are King. You are powerful! Glory! So be it!"

When I consider,

- God's Person—that He's my Abba, my Papa,
- His purpose—which is right,
- His provision—daily bread and the Bread of Life,
- His pardon—I am forgiven, and can forgive others, and
- His protection—from temptation and the evil one,

I have no other choice but to worship Him. God does not need our worship, but we need to worship. When I'm at a place where I'm saying, "For Thine is the kingdom, and the power, and the glory for ever," with open heart and raised hands, suddenly I'm outside myself, lifted above my cares and worries, my hobbies and toys.

The Lord's Prayer is comprised of sixty-five profoundly simple and simply profound words. You can meditate on this prayer for hours, days, months, and years for the rest of your life. But I encourage you to appropriate it right now. Allow this sacrament to be worked into your life, and you'll find a whole new dimension of the Lord's Person and purpose, provision and pardon, protection and preeminence worked out through your life.

7 Matthew 7:1
Judge not, that ye be not judged.

The Greek word translated "judge" is krino, which means "to judge to the place of condemnation." It's when you're in someone's face, so to speak, pointing your finger at them, and condemning them.

In Romans 16:17, Paul instructs the early church to mark the man who causes division. And in Galatians 1:8, he writes, "But though we, or an angel from heaven, preach any other gospel unto you than that which we have preached unto you, let him be accursed." So there is a need to judge, but not to the place of condemnation. Rather, we are to judge for identification and for restoration. I am to love people enough that when I see them erring, I am to say to them lovingly, "Because I care about you, I want you to know that you're going in the wrong direction."

> Thou shalt not hate thy brother in thine heart: thou shalt in any wise rebuke thy neighbour, and not suffer sin upon him.
> Leviticus 19:17

Don't hate your brother, but love him by not allowing him to continue in his sin.

> Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault, ye which are spiritual, restore such a one in the spirit of meekness; considering thyself, lest thou also be tempted.
> Galatians 6:1

According to Scripture, I must make some judgments and identification. But I am not to have an attitude of condemnation. How do I know if I'm condemning people? If I am not willing to partake in restoration, then I am probably practicing condemnation. When Jesus walked into the Upper Room where His disciples were sitting, He noticed they had dirty feet. Did He point His finger and say, "You guys, why don't you wash your stinky feet? It's a mess up here." No. John 13 says He rose from supper, girded Himself with a towel, and began to wash their feet Himself. So, too, I do not believe I have the right to point out someone's dirty feet unless I'm willing to kneel down and wash them.

Matthew 7:2

For with what judgment ye judge, ye shall be judged: and with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you again.

The manner in which I judge is the way I will be judged. Is it the manner in which I will be judged by God? No. All my sins have been dealt with on the Cross of Calvary. Then who is going to judge me? People will. If I am critical of others, pointing out dirt on their feet with no intention of restoring, healing, or helping, I am going to find that same kind of judgment hurled at me.

In the first chapter of the Book of Judges, the men of Judah said to the men of Simeon, "There's a camp of Canaanites over in this valley. Let's go take them on." After beating the Canaanites soundly, the Israelites captured Adoni-bezek, the Canaanite king, and chopped off his thumbs and big toes. Why? Adoni-bezek himself gave the answer when he said, "Threescore and ten kings, having their thumbs and their great toes cut off, gathered their meat under my table: as I have done, so God hath requited me" (Judges 1:7).

If you chop up someone, or cut down someone, watch out. Jesus said the way you judge is the way you'll be judged.

Matthew 7:3–5

And why beholdest thou the mote that is in thy brother's eye, but considerest not the beam that is in thine own eye? Or how wilt thou say to thy brother, Let me pull out the mote out of thine eye; and, behold, a beam is in thine own eye? Thou hypocrite, first cast out the beam out of thine own eye; and then shalt thou see clearly to cast out the mote out of thy brother's eye.

I find this fascinating because the words Jesus used imply that the speck —the splinter I see in my brother's eye—is of the same exact material as the beam in my own eye, only smaller in dimension. That's why I can spot certain sins in other people very easily. They're my sins. Whatever sins you struggle with personally are the sins you will point out in others most readily. David found this to be true. The prophet Nathan came to him and said, "David, we have a problem. There's a rich man who has all sorts of sheep. Someone came to visit him, and instead of going out to his own herds and taking one of his own lambs, this rich man went to his neighbor who was very poor, grabbed his neighbor's one and only lamb, and killed it to serve his guest."

Outraged, David said, "What? The man who has done this thing shall surely die!" The Old Testament Law never prescribed death as the penalty for this kind of transgression. Yet, with blood vessels bursting and finger pointing, David said, "Kill him!"

Then Nathan said, "David, thou art the man. It's you. You have many wives and concubines, yet you stole Uriah's wife, Bathsheba, and you took her into your house. Thou art the man."

Why was David so eager to mete out excessive judgment? Because we're always harshest with the sin in others that also lurks within our own hearts. The old saying is true: You can always tell a preacher's sins by what he preaches against. And Jesus is saying, "If you see splinters in others, realize it's a splinter off the beam that is in your own eye."

Jesus is not saying you shouldn't help the brother who has a splinter in his eye. Instead, He is saying to make sure you recognize and deal with the beam in your own eye first. "Create in me a clean heart, O God," David prayed. "Then will I teach transgressors thy ways" (see Psalm 51:10, 13, emphasis mine). "Once You deal with me, Lord, my attitude will be entirely different as I deal with others."

Matthew 7:6

Give not that which is holy unto the dogs, neither cast ye your pearls before swine, lest they trample them under their feet, and turn again and rend you.

To be effective in ministry, we must make judgments—not for condemnation, but for identification. Is this person open? Is he sensitive? Is he hungering? Or does he just want to argue and discuss endlessly? The Lord loves to see us effective, and Satan would love to see us sidetracked. How do we know what is wise in these matters? How can we know what we should do and where we should invest our time? How does this work out practically? Jesus gives the answer in the next verse.

Matthew 7:7–11

Ask, and it shall be given you; seek, and ye shall find; knock, and it shall be opened unto you: For every one that asketh receiveth; and he that seeketh findeth; and to him that knocketh it shall be opened. Or what man is there of you, whom if his son ask bread, will he give him a stone? Or if he ask a fish, will he give him a serpent? If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in heaven give good things to them that ask him?

Ask your Father! In the Greek language, it's written this way: Keep asking and it shall be given. Keep seeking and you shall find. Keep knocking and it will be opened. The tense used speaks of continual action. When you don't know what to do, keep asking, keep seeking, keep knocking.

Now, please bear in mind folks that God does not want us to keep asking and keep seeking and keep knocking because He's playing hard to get. It's not as though He's holding a dog biscuit out to me, saying, "Speak, Jon. Speak." No, that's not the heart of our Father. Rather, He is determined to cultivate a relationship with me that will be as vital in the ages to come as it is presently. Thus, He says to us, "I want you to be continually asking, continually seeking, continually knocking because you need the exercise in developing spiritual communication skills. And as you do, I'll take care of you. I'm not going to allow you to bite into a rock or eat a snake. I'll guide you and give you wisdom."

Matthew 7:12

Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

When you come across the word "therefore," you should always stop and ask what it's "there for." In this verse, commonly known as the Golden Rule, it precedes a summation of verses 1 through 11.

Matthew 7:13, 14

Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it.

I went down the Rogue River in Oregon in a jet boat one summer, and when we came to Hell's Gate, the water seemed so tranquil with rock canyons on either side. But our guide said, "The water below you right now is one hundred fifty feet-deep, and because the river is channeled into such a small area, it is incredibly powerful." When filming the John Wayne movie Rooster Cogburn, one of the scenes called for a guy to jump from one of the cliffs at Hell's Gate into this 150-feet deep pool of water. The stunt man studied the currents and found that about four or five feet below the seeming tranquility of the surface, there were whirlpools that could have sucked him straight down. Although this stunt man was paid $150,000 for one jump, afterward, he said he would never do it again.

Jesus said, "Narrow is the way that leads to life." When things get narrow, they get strong, deep, and powerful.

Matthew 7:15

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing, but inwardly they are ravening wolves.

In Acts 20, Paul said the same thing to the elders at Ephesus: "When I leave, men will rise up, and draw disciples to themselves." He called such men ravenous wolves, even as Jesus did here. How will you know them? Acts 20 says they will seek to draw men after themselves instead of pointing them to Jesus. Secondly, 2 Peter 2:3 says these ravenous wolves will make merchandise of you. They'll go for your pocketbooks, concerned not so much about feeding you as they are about fleecing you.

The writings that circulated among the early church, called the Didache, specifically stated that if a man said, "Thus saith the Lord. I have need of a steak dinner and a new garment," he was to be branded as a false prophet immediately. Beware of any man who preaches about his own needs.

One of Aesop's fables is about a hungry wolf that put a sheepskin over himself and cruised into the sheepfold. It just so happened that the same night, the shepherd also had a strange craving for mutton. So he went out to his sheepfold and plunged his knife into the biggest sheep within the flock, which, of course, turned out to be the wolf.

The wolf who was disguised as a sheep was eventually dealt with by the shepherd. So, too, our Good Shepherd watches out for His flock.

Matthew 7:16–20

Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.

We are not to be judges, but we are to look for fruit. The fruit we are to look for is not flawless, because we are all full of flaws and shortcomings. No, the issue is not flawlessness, but fruitfulness. The tree that has a lot of leaves but no real fruit is going to be dealt with severely when it is hewn down and cast into the fire.

Matthew 7:21, 22

Not every one that saith unto me, Lord, Lord, shall enter into the kingdom of heaven; but he that doeth the will of my Father which is in heaven. Many will say to me in that day, Lord, Lord, have we not prophesied in thy name? and in thy name have cast out devils? and in thy name done many wonderful works?

Many of these wolves and false trees will come to Jesus and say, "But, Lord, didn't we prophesy? Didn't we cast out demons? Didn't we do miracles?" The question arises, "How could these wolves, these false leaders, these bogus trees do these things? How could they prophesy, cast out demons, and do miracles if they were fakes?" There are three possible answers.

One is that they were lying. They never did them. Maybe they just thought about doing them, or thought they were doing them. Second, it is possible they were doing these things in the power of the devil. The Book of Acts talks about Simon the Sorcerer, who did miracles, but not in the power of the Spirit. In Moses' day, Pharaoh's magicians copied, to a certain extent, the miracles of God, but it was by the power of the devil. Third, the Lord could have been simply using them in spite of themselves. The Lord used Balaam, even though Balaam was not right with Him. He prophesied through King Saul, even though Saul's heart was far from Him. He spoke prophetically through Caiaphas the high priest, saying, "Should not one man die for the nation?" although Caiaphas knew it not.

Notice that many will say, "Did not we prophesy?" Always be wary of people who promote themselves in ministry. Whenever I hear a ministry say, "Look what we are doing," bells ring, and red flags go up in my mind because Jesus taught humility and secrecy.

Matthew 7:23

And then will I profess unto them, I never knew you: depart from me, ye that work iniquity.

Engraved in a cathedral in Germany are these words: Thus speaketh Christ our Lord to us.

You Call Me Master

You call Me Master and obey Me not.

You call Me Light and see Me not.

You call Me the Way and walk Me not.

You call Me Life and choose Me not.

You call Me Wise and follow Me not.

You call Me Fair and love Me not.

You call Me Rich and ask Me not.

You call Me Eternal and seek Me not.

You call Me Noble and serve Me not.

You call Me Gracious and trust Me not.

You call Me Might and honor Me not.

You call Me Just and fear Me not.

If I condemn you, blame Me not.

Matthew 7:24–27

Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man, which built his house upon a rock: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: And the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew, and beat upon that house; and it fell: and great was the fall of it.

Here is the familiar story of two men building houses. Both men used the same material. Both built in the same geographical location. But one man's house stood while the other man's house collapsed. The difference was in the foundations. One built on the rock, the other on the sand. In Palestine, all land becomes parched in the summer, causing even the sandy and unstable areas to appear rock-solid. The true test doesn't come until the rain falls. Jesus here is saying, "Be careful where you build your house. Build on something tried and true. Build upon the Rock."

Who is the one who builds his house upon the rock? The one who hears the Words of the Lord and does them. Who is the one who builds on the sand? The one who hears His Words but doesn't do them.

One of the great dangers for we who love the Scriptures is to think hearing is equivalent to doing. You might say tonight, "Yeah, I agree with the teaching Jesus gave on judging. I shouldn't judge. I need to show mercy. Right on." But if you leave here and immediately turn to someone and start gossiping or analyzing, judging or critiquing, you're foolish, and your house will collapse.

We have such need to hear these words of Jesus because Bible students are in great danger of being foolish men who erroneously conclude that because they are hearing the truth and agreeing with the truth, they are automatically practicing the truth. The wise man not only hears Jesus' words but also puts them into practice. And his house stands when the storm comes.

Matthew 7:28, 29

And it came to pass, when Jesus had ended these sayings, the people were astonished at his doctrine: For he taught them as one having authority, and not as the scribes.

After this thirty-minute sermon, the people were amazed, accustomed as they were to hearing teaching by scribes who did nothing more than quote other scribes. “Rabbi So-and-So says . . . but Rabbi So-and-So disagrees. So Rabbi So-and-So proposes.”

After hearing all these rabbis, a person would say, “Wait a minute. This is crazy. What’s the solution? Where’s the authority? There’s no conclusion!”

Jesus said, “You have heard it said of old, but I say unto you . . . .”

The crowds marveled, “Wow!” they said. “He speaks with authority, and what He says makes sense.”

Did the masses then say, “We’re going to follow Him! This is great! He’s our Man!”? No. That’s not what happened. Why? C. S. Lewis, in his classic book, Mere Christianity, gives this answer:

> When I was a child I often had toothaches, and I knew that if I went to my mother she would give me something which would deaden the pain for that night and let me get to sleep. But I did not go to my mother—at least, not till the pain became very bad. And the reason I did not go was this. I did not doubt she would give me the aspirin; but I knew she would also do something else. I knew she would take me to the dentist next morning. I could not get what I wanted out of her without getting something more, which I did not want. I wanted immediate relief from pain: but I could not get it without having my teeth set permanently right. And I knew those dentists; I knew they started fiddling about with all sorts of other teeth which had not yet begun to ache. They would not let sleeping dogs lie.[1]

That’s why I thank the Lord for the saints at Applegate Christian Fellowship. Because they, as a group of rag-tag disciples, say, “Lord, we have a toothache, and You are the dentist. Keep on drilling. Sleeping dogs notwithstanding, Father, do whatever it takes to make us right.”

WHY ONE WAY?
A Topical Study of MATTHEW 7:13, 14

Over and over again, I find myself dialoguing on this particular point with unbelievers who say, "We like Jesus, but we reject the exclusive mentality you propagate." Why do people feel this way? I suggest to you it is because our culture—our generation in particular—is more interested in equality than in truth. We are more afraid of being thought prejudiced or bigoted than of being wrong. We are scared to death of being labeled narrow-minded.

Yet, that is exactly what Jesus Christ calls us to. He came on the scene and said there is an exclusive mentality to Christianity. He was direct and straightforward when He said, "Enter ye in at the strait gate: for wide is the gate, and broad is the way, that leadeth to destruction, and many there be which go in thereat: Because strait is the gate, and narrow is the way, which leadeth unto life, and few there be that find it" (Matthew 7:13, 14).

Why is Christianity so exclusive and so narrow? First of all, narrowness is God's protection of us.

God is saying, "I understand the frailty of humanity and that you are but children. So I will keep it real simple. The options? Only two: Jesus Christ or eternal death. That's it."

There are those who say, "All paths lead to God. You can embrace any philosophy and follow any guru as long as you're sincere. They all lead to heaven, bliss, or nirvana." But I ask them, "Do you believe those who followed the teachings of Jim Jones in Guyana were following a godly path as they drank Kool-Aid laced with cyanide? Do you believe if you followed Charles Manson sincerely, you would end up in the right spot eternally? Do you believe sincerely following Adolf Hitler, who used Scripture and quoted theologians, would lead to heaven?"

You see, if the Lord had fifteen legitimate paths to heaven, the Enemy would still counter with fifteen thousand illegitimate destructive paths, and it would still be confusing. There will always be Adolf Hitlers, Charlie Mansons, and Jim Joneses who will be deceptive and manipulative, weird and destructive. So our Father, in His wisdom, says, "Kids, I'm going to keep it real simple. There are not fifteen paths or eighteen paths. No. There's only one Way: Jesus, My Son."

Second, God made Christianity exclusive not only as protection for us, but as a proclamation to us. Jesus said, "I am the way, the truth, and the life: no man cometh unto the Father, but by me" (John 14:6). In Greek, it is most clear that He is saying, "I am the only way. There is no other way to enter into the presence of the Father but by Me." God's proclamation is exceedingly clear to any and all who will listen.

Third, and most importantly, narrow is the gate because of God's provision for us. If, indeed, there are many paths to God and many routes to eternal life, then the sacrifice God made in becoming a Man—slaughtered before the foundation of the world, plunging into hell, suffering in ways we will never comprehend—was all unnecessary.

If you say, "Well, let's be open-minded about the way to heaven," you discount the provision of what God did on your behalf. Mohammed didn't die for you. Buddha wouldn't die for you.

Only Jesus gave everything to save you from your sins.

Mohammed came on the scene and said, "Do not look at me. My teachings are my essence."

Buddha never claimed to be anything of a godly man at all. In fact, his religion or philosophy is basically atheistic.

Hinduism is pantheistic.

Jesus alone says, "It's Me. I am the Way."

You will hear over and over again that "Spirituality is a journey up a holy mountain, and no matter which route you take, when you get to the top, you will find God. So just wander wherever you feel inclined and embrace the other pilgrims on their paths. Don't try to convert them, for every route leads to the top of the mountain, and they will find God just as you will." Bunk. The analogy is all wrong. You see, it is not any mountain upon which God sits and man meanders. It is El Capitan—a sheer face, a stone where there are no handholds and no toeholds—a rock that is insurmountable and un-climbable.

God is holy, folks. He is not some sort of portly gentleman sitting on top of a hill, saying, "Any Buddha or guru who can find Me is wonderful." Rather, He is high and holy on the top of a sheer face, and although man is sinful, God in His love reaches down to him. It is not man meandering up to God. It is God reaching down to man, saying, "I will elevate you and save you if you grab hold of Me through the Person of My Son."

Every religion is man trying to make it up the mountain. Christianity alone says, "You're out to lunch, off the wall, and hopelessly lost—but I love you. And I'm reaching down to you. Grab My hand."

> Before I mow the grass, suppose I see a group of ants headed for destruction, and wanting their lives to be spared from the mower, I say, "Ants, repent! Hide! Run from the judgment to come!"
>
> They would look at me and scratch their heads. They wouldn't comprehend what I was saying because I'm too big. So the only way I could communicate effectively with them would be to become one of them—to become an ant myself.

God declared His holiness and righteousness and love to us, but we didn't hear Him. In His awesomeness, we couldn't comprehend Him.

So God became a Man, an ant, if you would, in the Person of Jesus, and He dwelt among us, not only to communicate to us truth, but to die for us when we violated that truth.

No one else did that. No one else could. No one else would. Only Jesus.

I am narrow-minded because Jesus Christ said, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life."

Jesus is God's protection of me, God's proclamation to me, and God's glorious provision for me.

That's fact. That's reality.

SINCERELY SAVED
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 7:21–23

It was his farewell gathering. Knowing he was on his way to Rome where he could be beheaded, Paul gave final instruction to a group of elders from the church in Ephesus. "For three years," he said, "I have taught you and warned you with many tears" (see Acts 20).

If a shepherd only warns the flock, but never feeds them, they will die of malnutrition. If he only feeds the flock and never warns them, he is simply fattening them up for the kill.

In the Sermon on the Mount, the Good Shepherd both fed and warned His flock as the masses gathered around Him on the hillside. He began by talking about the pathway to happiness. His first words were "Blessed, or happy, are the poor in spirit. Happy are they who mourn. Happy are the meek."

Then He talked about the highway of holiness. Many people thought they were pretty good and fairly holy because they didn't commit murder or adultery. But Jesus explained to them that if they were angry with their brother without a cause, they were guilty of murder. If they had looked at a woman with lust in their heart, they were adulterers. Such teaching would drive people to realize that no one is holy, that all are sinners, and that everyone needs a Savior.

Finally, He taught that the broad way is hazardous, concluding His Sermon with this sober exhortation: "There are choices you must make concerning the right way and the wrong way."

> There are two gates. Narrow is the gate that leads to life and broad is the way that leads to damnation. You've got to make a choice, and the wrong choice will be hazardous to your eternal state.
> There are two trees. When you're wondering whom you should listen to or receive from, check out the fruit. A good tree cannot bear bad fruit, and a bad tree cannot bear good fruit. Watch out for deception.

There are two foundations. The wise man builds his house upon the rock, and the foolish man builds his house upon the sand. The wrong choice will lead to destruction. You'll lose everything.

It is in this context that we find our text—an extremely sobering, heavy-duty warning. What does it mean, and does it apply to us? In Acts 8, we see an example of one who could say, "Lord, Lord, did I not prophesy? Cast out demons? Do wonderful works?" We see a man who had religion, but not relationship, activity, but not intimacy. Perhaps his story will make us think about our own situations personally.

> And Saul was consenting unto his death. And at that time there was a great persecution against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of Judaea and Samaria, except the apostles. And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him. As for Saul, he made havoc of the church, entering into every house, and haling men and women committed them to prison.
> Acts 8:1–3

Saul was a man who was radically devoted to God—a Pharisee and a scholar. Believing that Christians were a dangerous cult, Saul thought he was doing God a favor by pulling them from their houses, beating them, and imprisoning them.

> Therefore they that were scattered abroad went every where preaching the word.
> Acts 8:4

Fleeing persecution, the church spread out. Christians went everywhere, and as they went, they preached the Word.

> Then Philip went down to the city of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them.
> Acts 8:5

One believer, a man named Philip, went to the city of Samaria, which is located between Jerusalem to the south and Galilee to the north. This must have totally confounded the Samaritans, who knew the Jews took great pains to avoid even traveling through their region.

> And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the miracles which he did. For unclean spirits, crying with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were lame, were healed. And there was great joy in that city.
> Acts 8:6–8

The Samaritans were confounded that Philip came, convicted by what he said, and convinced by what they saw. The lame were healed, the oppressed were delivered, and the entire city was filled with joy.

> But there was a certain man, called Simon, which beforetime in the same city used sorcery, and bewitched the people of Samaria, giving out that himself was some great one: To whom they all gave heed, from the least to the greatest, saying, This man is the great power of God. And to him they had regard, because that of long time he had bewitched them with sorceries.
> Acts 8:9–11

Simon had been on the scene for many years. He was fascinating to the people and had a certain power over them because of his magic tricks. He made himself out to be someone great, and the people thought he possessed the power of God.

> But when they believed Philip preaching the things concerning the kingdom of God, and the name of Jesus Christ, they were baptized, both men and women.
> Acts 8:12

Although the Samaritans were confounded that Philip came, convicted by what he said, convinced by what they saw, they were not converted until they heard the message concerning the kingdom of God and the Name of Jesus Christ. Miracles do not convert people. Deliverance from demons does not convert people. Good deeds and good works do not convert people. What converts people is the message of the kingdom of God in the Name of Jesus Christ.

In John 10, we read that many came to Jesus and said of John the Baptist, "John did no mighty miracles, but all things he spake concerning this Man are true" (see verse 41). Jesus called John the greatest of all Old Testament prophets not because John did miracles, but because John spoke about Him. This encourages me because, although I might not be able to confound people with my good works or convince people with signs and wonders, I can see the conversion of people as I share this simple Gospel: Jesus loves you. He died for you. He wants to live within you.

When the Samaritans heard the preaching of the kingdom in the Name of Jesus, they were baptized, which is an outward sign of an inward acceptance.

> Then Simon himself believed also: and when he was baptized, he continued with Philip, and wondered, beholding the miracles and signs which were done. Now when the apostles which were at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent unto them Peter and John: Who, when they were come down, prayed for them, that they might receive the Holy Ghost: (For as yet he was fallen upon none of them: only they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus.) Then laid they their hands on them, and they received the Holy Ghost. And when Simon saw that through laying on of the apostles' hands the Holy Ghost was given, he offered them money, saying, Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost. But Peter said unto him, Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money. Thou hast neither part nor lot in this matter: for thy heart is not right in the sight of God. Repent therefore of this thy wickedness, and pray God, if perhaps the thought of thine heart may be forgiven thee. For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity. Then answered Simon, and said, Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me.

Acts 8:13–24

Although Simon professed to believe and was baptized, in reality Peter said, "You are in the gall of bitterness, in the bond of iniquity." In other words, "Your conversion is not real. And you're in big trouble."

Why wasn't Simon's conversion real? What went wrong?

First, Simon had a wrong view of self. Verse 9 says he made himself out to be someone great. That's the first problem. Jesus said if you want to be great in the kingdom, become the servant of all. Simon wanted to be esteemed and noticed by all.

How are you doing in the area of servanthood? We sing the song, "Lord, make me a servant." But how do you react when people treat you like a servant—when they don't thank or compliment you on what you've done? A servant serves without expecting acknowledgment. Jesus said if you want to be great, become the servant of all.

Second, Simon had a wrong view of supernatural power. When he saw that the laying on of hands by the apostles gave the believers in Samaria power, he said, "Give me also this power, that on whomsoever I lay hands, he may receive the Holy Ghost" (see verse 19). He didn't want the power of the Spirit to change his character, only to fulfill his ambition. This is where King Saul, from the Old Testament, blew it. Saul used the things of God to exalt himself. David, on the other hand, allowed himself to be used to exalt God. That's why Saul fell tragically and David was used powerfully.

Do you have a wrong view of supernatural power? Do you pray, "Give me power that I might accomplish this task and fulfill that ambition"? Or do you pray, "Give me the power of Your Spirit to break me and make me more like Your Son"?

Third, notice in Simon a wrong view of the Spirit. In verse 20, Peter said, "You don't understand, Simon, that the gift of God is not purchased with money, nor is it earned by energy. It is a gift that is bestowed freely by God's grace and mercy. You don't earn it, you don't prove that you are worthy of it, and you can't buy it."

And yet people today, like Simon, say, "What can I do to earn the Spirit? I'll fast for thirty days. I'll go to church every week for three months. I won't kick the dog anymore. I'll give to the building fund. I'll do this, that, or the other, and maybe then God will bless me."

That's a wrong view of the Spirit. You cannot purchase Him with energy or with money. Jesus said, "If you then being evil know how to give good gifts to your children, how much more will the heavenly Father give the Holy Ghost to them that ask" (see Luke 11:13). You just ask for the Spirit in humility, with expectancy, and according to God's grace and mercy.

Fourth, Simon had a wrong view of sin. When told he was in sin, he said to Peter, "Pray ye to the Lord for me, that none of these things which ye have spoken come upon me." There was not confession, there was not repentance, there was only a concern about repercussions. Although Simon believed initially and was baptized physically, he was headed for damnation eternally because of his wrong view of self, of supernatural power, of the Spirit, and of sin.

There are those today who are in danger of the same thing. You might say, "Well, I believe in Jesus." But the Book of James says that even the demons believe. Intellectual belief isn't enough. Salvation takes place when you put your full trust in Jesus Christ and Him alone.

"But I work for Jesus," you might say. "I teach Sunday school," or "I'm a part of the worship team." You might even lead a Bible study, but that doesn't assure you a place in the kingdom. You might do many wonderful works, but if you're not walking with the Lord personally and intimately, you're in danger of damnation eternally.

No wonder Peter pleads in 2 Peter 1:10, "Make your calling and election sure." What does it mean to make your calling and election sure, to be truly saved? Let's look again at Acts 8.

> And they, when they had testified and preached the word of the Lord, returned to Jerusalem, and preached the gospel in many villages of the Samaritans. And the angel of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert. And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of Ethiopia, an eunuch of great authority under Candace queen of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her treasure, and had come to Jerusalem for to worship, was returning, and sitting in his chariot read Esaias the prophet.

Acts 8:25–28

After Philip left Samaria, the angel of the Lord told him to go south toward the desert where he would encounter an Ethiopian eunuch reading from the Book of Isaiah.

Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near, and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip ran thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said, Understandest thou what thou readest?

Acts 8:29–30

Philip caught up with him and asked, "Do you understand what you're reading?"

And he said, How can I, except some man should guide me? And he desired Philip that he would come up and sit with him.

Acts 8:31

The eunuch "happened" to be reading Isaiah 53:7, 8, and he asked Philip of whom the passage was speaking.

Then Philip opened his mouth, and began at the same scripture, and preached unto him Jesus.

Acts 8:35

There can be no finer exposition, no higher teaching, no more effective preaching than using the Word of God to point to the Son of God.

And as they went on their way, they came unto a certain water: and the eunuch said, See, here is water; what doth hinder me to be baptized? And Philip said, If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest. And he answered and said, I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God. And he commanded the chariot to stand still: and they went down both into the water, both Philip and the eunuch; and he baptized him. And when they were come up out of the water, the Spirit of the Lord caught away Philip, that the eunuch saw him no more: and he went on his way rejoicing.

Acts 8:36–39

This is true conversion.

First, we see in this story the sovereign work of the Spirit. It was a sovereign work of the Spirit when He drew the Ethiopian to Jerusalem to worship. It was an equally sovereign work of the Spirit when He said to Philip, "Leave the revival of Samaria. Go to the desert. There's a man there I want you to meet."

Second, we see the seeking heart of a sinner. The eunuch was searching the Scripture, not watching a miracle.

Third, there was a Scriptural base for salvation. When Philip said, "Isaiah is talking about Jesus Christ," he based his witness upon the Word. Paul declares faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God.

Finally, there was a sincere expression by the servant. Unlike Simon the sorcerer, the Ethiopian eunuch didn't say, "Give me power." He said, "Baptize me."

Every one of us falls into one of these two categories: Either we are like Simon the Sorcerer, or we are like the Ethiopian eunuch. Both stories are in the same chapter of Acts. Both take place in a similar situation. But each has an entirely different conclusion.

You may have been baptized fifty times or more, but when you see God, you may hear Him say, "Depart from Me. I never knew you." You might be one who's hung around the church for years—maybe you even hold a prominent position. But familiarity alone is no guarantee. The most successful skydiver in history died when he took a jump and halfway down realized he forgot to pack his parachute.

Jesus talked more about damnation and hell than any other subject because He knew its reality. He was a Good Shepherd who said, "This is serious."

How do you know if your salvation is real?

If you are feeling like Simon the sorcerer—in the grasp and dominion of sin—then you are in jeopardy. Repent today, and be finally, truly, and eternally saved.

If, however, you are like the Ethiopian eunuch, you will go your way rejoicing. Romans 8 declares His Spirit bears witness with our spirit that we are the children of God. Thus, you will rejoice in your heart, and you will know that you know that you know you're born again. No one will have to talk you into it or convince you of it because you will have His witness in your heart.

WHEN BAD THINGS HAPPEN TO GOOD PEOPLE
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 7:24–27

When a Congressman was killed in a plane crash after researching United States assistance in the Ethiopian famine, the words of the minister conducting his memorial service caught my attention. "Why good people experience tragedy, I can't say," he said. "Why bad things happen to good people, I don't know."

This statement has been stirring in my mind for some time now. Why do bad things happen to good people? Are there no answers? Whether concerning lives lost in Ethiopia, or your own situation of the past week or two, people always ask the question: Why do bad things happen to good people? A few years ago, a best-selling book was entitled just that: Why Bad Things Happen to Good People. The author concluded there are no real answers, even as the minister said there are no easy answers. I suggest to you, however, that there is a profoundly simple answer to this question. It is this: There are no good people.

> As it is written, There is none righteous, no, not one: There is none that understandeth, there is none that seeketh after God. They are all gone out of the way, they are together become unprofitable; there is none that doeth good, no, not one.
> Romans 3:10–12

You see, the world thinks, "I'm Okay, you're Okay." But regardless of what psychologists tell us, this just isn't so, for those who look to worldly understandings and explanations miss the central truth: There are no good people. So the real question is not "Why do bad things happen to good people?" but "Why do good things happen to bad people?"

You might have had a bad day or a terrible time this last month or two. But what we deserve is to live in terror, in tragedy, in difficulty every day of our lives because there is none that is good, no, not one.

"Why, then," we sometimes wonder, "are good things happening to those people who live next to me? They're not in church today; they're out on the lake water-skiing. Yet they get the raises and promotions. Why do good things happen to them?"

The first verse my kids learned was Psalm 73:1, "God is good," followed by 1 John 4:16, "God is love," because I'm convinced that the first concepts we should teach our kids are the goodness and the love of God. He is a loving Father who causes His sun to rise on the just and on the unjust, sending rain upon the crops of the good and on the evil (Matthew 5:45). God loves to bless because He is good.

I once read a quote that said, "God is the victim of bad PR, usually propagated by those who know Him." Too often, believers and unbelievers alike generate the false idea that, although God occasionally does a good thing, He's basically mean. We hear sermons and testimonies to that effect, saying, "God got my attention when He broke my legs and took away my house and caused me to go bankrupt." That's not Father God, that's the Godfather!

One of the great frustrations I have in talking with unbelievers is their impression that they have to wait until their marriage is on the rocks, until their finances are crumbling, until cancer is eating them up before they will consider Christ. They think their lives have to fall apart before they turn to Jesus.

So to the person who's skiing on the lake today, behind his power boat, beside his cabin, having left his five-thousand-square-foot house in the city, we shouldn't say, "God's going to get you"—but, "Hasn't God been good to you?"

The Bible says God demonstrated His love for us all in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us (Romans 5:8), but people in the world today have lost this understanding. They don't realize that God demonstrated His love for all people when Jesus died for us, that God looked at us and desired to bless us, even while we were still sinners. Rain falls on the just and the unjust (Matthew 5:45). The sun shines on the believer and the unbeliever because God is good. Everything He gives us is because of grace —unmerited, undeserved, unearned favor. But if we don't recognize this, if we misinterpret the source of our blessings, we become narrow, bitter, and full of sorrow.

In our text, Jesus says a day is coming when the rains will fall and the winds shall beat on the house of every man. Of what storm is He speaking? Death. The statistics are conclusive: Ten out of ten people die. Every person who has ever lived since Jesus spoke these words has built his house and done his thing until the storm came, at which point it was determined whether he had built upon the rock or upon the sand.

Jesus ended His Sermon on the Mount speaking of—

- two roads: one unto life, one to destruction;
- two trees: one of fruitfulness, one of failure;
- two foundations: one to stand, one to collapse.

The choice is yours. Upon which foundation are you building?

"Wait," you say. "I have one more question. If God is our good Father, why does He allow the devil to inflict pain and disease, destruction and death, discouragement and difficulty? Can't God stop the devil and put an end to our misery?"

Yes, He can. And yes, He will. But presently, God allows storms to arise that test our foundation in order that we might see where we stand eternally.

> Several years ago on the East Coast, cod fishermen began to experience a real demand for their product, and they began to ship frozen cod all over the country. They discovered one drawback, however. In the freezing process, the cod lost their flavor. To remedy this, the fishermen shipped their cod live in saltwater tanks to be processed once they reached their destination.
> The fish arrived okay, but because they were sitting in these tanks, they became spongy and soft. For several years, the fishermen didn't know what to do. Then someone had a brilliant idea: Ship the fish in saltwater tanks, but throw in some catfish—the natural enemy of the codfish. They tried it. The catfish chased the cod all around the tank as they traveled cross-country, and when the cod arrived, those that made it alive were flavorful and were sold at premium prices.

The catfish were necessary to keep the cod moving, thereby enhancing their texture and flavor.

So, too, God says to us,

"Because I want the best for you both now and in eternity, I will allow an occasional catfish to come into your tank and chase you around for a little while. Otherwise, you'll just sit around and get soft."

- I will not test you above that which you are able (1 Corinthians 10:13).
- I will always be there for you (Matthew 28:20).
- Call upon Me in the day of trouble (Psalm 50:15).
- Cast your care upon Me (1 Peter 5:7).
- And remember, all things are working together for good (Romans 8:28).
- Trust Me (Psalm 37:3).

Build your life on the Rock, gang. Jesus is a sure foundation, and He won't let you down.

8 Matthew is the gospel of the King. In the first four chapters, His Person is revealed. In chapters 5 through 7, His principles are recorded. But the question arises: Does Jesus have the power to carry out those principles? Or is He, like so many of our leaders, a nice person with good principles, yet impotent to really make a difference? In Matthew 8, 9, and 10, we find the answer as we see the power of Jesus released.

In the following three chapters, Matthew records ten miracles which show Jesus not only had the rhetoric, but He had the dynamic to make things happen.

Matthew 8:1, 2 (a)

When he was come down from the mountain, great multitudes followed him. And, behold, there came a leper . . .

I think it fitting that the first miracle recorded in the New Testament deals with the cleansing of a leper because Isaiah 1:5, 6 makes it clear that leprosy is a picture of sin. Leviticus 13 teaches that leprosy begins beneath the surface of the skin—just as sin does. What you see outwardly in people's lives is only the result of what is going on within them. We are not sinners because we sin. We sin because we're sinners. Leviticus 13 goes on to say that leprosy, like sin, spreads throughout the body. Like sin, one could control it for a season. But if he didn't destroy it, it would eventually destroy him. The Talmud taught that leprosy was second only to death in its list of sixty-one defilements. He who had leprosy was as good as dead because his disease would separate him from the rest of the community. When a person contracted leprosy, he was forced to live only with fellow lepers. If he had to come to the city, the Law required him to cry out, "Unclean, unclean," in order for everyone within a one hundred fifty-foot radius to back away and clear the area. In the beginning stages, the skin of a leper would take on a hard, glossy appearance. As it progressed, it caused his nerves to become numb, which in turn led to the loss of fingers and toes.

The rabbis felt strongly that leprosy was a direct judgment from God. In fact, the word "leprosy" means "smitten." They felt that those who had leprosy were being judged by God and therefore must be terrible people.

Matthew 8:2 (b)

. . . and worshipped him, saying, Lord, if thou wilt, thou canst make me clean.

This leper, whose sickness was a symbol of sin, saw Jesus and had the audacity to go right through the multitude following Him and say, "Lord, if You want, You can make me clean." He didn't doubt Jesus' ability to make him clean; he doubted Jesus' willingness to do so. And I suggest to you that, like this leper, there's not one of us who doubts Jesus' ability to do the miraculous in our lives. But I suggest every one of us at times doubts His willingness.

- "Lord, if You want, You can heal my marriage," we pray.
- "If You want, You can save my child."
- "If You want, Lord, You can take away this habit, free me from that bondage, deal with my leprosy."

We know He can, but we question if He will.

This leper had the courage, the tenacity, and the audacity to approach Jesus and to come right into His presence. But like you and me, when he got there, he wondered, "Do You really want to make me clean?"

Matthew 8:3 (a)
And Jesus put forth his hand, and touched him. . . .

To this one with gross, running sores, and a strained voice, odor emanating, and digits missing, Jesus could have said, "Be clean," and the guy would have been clean. But what did Jesus do? He touched him. Regardless of the sin you might be struggling with right now, don't make the mistake of countless thousands of lepers saying, "I need to stay away from Jesus. I'm unclean." Jesus can handle your sin. He's not shocked or horrified by it. He's not embarrassed of it. Jesus touched the leper, and He can handle your sin as well.

The biggest mistake people make concerning Jesus is thinking, "When I get it together, then I'll let the Lord come near me. When I deal with my leprosy, then I'll let the Lord touch me."

But they'll never get it together until the Lord touches them!

You who are faltering in faith, struggling in sin, caught up in carnality, I have news for you. Jesus can handle it.

Not only are there those who say, "Don't touch me until I get it together," but there are those who say, "Touch me, Lord. I want to come into Your presence. I want to lift my hands and sing Your praise. But don't change me. I like myself just the way I am."

If the Lord touches you, you will inevitably be changed. If you don't want to be changed, it's vain to seek His touch.

Matthew 8:3 (b)

. . . saying, I will; be thou clean. And immediately his leprosy was cleansed.

How I love these words of Jesus. He said, "I will. I will! Be thou clean." Did you know our Lord never refused anyone who came to Him looking for help? He never said, "No, I don't have time for you." In every instance, He dealt with people graciously, mercifully, and compassionately.

Maybe you're saying, "Well, I've sought the Lord. I've asked Him for His help. I've asked Him to do this thing in my life, but it never happened. Why would He help the leper and not me?"

> Ye ask, and receive not, because ye ask amiss, that ye may consume it upon your lusts.
> James 4:3

The Greeks had a saying that when the gods wanted to punish a man, they answered all his prayers. Many times our requests are just plain wrong, and our Father loves us enough to say, "No," if "No" is the best answer. But He'll never turn you away. He'll always do what's best for you, and you'll see it sooner or later, if you'll just ask Him. There were multiplied thousands of lepers in this region, but only one came and asked Jesus to be healed, and only one went away clean.

Matthew 8:4 (a)

And Jesus saith unto him, See thou tell no man . . .

Why would Jesus say this? Jesus often told those whom He healed, "Don't tell anyone," because He knew the vulnerability of humanity. He knew our tendency to get excited about the physical, while missing the truly significant realm of the spiritual. Because He evidently didn't want people following Him merely to see what the next circuslike event would be, Jesus always downplayed the miraculous. He would send His disciples to share the gospel throughout the world, and He would preach before thousands. But when it came to miracles, it seems as though Jesus had a penchant for secrecy.

Matthew 8:4 (b)

. . . but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer the gift that Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

"Go show yourself to the priest," Jesus said, because in Leviticus 14, there was a prescribed cleansing ceremony for lepers who were healed. The interesting thing is, although the ceremony had been on the books for fifteen hundred years, never was one leper cleansed until this man.

Matthew 8:5–13

And when Jesus was entered into Capernaum, there came unto him a centurion, beseeching him, and saying, Lord, my servant lieth at home sick of the palsy, grievously tormented. And Jesus saith unto him, I will come and heal him. The centurion answered and said, Lord, I am not worthy that thou shouldest come under my roof: but speak the word only, and my servant shall be healed. For I am a man under authority, having soldiers under me: and I say to this man, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it. When Jesus heard it, he marvelled, and said to them that followed, Verily I say unto you, I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel. And I say unto you, That many shall come from the east and west, and shall sit down with Abraham, and Isaac, and Jacob, in the kingdom of heaven. But the children of the kingdom shall be cast out into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. And Jesus said unto the centurion, Go thy way; and as thou hast believed, so be it done unto thee. And his servant was healed in the selfsame hour.

Keep in mind that the Romans had conquered Israel and were therefore the despised occupiers of the land. Furthermore, to attain the position of centurion, one had to prove himself a valiant warrior in battle. Therefore, the centurion in this story was not merely a soldier in the occupying forces—he was a commanding officer. We also know, from Luke's account of the same incident, that he was wealthy.

So, in the passage before us, Matthew paints a picture of a wealthy Roman approaching a poor Galilean, a powerful centurion seeking out a meek Carpenter, a mighty man of war addressing the Prince of Peace.

Matthew 8:14 (a)

And when Jesus was come into Peter's house . . .

Mark tells us that Peter's house was in Capernaum. Yet John points out in his Gospel that Peter was from Bethsaida. This caught my attention, and I realized that Peter moved lock, stock, and barrel—fishing business, in-laws, the whole thing. He moved from his hometown of Bethsaida, which means "House of Fishing," to Capernaum, where Jesus had His headquarters. Peter left the place of occupational prosperity to be closer to Jesus. I think it would do us well to remember Peter's example. I am concerned about the number of people who move because of business reasons without considering if there is a group of people with whom they can worship and grow in the Lord.

There was a man in the Old Testament who based the decision as to where he would live on economic conditions. He lifted up his eyes, saw green grass, and said, "This is a great place for my cattle." The man's name was Lot, and he got in a lot of trouble because the green grass was growing right outside of Sodom and Gomorrah. It was a great place to raise cattle, but a lousy place to raise kids. Lot lifted up his eyes, but he didn't lift them high enough.

Peter did just the opposite. He said, "I want to be in the place where Jesus is ministering, in the place most conducive for me to follow, serve, and walk with Him." May the Lord give us such hearts in these days.

Matthew 8:14 (b)
. . . he saw his wife's mother laid, and sick of a fever.

Notice Peter was married. This is interesting because our Catholic friends suggest that to be a good spiritual leader, one should take a vow of poverty and celibacy. But they also teach Peter was the first pope, and look at him! He had a wife, a mother-in-law, and a house.

Matthew 8:15
And he touched her hand, and the fever left her: and she arose, and ministered unto them.

You can always tell a person who has been touched by Jesus because he will begin to minister. When the Lord touches you, you can't help but say, "To whom can I reach out and help?"

Matthew 8:16
When the even was come, they brought unto him many that were possessed with devils: and he cast out the spirits with his word, and healed all that were sick.

The darkness was defeated by the light of His Word.

Matthew 8:17
That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, Himself took our infirmities, and bare our sicknesses.

Here, Matthew draws the attention of his Jewish readers back to Isaiah 53:4, "Surely he hath borne our griefs, and carried our sorrows." Based on this verse, there are those who teach that since Jesus bore our infirmities and our sicknesses, those who are sick are out of the will of God, or their faith is lacking. Please note that sin, sickness, and death were all defeated on the Cross. When the kingdom is established on earth, the power of sin will be eradicated. All will be healed. There will be no death. But until then, those who preach true believers should never be sick must also preach that true believers should never sin and never die.

Am I saying that Jesus doesn't heal? Of course He heals. Am I saying we shouldn't pray for the sick? No. We are commanded to pray for the sick. What I am questioning is the dogma, propagated on Christian TV that says "God never intends anyone to be sick. All should be healed."

All will be healed. Some will be healed now, some a year from now, some will be healed when they get to heaven. Jesus bore our sicknesses and our infirmities, and all of these problems, hurts, and pains and diseases are going to be healed—sooner or eventually. That's a promise.

Matthew 8:18, 19

Now when Jesus saw great multitudes about him, he gave commandment to depart unto the other side. And a certain scribe came, and said unto him, Master, I will follow thee whithersoever thou goest.

Perhaps this scribe was one who sat on the hillside and listened to the Sermon on the Mount. After hearing Jesus' principles and seeing His power as He healed all who were sick, it's no wonder he said, "Count me in. I'll follow You." Who wouldn't? Who wouldn't follow the Lord? The words He spoke and still speaks are so right on. The work He's done is so obvious. The Lord has done a work among us. We're not perfect, but we're being perfected. We're not what we should be, but we're not what we once were, either. He's changing us. Who wouldn't want to follow Him, seeing the work He's doing in the midst of people?

Matthew 8:20

And Jesus saith unto him, The foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath not where to lay his head.

This man was stung by these words because Jesus knew he wanted a comfortable life.

It's sort of like when my son Peter-John was younger. Watching a parade, he was really into seeing the soldiers marching in their uniforms with white gloves on their hands, shiny guns on their shoulders, and huge tanks rolling behind.

"Daddy, I want to be a soldier like those guys!" he said. I smiled because we who are older know it's not all marching in starched uniforms before cheering crowds. There's blood, dismembered bodies, and death. Yes, it's fun to see the parade go by, but the price of battle is an entirely different issue.

Watching the parade, this scribe said, "Wow. It'll be fun to be Your disciple." And Jesus said, "Wait. There's a price."

Matthew 8:21, 22

And another of his disciples said unto him, Lord, suffer me first to go and bury my father. But Jesus said unto him, Follow me; and let the dead bury their dead.

The second man wasn't hindered so much by riches as by relationships. "I'll follow You, Lord, just as soon as I bury my dad." Now, please don't misunderstand. It's not as though his father died and was lying in the front room while this guy was saying, "Let me go home and bury my dad, and I'll come right back." No, he was saying, "As soon as my dad passes away, then I'll really start following You. But right now I feel obligated to that relationship. Plus, I get part of the inheritance."

"Let the dead bury the dead, and you follow Me," Jesus answered because no relationship can stand in the way of those who are serious about following Jesus.

It's still those two issues, I believe, that keep people today from following Jesus. Following Him might mean some changes in business practices. Or it might mean letting go of that unbelieving boyfriend or girlfriend. It might cost riches. It might cost relationships. And like these two men, people today still conclude that they like the parade, but not the price.

Matthew 8:23, 24 (a)

And when he was entered into a ship, his disciples followed him. And, behold, there arose a great tempest in the sea, insomuch that the ship was covered with the waves . . .

The word translated "tempest" is seismos in Greek, from which we get our word "seismology"—the study of earthquakes. This storm was really a shaker!

Keep in mind that the Sea of Galilee, where this story takes place, is six hundred eighty feet below sea level. Directly to the north, 9,280 feet above sea level, is Mount Hermon, which gets so cold it can be skied in the winter. So what happens is this: Cold air descends from Mount Hermon through a small ravine in the northern part of the valley, which funnels into the Sea of Galilee. As the cold air strikes the hot air below, it creates turbulence, and storms can erupt in seconds. Waves mount up, which in recent times have been recorded at higher than twenty-five feet. As you surfers know, waves are measured from the back, so we're talking about a face of perhaps forty feet. Thus, this wasn't a little drizzle on a lake. We're talking about a sea that terrorized even these salty fishermen.

Matthew 8:24 (b)
. . . but he was asleep.

I love this because it shows the humanity of Jesus. He was tired because He was a Man. In fact, He refers to Himself as the Son of Man eighty times in the New Testament, identifying with His humanity more than any other element in His personality. Next time you feel totally exhausted, remember Jesus can relate to you. In Jesus sleeping, we see His humanity. In His speaking to the storm, we see His deity.

If you sense Jesus is asleep in the storm you're going through—relax! If He's not doing anything, it means He's not pacing. He's not anxious. He's not worried. He's resting. You can rest as well if you remember that at any given moment, Jesus can stand up, speak a word and—boom—the storm will stop.

Matthew 8:25–27

And his disciples came to him, and awoke him, saying, Lord, save us: we perish. And he saith unto them, Why are ye fearful, O ye of little faith? Then he arose, and rebuked the winds and the sea; and there was a great calm. But the men marvelled, saying, What manner of man is this, that even the winds and the sea obey him!

"O ye of little faith." Why did Jesus say this to these men at this time? Mark tells us that Jesus previously had said to His disciples, "Come let us go over to the other side of the sea." He hadn't said, "Come let us sink to the bottom of the sea." He said, "Let us go over. We're going to make it." And He says to you,

> . . . And, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.
> Matthew 28:20

> Fear thou not; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness.
> Isaiah 41:10

> Being confident of this very thing, that he which hath begun a good work in you will perform it until the day of Jesus Christ.
> Philippians 1:6

Matthew 8:28, 29

And when he was come to the other side into the country of the Gergesenes, there met him two possessed with devils, coming out of the tombs, exceeding fierce, so that no man might pass by that way. And, behold, they cried out, saying, What have we to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of God? art thou come hither to torment us before the time?

To what time are the demons referring? To the day they would be cast into the bottomless pit.

Notice that these demons had fairly solid theology. They understood eschatology, the study of end times. And they called Jesus the Son of God—which is more than the scribes or Pharisees did. In his Epistle, James says, "You say that you believe? So what? The demons believe and tremble" (see James 2:19). It's not enough to believe Jesus is the Son of God intellectually. Bunches of people will miss heaven by eighteen inches—the distance between their brain and their heart.

Matthew 8:30–33

And there was a good way off from them a herd of many swine feeding. So the devils besought him, saying, If thou cast us out, suffer us to go away into the herd of swine. And he said unto them, Go. And when they were come out, they went into the herd of swine: and, behold, the whole herd of swine ran violently down a steep place into the sea, and perished in the waters. And they that kept them fled, and went their ways into the city, and told every thing, and what was befallen to the possessed of the devils.

Note that the demons could not even go into a pig without permission from Jesus. People are saying, "Ooh, the Medford Mail Tribune has a horoscope on page 14, and if I have that newspaper in my house, the demon of horoscopes is going to come into me." Not true. It seems one of the biggest problems we have in the church today, at least here in America, is not demon possession, but demon obsession. Remember, gang, He that is in you is greater than he that is in the world.

Why would the demons want to enter pigs? I believe it was an attempt by these demons to drive Jesus out of the area. You see, pig farming was the number one industry there, and the demons knew that if Jesus interfered with business, the people would drive Him out. Keep in mind that pork was absolutely forbidden for Jews, making these pork ranchers the "marijuana farmers" of their day—hanging out on the rocks in Eastern Galilee, raising an illegal "crop."

Matthew 8:34

And, behold, the whole city came out to meet Jesus: and when they saw him, they besought him that he would depart out of their coasts.

"Leave, Lord. We care more about pigs than we do about people."

Jesus doesn't stay where He's not wanted, so He left. But in chapter 9, Matthew will continue to portray Jesus the King revealing His power to radically change those who were open to Him.

GOD'S FINAL WORD

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 8:10–13

Put yourself in this setting: You are in Capernaum, observing an encounter between Jesus and a Roman centurion. You hear Jesus commend the centurion, saying,

> "I have not found such great faith in all of Israel. And I say to you that men like you are going to be sitting at the table with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But many of the religious people, the Jewish people who have so much, are going to be in outer darkness."
>
> And you stand there absolutely amazed.

We have been exposed to this gospel story for so long, we begin to think,

> "Big deal. So Jesus is commending a Roman centurion's faith as the greatest faith He had found in the land. So He's saying that Gentiles are going to be sitting at the table, and many Jews will be cast into outer darkness. So what?"

But at the time Jesus said this, those hearing Him would have scratched their heads in utter disbelief.

The reason Jesus' contemporaries would have been shocked by what He said was because in this culture, there were three groups of people who were absolutely, irrefutably looked down upon.

The first group was lepers. Lepers were believed to have been smitten by God. Lepers were banished from society. Leprosy was the AIDS of that day.

The second group was women. Jewish men felt that women were necessary for the propagation of the race, but outside of that, they didn't have a whole lot of value. In fact, if you were living in Jesus' day and were giving birth to a baby, your friends and relatives would gather in your house with presents in hand, anxiously waiting for the news of the baby's birth. If the midwife came out and said, "It's a boy!" celebration would follow. Gifts would be exchanged, and your friends and relatives would stay at your home for three days in celebration and feasting. But if the midwife came out and said, "It's a girl," your friends and relatives would immediately leave, taking their presents with them.

The third group looked down upon was Gentiles—everyone who was not a Jew. The Jews basically believed that Gentiles existed only as fuel for the fires of hell. With this in mind, check out Matthew 8, where the first three healing miracles Matthew recorded involved a leper, a Gentile, and a woman. Matthew's readers must have said, "What are you trying to tell us, Matthew, that the kingdom of God includes lepers, Gentiles, and women? This thing is more inclusive and more expansive than anything we've ever heard."

And Matthew would have said, "That's the point. The kingdom Jesus is building is a lot different from what the religious people think it is."

Let me tell you, folks, the message for us is that we must be so careful in our evaluations. We who feel like we've been blessed because we have the Word and we know the Lord need to be careful because the kingdom is bigger than our own theological niche. It's more expansive than our own flavor. It's big—much bigger than any of us think. "Well, it can't include Communists, can it?"

You who are old enough might remember Nikita Khrushchev, who banged the table of the United Nations with his shoe, saying, "We will bury you." I remember as a little boy that whenever I saw his face on TV, my heart was filled with terror, for he represented the Russian menace. I can recall many times during a school year when sirens would go off and we would get under our desks and cover our eyes with one hand and the back of our necks with the other to "protect" ourselves from Russian A-bombs.

"A Russian can't be part of the kingdom—not a guy like Khrushchev!"

Guess what happened to Khrushchev? The Lord included him in His kingdom.

Nikita Khrushchev memorized the entire New Testament word-for-word. And in his later years, he would sit in Gorky Park reciting it to Russians who recognized him. Although he was politically defamed and dethroned largely due to his faith, he gave his comments on New Testament teachings to all who would listen. Nikita Khrushchev became a teacher of the Word in his last days.

Furthermore, once, when Gorbachev came to America, he requested that Billy Graham travel in his entourage. Gorbachev's mother is a born-again believer—a Baptist. When Gorbachev was asked directly if he too was a believer, he hedged the question and didn't answer it directly. I'm not saying he's a brother, but I am suggesting that something could be happening in his heart.

I've listened to the prayers of Presbyterians and have been deeply touched. The prayers of some Catholic priests have penetrated my heart. I've listened to Christians who worship with rock and roll, and I've said, "Far out!" The kingdom is big. And I encourage you, as I remind myself, to be careful in our evaluations.

Jesus marveled and said, "This Roman-Gentile-Occupier-Centurion has the greatest faith I've found in Israel thus far." Only twice does Scripture say that Jesus marveled—here in Matthew 8, and in Mark 6, where He marveled at the unbelief of those in His home city who had been in the synagogue, who had journeyed to the temple, and who knew the Torah. Jesus marveled at Gentile faith and at Jewish unbelief.

Let us be big people, realizing the kingdom is more expansive and inclusive than what our flavor might be philosophically, or what our theology might be dogmatically. May God give us eyes to see what He's doing in churches other than ours, in fellowships flavored far differently than ours. Be embracive. Be a lover of people. See what the Lord is doing.

The second thing I glean from this simple story is not just to be careful in my evaluations, but to be confident in His articulation.

The centurion said, "Lord, I'm not worthy. Speak the word only."

I have heard messages on this verse that sound like this: "Speak the word, brother. Speak the word, sister. God said let there be light, and there was light, so name it and claim it." But the issue is not God said, "Let there be light." The issue is: God said, "Let there be light." It's not what was said. It's Who said it.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God. The same was in the beginning with God. All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. In him was life; and the life was the light of men.

John 1:1–4

The Word is not an activity, not an exercise, not a theology. It's a Person. It's Jesus. He is the Word.

God, who at sundry times and in divers manners spake in time past unto the fathers by the prophets, hath in these last days spoken unto us by his Son . . .

Hebrews 1:1, 2

God's final Word is His Son, Jesus Christ. Anything I want to know about life—the way to treat people, the way to handle various situations, the way to go through storms, the way to receive blessings—I find in Jesus Christ.

I am freed from having to pretend to be some kind of a spiritual prophet, guru, or wise master because I can move with great assurance in simplicity and confidence, saying, "My friend, dear sister, precious brother, God's final Word concerning anything you want to know about any situation you're in is Jesus Christ. What did He do? What did He teach? How did He respond? How did He act? Get to know the Savior, for the entire Bible speaks of Him."

After Jesus rose from the dead, Luke tells us that as He walked with His disciples on the road to Emmaus, He opened the Scriptures and explained how they all spoke of Him. Everything God has to say is summed up in the Person of Jesus Christ.

"How can that be," you ask, "when Jesus was only here for three years?"

The speaker preceding him talked an hour and fifty-six minutes. Then Lincoln stood up and began, "Four score and seven years ago . . ."

Within three minutes, his speech was over. The audience was stunned. No one clapped. No one moved. The profundity of his words had silenced them.

So, too, God said, "I'm going to speak to you, humanity, through prophets and through the written Word. But My final Word, My most profound speech is the Logos, the Word—Jesus. Anything you want to know can be found in what He said, taught, and did in those three profound years He was on earth."

Jesus Christ is God's final Word to man. Therefore, throughout the Word, I look for Jesus.

- The Old Testament pointed to Him.
- The epistles of Paul looked back at Him.
- The Book of Revelation watches for Him.

Hermeneutics is the science of Biblical interpretation. But, gang, it's not hermeneutics that we need. It's Him-aneutics. We need to look for Jesus in every story and on every page. Whatever your need is, whatever your question might be, the answer is Jesus Christ.

He is God's final Word.

9 In chapters 8 and 9, writing of the King and the release of His power, Matthew enumerates ten miracles. In the first three, Jesus showed grace to the outcasts. In the next two, He gave peace to the troubled—the disciples in the storm and those tormented by demons. Now we will see peace extended once again to a man with a very real problem.

Matthew 9:1, 2

And he entered into a ship, and passed over, and came into his own city. And, behold, they brought to him a man sick of the palsy, lying on a bed: and Jesus seeing their faith said unto the sick of the palsy; Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee.

The other Gospel writers tell us the man stricken with palsy was brought by four friends who, because of the crowd, broke through the roof of the home in which Jesus was teaching in order to lower him down in front of the Master. Seeing this man lowered in front of Him, Jesus said, "Be of good cheer! Your sins are forgiven." But I wonder if at this point, the four friends were a bit disappointed. I wonder if they thought, That's great, but we didn't lug him all this way and break open the roof just to hear some kind of spiritual statement. I wonder if they were hoping to hear, "Be healed," instead of "Be of good cheer."

In reality, however, the most important need of the hurting man was forgiveness. In Romans 4, the apostle Paul, quoting David, said, "Blessed are they whose iniquities are forgiven, and whose sins are covered. Blessed is the man to whom the Lord will not impute sin." In other words, the happiest man is the man who knows he's forgiven. And I suggest to you that, although his friends may have been disappointed to hear those words, they were exactly what this guy was craving to hear due to the fact that, according to early tradition, this man was paralyzed because an immoral lifestyle had taken its toll on him physically.

So, too, I suggest to you that there are people today who are not walking because they are paralyzed by guilt over a sin or a series of sins that took place in their lives previously. And although they can walk physically, they cannot walk with the Lord in good cheer because they think, I've gone too far. I've sinned too greatly.

Matthew 9:3–5

And, behold, certain of the scribes said within themselves, This man blasphemeth. And Jesus knowing their thoughts said, Wherefore think ye evil in your hearts? For whether is easier, to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and walk?

Which is easier—physical healing or redemption from iniquity? For Jesus to physically heal the paralyzed man, He simply had to speak a word. But to forgive him, He had to die.

Matthew 9:6, 7

But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (then saith he to the sick of the palsy,) Arise, take up thy bed, and go unto thine house. And he arose, and departed to his house.

The man took up his bed and cruised out of there, walking physically, but more importantly, walking spiritually. Notice verse 2 says that it was after seeing their faith that Jesus said to this man, "Your sins are forgiven." Seeing whose faith? Seeing the faith of the friends who brought their paralyzed buddy to Jesus.

Many times, Jesus would say to the person who was sick, "According to your faith, be made whole," and the person was healed. Other times, seeing other people's faith, Jesus would allow healing to be released. Still other times, at the tomb of Lazarus, for example, it was no one's faith. Mary and Martha were weeping in unbelief, and Lazarus was dead. So whose faith was it? To so-called faith healers who say to the sick, "The reason you aren't healed is because you just didn't have enough faith," I would like to say, "What about your faith? Don't you have enough faith for him to be healed?"

Matthew 9:8

But when the multitudes saw it, they marvelled, and glorified God, which had given such power unto men.

Note this, students. Every time Jesus did a miracle, people who saw it glorified the Father. Jesus was able to move in such a way that when people saw His miracles, they praised God.

A man living in Taiwan who was really in love with a certain lady wrote her seven hundred flowery and lengthy letters in one year, sixty-two of which included proposals of marriage. The letters worked. The lady did indeed get married—but not to him. She married the mailman.

When I read that, I thought, Isn't that just like us? Here the Father loves us and sends good gifts to us, but we're so dumb we exalt the mailman instead of the author of the letter. If you're used by the Lord, people will either have a tendency to exalt you unrealistically, or to rail on you radically. Our goal should be to do what Jesus did—turn all the attention, all the glory back to the Father.

Matthew 9:9 (a)

And as Jesus passed forth from thence, he saw a man, named Matthew, sitting at the receipt of custom . . .

Matthew, the author of this Gospel, was also named Levi, which meant he sprang from the Levites, the priestly class, the tribe dedicated to worshipping and ministering. Matthew was a Levite, but instead of worshiping at the temple, he was working for the Romans, sitting at the receipt of custom collecting taxes. The Lord, however, has a way of seeing good in people, and He saw potential even in a man like Matthew.

Matthew 9:9 (b)

. . . and he saith unto him, Follow me. And he arose, and followed him.

"Follow Me, Matthew. I'll take you. Others might spit on you, turn their backs on you, and avoid you. But I'm willing to work with you and to work in you." Luke's Gospel tells us Matthew arose and left all to follow Jesus. Matthew, however, doesn't mention this in his own writings. He simply says, "He arose, and followed him."

Proverbs 27:2 says, "Let another man praise thee, and not thine own mouth; a stranger, and not thine own lips." Matthew models this beautifully.

Matthew 9:10–13

And it came to pass, as Jesus sat at meat in the house, behold, many publicans and sinners came and sat down with him and his disciples. And when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto his disciples, Why eateth your Master with publicans and sinners? But when Jesus heard that, he said unto them, They that be whole need not a physician, but they that are sick. But go ye and learn what that meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice: For I am not come to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

There are none righteous, but the Lord says, "I am coming particularly to those who recognize their need—to the publicans, the prostitutes, the sinners, and the street people."

I wonder if we as the church today are like that. I wonder if the church, which should be representing Jesus, is now comfortable with the religious people, but is turning off the sinners, the street people, and the common folks. Jesus said, "I don't want sacrifice. I want mercy—compassion and concern for everyone."

I hope unbelievers relate to you well. I hope they don't look at you as being holier-than-thou. I hope people enjoy your company because you represent life and joy, that there's a quality about you that attracts people—believers and sinners alike. Such was true of Jesus. And such was true of Matthew, as he said to his friends, "Come on over to my house and meet the One who has shown such grace and mercy to me." We need more "Matthew parties," where people open their hearts and homes, saying, "I want you to be exposed to the One who's changed me."

Matthew 9:14–16

Then came to him the disciples of John, saying, Why do we and the Pharisees fast oft, but thy disciples fast not? And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber mourn, as long as the bridegroom is with them? but the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken from them, and then shall they fast. No man putteth a piece of new cloth unto an old garment, for that which is put in to fill it up taketh from the garment, and the rent is made worse.

You don't put a new denim patch on old Levi's®, because when you wash them, it won't hold. The cloth will shrink, the stitching will rip, and the hole you were trying to patch will become even bigger.

Matthew 9:17

Neither do men put new wine into old bottles: else the bottles break, and the wine runneth out, and the bottles perish: but they put new wine into new bottles, and both are preserved.

Old wineskins, which are hard and rigid, aren't able to flex like new ones. Therefore, it would be foolish to put new wine in old wineskins because as the wine fermented, the wineskins would burst. Wine is a symbol of the Spirit, and I believe the Lord continually pours new wine. The problem is, the old structures and traditions can't contain it. Therefore, it seems as though the Lord raises up new wineskins in every generation—new vessels to hold the new work of the Spirit.

Matthew 9:18 (a)

While he spake these things unto them, behold, there came a certain ruler . . .

In the eighth chapter of his Gospel, Dr. Luke records this same miracle with much greater detail. He tells us the man's name was Jairus, a ruler of the synagogue. Before the year 586 B.C., virtually all Jews lived within one hundred miles of the temple, so they all worshiped there. But in 586 B.C., the Jews were carried away into Babylon and held hostage for seventy years. No longer able to worship in the temple, they established synagogues in every neighborhood with ten or more Jewish men. The synagogue then became the place of assembly for the Jews where they would worship and study the Scriptures. Each synagogue had ten leaders, called elders. Of those ten, one was elected by the other nine to be the ruler. The ruler of the synagogue was a man of tremendous importance. Not only was he in charge of the synagogue, but he would also settle civic disputes within the neighborhood. Synagogue rulers had power and prosperity, influence and impact. Jairus was such a man. Yet he was willing to risk it all and come to Jesus because death had crept into his family.

Matthew 9:18 (b), 19

. . . and worshipped him, saying, My daughter is even now dead: but come and lay thy hand upon her, and she shall live. And Jesus arose, and followed him, and so did his disciples.

Luke also tells us that Jairus' daughter was twelve years old. For twelve years, his daughter had brought light and laughter into his home, until suddenly, she was taken with sickness and was at the point of death.

> Much can be learned from the way people react to death closing in on themselves or on someone close to them. Fifteen years before his death, Mahatma Ghandi wrote: "I must tell you in all humility, that Hinduism as I know it entirely satisfies my soul. It fills my whole being, and I find a solace in it that I find nowhere else." Three weeks before he died, however, he made this last journal entry: "My days are numbered. I am not likely to live very much longer. Perhaps a year, maybe a little more. For the first time in my fifty years, I find myself in the slough of despond and in total depression."

When Jairus came face-to-face with death, he knew what to do. He went to Jesus. He ran the risk of losing his prominent position, his wealth, and his reputation in order to save his daughter's life.

Matthew 9:20 (a)

And, behold, a woman, which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years, came behind him . . .

Because this woman was hemorrhaging, she would have been unable to go to the temple to worship, and she would have been considered unclean and defiled by her community. Notice the parallel: A twelve-year-old girl, full of life, light, and laughter, was suddenly dying, and a woman, who, for the same twelve years, full of darkness, disease, and depression, was on the verge of being healed. Perhaps for the past twelve years you have had things go relatively well. Life has been good. God has been gracious. But you don't know what the next hour holds. You can't guarantee that in the next hour you won't meet with the greatest tragedy, the biggest challenge of your life. Like Jairus, you who perhaps for twelve years have been doing so well, might suddenly find yourself face-to-face with despair. So, too, for the past twelve years if you have been battling discouragement, depression, and disease, know this: You don't know what the next moment holds. The Lord can do something suddenly that will blow your mind and bring an end to your despair.

Matthew 9:20 (b), 21

. . . and touched the hem of his garment: For she said within herself, If I may but touch his garment, I shall be whole.

In Matthew's day, it was believed that there was certain power in the hem of a garment belonging to a rabbi or spiritual leader. "If I could just touch the hem of his garment." This woman probably didn't have the strength to wrestle Him in faith, or to grab hold of Him in belief. Yet she knew if she could even just lightly touch Jesus, she would be healed.

Matthew 9:22

But Jesus turned him about, and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole. And the woman was made whole from that hour.

Perhaps you say, "I would love to have Jesus touch me, but I don't feel His touch." Then be like this woman. If you're not feeling His touch upon you, reach out and touch Him. Have you made the effort to press through the crowd of unbelief, of busyness, of entertainment, of activities—the crowd of all that stands between you and the Lord? Press through and say, "I just want to touch the hem of His garment. I know if I can touch Him, I'll be helped."

This woman expended the energy to break through the crowd and touch Jesus. Was her theology correct? No. Was her knowledge complete? No. She was acting out of superstition. But the Lord didn't say, "Since your theology is all messed up, I won't help you." No! He's a Savior who heeds the cries of His children, even though their phrases are amiss, or their theology's not right. God honors the person who in desperation is seeking to touch Him.

Now, do you suppose by this time, Jairus was growing a little impatient? "Come on, Lord. My daughter is dying, and You're talking to some lady who's touched Your garment?"

Do you ever feel that way? "Lord, I see You're blessing this person and You're blessing that person. Great! But, Lord, what about me?" I suggest to you that in seeing the healing of this woman, Jairus was being prepared for the healing of his own daughter. You see, whenever the Lord delays in moving and seems to be working in other people or in other places, be observant of where He is working and what He is doing because therein lies lessons for you as well. Keep your antennae up, your eyes wide, and your journal open to record information the Lord knows you will need shortly.

Matthew 9:23–26

And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, he said unto them, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn. But when the people were put forth, he went in, and took her by the hand, and the maid arose. And the fame hereof went abroad into all that land.

Whenever Jesus wants to work in your situation, there will be mockers, saying, "It's not going to happen. What a joke. The Lord's not going to help you. He's not even real to you. He doesn't care anything about you." And these little voices inside of us, the voices of unbelief, of demons, or even of well-meaning friends, say, "Grow up. Don't expect a miracle."

The laughers, the scorners, and the mockers were moved out before Jesus went in. Move out the mockers, gang. Believe the promises of God, quote Scripture, rejoice in advance, and anticipate His blessing.

Matthew 9:27

And when Jesus departed thence, two blind men followed him, crying, and saying, Thou Son of David, have mercy on us.

"Son of David" was a title used for "Messiah." In reality, these blind men had better vision than anyone else, for they saw Jesus as Messiah.

Matthew 9:28 (a)

And when he was come into the house, the blind men came to him . . .

How did the blind men follow Jesus and come to Him? After all, they couldn't see! I suggest there's a spiritual principle here. John 1:9 says, "[Jesus] was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." The ministry of Messiah was to open the eyes not only of those physically blind, but of the spiritually blind. Therefore, the blindest of men can follow Him because Jesus, the true Light, lights every man. He makes Himself known to every person.

Romans 1 makes it clear that, both by instinct and observation, every man knows there's a God. But what do men do? They suppress the truth. People don't want to admit there's a Creator, because if there's a Creator, they are accountable to that Creator, and people want to sin. So they conveniently, illogically, and unscientifically bury the truth in the theory of evolution in order to say, "Hey, we're only animals. Let's party."

But even the blindest of men at some point will realize the truth in his heart. When he faces Jesus, no man will be able to say, "I never knew. I never heard. I had no idea." John 1:9 says He is the Light that lights every man.

Matthew 9:28 (b)–30

. . . and Jesus saith unto them, Believe ye that I am able to do this? They said unto him, Yea, Lord. Then touched he their eyes, saying, According to your faith be it unto you. And their eyes were opened; and Jesus straitly charged them, saying, See that no man know it.

Why did Jesus say, "Don't tell anyone?" Again, I believe the reason is because He knew the tendency of people to focus on the miraculous more than the Message, on the gifts more than the Giver. Also, perhaps Jesus was saying, "If you guys aren't careful spreading this news around this region at this time, you'll get in a lot of trouble." As opposition to Him was mounting, maybe He was protecting those who believed in Him.

Matthew 9:31

But they, when they were departed, spread abroad his fame in all that country.

These guys couldn't help spreading the word. I can understand that. I mean, they were blind and now they could see. They wanted people to know!

Matthew 9:32–35

As they went out, behold, they brought to him a dumb man possessed with a devil. And when the devil was cast out, the dumb spake: and the multitudes marvelled, saying, It was never so seen in Israel. But the Pharisees said, He casteth out devils through the prince of the devils. And Jesus went about all the cities and villages, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom, and healing every sickness and every disease among the people.

People ask, "Why aren't blind eyes opened, AIDS victims healed, and the paralyzed walking today? It happened then. Why can't it happen now?"

God still heals, but not in the same way. At this point, Jesus was giving the Jews the opportunity to acknowledge Him as their Messiah. Had they received Him, they could have moved right into the kingdom, but they rejected Him when they nailed Him to the Cross. Consequently, although we do see miracles today, they're not the same as the ones He performed physically when He walked the earth. The miracles we read about in the Gospels are "sneak previews of coming attractions" when He will rule and reign, when all will be right, when everyone will be healed.

Matthew 9:36–38

But when he saw the multitudes, he was moved with compassion on them, because they fainted, and were scattered abroad, as sheep having no shepherd. Then saith he unto his disciples, The harvest truly is plenteous, but the labourers are few; Pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he will send forth labourers into his harvest.

Looking at the multitudes, Jesus said to His boys, "Pray. The harvest is plenteous." He didn't say, "It's time for planting." He said, "It's ready for picking."

I sense the same thing is true today, don't you? The harvest is ready. Don't let Satan whisper in your ear, "Your neighbors won't listen. Your relatives won't respond." No, the harvest is ready.

MOVING OUT THE MOCKERS

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 9:18–26

Funerals are normally very serious and very sobering. But I want us to look at a funeral where there were no quiet organ chords, no hushed whispers, no silent tears.

This funeral is unique because it was filled with laughter.

> And when Jesus came into the ruler's house, and saw the minstrels and the people making a noise, He said unto them, Give place: for the maid is not dead, but sleepeth. And they laughed him to scorn.
> Matthew 9:23, 24

Who were these minstrels? In Jesus' day, when someone died, the bereaved would hire professional mourners and wailers. Even the poorest of families would hire two minstrels, two flute players, and one screamer. But the wealthier one was, the more mourners he would hire. Because Jairus was so wealthy, there were perhaps twenty, fifty, perhaps even one hundred people at his home weeping, wailing, and mourning. Then Jesus arrived. "Give place," He said. "Make way. The maid is not dead. She sleeps."

Matthew writes, "And they laughed him to scorn." It wasn't a chuckle; it was a deep belly laugh. It wasn't a giggle; it was a guffaw. After all, they had been with her. They had checked her pulse. They had watched her die. No doubt about it, she was gone.

The Bible speaks of death with different terminology than the world does. John 11, Acts 7, 1 Corinthians 15, and 1 Thessalonians 4 all say that for the believer, death is sleep. That is, our bodies go to sleep to be resurrected later on, while our spirits go immediately to be with the Lord.

Sleep! Who of us doesn't enjoy a nice nap or taking some time to lie in the sun now and then? Jesus put death in an entirely different context when He said, "Don't worry. She's not dead in the way you think. She's simply sleeping."

> Imagine a funeral taking place in the amphitheatre with hundreds of caterpillars all dressed in black marching slowly down the floor of the amphitheatre, carrying the cocoon of their beloved, departed brother. Meanwhile, a beautiful butterfly is fluttering above them, looking down in utter disbelief. "What are you guys mourning for?" he shouts. "I've been metamorphosed!"

In 1 Corinthians 15, when Paul says we shall be changed, "metamorphosed" is the Greek word he uses. When we die, we get rid of these caterpillar costumes and become the butterflies we long to be.

"Give place," Jesus said. "She's not dead. She's asleep." Then He went in and took her by the hand. To a Jew, touching a dead body was defiling. It was like touching a leper. But Jesus was not afraid to touch defiled people. And He's not afraid to touch you.

Scripture records three accounts of people who were raised from the dead by Jesus: Jairus' daughter, the widow of Nain's son, and Lazarus.

- Following her resurrection, Jairus' daughter was hungry.
- Following his resurrection, the widow's son began to speak.
- Following his resurrection, Lazarus came forth walking.

I suggest to you the same three characteristics are found in those who have been spiritually resurrected and born again.

- Like Jairus' daughter, they hunger for the Word.
- Like the widow's son, they talk differently. The things they enjoy talking about are no longer what they once were.
- Like Lazarus, they walk differently, no longer bound by sin.

I want you to see something else here, because I believe every one of us deals constantly with some area in our lives that is dying.

Perhaps it is in the area of parenting. "My kids are rebelling against God. They're not interested in spiritual things. My daughter is at the point of death even now."

Maybe it's your wife or your husband. Your marriage is collapsing.

Maybe financially or occupationally things seem at the point of death.

It might be ministry.

And we run to Jesus, crying, "Lord, this thing, this person, this plan is at the point of death. Come. Please!" And Jesus hears your prayer. And you leave that place of prayer saying, "Far out! The Lord is with me. Great!"

But then the news comes the next day.

- She left you.
- He moved out.
- Your kids are in juvenile hall.
- You're fired.

And you say, "What happened, Lord? I thought You were traveling with me. Where did You go?"

He is still with you. And He whispers in your heart. "Give place. It's not dead. It's just sleeping."

"No way," you say. "It's over. There's no possibility it will ever work out."

But when the people were put forth, he went in . . .

Matthew 9:25

When did Jesus go in?

When the mockers were put out.

In this, I am reminded of an account in 2 Kings . . .

And he went up from thence unto Bethel: and as he was going up by the way, there came forth little children out of the city, and mocked him, and said unto him, Go up, thou bald head; go up, thou bald head.

2 Kings 2:23

Interestingly the Hebrew word translated "mock" used here is essentially the same Greek word translated "mock" in Matthew 9. The word for "little children" is the Hebrew word na'ar. It is used to describe Isaac when he was twenty-eight years old and Joseph when he was thirty-nine years old. Thus, it doesn't mean little children in the sense of preschoolers or kindergarteners. Instead, it means those who were younger than the venerated elders in a community. So these guys could have easily been twenty, thirty, or perhaps even forty years old. They should have known better than to mock a man of God.

Now, who were these "little children"? They were those who had heard about Elijah's miraculous departure in a chariot of fire, but evidently didn't believe it. So they said to Elisha, "Get out of here, man. Go up like Elijah did, if you're such a hot prophet."

What happened next?

And he turned back, and looked on them, and cursed them in the name of the LORD. And there came forth two she bears out of the wood, and tare forty and two children of them. And he went from thence to mount Carmel, and from thence he returned to Samaria.

2 Kings 2:24–25

Elisha said, "I won't stand for it. This is un-bear-able. In the name of the Lord, I will not allow these mockers, these scoffers to make fun of the ministry that God has entrusted to me." Suddenly, two female bears came out of the woods and began ripping on these scorners, devouring them. And we see the situation become very "grizzly."

Don't send your pit bulls after those who make fun of you, gang, but realize this: We in New Testament times wrestle not against flesh and blood, but against principalities and powers and spiritual wickedness in high places

(Ephesians 6:12). Our battle is with those demonic forces and with our own sin natures that whisper within us, "Go up. Go up. You think things are going to happen? No they're not, bald head man."

In the Name of Jesus, we need to come against these scoffers, these laughers, these mockers, and say, "I will not give place to these voices of doubt and depression. I will not allow them to whisper in my ear that this is doomed to fail. I refuse to listen to the lies of the enemy or to the doubts of my sinful humanity. I will claim the promises the Lord has given to me in His Word, and I will cling to them and believe in Him."

Over three thousand promises have been given to you in the Word dealing with every single need you might have today. Search the Scriptures. Find the promise. And when circumstances say, "No way," call for the bears!

When Jesus went into His hometown of Capernaum, does Scripture say He could do no mighty miracle there because of their carnality? No. Was it because of their sin? No. Was it because He was tired? No.

He could do no mighty work there because of their unbelief (Matthew 13:58).

Without faith, Hebrews 11 says, it is impossible to please Him. There are many ways to please God, but without faith, none of them mean a thing. Have faith. Give place. Move out the mockers.

> "Eat 'em up, bears of belief. Go get 'em in the Name of the Lord. I'm quoting, claiming, believing, and standing on this Book. Devour those doubts, O Lord."

As the scorners make their exit, the Lord then moves in, and things begin to happen. May you be one who puts out the scorners and stands on Scripture.

Move out the mockers. Make way for Jesus. And let Him bring resurrection into your life.

---

10 The story is told of Jesus' return to heaven. After dying for the sins of humanity, He was greeted by the angel Gabriel.

"An awesome thing You did, Lord," Gabriel said. "Incredible! Does the world know?"

Jesus answered, "Not really. As a matter of fact, only a few guys in Palestine understand what I did."

"Well, how is the rest of the world going to understand?"

"I'm entrusting those guys with the message. I'm trusting they will carry My message throughout the world."

"But what if they don't?" Gabriel asked. "What if they decide to return to fishing? Or what if they get afraid? Or what if they get tangled up in relationships? What happens if they don't do it? What is Your plan then?"

And Jesus replied, "I have no other plan."

This story, although it is just a story, is reality. The Lord entrusted the gospel of the kingdom to men and left it with them, sending them out to propagate the Good News that men's sins are forgiven because of His death on the Cross. That was His only plan.

And here in Matthew 10, we see the beginning of this plan unfolding as we see Him training His disciples. After learning from Jesus and hanging out with Jesus, now they are sent forth by Jesus.

Matthew 10:1 (a)

And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples . . .

We saw in Luke 6 that, after spending the night in prayer, Jesus chose from among the many disciples who followed Him twelve to be apostolos, or "sent out ones."

Matthew 10:1 (b)

. . . he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out, and to heal all manner of sickness and all manner of disease.

After seeing Jesus' principles recorded and His power revealed, here in chapter 10, we see His people released as He sends forth His disciples. Jesus was so radical. He entrusted His message not to the well-educated and impeccably trained, but to a rag-tag bunch of renegades made up of a tax collector, political rabble-rousers, and fishermen. The Lord will never ask you to do anything He does not enable you to do by the power of His Spirit. Since the greatest concerns of the culture in which they ministered were demon possession, sickness, and disease, Jesus specifically gave His disciples the power to meet those very needs.

Matthew 10:2 (a)

Now the names of the twelve apostles are these; The first, Simon, who is called Peter . . .

Luke 6 tells us that after Jesus spent a full night in prayer, He came down the mountain and chose twelve disciples from among the many who surrounded Him. "Mathetes," or "learner," is the Greek word for disciple. These men had been traveling with Jesus, listening to Jesus, and hanging out with Jesus. They were learners. Jesus called them disciples and transformed them into "apostles" or "sent out ones."

In the listing of the apostles, Peter always comes first and Judas is always at the end. Judas, of course, was the betrayer of Jesus, and Peter was one who had a special place in the apostolic order. Here we see that the Lord does have leaders among leaders. And Peter, indeed, was a leader amongst these leaders.

Nonetheless, Peter was the apostle with the foot-shaped mouth, often saying the wrong thing at the wrong time. Maybe you enjoy talking and your heart is as big as the world, but you have a tendency to speak and to think later. Peter was like this.

The Lord changed Simon from one who was shifting and unstable into "Petros," or "Rock." The Lord renamed Peter because He transformed him from one who was shifting and unstable to one who would become solid and reliable.

Matthew 10:2 (b)

. . . and Andrew his brother . . .

Andrew was known as the younger brother of Peter. Maybe some of you feel like Andrew—always in someone else's shadow. Your older brother, your older sister, or someone else is always the star. Jesus chose someone you can perhaps relate to—Andrew—who was always in Peter's shadow.

Matthew 10:2 (c)
. . . James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother.

James and John were called the "sons of thunder" because of their volatile tempers. When one of the cities did not respond to the message of the gospel, James and John said, "Jesus, shall we call down fire from heaven and destroy them?" So Jesus chose a guy who said the wrong things, a guy who lived in the shadow of his older brother, and a couple of guys with explosive tempers.

Matthew 10:3 (a)
Philip, and Bartholomew; Thomas, and Matthew the publican . . .

Then there were Philip and Bartholomew. Remember that Bartholomew is another name for Nathanael, the skeptic who asked, "Can any good thing come out of Nazareth?" Add to this group Thomas, a doubter, and Matthew, a rip-off artist. Would you have chosen these guys?

Matthew 10:3 (b)–4 (a)
. . . James the son of Alphaeus, and Lebbaeus, whose surname was Thaddaeus; Simon the Canaanite . . .

James, the son of Alphaeus, is an unknown, since there's nothing more we know about him from Scripture. Perhaps you feel that way. You're somewhat shy and retiring, and you don't make your presence known. But the Lord sees you just as He saw James and says, "Yeah, I can use you."

Then there was Simon the Canaanite, a political rabble-rouser. The Gospel of Luke tells us that Simon was a zealot. He was involved in a group trying to overthrow the Roman government. If Simon the Zealot and Matthew, who was employed by the Romans, had met in any other circumstance, Simon would have put a knife in Matthew's back. But here Jesus brings them together. Just like us! We have some liberals and some conservatives, some Republicans, and some Democrats. And that's the way it should be. People who would normally not hang out together find commonality in Christ Jesus.

Matthew 10:4 (b)
. . . and Judas Iscariot, who also betrayed him.

Even a traitor was chosen by Jesus. Were the disciples superstars? Hardly. How I appreciate the quality—or the lack of quality—of these men because it gives me hope that Jesus can use someone like me.

Matthew 10:5, 6
These twelve Jesus sent forth, and commanded them, saying, Go not into the way of the Gentiles, and into any city of the Samaritans enter ye not. But go rather to the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

Right away, Jesus put restrictions on them. Why? Because He was establishing priorities for them, saying, "This is where you start—in your home country. Start where you're at," Jesus says. "Cross the street before you cross the ocean." In addition to establishing priority, there's another reason Jesus put this restriction on them. Had these apostles gone to the Samaritans —Gentiles—first, no one would have received them when they came back home because the Jews despised the Gentiles. In Romans we read that the gospel went to the Jew first and then to the Greeks, or the Gentiles, not because of priority, but because of precedence. The Jews were prepared by the prophets, by the covenants, and by the promises. So the Lord sent His boys to the Jews first.

Matthew 10:7 (a)
And as ye go, preach . . .

The Greek word for preach is kerusso. Maybe you remember Enrico Caruso, the great opera singer who would shatter a glass from fifteen paces with his powerful tenor voice. Remember Caruso. That's the word for preach. Sing it out. Sing out the gospel!

Matthew 10:7 (b)
. . . saying, The kingdom of heaven is at hand.

What had Jesus been preaching and teaching? This very message: "The kingdom of heaven is at hand." Consequently, He was able to say, "You've heard it from Me. Now go and tell others." Truly, there is power in the Word, for it speaks to any person in any place during any age.

Matthew 10:8
Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers, raise the dead, cast out devils: freely ye have received, freely give.

These would have been impossible tasks had not Jesus already empowered them to do these very things (verse 1). Whatever God has given you—gifts, abilities, money, talent—has been given to you freely by His grace. Now let these gifts freely flow through you to help those around you.

You might be saying, "I feel so bankrupt. I don't feel like I have a lot to give." But the Word tells us that we have not because we ask not (James 4:2). Maybe we should be spending a little more time in prayer, saying, "Lord, I need to be blessed. I need to be empowered so that I might be a blessing to others." Blessings are like the measles—you can't give 'em unless you got 'em!

Matthew 10:9, 10 (a)
Provide neither gold, nor silver, nor brass in your purses, nor scrip for your journey, neither two coats, neither shoes, nor yet staves . . .

"I'm sending you out. Now go with the flow, and trust Me to take care of you. You don't need to encumber yourselves with lots of gadgets and gizmos. I will provide."

Matthew 10:10 (b)

. . . for the workman is worthy of his meat.

When the disciples went out healing the sick, cleansing the lepers, and raising the dead, don't you think someone might have asked them over for dinner? I do. I think what the Lord is saying here is, "If you're going about doing good, preaching the gospel, healing the sick, and cleansing the lepers, the workman is worthy of his meat. I'll take care of you. The people will respond to you, and blessings will flow freely to you because you are giving freely." Whatever ministry you are involved in, know this: When God guides, God provides. People will be blessed, touched, and encouraged. And they will want to be a blessing in return.

Matthew 10:11–13 (a)

And into whatsoever city or town ye shall enter, inquire who in it is worthy; and there abide till ye go thence. And when ye come into an house, salute it. And if the house be worthy, let your peace come upon it . . .

Whatever house you go in, stay there. The problem is, we so often get into a place and say, "Well, this is fine for now." But we keep our eye open for a more influential or powerful place to stay.

When I was a youth pastor years ago, I noticed the message of so many youth seminars and books was "Get the quarterback and the cheerleader converted, and you've got it made." But in reality, it was the common people who heard Jesus gladly (Mark 12:37). We learned the hard way to focus not so much on the quarterback, but rather to go to the kids who sat by themselves, those whom everyone else ignored. When we went to these kids, there was an openness and a readiness to receive Jesus.

I believe that's essentially what Jesus was referring to when He said, "When you go into a house, be content to stay there. Don't try to move around and move up. Just go in, pronounce peace, and stay until you leave the city."

Matthew 10:13 (b)–15

. . . but if it be not worthy, let your peace return to you. And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear your words, when ye depart out of that house or city, shake off the dust of your feet. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment, than for that city.

Have you ever been visited by some Jehovah's Witness missionaries? After closing the door, if you peek out the window, you see them shake the dust from their feet as they get to the edge of your sidewalk. They do this because they're taking this verse literally and pronouncing judgment. In Jesus' day, when the Jews would accidentally or unavoidably walk across Gentile territory, once they got back to Jewish soil, they would shake their feet. Everyone knew they were shaking off the defilement of Gentile dirt. Thus, when the apostles shook the dust from their feet, people watching would know exactly what was happening. They would know the apostles were sending this message: "You're lost, just like you think the Gentiles are lost. We come to you presenting the Good News, but if you reject it, you bring judgment upon yourselves."

Matthew 10:16

Behold, I send you forth as sheep in the midst of wolves: be ye therefore wise as serpents, and harmless as doves.

Do you remember this story from the past? A twenty-five-foot boa constrictor took up residence in the basement of a house in Florida. Although the owners knew he was down there from the skins he shed, they couldn't find him. He was tricky—twenty-five feet long and still able to hide completely in cracks and crevices. Think about it. A snake has severe handicaps. It has no arms, no legs, and yet it gets around. It wisely maneuvers and stealthily hides itself. Jesus is saying that even if you feel as though you're handicapped, be as wise as a serpent in how you get into places. But also be as harmless as a dove.

Matthew 10:17–20

But beware of men: for they will deliver you up to the councils, and they will scourge you in their synagogues; and ye shall be brought before governors and kings for my sake, for a testimony against them and the Gentiles. But when they deliver you up, take no thought how or what ye shall speak: for it shall be given you in that same hour what ye shall speak. For it is not ye that speak, but the Spirit of your Father which speaketh in you.

The religious system and the government are going to come against you. But it's for a purpose. "Opposition," Jesus is saying, "brings opportunity. You'll be brought before magistrates, judges, kings, and leaders as a representative of Me."

Whenever you're called on the carpet because you're serving the Lord, or because you're taking a stand for righteousness, know this: Jesus said opposition would occur. He also said He would use it for His sake. You will be brought before people who will persecute you or come down on you because, in that way, He can use you as a witness. So don't tense your shoulders and furrow your brow when you get called into your boss's office. Realize the Lord put you there as a witness for Him.

Matthew 10:21

And the brother shall deliver up the brother to death, and the father the child: and the children shall rise up against their parents, and cause them to be put to death.

This prophecy of Jesus came to pass as the church went through ten tragic waves of persecution under ten Roman emperors. During this time, perhaps as many as 175 million Christians were killed. Until the rule of Constantine, Christians were systematically scourged, beaten, and burned. Caesar Nero had believers dipped in hot wax so he could ignite them and use them as torches in his palace gardens.

Matthew 10:22–25

And ye shall be hated of all men for my name's sake: but he that endureth to the end shall be saved. But when they persecute you in this city, flee ye into another: for verily I say unto you, Ye shall not have gone over the cities of Israel, till the Son of man be come. The disciple is not above his master, nor the servant above his lord. It is enough for the disciple that he be as his master, and the servant as his lord. If they have called the master of the house Beelzebub, how much more shall they call them of his household?

Beelzebub, literally "lord of the flies," was a Philistine god, worshiped by people who lived in what is today known as the Gaza strip. There were those who said, "Jesus is using demonic powers to do His work. He's demon-possessed." So here Jesus is saying to His disciples, "If they're calling Me the lord of the flies, they're also going to come down on you."

Matthew 10:26

Fear them not therefore: for there is nothing covered, that shall not be revealed; and hid, that shall not be known.

A day is coming when all things will be made right.

Matthew 10:27

What I tell you in darkness, that speak ye in light: and what ye hear in the ear, that preach ye upon the housetops.

"What I am telling you in the dark, speak in the light. What I am telling you in the quiet times, in your morning devotions, in your evening watches, spread abroad."

Matthew 10:28–31

And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell. Are not two sparrows sold for a farthing? and one of them shall not fall on the ground without your Father. But the very hairs of your head are all numbered. Fear ye not therefore, ye are of more value than many sparrows.

You might be treated unjustly at school, on the job, or in your family. But the Father is watching. Do you know this? When you feel like you're getting ripped on and put down, the Father sees. Jesus says He sees when even a sparrow falls to the ground.

Sparrows weren't worth a whole lot. Two sold for a farthing, or one-sixteenth of a denarius. A denarius was a day's wage for the poorest of people. So sparrows were sold very cheaply. In fact, in Luke's Gospel, Jesus tells us that five sparrows could be bought for two farthings. They were so common that you got an extra bird thrown in for free! Here, Jesus says the Father sees when even one of these birds fall. Are not you more valuable than they? You bet. So be assured that when you're falling, stumbling, or hurting, the Lord is watching and caring.

Matthew 10:32, 33

Whosoever therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

This verse is often misunderstood. People ask, "Does this mean the Lord will deny me if I don't stand up for Him?" No. The very night Jesus was led away to be crucified for Peter's sins, Peter was cursing, swearing, and denying Him. Yet after He died, Jesus found Peter and said, "Peter, feed My sheep. Feed My lambs. Keep going, Peter." Jesus did not damn Peter, disown Peter, or disqualify him from service.

We need to remember that when Jesus ascended into heaven, He became our High Priest who ever lives, Hebrews says, to make intercession for the saints. He's praying for us right now. If we deny Him—if we don't stand up for Him—we will miss the benefits He wants to bestow upon us, and we will be the poorer. Thus, in my opinion, this verse has nothing to do with our salvation. It has to do with the blessings God bestows upon us as we stand up for His Son.

Secondly, it has to do with eternal rewards, crowns, and benefits.

> And they that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament; and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars for ever and ever.
> Daniel 12:3

Daniel declares that you who are soul-winners are wise because you're going to shine as stars forever. If you're standing for the Lord and sharing the gospel of Jesus Christ, you will be confessed by the Lord when you stand at the Bema Seat of Christ. The Bema Seat is not a place where sins are judged. Our sins were all judged at Calvary. We will never be judged for our sins and denials, our departures and backsliding. However, we will be rewarded for what we did in Christ's Name. If we confess Jesus before men, Jesus will confess us before the Father. And rewards will come our way eternally.

> Think not that I am come to send peace on earth: I came not to send peace, but a sword. For I am come to set a man at variance against his father, and the daughter against her mother, and the daughter in law against her mother in law. And a man's foes shall be they of his own household. He that loveth father or mother more than me is not worthy of me: and he that loveth son or daughter more than me is not worthy of me.

I talked with an Oregon county leader one day who said, "Jon, you gotta face it. Your group out there intimidates an awful lot of people. You're claiming Jesus is the only Way. That makes a bunch of people feel pretty uncomfortable. You're going to have some enemies." He's right! It's inevitable. If we are the light we should be, we're going to cause people who are living in darkness to feel uncomfortable.

Jesus says, "There's going to be some severance, some tension, some difficulty if you're standing up for Me and living for Me. But if you value family or friendship more than you value Me, you're not worthy of Me."

> And he that taketh not his cross, and followeth after me, is not worthy of me.

How our generation needs to hear this.

- In the ’60s, the goal was to “Find Yourself.”

  We tried that and didn’t like what we found.
- In the ’70s, the goal was to “Improve Yourself.”

  All kinds of courses were taken, and health spas abounded, but it didn’t work. People were not happy.
- In the ’80s, the goal was to “Serve Yourself.”

  As our nation grew more and more materialistic, it became less and less fulfilled.
- In the ’90s, the goal was to “Express Yourself.”

  But even as communication grew by leaps and bounds, the messages we sent and received confused us.
- In every age, Jesus says, “Die to self.”

Die to self. Take up the cross. Today it would be, “Take up the gas chamber,” or “Take up the electric chair.” We wear cross earrings and cross necklaces, but what if we started wearing miniature gas chamber earrings or electric chair necklaces? They would more fully capture the essence of what Jesus was saying.

We sing the hymn, “There’s room at the Cross for you.” But what if we sang, “There’s room in the gas chamber for you”? You see, the Cross has lost its impact because it’s so familiar. But to these people at this time who heard Jesus say, “If you want to come after Me, you’ve got to take up the Cross,” it would be like us hearing, “If you want to follow Me, you must take up the electric chair and die a degrading death.”

Matthew 10:39 (a)
He that findeth his life shall lose it . . .

Do you ever hear people say, “Man, I’m losing it”? The reason they say this is because they’re living for themselves. If you find your life and live for yourself, you’ll lose it.

Matthew 10:39 (b)

. . . and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it.

If you want to be miserable, turn inward; but if you want to have life, Jesus—the Author of life—says, "Die to self. Live for Me."

Matthew 10:40–42

He that receiveth you receiveth me, and he that receiveth me receiveth him that sent me. He that receiveth a prophet in the name of a prophet shall receive a prophet's reward; and he that receiveth a righteous man in the name of a righteous man shall receive a righteous man's reward. And whosoever shall give to drink unto one of these little ones a cup of cold water only in the name of a disciple, verily I say unto you, he shall in no wise lose his reward.

"Anyone who honors you will be honored by Me. Even if they give you a cup of cold water, they are going to be profited and blessed presently and eternally."

In the Book of Hebrews, we are told the Lord is not unfaithful to forget our works of righteousness (6:10). When you do something for someone else, they might forget about it. But when you do something in the Name of the Lord for the people of the Lord, He promises He will not forget, and you will be rewarded. When? Perhaps now—but even better, in heaven.

Go for it, gang. Take the words of Matthew 10 to heart. Die to self. Live for Jesus.

11 As we have seen thus far, the Book of Matthew presents Jesus Christ as King—King of Israel primarily, but not exclusively, for we know that Jesus is the King of kings and the Lord of lords for all people inclusively. But Jesus, in harmony and agreement with what the prophets predicted, came on the scene and presented Himself to the people of Israel as their King and Messiah. In chapters 1 through 10, we've seen the revelation of the King—His Person, His Principles, His Power, His People. Here in chapters 11 and 12, we see rebellion against the King, where all of the revelations of chapters 1 through 10 will be challenged by His enemies.

Matthew 11:1

And it came to pass, when Jesus had made an end of commanding his twelve disciples, he departed thence to teach and to preach in their cities.

I find it interesting that after Jesus sent out the twelve, He taught in their home cities. Jesus would later say a prophet is not without honor except in his own country. In other words, a prophet can go anywhere and be listened to by everyone, except by those who grew up with him or those who thought they really knew him. When He returned to His hometown of Capernaum, Jesus' neighbors said, "Don't we know You? You're the carpenter's son. We know Your brothers and sisters." And they didn't believe in Him.

Here, Jesus goes into the apostles' home cities, knowing that if the disciples had been sent to those who knew them, the response would be, "You think you guys are apostles? What a joke!" Does this mean you shouldn't be a witness at home? No. We must witness there. But if the Lord leads you to Mexico, to the Philippines, or to the untamed jungle of Los Angeles, you just might find yourself enjoying an extra measure of fruitfulness.

Matthew 11:2, 3

Now when John had heard in the prison the works of Christ, he sent two of his disciples, and said unto him, Art thou he that should come, or do we look for another?

Herod, the ruler of Israel, had taken his brother's wife as his own, and John the Baptist boldly and pointedly indicted him for his sin. Herod retaliated by imprisoning John. John probably wasn't worried initially. He probably thought, That's okay. Messiah's on the scene. He'll spring me out of here in no time. Don't the prophecies declare He shall open prison doors and set the captive free? I won't be in here long! No problem! But there he sat, week after week after month in that dingy, damp dungeon. And he sent word to Jesus: "What's going on? You're Messiah, aren't You? That's what I was preaching. I even saw the dove of the Spirit descend upon You. Why, then, haven't You established Your kingdom? Why am I still in prison?"

Do you ever feel like that? Do you ever ask, "Lord, why am I still imprisoned? Why haven't You set me free? Why haven't You worked it out, Lord? Week after month after year has gone by, and here I sit." John did. So he sent emissaries to ask Jesus if He was the Messiah. If not, they would start looking for another.

Matthew 11:4–6

Jesus answered and said unto them, Go and shew John again those things which ye do hear and see: The blind receive their sight, and the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, and the deaf hear, the dead are raised up, and the poor have the gospel preached to them. And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me.

"Look around, guys," said Jesus. "And look it up. See that Isaiah prophesied the very things you are seeing: the blind receiving their sight, the lame walking, lepers being cleansed, the deaf hearing, and the dead rising. Look around, look it up, and tell John that the prophecies are being fulfilled and the kingdom is being seen—although in a different way than perhaps he expected. The political, material, physical kingdom John was hoping for will come eventually. But now I am establishing My kingdom spiritually, and touching people individually."

So John was gently rebuked here as his disciples returned to him, saying, "The blind are seeing, the deaf are hearing, the lame are walking, and Jesus said happy is the one who's not offended in Him." I bet when John heard this, his heart sank. "Oh, how could I be so dumb? Of course. He is fulfilling the prophecies. How could I doubt Him?" At this point, John must have been very down on himself, but read the next verse to see Jesus' impression of him.

Matthew 11:7

And as they departed, Jesus began to say unto the multitudes concerning John, What went ye out into the wilderness to see? A reed shaken with the wind?

"Did you go out to see someone who was flimsy and floppy, blowing in the wind and reading the latest public opinion polls before deciding what stance he should take? No! Far from being a reed shaken by the wind, John was a wind shaking the reeds!"

Matthew 11:8 (a)
But what went ye out for to see? A man clothed in soft raiment?

No. John wore camel's hair and dined on grasshoppers.

Matthew 11:8 (b)–10
. . . behold, they that wear soft clothing are in kings' houses. But what went ye out for to see? A prophet? yea, I say unto you, and more than a prophet. For this is he, of whom it is written, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee.

Neither flimsy reed nor pampered courtier, John is the one who was prophesied by Malachi four hundred years previously—the messenger who would come before Messiah.

Matthew 11:11 (a)
Verily I say unto you, Among them that are born of women there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist . . .

In Jesus' estimation, John the Baptist was greater than Abraham, greater than Moses, greater than Elijah, greater than David. Here's what interests me: This was spoken to the crowd after the messengers were sent off to tell John, "Blessed is the one who is not offended in Me." In other words, after John's disciples left, Jesus told the crowd John was the greatest who had ever been born of women. But John's disciples didn't hear that. Nor did

John. So, too, although Jesus often challenges us through the Holy Spirit and convicts us through the Word, there are times He says to His angels, "Look at My people at Calvary Chapel—aren't they impressive? Robed in My righteousness and cleansed by My blood. They study My Word. They sing praises to My Name. They like to pray. They love Me. Aren't they special?"

I know this is going on because I've been reading the Song of Solomon. I know what my Lord's heart is toward me. But sometimes those things are out of earshot because He wants to change me and push me to be all I can be, all I should be here on earth that I might be all He wants me to be in eternity. He keeps challenging us, but at the same time, perhaps out of earshot, He commends us.

Like John, you might be saying, "I'm such a failure. I've erred so badly. I've blown it again. There's no hope for me, my ministry, my walk with the Lord, my relationship with Him." The Lord might convict and challenge you, yes, but at the same time know this: Even as He commended John, I'm confident He commends you.

Matthew 11:11 (b)

. . . notwithstanding he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he.

In this kingdom age in which we live, even the least of us is greater than John. Why? Because we have an understanding of things John and the Old Testament prophets could not know. Peter tells us the prophets of old tried to understand, asking, "How can these things be?" We, on the other hand, have greater insight because we have been allowed to live in this age where we understand the plan of God, where we have been forgiven of all our sins by the blood of Jesus, and where we have the indwelling Spirit.

Matthew 11:12

And from the days of John the Baptist until now the kingdom of heaven suffereth violence, and the violent take it by force.

In the original Greek language, this can be translated two ways. It could mean that the kingdom of heaven is being attacked by violent men—for indeed it was. John was in prison, and he was about to be beheaded. Herod had killed perhaps thousands of babies in his drive to murder the Christ Child. Bloodshed and violence abounded as the kingdom emerged, so it could be that this verse speaks of the kingdom of heaven suffering violence by enemies trying to overtake it with force.

Or, it could be rendered another way with equal accuracy. That is, that the kingdom of heaven is taken by men who are aggressively, enthusiastically pressing in and laying hold. It is not for those who just sit back apathetically and say, "Que sera sera, whatever will be will be." Rather, it is taken by those who, with fervency in prayer, an exercise of faith, and an expenditure of energy lay hold of the promises of God violently and aggressively. Both meanings of this verse find illustration in John the Baptist.

Matthew 11:13–15

For all the prophets and the law prophesied until John. And if ye will receive it, this is Elias, which was for to come. He that hath ears to hear, let him hear.

In John 1, the Pharisees asked John directly, "Are you Elijah?" to which he replied, "I am not." And yet here Jesus is saying, "If you can receive it, this is Elijah." How do we reconcile this? Stick around. The answer appears in chapter 17.

Matthew 11:16–19

But whereunto shall I liken this generation? It is like unto children sitting in the markets, and calling unto their fellows, and saying, We have piped unto you, and ye have not danced; we have mourned unto you, and ye have not lamented. For John came neither eating nor drinking, and they say, He hath a devil. The Son of man came eating and drinking, and they say, Behold a man gluttonous, and a winebibber, a friend of publicans and sinners. But wisdom is justified of her children.

Continuing His discussion of John the Baptist, Jesus asks, "What can I say about this generation? John came as an ascetic, neither eating, nor drinking, but chomping on grasshoppers and living on honey, and you called him crazy. Then I came, eating and celebrating, and you call Me a glutton and a winebibber. You didn't receive John with his asceticism, and you do not receive Me with My celebration. You don't want to dance, and you don't want to mourn. Nothing makes you happy."

Matthew 11:20–22

Then began he to upbraid the cities wherein most of his mighty works were done, because they repented not: Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works, which were done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes. But I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon at the day of judgment, than for you.

Tyre and Sidon were Gentile cities that had been judged. But Jesus says, "Woe unto you, Chorazin and Bethsaida"—cities near Galilee where Jesus had headquartered His ministry. "Woe unto you even more than Tyre and Sidon because, although I have done many mighty works among you, you did not respond to Me."

Matthew 11:23, 24

And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted unto heaven, shalt be brought down to hell: for if the mighty works, which have been done in thee, had been done in Sodom, it would have remained until this day. But I say unto you, That it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment, than for thee.

In addition to Chorazin and Bethsaida, Jesus indicts His hometown of Capernaum. Those living in Capernaum saw His works, they heard His message, but they did not respond.

If you go to Israel, you can go to the sites of Capernaum, Bethsaida, and Chorazin. These cities, once hugely prosperous, are now nothing but archaeological digs. By all logic, these cities should be thriving today. The location is beautiful. The climate is primo. The water is abundant. The resources are many. But these cities were judged and destroyed not very long after this statement was made, and they were never rebuilt. It would be as if Balboa Island, Newport Beach, and San Diego were wiped out and never rebuilt. People would say, "Why not? Those are lovely spots geographically." Yet centuries have come and gone, and these three cities are still dead.

And so are we if we reject the words of Jesus Christ. If any of you say, "I don't believe in this Jesus stuff, not really," you're a dead city. If you refuse to respond to the mighty works of Jesus Christ all around you and to His Word constantly before you, judgment will come upon you.

Matthew 11:25, 26

At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank thee, O Father, Lord of heaven and earth, because thou hast hid these things from the wise and prudent, and hast revealed them unto babes. Even so, Father: for so it seemed good in thy sight.

Jesus' attention shifted from the rebellious to the faithful as He said, "Father, thank You that You have revealed truth to these babes. The Pharisees, the religious, the scholars—they're not responding. But, Father, thank You for the babes." In the Book of Acts, Luke writes that the Pharisees, Sadducees, and scribes marveled when they heard the wisdom of Peter and John. "How did these fishermen get such wisdom?" they wondered. The answer? Peter and John had been with Jesus (Acts 4:13). That's the key. Spend time with the Lord in the Word, and you'll be so wise that even Pharisees will wonder how you became so wise.

Matthew 11:27

All things are delivered unto me of my Father: and no man knoweth the Son, but the Father; neither knoweth any man the Father, save the Son, and he to whomsoever the Son will reveal him.How do you know the Father? Only one Way, through the Son—Jesus Christ.

> God is so immense. The Milky Way galaxy is approximately 100,000 light years across. Traveling at the speed of light, 186,000 miles per second, it would take 100,000 years just to get across the length of the Milky Way galaxy.

And yet the Word says our Lord spans the universe between His thumb and His little finger (Isaiah 40:12)! Big! Enormous! How do we know such a vast God? Oh, great is the mystery of godliness, Paul said, that God would become a Man, manifesting Himself in Christ Jesus (1 Timothy 3:16).

Our Christian faith is truly ingenious. I mean, this huge, vast God became a Man that we might know Him. But our sin stood in the way of a relationship with Him, so that same God died on a Cross at Calvary to provide atonement for our sin. Then He rose again to live inside of us by His Spirit. It's perfect! There's not a flaw in it!

A WORD TO THE WEARY

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 11:28–30

Although it took place in the 1930s, it remains one of the most mystifying missing person cases in FBI files. After spending an evening eating out with friends, a forty-five-year-old New York judge hailed a taxi and was never seen or heard from again. The FBI immediately became involved. They suspected a kidnapping by someone who held a judicial grudge against him. But that didn't seem to pan out. They then suspected Mafia activity because he was an outspoken enemy of the Mafia. But again, that led nowhere. To this day, there is only one clue that remains. When his wife returned to their apartment the evening her husband disappeared, there on the table was a check for a large sum of money made out to her and a note attached to it in her husband's handwriting which simply said,

I am very, very tired. Love, Joe

The question remains—were those words merely a comment made at the end of a particularly trying day? Or was his note saying, "I'm tired; I'm fatigued; I'm weary; I give up"? To this day, we can't be sure. For lack of further evidence, it is presently believed he rode off in a taxicab to an unknown destination where he took his own life because weariness had weighted his soul. I think all of us from time to time can relate to that kind of weariness. I'm not speaking of physical fatigue—the kind of fatigue you feel after mowing the lawn or playing a set of tennis. No, I'm speaking of the weariness which comes from life itself.

If you are of average weight and height, here is what you will go through in an average twenty-four-hour period: Your heart will beat 103,689 times. Your blood will travel 168 million miles as your heart pumps approximately 4 ounces per beat. You will breathe 23,040 times, inhaling 438 cubic feet of air. Your stomach will take in three and a half pounds of food and 2.9 quarts of liquid. You will lose seven eighths of a pound of waste. If you are a man, you will speak 4,800 words, and if you are a woman, you will speak close to 7,000 words. You will move 750 muscles and exercise 7 million brain cells.

No wonder we're tired! But there is a weariness much more draining than physical fatigue. It's the kind of weariness you feel when you just don't know if you can go on another day. It's the weariness a father feels when his child is doing wrong, the weariness a friend feels who has been abandoned or misunderstood, and the weariness a wife feels whose husband has rejected her. It's the weariness that can take a toll on even the most seemingly successful individual—even on a successful judge.

There is One, however, who said, "Come to me, all you who are weary . . ." (see Matthew 11:28). How I appreciate that! The Lord of the universe invited anyone who is weary to come to Him. If I were the Lord, I don't know if I would make that kind of invitation. Keep in mind that at this point in Matthew's Gospel, Israel is rejecting His invitation to make Him King. Consequently, no longer is Jesus speaking to a nation corporately, saying, "Repent: for the kingdom of heaven is at hand."

No, now He is speaking to individuals personally, saying, "Come to Me, any who are weary, any who are laboring." Would you have called this group of people? I'm not sure I would. If I were giving an invitation, I don't think I would have said, "Come unto me all you who are laboring and weary—feeling as though you're depressed to the point of death, despairing because of divorce or disease, death or discouragement."

No, I think I would say, "Come unto me, all you who are happy—let's celebrate life together! Let's lift each other's spirits!" Or maybe I would have said, "Come unto me, all you who are wealthy. Come and share your prosperity!" Or maybe, "Come unto me all you who are wise. Let's dialogue and philosophize and interact intellectually." But the personal invitation Jesus extended to people individually as the nation rebelled against Him corporately was: "Anyone who is weary, come to Me. Those are My people—the weary ones."

Come unto me . . .

Jesus didn't say, "Run to Me." So often in my weariness, I can't run. I can only stumble to Him or crawl before Him. But that's okay. He just said "Come" any way we can.

Come unto me . . .

He didn't say, "Go to church." He didn't say, "Listen to a sermon." He didn't say, "Get some counseling." He didn't say, "Read a book." He said, "Come to Me."

Come unto me, all ye that labour . . .

What causes us to be weary in our labor? I believe the answer is found in Exodus 5.

The people of Israel were in Egypt. Four hundred years previously, they left the Land of Promise due to famine and headed south to Egypt where there was plenty to eat. They lived there for a while, enjoying the abundance and prosperity. But suddenly the situation changed when a new Pharaoh came on the scene, looked at the Jewish people, and said, "We've got to control these people. How? We'll enslave them." So for hundreds of years, the people of God were enslaved by the Egyptians, baking bricks in the blistering, burning sun for the construction of Pharaoh's monuments. It has been documented that the Israelites baked enough bricks to build a wall ten feet high and five feet thick from LA to New York City. When Moses said, "Let my people go," Pharaoh answered,

> Ye shall no more give the people straw to make brick, as heretofore: let them go and gather straw for themselves. And the tale of the bricks, which they did make heretofore, ye shall lay upon them; ye shall not diminish ought thereof: for they be idle; therefore they cry, saying, Let us go and sacrifice to our God. Let there more work be laid upon the men, that they may labour therein; and let them not regard vain words.
> Exodus 5:7–9

The Hebrew word translated "labour" in verse 9 has the same meaning as the Greek word translated "labour" Jesus used in Matthew 11. Do you sometimes feel like you're stuck in Egypt, endlessly making bricks for Pharaoh under the blistering sun? Maybe you've said, "I'm going to Egypt. I'm going to labor to get ahead in my career," or, "I'm going to work hard for this material thing." And for a while, it seemed enjoyable. But then, just like Pharaoh, it turned against you, and the very thing you thought would be wonderful is now a taskmaster—cracking the whip and enslaving you.

"Come to Me," the Lord says. "All you who are weary from labor, all you who have realized Pharaoh is a fake and Egypt is a rip off, come to Me."

We have a tendency to think, I'm going to be so happy when I accomplish this task, when I reach that goal, when I get this business or that toy.

And we labor and labor until we finally say, "This isn't working out the way I thought it could, the way the commercials promised it would. I'm miserable. I'm tired. I'm weary."

Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden . . .

What does it mean to be heavy laden?

> Ah sinful nation, a people laden with iniquity, a seed of evildoers, children that are corrupters: they have forsaken the LORD*, they have provoked the Holy One of Israel unto anger, they are gone away backward. Why should ye be stricken any more? ye will revolt more and more: the whole head is sick, and the whole heart faint. From the sole of the foot even unto the head there is no soundness in it; but wounds, and bruises, and putrifying sores: they have not been closed, neither bound up, neither mollified with ointment.*
> Isaiah 1:4–6

The Lord says to His people, Israel, "You're beat up and bruised and hurting and desolate and destroyed because you have been laden, loaded with iniquity." You see, Pharaoh makes us labor, but sin makes us heavy laden. Sin weighs us down.

David went through a season of sin on more than one occasion. During one such time, he wrote,

> There is no soundness in my flesh because of thine anger; neither is there any rest in my bones because of my sin. For mine iniquities are gone over mine head: as an heavy burden they are too heavy for me. My wounds stink and are corrupt because of my foolishness. I am troubled; I am bowed down greatly; I go mourning all the day long. For my loins are filled with a loathsome disease: and there is no soundness in my flesh. I am feeble and sore broken: I have roared by reason of the disquietness of my heart.

Psalm 38:3–8

Sin will make you tired. What does Jesus say? He says, "Whether you've been seduced and sucked in by Pharaoh's mentality—working for the world and finding it to be nothing but bricks and weariness—or whether you've been heavy laden with iniquity, come unto Me."

Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest.

How?

Take my yoke upon you . . .

The Greek word translated "carpenter" used in Matthew 13 to describe Joseph refers to a finish carpenter rather than for a framer. Tradition has it that the carpenter shop where Jesus worked with His father, Joseph, specialized in making yokes. To yoke two oxen together, the skilled carpenter designed the yoke to fit each ox individually. Since there was always a lead ox yoked together with one who would follow, the yoke was designed in such a way that the lead ox would pull the greater weight. The follower, or assistant ox, was just to go with the flow.

Take My yoke upon you . . .

Jesus used an analogy well known to the people who listened to Him when He said not only, "Come unto Me," but, "Yoke with Me. Let Me be the lead ox. Go with My flow. Don't try to figure out or change My direction. Let Me lead you."

The story is told of a battleship cruising the Atlantic, off the northern coast of Maine. One stormy evening, the commander was notified, "Sir, there's a light ahead. Oncoming vessel."

"Signal the oncoming vessel: change your courses ten degrees to the west."

The message was sent.

But a light flashed back, "Change your course ten degrees to the east."

"Signal again," barked the commander. "Change your course ten degrees to the west. I am an admiral!"

The light flashed back, "Change your course ten degrees to the east. I am a Seaman Third Class."

By this time, the admiral was incensed as he thundered, "Signal again: Change your course ten degrees to the west. I am a battleship."

And the message came back, "Change your course ten degrees to the east. I am a lighthouse."

So, too, as we impudently and impetuously say to the Lord, "Lord, let's go my way," He answers, "No. We're going My way."

I am the Lighthouse.

I am the Light of the world,

The Rock of your salvation,

the Creator and Sustainer of your soul.

I am the Alpha and the Omega,

The One who knows the beginning from the end.

Trust Me.

Come unto Me, all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you, and learn of Me; for I am meek and lowly in heart . . .

This is the only autobiographical statement Jesus ever made.

He didn't say, "Learn of Me because I am majestic and mighty," or "Learn of Me because I am powerful and prominent." He said, "That which you discover when you learn of Me will refresh you, for I am meek."

What is meekness? Meekness is strength under control. Picture a big, gentle Saint Bernard surrounded by yapping, snapping, little Chihuahuas.

Now the Saint Bernard could open his mouth and chomp the Chihuahuas down in one gulp. He could take his paw and knock them away with one swipe. But the powerful Saint Bernard patiently puts up with the yappers and snappers at his feet. That's meekness.

When I study the Scriptures and learn of Jesus, I am always amazed at His goodness, His grace, His kindness, His gentleness, and His meekness.

Jesus says, "Come to Me—you who have been burned out by Pharaoh, you who have been wearied by the folly of sin. Yoke with Me—don't try to maneuver Me, steer Me, or demand of Me. Learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly."

The result?

. . . And ye shall find rest unto your souls.

You'll find what your heart is craving: Shabbat. Sabbath. Rest.

For my yoke is easy, and my burden is light.

In Acts 15, questions arose concerning Gentile converts and whether or not they should follow the laws and the rituals and be circumcised. Peter gave this response:

> Now therefore why tempt ye God, to put a yoke upon the neck of the disciples, which neither our fathers nor we were able to bear?
> Acts 15:10

"My yoke," Jesus said, "is easy." It's not religion—it's relationship. It's not Judaism—it's Jesus. It's not the law—it's love.

Sometimes I hear people say, "I'm so burdened. It's so tough being a servant. It's so hard to be a brother, a musician, or a witness."

If it's heavy, it's not His burden because His burden is light. If what I'm doing is tough and wearisome to me, then I know it's not the Lord who has placed that burden upon me. His burden is easy. His load is light.

Jesus would say to you today, "Come to Me. Don't labor under the burdens of Pharaoh. You'll become weary if you do. Don't become heavy laden under the bondage of sin. It will rob you of your energy. Don't become enslaved by the laws of the Pharisees. You'll be weighed down. Just come to Me. Yoke with Me. Learn of Me. And you'll find rest in your souls."

12 The purpose of Matthew's Gospel is to present Jesus as King. In chapter 11, however, we saw the beginning of a rebellion against His authority as Israel failed to respond to His work among them. It is a rebellion that will lead to rejection and ultimately to Calvary.

Realizing that, as a nation, Israel would not acknowledge He was Messiah, Jesus began speaking to people individually, saying, "Come unto me all ye that labour and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." Upon hearing this, the religious leaders would think, We don't need His rest. We have our Sabbath. That is all the rest we need. But in reality, the Sabbath day had become anything but a day of rest, for the scribes had encumbered it with so many rules and regulations that the Talmud devoted numerous chapters to instructions for keeping the Sabbath.

There remaineth therefore a rest to the people of God.

Hebrews 4:9

Even though the Sabbath day was established in the Book of Genesis, the author of Hebrews quotes Psalm 95, saying there remains a Sabbath for God's people. The argument of Hebrews 4 is that the ultimate Sabbath encompasses much more than a singular day. God's intent was much greater than just to give His people a vacation.

Other people say, "The Sabbath is not a vacation, it's location. It's not so much a day, it's a place." The Jews thought the perfect location would be the Promised Land. But Hebrews 4 goes on to say that even after they were in the Promised Land, the Lord still spoke of a rest that was to come. The Promised Land didn't satisfy the restlessness within them, and the Sabbath day didn't bring them the refreshment for which they longed. So Hebrews 4 concludes that true rest comes neither from vacation nor location. It's found in a Person. Jesus Christ is the Sabbath they sought.

> Let no man therefore judge you in meat, or in drink, or in respect of an holyday, or of the new moon, or of the sabbath days: Which are a shadow of things to come; but the body is of Christ.
> Colossians 2:16–17

In other words, don't let anyone tell you that what you are looking for can be found in meats and drinks and holy days and Sabbaths. No, these Old Testament pictures are only shadows describing the reality, which is Christ. We don't have a Sabbath day. We have a Sabbath God in Jesus Christ. He is our Rest. He is our Shabbat. But these were fighting words for the religious leaders and rabbis. And now the stage is set for chapter 12. The issue? The Sabbath.

> Matthew 12:1
> At that time Jesus went on the sabbath day through the corn; and his disciples were an hungred, and began to pluck the ears of corn, and to eat.

See now in your mind's eye Jesus walking with His disciples, flanked by fields of wheat. With roads in that day few and far between, travelers would walk on pathways that wound their way through fields. The law made provision in Deuteronomy 23 for the hunger of such travelers. If you walked on a path through a man's field, you could eat what grew along the path. Therefore, don't be mistaken. Jesus and His disciples were not robbing some poor farmer of his crops. They were well within the legal boundaries of the provision of God's Law.

> But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the sabbath day.

Here's the question I have: What were these Pharisees doing in the field in the first place? They had broken their own rules by being more than three thousand feet away from their own homes on the Sabbath. But that's the way Pharisees always are. They would go out of their way to find fault with others, and in so doing, err themselves.

Matthew 12:3, 4

But he said unto them, Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungred, and they that were with him; how he entered into the house of God, and did eat the shewbread, which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the priests?

"Haven't you been reading the Scriptures?" Jesus asked. "Don't you know the story of 1 Samuel 21? When David and his men became hungry while fleeing from Saul, the priests gave him the showbread, which was not lawful for them to eat. Don't you remember that story that shows love is more important than the law, relationship more important than ritual?" Jesus chose a particularly interesting illustration, for just as David was at that time rejected as king of Israel, so Jesus was also at this time rejected as King.

Matthew 12:5

Or have ye not read in the law, how that on the sabbath days the priests in the temple profane the sabbath, and are blameless?

Temple priests worked twice as hard on the Sabbath, their supposed day of rest, since twice as many sacrifices were offered to the Lord on that day. Jesus here is making an airtight case.

"Don't you know history?" He said. "David ate the showbread and was held blameless. Don't you know the law? It requires the priests to work doubly hard on the Sabbath day."

Matthew 12:6, 7

But I say unto you, That in this place is one greater than the temple. But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

"Finally," Jesus asks, "don't you know the Word?" as He quoted from the prophet Hosea. "Don't you know the heart of your Father? He desires mercy more than sacrifice, love more than law, and relationship more than ritual." Notice the ironclad case Jesus makes here. He points to David—a king they honored. He points to the priests—who worked on the Sabbath. He points to the prophet Hosea—who declared God loves mercy more than sacrifice. In validation of His own actions, Jesus identifies with a prophet, the priests, and a king. Jesus is ingeniously driving a point home to those who had ears to hear. "I am the King of kings, the great High Priest, the Prophet of God. I am the Anointed One. I am Messiah."

Matthew 12:8

For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath day.

"It all speaks of Me," declares Jesus. "It all points to Me." When you read the Scriptures, don't get hung up in the regulations, rituals, and technicalities. They are all shadows that point to Jesus. Look for Him and become enamored with Him as you see Him on every page. Jesus is Lord of all—even of the Sabbath day.

Matthew 12:9

And when he was departed thence, he went into their synagogue.

He went into their synagogue. Their synagogue was no longer His synagogue. What a tragedy when a church is no longer His church—where Jesus is no longer honored and loved, exalted and worshiped—but where He is simply a mascot. "Oh yeah. We believe in Jesus. Now let's get down to the real matters of the church. We must plan for our Christmas bazaar."

What a tragic loss. What tremendous love. Although it was no longer His synagogue, He still came in. I love the Lord for this. He doesn't give up. He continues on, time and time again.

Matthew 12:10–12

And, behold, there was a man which had his hand withered. And they asked him, saying, Is it lawful to heal on the sabbath days?

that they might accuse him. And he said unto them, What man shall there be among you, that shall have one sheep, and if it fall into a pit on the sabbath day, will he not lay hold on it, and lift it out? How much then is a man better than a sheep? Wherefore it is lawful to do well on the sabbath days.

Keep in mind that in their regulations, the Jews specifically said you could do no healing on the Sabbath day. Let's say a man was bleeding to death. You could put a tourniquet around him to prevent him from dying, but you could put no ointment on the wound that might bring healing. Jesus asks, "Why is it that your regulations say if a sheep falls into a pit on the Sabbath, it's okay to bring him out, but a man cannot be healed on the Sabbath?"

That's what the law always does. When you become all bound up in regulations, traditions, and religious rituals, your heart becomes cold and hardened towards people. You constantly judge them and find fault with them. Religion apart from relationship will make you a pompous, snooty, holier-than-thou Pharisee.

Matthew 12:13

Then saith he to the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it forth; and it was restored whole, like as the other.

How I love this incident! "Stretch out your hand," said Jesus.

The man could have said, "I can't! It's paralyzed." But he didn't. He simply stretched it out; and as he obeyed, his hand was healed. There's power in the Word, gang. Dare to act, and you'll be able to act because God's commandments are God's enablements.

Matthew 12:14

Then the Pharisees went out, and held a council against him, how they might destroy him.

The problem with the Pharisees was jealousy. Nobody was noticing them anymore, and they didn't like the competition.

Matthew 12:15, 16

But when Jesus knew it, he withdrew himself from thence: and great multitudes followed him, and he healed them all; and he charged them that they should not make him known.

I think verse 16 should be written very boldly on the pulpits and in the margins of those who have healing ministries. Jesus ministered in such a way that He was not trying to advertise His successes.

Matthew 12:17–19

That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by Esaias the prophet, saying, I will put my spirit upon him, and he shall shew judgment to the Gentiles. He shall not strive, nor cry; neither shall any man hear his voice in the streets.

Matthew quotes Isaiah 42, a beautiful prophecy wonderfully fulfilled in Jesus. God said, "This is the One in whom I am well pleased. My Spirit is upon Him. Justice will come to the Gentiles through Him. And He will not cry, neither shall any man hear His voice in the streets." Jesus was not like some men we see today, striving, crying, and being weird in the name of the Lord. Jesus didn't draw attention to Himself. In fact, He blended into His world so completely that in the Garden of Gethsemane, His enemies couldn't identify Him without a kiss. Here was a Man who had healed, fed, and taught thousands, yet He remained unidentifiable because He moved in such humility and such grace.

Matthew 12:20, 21

A bruised reed shall he not break, and smoking flax shall he not quench, till he send forth judgment unto victory. And in his name shall the Gentiles trust.

Reeds grow in marshes. They were, and still are, good for only one thing: musical instruments. If a reed became bruised or bent, it was good for nothing. Flax, too, was good for only one thing: to be used for wicks in lamps. Through the analogy of reeds and flax, Isaiah described the ministry of Jesus. Maybe you feel like nothing more than a squeaky reed or a smoking wick. I have good news for you: The Lord will not break you, throw water upon you, or give up on you. He'll strengthen you, rebuild you, and use you for His glory.

Matthew 12:22–24

Then was brought unto him one possessed with a devil, blind, and dumb: and he healed him, insomuch that the blind and dumb both spake and saw. And all the people were amazed, and said, Is not this the son of David? But when the Pharisees heard it, they said, This fellow doth not cast out devils, but by Beelzebub the prince of the devils.

As Jesus' ministry continued, the dumb began to talk, the blind began to see, and the Pharisees had no other choice but to accuse Him of working by the power of Satan himself. What else could they say? Jesus was healing and affecting so many that they had to come up with some explanation for His power. The same thing happens today whenever a person chooses to believe the work of the Holy Spirit is the result of brainwashing or manipulation, emotionalism or hypnotism, instead of attributing such power to God.

Matthew 12:25, 26

And Jesus knew their thoughts, and said unto them, Every kingdom divided against itself is brought to desolation; and every city or house divided against itself shall not stand: And if Satan cast out Satan, he is divided against himself; how shall then his kingdom stand?

"If I am casting out Satan by the power of Satan, then Satan's house is divided. He's fighting against himself. What you are saying is illogical," declared Jesus. Not only was their accusation illogical, but based on the following verses, it was hypocritical.

Matthew 12:27, 28

And if I by Beelzebub cast out devils, by whom do your children cast them out? therefore they shall be your judges. But if I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, then the kingdom of God is come unto you.

The Pharisees endorsed certain exorcists who went throughout the community casting out devils. Jesus said, "If you indict Me because I have freed a man of demonic power, then what about those whom you have endorsed? If, on the other hand, I cast out devils by the Spirit of God, you must acknowledge His kingdom is represented by Me, that it is here in your midst."

Matthew 12:29

Or else how can one enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he first bind the strong man? and then he will spoil his house.

The enemy had to be bound through prayer and in faith before Jesus could release the one possessed by a demon.

Matthew 12:30

He that is not with me is against me; and he that gathereth not with me scattereth abroad.

Jesus says, "You're against Me, Pharisees," as He goes on to give them a scathing indictment.

Matthew 12:31, 32

Wherefore I say unto you, All manner of sin and blasphemy shall be forgiven unto men: but the blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven unto men. And whosoever speaketh a word against the Son of man, it shall be forgiven him: but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come.

Follow the flow: A man has been released of a demon. The Pharisees attributed the miracle to the power of Satan, and Jesus now gives a heavy word to these Pharisees: "You are speaking illogically, acting hypocritically, and jeopardizing your own souls eternally." If they had not already done so, they were dangerously close to committing the blasphemy of the Spirit, which according to Jesus, is the only unpardonable sin.

When Jesus Christ died on the Cross of Calvary, He died not only for our sins but also for the sins of the whole world. That's the gospel. Jesus died for every sin every person who has ever lived on the face of this planet has committed or ever will commit. When He said, "It is Finished," the work was done. Every sin was paid for. That's great news! We can tell anyone, "My friend, your sins are forgiven! The price has been paid. You're free!"

But there is one sin that cannot be forgiven. There is one sin that will damn you eternally. It is the blasphemy of the Spirit. If you sin against the Father or against the Son, it's forgiven. But if you sin against the Spirit in this blasphemy, it will damn you eternally. That's the one sin that is unpardonable, the one sin that's unforgivable.

What is the blasphemy of the Holy Spirit? It is when you come to the wrong conclusion that the reason miracles are happening, people are changing, and the dumb are speaking is due to some kind of hypnotism, demonic activity, or mental delusion. And you begin to blaspheme what the Spirit speaks in your heart when He says, "No, it's real. It's Jesus."

If you ignore the Spirit's voice in your heart and say, "Those people at Calvary Chapel are being brainwashed, those Christians are drinking their bathwater, those believers are under some kind of delusion," there comes a point where you will have said, "No" one too many times to the Holy Spirit. There comes a point when the unpardonable sin has been committed. What does this mean? It means the Holy Spirit will no longer speak to you. You see, in Genesis 6, God declared, "My Spirit shall not always strive with man . . ." He's not always going to speak to you about your need for salvation.

Therefore, if you keep saying, "Those people are just being emotional; they just imagine they hear from God; they're off the wall," eventually you will commit the blasphemy of the Spirit, and you will be damned.

You can only hear the message and see the miracles so many times before God will finally say, "Okay, have your way. You don't want to acknowledge

My reality? Very well. My Spirit will no longer speak to you." And then you're lost. At that point, you not only will not believe. At that point, you cannot believe.

In Jeremiah 7:16, God said to Jeremiah, "Don't pray any longer for this people. They are lost." Jeremiah was told to preach to them, but not to pray for them. It wouldn't do any good. There comes a time, we know not when, and a place, we know not where, when a man's fate is sealed between heaven and despair. You can't play games when the Spirit is drawing you.

> During World War II, a United States battleship, aircraft carrier, and several other smaller boats were patrolling the waters of the Northern Atlantic in search of German U-boats. One evening, several pilots took off from the carrier and were told to be back by a certain hour. But the leader of the squadron of four planes purposefully stayed out longer, feeling with just a little more time, he could find the enemy and secure an impressive hit.
> As the sun set, a German armada entered the area. The American fleet was in trouble for now they were outgunned, outmanned, and outnumbered. Unbeknownst to the pilots, radio silence was ordered between the ships in the water and aircraft still in flight. At this point, as their fuel was getting dangerously low, the pilots radioed to the American ships, but there was no reply. Again and again the pilots cried, "Turn on the lights. Turn on the landing lights." But the lights didn't go on, for to have done so would have jeopardized the lives of thousands of men.
> Thus, the story is recorded how the men on that aircraft carrier stood by in horror as they watched four American planes crash into the icy waters of the Atlantic.

So, too, the Scriptures say, "Today is the day of salvation." The light is shining in your heart. You're hearing the Word of the Lord. But there will come a time when the Lord, the Commander-in-Chief, will order radio silence. The lights will be dimmed, and you will not be able to find your way home. You will have blasphemed the Spirit, and there will be no hope for you. The Lord offers you eternal and abundant life. He wants to forgive your sins and fill you with joy. Only a fool would turn his back on such a gift. Today is the day of salvation. When you witness, pray passionately, and express yourself clearly. You need to be zealous in your witness because the stakes are high. A person doesn't have forever to make a decision. There is a point in time when the lights go off, when the communication stops. Such was the case with the Pharisees.

Matthew 12:33

Either make the tree good, and his fruit good; or else make the tree corrupt, and his fruit corrupt: for the tree is known by his fruit.

"Check out what I am doing," Jesus says. "The good fruit of people being healed and liberated will tell you something about Me. Check out the fruit."

Matthew 12:34–36

O generation of vipers, how can ye, being evil, speak good things? for out of the abundance of the heart the mouth speaketh. A good man out of the good treasure of the heart bringeth forth good things: and an evil man out of the evil treasure bringeth forth evil things. But I say unto you, That every idle word that men shall speak, they shall give account thereof in the day of judgment.

A news broadcast in Chicago was once interrupted by the once familiar song, "It's Howdy Doody Time, It's Howdy Doody Time . . ." when Howdy Doody broadcast waves hit some sort of an asteroid and bounced back thirty years later. So too, our words go on and on, and Jesus says we will give an account for them. Therefore, how thankful I am for the blood of Jesus. We have been forgiven, but those who blaspheme the Spirit, saying, "I don't want Jesus," must eventually answer to Him.

Matthew 12:37

For by thy words thou shalt be justified, and by thy words thou shalt be condemned.

Your words will either condemn you or justify you.

> That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.
> Romans 10:9, 10

Matthew 12:38, 39

Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonah.

"The one sign I will give you is the sign of Jonah. Jonah preached judgment. I have come preaching grace and mercy. Jonah was disobedient. I have come obediently. Jonah preached to one city. I have come for the whole world. A greater Prophet than Jonah is in your midst, yet you do not respond."

Matthew 12:40, 41

For as Jonah was three days and three nights in the whale's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The men of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they repented at the preaching of Jonah; and, behold, a greater than Jonah is here.

"The sign of Jonah" is resurrection—the one and only sign Jesus promised as validation of His words and ministry. That's why the Resurrection is so important. It's the one sign upon which we build our faith.

How do I know if the Cross really "took"? Was God fully satisfied with the sacrifice of Jesus? Are my sins really forgiven? Yea and amen! The Resurrection proves Jesus is the Messiah and that His work on the Cross was complete.

As valid as your testimony may be, in reality, the most powerful prod to salvation you can provide is to talk to people about the Resurrection of Jesus Christ. It's provable historically. It's undeniable philosophically and logically. Get the book, Who Moved The Stone? by Frank Morison, an Ivy League scholar who was determined to disprove the Resurrection. He studied for seven years, and in the process, became a born-again believer. Read Evidence That Demands A Verdict by Josh McDowell, or Know Why You Believe by Paul Little. Study the Resurrection and make it the focal point of your witness.

Matthew 12:42

The queen of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

Jesus is referring to the account in 1 Kings 10, wherein we read the Queen of Sheba cruised up from Africa to see Solomon. Having heard about his splendor, his majesty, and his wisdom, she went away saying, "Amazing! The half wasn't even told to me. What I've seen here is a mind blower." Yet a greater King than Solomon was in their midst.

- Solomon had wisdom from God. Jesus is the wisdom of God.
- Solomon was a great king. Jesus is the King of kings.
- Solomon spoke practically to his nation. Jesus spoke powerfully to all of creation.
- Solomon gave the Queen of Sheba gifts. Jesus is able to do exceedingly abundantly above all we can ask or think.

Matthew 12:43–45

When the unclean spirit is gone out of a man, he walketh through dry places, seeking rest, and findeth none. Then he saith, I will return into my house from whence I came out; and when he is come, he findeth it empty, swept, and garnished. Then goeth he, and taketh with himself seven other spirits more wicked than himself, and they enter in and dwell there: and the last state of that man is worse than the first. Even so shall it be also unto this wicked generation.

Again, think with me and follow the flow carefully. Jesus here is indicting this wicked generation, saying, "Although you might have cleaned yourself up from the idolatry that once plagued your country and have had reformation, you haven't experienced regeneration. Although you've swept your nation clean of idols, seven times as many demons will flood you because you are rejecting Me."

Jesus is speaking primarily of the nation of Israel. But He also speaks to me personally and to us as a church corporately because we must be careful that we do not seek to get people to merely "clean up" their lives. There's a move today to try to bring reformation to our communities in the name of Jesus. Our communities do not need reformation. Our communities need regeneration. People need to be born again. The work of the gospel is from the inside out. Jesus called us to be fishers of men, and you can't clean the fish until you catch them.

People who try to clean up their lives or their communities through reformation will sweep the house clean, but seven times as many demons will come back. The evil that follows will be greater than the initial evil unless there is rebirth. Do you really think we're going to stop drug abuse by trying to eradicate the fields of coca in South America? Do you really feel that militarily or politically or through slogans like "Just Say No," we're going to rid ourselves of cocaine nationally?

We tried in Prohibition. "We'll sweep it clean," we said. "We'll close down the distilleries. We'll board up the breweries. We'll change this country through legislation." But do you know what followed? For a while, alcoholism seemed to ebb, but in its place came cocaine and heroin—seven times the greater evil.

We need to take the words of Jesus to heart. We must be about regeneration—not reformation; rebirth inwardly—not reform outwardly. Should we not then be involved in community activities and political undertakings? Of course. But as you are involved, you must realize your ultimate goal is to see people changed through the Gospel of Jesus Christ. You must be salt and light—drawing people to and reflecting Him.

Matthew 12:46

While he yet talked to the people, behold, his mother and his brethren stood without, desiring to speak with him.

Why did Jesus' family want to talk with Him? They were worried about Him. They knew one didn't call the Pharisees a brood of vipers and escape scot-free. According to a long list of rules and regulations concerning infidels and heretics, the Pharisees could stone someone for such an offense. So Jesus' mother and brothers, sensing confrontation, might have wanted to protect Him.

Matthew 12:47–49

Then one said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren stand without, desiring to speak with thee. But he answered and said unto him that told him, Who is my mother? and who are my brethren? And he stretched forth his hand toward his disciples, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren!

For those who say Mary has some kind of special influence on Jesus, this passage shows she didn't have a whole lot of pull. Jesus said, "Wait a minute. Who is My mother? My mother and My brothers are My disciples."

Matthew 12:50

For whosoever shall do the will of my Father which is in heaven, the same is my brother, and sister, and mother.

It is true we can't choose our family. But the Lord did. If you believe on Him whom the Father has sent, He embraces you as His family. Hebrews says He is not ashamed to call us brethren (Hebrews 2:11). He says, "Behold, My brothers, My sisters, My mother—those who hear My word, those who do the will of the Father, believing in Me—they are My family." Before the world began, Jesus chose us to live with Him eternally.

Amazing!

13 In chapter 12, we saw mounting opposition to Jesus. Here in chapter 13, the last in this section that presents the King resisted, Jesus heads for the seashore.

Matthew 13:1, 2

The same day went Jesus out of the house, and sat by the sea side. And great multitudes were gathered together unto him, so that he went into a ship, and sat; and the whole multitude stood on the shore.

In the late 1800s, Charles Spurgeon, the "Prince of Preachers," who at the age of twenty had a congregation of thousands, told young seminarians they would have to weigh at least two hundred fifty pounds to be effective expositors. A big man himself, he believed ample girth allowed voice projection essential in the days before electric amplification.

Jesus employed a simpler technique. He spoke from a boat so His voice could bounce off the water and be amplified in the process. Creator of this principle, Jesus used it powerfully.

Matthew 13:3 (a)

And he spake many things unto them in parables . . .

The use of parables was the way people communicated when they wanted to arouse curiosity and excite interest. They wouldn't use guitars or humor, but rather they would use parables—little stories with big messages. The word "parable" comes from parabole in Greek. The Greek word para means "alongside," while ballo means "to cast, or to throw." Thus, the word "parable" means "casting alongside." Parabolic teaching places a story alongside a truth or a principle. As you study parables, realize this: The lost and the lazy will not understand them, but for those who are interested in truth, they are wonderfully illuminating.

Matthew 13:3 (b)–9

. . . saying, Behold, a sower went forth to sow; and when he sowed, some seeds fell by the way side, and the fowls came and devoured them up: Some fell upon stony places, where they had not much earth: and forthwith they sprung up, because they had no deepness of earth: And when the sun was up, they were scorched; and because they had no root, they withered away. And some fell among thorns; and the thorns sprung up, and choked them: But other fell into good ground, and brought forth fruit, some an hundredfold, some sixtyfold, some thirtyfold. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

This parable has two applications. Primarily, it speaks of how we hear the Word. Secondarily, it gives understanding about how we share the Word. In verse 9, Jesus says, "Whoever has ears to hear, let him hear." Tune in! Think through. Listen up!

A former television news producer conducted a most intriguing survey. Following one broadcast, he sent a crew to survey people who watched the show in its entirety, which at that time consisted of nineteen stories in the thirty-minute broadcast. Fifty-one percent of those who watched the entire half-hour broadcast could not remember a single story. His conclusion was that people don't listen, and a decision was made at that time to simplify news programming.

So, too, understanding the limited attention span of humanity, Jesus taught in simple, unforgettable, powerful parables—one of His most well known being the Parable of the Sower.

For topical study of Matthew 13:3–9 entitled "Sowing the Seed," turn to page* 99.

Matthew 13:10–12

And the disciples came, and said unto him, Why speakest thou unto them in parables? He answered and said unto them, Because it is given unto you to know the mysteries of the kingdom of heaven, but to them it is not given. For whosoever hath, to him shall be given, and he shall have more abundance: but whosoever hath not, from him shall be taken away even that he hath.

In other words, the one who receives and responds will gain even more insight, but the one who doesn't respond, even the little understanding he has will be taken away.

Matthew 13:13–15

Therefore speak I to them in parables: because they seeing see not; and hearing they hear not, neither do they understand. And in them is fulfilled the prophecy of Esaias, which saith, By hearing ye shall hear, and shall not understand; and seeing ye shall see, and shall not perceive: For this people's heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing, and their eyes they have closed; lest at any time they should see with their eyes, and hear with their ears, and should understand with their heart, and should be converted, and I should heal them.

Here Jesus quotes a difficult passage from Isaiah 6, in which Isaiah is commanded by the Lord to speak to a people who won't hear him or receive from him. It was a prophecy fulfilled completely in Jesus, as He spoke to a people whose hearts were hardened, whose hearing was dull, and whose eyes were closed.

Now, here's the question. Why would God send Isaiah to preach to people who wouldn't listen or respond to him? Because God is a perfect gentleman, and He will not force His will on anyone. He will honor the decision of those who don't want to be saved. Jesus spoke in parables because if He spoke plainly, His presentation would have been so powerful that everyone would automatically be converted—many against their will.

Maybe you've seen films of Adolf Hitler speaking to the German masses, firing them up during World War II. That is nothing compared to what Jesus could have done. He could have mobilized the entire country. He could have swept everyone up in what He was saying. But He bowed to humanity's freedom of choice. "If I speak in parables, those who don't want to see, won't see. Those who don't want to hear won't hear."

A number of years ago a coal mine collapsed, and seven miners were trapped inside for three and a half days. Rescue workers dug feverishly, and when they finally broke through the caved-in mineshaft, the miners were whooping and hollering, obviously grateful they had been rescued—until one of the seven said, "Hey, why doesn't someone light a lantern?" The other six looked at their friend, and they realized he was blind. The light was on. The lanterns were lit. The rescue team had brought light into the darkened shaft, but he could not see because he had been blinded by the cave-in. Until the light came through, no one knew who was blind and who could see. The light had to shine on all seven before anyone could differentiate between those who could see and those who were blind.

So, too, Jesus taught believer and non-believer alike in order to determine who was truly blind. The light was shining for those who wanted to see. But those who chose to be wicked wouldn't see the light, and it would only prove their blindness.

Matthew 13:16, 17

But blessed are your eyes, for they see: and your ears, for they hear. For verily I say unto you, That many prophets and righteous men have desired to see those things which ye see, and have not seen them; and to hear those things which ye hear, and have not heard them.

First Peter chapter 1 echoes this same truth. That is, prophets of old penned prophecies concerning the coming of Christ without understanding what they were writing or how it would work out practically. Thus, Jesus says, "You're blessed because you're seeing things come to pass that confused the prophets. You're blessed because you have the opportunity to hear, to see, and to understand."

Matthew 13:18–23

Hear ye therefore the parable of the sower. When any one heareth the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the wicked one, and catcheth away that which was sown in his heart. This is he which received seed by the way side. But he that received the seed into stony places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with joy receiveth it; yet hath he not root in himself, but dureth for a while: for when tribulation or persecution ariseth because of the word, by and by he is offended. He also that received seed among the thorns is he that heareth the word; and the care of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, choke the word, and he becometh unfruitful. But he that received seed into the good ground is he that heareth the word, and understandeth it; which also beareth fruit, and bringeth forth, some an hundredfold, some sixty, some thirty.

Jesus now explains the parable of the Sower to His disciples. The seed is the Scripture, which as it is sown, falls on four kinds of soil.

The first is the hard soil of paths that meandered through fields. It was soil packed down and which the seed could not penetrate at all. So the birds of the air swooped down and ate the seed for breakfast. So, too, sometimes people hear the Word, and their hearts are so hard, it makes no sense. It makes no impact.

The second soil represents those who say, "Yeah. All right! Wonderful!" as they receive the Word with joy. Maybe they received the Lord in a service, and they're caught up in the emotion of it. But when tribulation or persecution comes—when they are put down for their belief, or when they begin to understand what it means to take up the cross—they're offended, and they wither away.

The third type of soil is infested with weeds that choke the seed as it springs up. Jesus said the weeds represent the world and the deceitfulness of riches. Many people become excited about the things of the kingdom. They are into Bible study, enjoy prayer, and engaged in worship. But then they get involved in the things of this world. No longer do they have time for Bible study, worship, or prayer.

Lastly, Jesus said some seed falls on good ground and produces bunches of fruit—some thirty-fold, some sixty-fold, some a hundredfold. I find this intriguing because the ratio of seed to harvest is generally eight to one. But here, Jesus is saying when the seed is sown in cultivated soil, it's incredible what happens. Not eight to one, but thirty to one, sixty to one, or one hundred to one. We're talking fruit!

What is fruit? Scripture specifies six types.

- Romans 1:13 identifies soul-winning as a fruit.
- Romans 6:22 says holiness is a fruit.
- Romans 15:28 calls financial giving a fruit.
- Galatians 5:22, 23 lists the fruit of the Spirit as love, which results in joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance.
- Colossians 1:10 labels good works a fruit.
- Hebrews 13:15 names praise as a fruit.

Matthew 13:24–30

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is likened unto a man which sowed good seed in his field: But while men slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat, and went his way. But when the blade was sprung up, and brought forth fruit, then appeared the tares also. So the servants of the householder came and said unto him, Sir, didst not thou sow good seed in thy field? From whence then hath it tares? He said unto them, An enemy hath done this. The servants said unto him, Wilt thou then that we go and gather them up? But he said, Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them. Let both grow together until the harvest: and in the time of harvest I will say to the reapers, Gather ye together first the tares, and bind them in bundles to burn them: but gather the wheat into my barn.

Continuing His analogy of sowing, Jesus moved on to a subject very familiar to His listeners. When a farmer planted a field of wheat, anyone who had something against him would, under cover of night, sow tares in with the wheat. Tares have the same color, shape, and fragrance as wheat, but no heads of grain form. In other words, the tares soak up the nutrients, and they take up space, but they produce nothing in return and are unidentifiable until harvest time.

Matthew 13:31, 32

Another parable put he forth unto them, saying, The kingdom of heaven is like to a grain of mustard seed, which a man took, and sowed in his field: Which indeed is the least of all seeds: but when it is grown, it is the greatest among herbs, and becometh a tree, so that the birds of the air come and lodge in the branches thereof.

Follow the flow. Jesus is giving us insight about the kingdom. In verses 19–23, He talked about the sower sowing seed and how some of the seed falls upon good soil and produces fruit. In verses 24–30, He said in this field there will be some tares growing alongside the true wheat. Developing still further His seed / kingdom analogy, Jesus now likens the kingdom of heaven to the smallest seed sown—a mustard seed. Some commentators say this parable shows how the kingdom starts small and just grows beautifully. But wait—there is no example either in history or in botany where a mustard seed has grown into a tree large enough to support birds.

In reality, Jesus is talking about abnormal, unnatural growth. He's talking about something that begins small, like a mustard seed, but which grows abnormally to a size where birds can call it home. Bear in mind, students, that throughout the Bible, birds speak of evil. This is why I believe Jesus is talking about the kingdom becoming bureaucratic, losing its simplicity, and becoming too big organizationally as ministries have a propensity to do.

Matthew 13:33

Another parable spake he unto them; The kingdom of heaven is like unto leaven, which a woman took, and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened.

Leaven is mentioned ninety-eight times throughout Scripture. In every single case, it is linked with evil. So again, I disagree with those teachers who say these two parables describe the beautiful and mysterious growth of the kingdom. Leaven, symbolizing a puffing up, speaks of evil. In contrast, meal or bread in Scripture speaks of the Word; and I see a very tight connection between this parable and the last. Jesus is saying, "Watch out for outward organization that becomes good only for birds. Watch out for internal deception when leaven is hidden in the meal."

People knock on your door, saying, "May we hold a Bible study in your house? We have some wonderful things we want to share with you." And they come in and open their Bibles, but in addition, they show you the Pearl of Great Price, The Book of Mormon, or the Watchtower Magazine. What are they doing? They're inserting leaven into the meal of the Word.

Stick with the Scriptures. Don't let people add to the Word as they try to appeal to your spirituality. After all, when Satan came to Eve in the Garden, he didn't say, "Hey Eve, let's party!" No, he said, "Eve, you're so spiritual. You just want to be like God, and the day you eat this fruit, your eyes will be opened, and you will be more like Him."

Matthew 13:34–36

All these things spake Jesus unto the multitude in parables; and without a parable spake he not unto them: That it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, I will open my mouth in parables; I will utter things which have been kept secret from the foundation of the world. Then Jesus sent the multitude away, and went into the house: and his disciples came unto him, saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares of the field.

After Jesus sent the multitude away, the disciples came to Him asking for further instruction and greater illumination. So too, after receiving a teaching —perhaps at a Bible study, over the radio, in a book, or in your own devotions—have you discovered the dynamic of stopping and asking Jesus for further revelation and specific application? I'm convinced we lose much because once we hear a study, we split out the door and go our way without really taking the time to seek the Lord and say, "Father, what is in this for me today?"

Matthew 13:37–43

He answered and said unto them, He that soweth the good seed is the Son of man; The field is the world; the good seed are the children of the kingdom; but the tares are the children of the wicked one; the enemy that sowed them is the devil; the harvest is the end of the world; and the reapers are the angels. As therefore the tares are gathered and burned in the fire; so shall it be in the end of this world. The Son of man shall send forth his angels, and they shall gather out of his kingdom all things that offend, and them which do iniquity; and shall cast them into a furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth. Then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the kingdom of their Father. Who hath ears to hear, let him hear.

Throughout chapter 13, Jesus has been teaching about the kingdom of God. In so doing, He is explaining we really don't know who's in the kingdom and who's not. In the kingdom, there are those who appear as though they're believers. They go to church regularly. They carry a Bible. They may even tithe. But they've never had a relationship with Jesus. They're counterfeit and bogus. They're tares. Satan has planted them within the kingdom to cause confusion and consternation.

The Bible speaks of false brethren in 2 Corinthians 11, a false gospel in Galatians 1, a false Christ in 2 Thessalonians 2, and a false church in Revelation 2.

When the church was born, Satan tried to destroy it through three hundred years of persecution. Ten Roman emperors ordered the systematic persecution of the church as Christians were dipped in hot wax and lit as candles, placed in boiling oil, skinned alive, and crucified upside down. But do you know what happened? The stronger the persecution, the more the church grew. It reminds me of Exodus.

> Now there arose up a new king over Egypt, which knew not Joseph. And he said unto his people, Behold, the people of the children of Israel are more and mightier than we: Come on, let us deal wisely with them; lest they multiply, and it come to pass, that, when there falleth out any war, they join also unto our enemies, and fight against us, and so get them up out of the land. Therefore they did set over them taskmasters to afflict them with their burdens. And they built for Pharaoh treasure cities, Pithom and Raamses. But the more they afflicted them, the more they multiplied and grew. And they were grieved because of the children of Israel.
> Exodus 1:8–12

So, too, concerning the church. The more Satan afflicted and burdened the church, the more she grew. That's always the way it is. Some years ago, when they were going through tremendous difficulty and very real persecution, a group of Russian Christians sent a letter to America, saying, "We are praying for you in America that you will have the opportunity to endure persecution and grow like us."

We pray, "Oh, Lord, don't allow persecution in Russia," but they pray, "Oh, Lord, persecute the church in America," because the Russian church has discovered that persecution brings about maturation and the propagation of the gospel. According to various reports, as of September 2002, there are anywhere between sixty and eighty million believers in China. Incredible! In persecution, the church grows.

Satan goofed in those first three hundred years. The church experienced persecution and began to spread throughout the whole world. So what did he do? He changed his tactics. In A.D. 313, with the edict of Constantine, Christianity was adopted as the national religion of Rome. Satan, in essence, joined the church. And the church has been suffering ever since. You see, the danger is not persecution. The real danger is infiltration. When Christianity becomes respectable and easy, tares pop up all over the place.

Is it our responsibility to rid the church of tares? No. This parable teaches separation will take place by the angels at the end of the world. If we try to figure out who's a believer and who's not, we're going to err and pull out the wrong people. It's our job to love, and it's God's job to judge. We are to love people, for "By this shall all men know that ye are my disciples, if ye have love one to another" (see John 13:35). Whether he's your brother or whether he's your enemy, whether he's wheat or a tare, it makes no difference. You are to love him and let God judge him. I really like this. I don't have to analyze, scrutinize, and criticize. I can just say, "Lord, thank You for this parable. And now I'm going to practice it. I get to love people and leave the judging to You. You see things perfectly. I don't."

Matthew 13:44

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

In this parable, a man finds some treasure and immediately buys the field in order to gain the treasure therein. You may have heard this parable taught like this: The treasure in the field is Jesus. We are the man. Like the man who found the treasure, when you discover Jesus, you should forsake everything to follow Him. But I believe this is an improper interpretation. I believe Jesus is the Man, and we are the treasure.

Think about it. When you were saved, how many of you sold everything to follow Jesus? None of us did that. We were simply born again. How? Not by our will, not by our efforts, not even by our desire, but by God. God saved us; God elected us; God predestined us. We didn't sell anything to receive Him. He, on the other hand, gave His life to purchase us. Why was the field —the world—purchased? Did the Lord want another planet? No, He wanted the treasure that was buried in the world. He wanted you.

Matthew 13:45, 46

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man, seeking goodly pearls: Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.

A pearl begins as nothing more than an irritating grain of sand stuck in the shell of an oyster. But the oyster surrounds the grain with a crystalline covering, which over years hardens and becomes precious and valuable.

Those who study such things say the most beautiful pearls take seven years to form. During that seven-year period, the irritating piece of sand is hidden away—clothed and covered with beauty. That's us, gang—irritating pieces of sand. Yet, the Lord clothes us in His righteousness.

> For he hath made him to be sin for us, who knew no sin; that we might be made the righteousness of God in him.
> 2 Corinthians 5:21

You are the pearl of great price. You have been clothed with the righteousness of Jesus Christ. And His righteousness is a thing of matchless beauty and unspeakable value in the eyes of God.

Matthew 13:47–50

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea, and gathered of every kind: Which, when it was full, they drew to shore, and sat down, and gathered the good into vessels, but cast the bad away. So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, and shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

The third illustration Jesus gave His disciples concerning the kingdom is that of a fisherman hauling in a great catch. In the net, there are some edible fish and some terrible fish. Now listen carefully, students. In these three mini-parables that deal with the kingdom—that is, the parables of the hidden treasure, the pearl of great price, and the net full of fish—Jesus outlines three major aspects of the kingdom.

The first concerns the treasure. In the Book of Exodus and throughout the Psalms, the nation of Israel is referred to as a peculiar, special treasure. Entrusted with the riches of God's heart and mind—the Word—Israel was placed in the world to be a light for the world. But what happened? Israel did not evangelize. She did not shine forth, but rather turned inward. The Jews hid themselves and their traditions, saying, "Gentiles? Don't talk to them. Don't look at them. Don't reach out to them. If you happen to even brush against one, take off your clothes and burn them. Gentiles are good for nothing but to keep hell hot."

Instead of enriching the world, the treasure became hidden in the world as Israel missed her calling. There are those who say Israel has no place in the kingdom. But in this parable, I believe Jesus teaches the treasure will indeed resurface and prove very valuable. Although Israel failed historically, she will succeed eventually. Revelation 7 says after the church is raptured, suddenly Israel will become a mighty instrument of evangelism in the world. She will enrich the world in the time of Tribulation. God is not through with Israel, gang. There are those who suggest Israel has no place in God's prophetic plan. Not true. Read your Bible: Romans 9—11 makes it very clear that although Israel has been set-aside for a while—hidden—she shall resurface as God's instrument.

Secondly, the church is a major aspect of the kingdom. Here, the church is likened unto a pearl. I find this intriguing. Where is a pearl formed? In the sea. What is the sea symbolic of scripturally and prophetically? In Daniel and Revelation, the sea is always symbolic of the Gentile nations. Where was the church formed? Although there are some believing Jews in the church, there aren't many. The church was formed from the Gentile nations.

A pearl is the only gem that does not need to be cut to bring out its beauty. Diamonds, rubies, sapphires, and amethysts—they all must be cut. But a pearl? If you even scratch it, you ruin it. So, too, in the church there is neither male nor female, Jew nor Gentile, bond nor free. The church is one—one Lord, one baptism, and one faith. The church finds her beauty in her unity—the unity of all kinds of people brought together in Christ. Divisions only mar her, and quite frankly, that is the biggest problem with denominations. There can be a tendency in denominationalism to start dividing the body of Christ instead of enjoying our commonality in Christ.

> That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

John 17:21

Finally, end-time believers comprise the third aspect of the kingdom. Revelation 7 specifically talks about this group.

> And one of the elders answered, saying unto me, What are these which are arrayed in white robes? And whence came they? And I said unto him, Sir, thou knowest. And he said to me, These are they which came out of great tribulation, and have washed their robes, and made them white in the blood of the Lamb. Therefore are they before the throne of God, and serve him day and night in his temple: and he that sitteth on the throne shall dwell among them.
> Revelation 7:13–15

They are those who rejected the message of salvation in the church age, but after the church is raptured, they will refuse the mark of the beast and turn to the Lord. They are not the bride of Christ—sitting with Him, ruling and reigning with Him. No, these Tribulation believers will be allowed to enter into the kingdom, but in a different category than Israel or the Church. Maybe you know people who say, "Well, I'm not going to get saved now. I'm going to wait and see how things come down. If all of you Christians really do disappear, and if a guy really does come trying to brand my head—I won't take his mark, and I'll get saved."

Tell them this: "If you get saved at that time, it will probably cost you your life. If you choose to go that route, you will make it into the kingdom, but in a different position than if you receive Jesus today. Come to Him now."

So there is one kingdom made up of the treasure—Israel, the pearl, the church, and the fish—end-time believers. Three distinct groups, yet one kingdom.

> Matthew 13:51, 52
>
> Jesus saith unto them, Have ye understood all these things? They say unto him, Yea, Lord. Then said he unto them, Therefore every scribe which is instructed unto the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which bringeth forth out of his treasure things new and old.

Jesus is saying, "If you understand these things, you're like a scribe who owns a house in which he has new innovations alongside old antiques." If you understand the kingdom, you can read the Old Testament and get blessed. You can look at history and marvel at the Lord's continuity throughout the ages. You can draw from the old. And you can draw from the new if you understand what the Lord is doing creatively and powerfully in these last days.

The scribes, you see, were not originally as off the wall as we think of them today. Originally, in the days when Ezra brought a group of exiled Jews back to Jerusalem to rebuild the city after the captivity, the purpose of the scribes was to teach truth. Initially, the scribes were great seekers and teachers of truth. And Jesus is here saying, "You should be like scribes—drawing from the Old Testament and from the New Covenant."

If we get stuck in the old and are not open to what the Lord is doing presently, we'll miss what the Lord is doing creatively in this day. But if we're only into the new and fail to draw from our history and heritage, we'll become spiritual lightweights and airheads. Jesus said the one who receives from both old and new will be a rich man.

Matthew 13:53–57 (a)

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these parables, he departed thence. And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works? Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? And his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? And they were offended in him.

They thought they knew Him. A false sense of familiarity kept them from receiving what He wanted to do in their midst. "Oh, we know Him. We know His father." No, they didn't. "We know His brothers." No, they were His half brothers. Jesus' neighbors failed to recognize Him because they thought they knew all about Him.

The same holds true for us when, mistakenly thinking we know all about them, we fail to recognize His presence in our midst through our brothers and sisters in the Lord.

Matthew 13:57 (b), 58

But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, save in his own country, and in his own house. And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

In writing of this same incident, Mark said, "He could not do many mighty works because of their unbelief." Jesus would have been able to heal them and to work radically among them, but because of unbelief, He was limited in what He could do for them.

> Yea, they turned back and tempted God, and limited the Holy One of Israel.
> Psalm 78:41

I encourage you to be open to the brother who talks with you after the service, to the sister who comes into your shop tomorrow. Jesus may be using them in a very real sense. Don't make the mistake of saying, "I know him. The Lord could never use that guy!" or "I know more than she does. How could the Lord possibly use her to speak to me?" Wonderful things happen when you begin to say, "Lord, I'm looking for You. I believe You're going to work in my homeland in unexpected ways, at unexpected times, through unexpected people—all for Your glory."

SOWING THE SEED
A Topical Study of MATTHEW 13:3–9

Jesus was a master communicator and a marvelous teacher. Although He was not the inventor of parabolic teaching, Jesus brought the form to unparalleled heights and to great depths of insight, the parable of the Sower being one of His most well known. When we talk about sowers, we're talking about farmers—people who sowed seed. Walking through a field, scattering seed as he went, the seed the farmer in this particular parable sowed fell on four types of soil.

Some seed fell on the hard soil by the wayside or in the pathways. It did not penetrate the ground, and the birds came and picked it off. Other seed fell on shallow, stony ground—ground with topsoil an inch or so deep, covering solid rock underneath. Such seed would spring up quickly, but lacking any real root system, it would wither away when the sun came out. Still other seed fell on ground infested with thorns that would choke the seed. Finally, some seed fell on good soil, and it brought forth fruit.

This parable has two primary applications. First, it speaks to us as hearers of the Word. Jesus said, "Take heed how ye hear," and "He that hath ears to hear, let him hear." In other words, "Listen up when the seed is being sown."

What is the seed? Jesus tells us the seed is the Scriptures, the Word of God, specifically the gospel. Peter picks up the same metaphor in his writings when he says we are born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible seed, which is the Word of God. According to this parable, people receive the Word in one of four ways.

Some people have such hard hearts that the Word doesn't penetrate at all. Birds pluck it away before it can make any impact, and their hearts remain unchanged.

Others hear the Word and say, "Yeah, that sounds good!" And they get saved. They come forward, they raise their hands, and they get baptized, but there's no root; and when persecution and tribulation come, they dry up and check out.

In others, the cares of this world choke out the Word. They don't have time for Bible study anymore. They have to wax their cars, paint their houses, or dig their pools. They can't fit Scripture into their schedules.

Finally, some hear the Word and receive it because the soil is ready. Their hearts are right. They take it in, and it produces fruit—thirty-fold, sixty-fold, or a hundred-fold.

The parable is a powerful one, as it speaks to each of us concerning the condition of our hearts upon hearing the Word. But I want us to look at the second application—not just as hearers of the Word—but also as those who are distributing the seed. We have been called to share the gospel. We have been entrusted with this glorious, fabulous message. And this parable gives insight to some important principles about sharing the Word.

First, I understand from what Jesus is saying that not everyone is going to respond. In fact, if we look at this story, we see only one of four receive the Word and go on to fruitfulness. That's enlightening for me because it explains why some people seem so excited to receive the Word, but don't go on with the Lord. Jesus said this would be so. We shouldn't be surprised by it. Jesus said one of four would bear fruit—only one of four. But there is one of four. Think about this: Of all the people you have shared the gospel with—family, friends, schoolmates, neighbors—have one of four gone on to bear fruit? Or is it one of forty? One of four hundred? One of four thousand? Maybe you've never seen one neighbor, friend, family member, or colleague become fruitful in the Lord.

What can be done? I believe the answer lies within the parable itself. If indeed Jesus received the inspiration for this parable from Jeremiah 4, where God instructed Jeremiah to "Break up the fallow ground and sow seed not amongst the thorns," the question then becomes: How do we break up hard ground? Let me suggest to you something that is often overlooked with regard to hardened hearts and fallow ground. The problem is not with the seed, for the Word of God is powerful and real. The problem is with the soil. The soil has not been properly prepared. We have sown seed without preparing the soil.

Suppose on a 747 heading from San Francisco to Honolulu, the captain suddenly called the stewardess into his cabin and said, "We have a hole in the gas tank and only about thirty minutes of fuel left. We're two hours from Honolulu, but too far to turn back. This plane is going down. Distribute parachutes immediately to all passengers."

And suppose the stewardess comes out of the cabin, wipes the worried look from her face, and cheerfully says, "Ladies and gentlemen, who would like to wear a parachute? Try one on, and you will see how smooth a flight can be, how wonderful the trip can become." People listen to her, scratch their heads, and wonder. A few raise their hands and volunteer.

But after a while, the parachutes become cumbersome. And the people find they can't sit in their seats as comfortably as they previously did. They can't put their tray tables down to hold their Cokes and peanuts. Worst of all, they see the people around them snickering and making fun of them. So, tired of the snickering and tired of squirming, they remove their parachutes. No sooner do they throw them down, however, than the plane sputters and crashes into the ocean, where all lives are lost.

Oftentimes I hear presentations like this: "Come to Jesus. Christians have more fun." Really? Tell that to Paul, who was beaten, imprisoned, and shipwrecked and constantly in pain, suffering, and difficulty.

But if Christianity is "more fun," what did Jesus mean when He said, "In the world you will have much tribulation"? What did He mean when He said we would enter into the kingdom only through trials and difficulties? And what did the writer to the Hebrews mean when he said believers in his day were sawn in half, that they traveled in animal skins to keep warm, and that they lived in caves in poverty?

Others say, "Come to Jesus, and you won't be miserable," only to hear people respond, "I like my life. I enjoy watching the A's and the Giants. I enjoy my ski boat. I like my kids. I'm doing well, thank you."

We try so hard to convince people they're miserable without Jesus, or that they will be happy with Jesus. But sooner or later the sun comes out. People begin to make fun of them for becoming Christians. They begin to have difficulties and problems. They say, "I've been sold a bill of goods," as they throw off their parachutes. Then the inevitable happens. The plane crashes. Death comes. And they are dumped into hell eternally because they came to the gospel on a wrong set of presuppositions. Their commitment was shallow because the presentation was shallow.

Consider stewardess number two.

She returns from the captain's cabin, saying, "Ladies and gentlemen, listen carefully. There is a leak in the fuselage. We are losing fuel rapidly. We have thirty minutes before we will make an emergency landing. Who wants a parachute?" Suddenly, hands go up everywhere. Everyone straps a parachute on. And you know what? They're still uncomfortable, and they still can't get their tray tables down. But they don't care one whit. They know an event is coming for which they must be prepared.

Maybe some are skeptical. Perhaps some are cynical. They say, "Oh, this is just some kind of drill, some kind of test. I don't want a parachute." And they laugh. But they laugh nervously, wondering, "What if she's right?" as they ask for a second and third and fourth drink. Thirty minutes later, when the plane begins to sputter and the doors open, those who have the parachutes jump to safety. The others are lost.

Gang, we need to make a realistic presentation of the gospel. He that has the Son has life. He that has not the Son shall not see life, but the wrath of God abides on Him. For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believes in Him shall not perish, but have everlasting life. We need to say, "Friend, what will you do with the Person of Jesus Christ? Your eternal state hinges upon your decision. If you receive Him and respond to Him, you'll be saved. If you reject or ignore Him, you'll crash."

"That type of presentation makes me uncomfortable," some might object. But that's what it takes to break up fallow ground. How did Jesus break up the hard ground of the hearts to which He ministered, of those who thought they were basically okay?

He said, "You have heard it said of old that you're not to kill, but I say unto you that if you have been angry with your brother, you are a murderer. You have heard it said of old that you're not to commit adultery, but I say to you, if you've looked with lust, you're guilty. You have heard it said of old that you're not to swear, but I say unto you let your 'yea' be 'yea' and your ‘nay’ be ‘nay.’ Anything more than yes or no is blasphemy. Be ye therefore perfect, as your Father in heaven is perfect.” (see Matthew 5). And suddenly, people who thought they were basically okay are indicted by the law. The law was spoken of and expanded on by Jesus in order to bring people into an awareness of their sin. Gang, those of you who have family or friends who seem to be hardened to the gospel, have you really sat down with them and said,

- “Thou shalt have no other gods before me.
- Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image . . .
- Thou shalt not take the name of the LORD thy God in vain . . .
- Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy.
- Honour thy father and thy mother . . .
- Thou shalt not kill.
- Thou shalt not commit adultery.
- Thou shalt not steal.
- Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour.
- Thou shalt not covet . . .”?

Do we know the law? Do we even know the Ten Commandments? Do we know why they were given? Galatians 3 says the law was given as a schoolmaster to drive people to Jesus Christ (Galatians 3:24). The law is a schoolmaster who cracks the whip, a schoolmaster who raps the knuckles, a schoolmaster who makes people wake up and realize they’re sinners.

The law is like a mirror (James 1:23). When I look into a mirror and see dirt on my face, I don’t take the mirror off the wall and start scrubbing my face with the mirror. The mirror is simply to show me what’s real. So, too, the Ten Commandments and the law give people a proper understanding of their dirtiness and sinfulness, their depravity and iniquity. Therefore, we who sow seed must have the integrity and the honesty to say to people, “You’re a sinner. You’re headed for destruction. According to the Law of God, you’re not okay. We’re all lost. That’s why Jesus came.”

People will not appreciate how wonderful Jesus is until they realize how lost they are. They"ll say, "Big deal. So Jesus died on the Cross. So you say God loves me. So what?"

But when they realize that God's standard of holiness and righteousness is so transcendent and so valuable that the price of sin is death, they say, "I get it. Salvation is not just a matter of having a better day, or joining a new club that meets on Sundays and Wednesdays. This is heavy."

I believe we will see a much higher percentage of people responding to Jesus and continuing in Him if we sow the seed where the ground has been broken by the plow of the law. May God help us to plow deep and to sow well that people might truly be converted and become fruitful in the glorious kingdom of God.

YOU ARE TREASURED!

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 13:44–46

One morning years ago, when the first heavy dew of the season had fallen in Jacksonville, Oregon, my then three-year-old daughter, Mary Elizabeth, looked out the window and saw the wet grass. With excitement in her voice, she said, "Mommy, Mommy! God made the whole world wet!" Then her little forehead furrowed. Looking rather puzzled, she said, "But He forgot to dry it."

I think, like Mary, we sometimes look around with a smile on our face and say, "Wow! Look what God made!"

> I was reading about the screech owl, which unlike our spotted owl, resides in cities and towns on the East Coast. They're very prolific, but little bugs and maggots can infect and devastate their entire population. To counteract the maggots and bugs, the screech owl ingeniously gathers little snakes called blind snakes and takes them to his nest. The blind snake just so happens to love maggots, larvae, and little bugs, so he lives inside the nest along with the screech owl. They dwell together symbiotically—mutually beneficial to each other.[2]

Who taught the screech owl to go after that particular snake and drop it in the tree trunk in which he is building his nest? I know owls are wise, but they're not that smart! Such understanding was programmed into the owl by an ingenious Master Maker, a Creator.

Consider also the Alaskan blackfish.

> The Alaskan blackfish, which lives in ponds and streams that freeze over every winter, has the amazing ability to freeze right along with the pond or stream for up to forty-five minutes. Then he thaws out and continues with his life. These fish have been given the ability to go with the flow in a remarkable way!

Finally, consider the spider.

> The spider spins a web made of a sticky substance that traps insects and bugs for his dinner. Why isn't the spider caught in his own web? Ingeniously built into his little spider feet are tiny oil glands that secrete a minuscule amount of oil, allowing him to move over his own web without being caught.

I watch the spider, I see the owl, and I hear about the blackfish, and I marvel and say, "Oh, Lord, You are a master Creator!" But sometimes I look around, and like Mary Elizabeth, my brow begins to furrow as I say, "God, You made this world—but did You forget to dry it?"

"Why did Hurricane Hugo slam through the Caribbean, causing death and misery for countless thousands? Why are there volcanoes that erupt and wipe out entire villages in the Polynesian Islands? Why are thousands of babies born addicted to crack cocaine each year alone? If You are a God who is so ingenious and powerful, why do these things happen?"

People look around and see tragedy, war, rape, disease, difficulty, and say, "If there is a God who made this world, then how come He doesn't dry it? Why doesn't He take better care of it? Why are these things allowed to happen?" To find the answer, you need to go back to the beginning—back to the Book of Genesis. Here we read of a man who literally had the Spirit of God breathed into him, a man who was never polluted by sin, a man born without a sin nature. He was, in a sense, a champion for you and me. His name was Adam.

God gave Adam the authority, the opportunity, and the responsibility to oversee, tend, and rule this planet. But Satan came to Adam to tempt him, and Adam submitted to Satan when he ate of the forbidden fruit. The Bible says to whom you submit, of him you become the servant. When Adam submitted to Satan, he became the servant of Satan and handed to him the title deed, the authority, and the dominion of this planet. Thus, the ownership of the world changed hands—from God to man to Satan.

Why are there rape and hatred? Why is there starvation in Ethiopia? Why is there AIDS? It's the enemy who has caused the problems, pollution, and plagues that descend upon us.

When Jesus stilled the storm in Luke's Gospel, He said, "Be still," or literally, "Be muzzled," which is the same phrase He used whenever He encountered demonic activity. Therefore, I suggest to you the implication is clearly that many of these storms that bring about devastation and destruction are not "Acts of God," as insurance companies refer to them, but acts of Satan. God gets a bad rap and gets blamed for what the Enemy does.

Will the title deed to earth remain in the devil's grasp forever? Revelation 5 gives us the answer . . .

> And I saw in the right hand of him that sat on the throne a book written within and on the backside, sealed with seven seals.
> Revelation 5:1

Now, what is this book, or literally scroll? Jeremiah 32 identifies it as a title deed to a piece of property. The scroll sealed with seven seals is the title deed to planet earth.

Why is it written on the outside as well as the inside? In Old Testament times, if you lost your property due to hardship or bankruptcy, the deed would be scrolled and sealed with seven seals. On the outside would be written all of your financial obligations. You would have to meet them within seven years in order to regain your property. If those qualifications were met, the person who took possession of your property was required by law to return it to you. Such a transaction took place in the temple, where the qualifications on the outside of the scroll were read before the people. In heaven, the ultimate temple, there is a scroll sealed seven times. It is the title deed to the earth, which was given to Adam, who in turn, passed it on to Satan.

> And I saw a strong angel proclaiming with a loud voice, Who is worthy to open the book, and to loose the seals thereof?
> Revelation 5:2

In other words, "Who can meet the requirements? Who is worthy to take back the title deed of earth from Satan?"

Notice it doesn't say, "Who is willing?" Many men have been willing to try to take control of the world—Alexander the Great, Genghis Khan, Napoleon, Hitler. They were all willing to take control, believing they could bring the world into a new level of glory or grandeur. The angel is not asking, "Who is willing?" The angel asks, "Who is worthy?"

> And no man in heaven, nor in earth, neither under the earth, was able to open the book, neither to look thereon. And I wept much, because no man was found worthy to open the book, neither to look thereon.
> Revelation 5:3, 4

John wept at the thought of the world indefinitely in the hand and control and dominion of the Enemy so much so that the Greek word translated "wept" means "sobbing in agony."

You mean poverty will continue, hunger will abound, disease will persist, and hate will be perpetuated? There will be wars, anxiety, tension, trauma, death, disease, and destruction—forever? John wept because no one was found worthy to wrest the scroll from the hand of the Enemy. As you read the papers, the editorials, and the news magazines today, no doubt your heart breaks as well. This can't go on. Hurt, pain, sorrow, and evil can't go on forever.

> And one of the elders saith unto me, Weep not: behold, the Lion of the tribe of Juda, the Root of David, hath prevailed to open the book, and to loose the seven seals thereof. And he came and took the book out of the right hand of him that sat upon the throne.
> Revelation 5:5–7

Jesus comes forward, the Lion of the tribe of Judah, saying, "I will redeem the scroll," and the rest of Chapter 5 is a glorious outpouring of praise, adoration, and thanksgiving that someone was able to take the title deed of the planet. Worthy is the Lamb. He alone is worthy.

How did He do it? Look back at Matthew 13, where Jesus gives a one-verse parable that explains the redemptive process.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto treasure hid in a field; the which when a man hath found, he hideth, and for joy thereof goeth and selleth all that he hath, and buyeth that field.

Matthew 13:44

In Jesus' day, if a man had wealth, he would bury it in a field to keep it safe from thieves. The man in this parable stumbled across one such treasure chest and realized, "Wow! Someone has left his treasure here." With joy, he bought the field in order to get the treasure. He gave everything he had because he knew within the field lay a treasure of great value.

- What is the field?

  In a previous parable, Jesus identified the field as the world.
- Who is the Man?

  Jesus Christ.

Think with me for a moment.

- The first Adam sold us out.

  Jesus Christ, the last Adam, bought us back.
- The first Adam ate of a forbidden tree and handed humanity to the enemy.

  The last Adam hung on a tree to redeem humanity from the enemy.
- Through the first Adam, the ground was cursed.

  For our sake, the last Adam became a curse.
- Sin, through the first Adam, produced thorns.

  God, through the last Adam, buried those thorns in His own brow.

Why? So He could, with His own pure blood, appear before the Father in the temple of heaven and declare, "I am worthy to take the scroll."

You see, the price for the redemption of the world was not a million dollars, not ten billion dollars, not a zillion dollars. It was death.

Why did Jesus want the world? He certainly doesn't need this planet, which in many places has been polluted beyond repair. He didn't want another planet just to camp out on. There are a million planets He has created and a billion more He could speak into existence.

- What did He want?

  He bought the planet for the treasure.
- What was the treasure?

  You.

Jesus came, gave everything He had, and was slaughtered like a lamb in order that He might pay the price for the title deed to this earth. Because He wanted this planet? No. Because He wanted you. You are His treasure. You are the treasure He purchased with His own blood.

When the Enemy whispers in your ear that you're not worth anything, please understand this: Jesus, walking through this world, saw you and was so excited about you and so in love with you that He sold everything to buy this whole world in order to take you—the treasure—out of it.

Maybe you're saying, "That might be true theologically, but I couldn't be much of a treasure to Him. I'm always messing up, missing the mark, and blowing it. I'm just an irritation to Him."

Look at the next verse.

> Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a merchant man seeking goodly pearls: Who, when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all that he had, and bought it.
>
> Matthew 13:45, 46

- Who is the One who sold all He had to purchase the pearl?

  Jesus.
- Who is the pearl?

  You are.

> A pearl begins as nothing more than an irritating speck of sand in the shell of an oyster. The oyster coats this troublesome speck with layer upon layer of a crystalline substance called nacre, which hardens and becomes the actual pearl. Interestingly, the more irritating the grain of sand, the more beautiful the pearl.

You are the pearl of great price. When you asked the Lord to come into your life, you became robed with His righteousness and surrounded by His goodness. Although you might feel as though you're terribly irritating, you are actually a trophy of His glory. You are a gem of His grace. And all of the cosmos looks at you and says,

> "Wow! Glory be to the Lamb. Worthy is the Lamb. Hallelujah to the Lamb, who took that little speck of sand and made it a pearl of great price!"

God loves you, gang. Paul said He demonstrated His love for us in that while we were yet sinners, Christ died for us (Romans 5:8).

When did Jesus die for us?

Not when we were going to church; not when we were reading the Word; not when we were praying. He looked at us when we were nothing more than an irritation and said, "I love you, and I'll give all I have to redeem you, My treasure."

There's one thing that will ruin a pearl. It's perspiration.

So, too, one thing will ruin your beauty in the Lord. Perspiring, sweating, or trying to prove you are worthy of His blessing. Trying to prove "it's my spirituality, my energy, my togetherness that makes me so wonderful." No, the pearl is destroyed, eaten away, decayed by sweat.

What you need is not to sweat it out, but just let it out. Release praise, thanksgiving, appreciation, and adoration, saying, "Thank You, Lord, for seeing me as a pearl. I'm not going to try to earn it, nor add to it. I don't even understand it. But I am forever grateful."

Be a pearl for His glory.

In Jesus' Name.

UNBELIEF: ITS CAUSE AND CURE

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 13:54–58

After presenting a powerful teaching to His disciples concerning the kingdom, Jesus left Galilee and traveled twenty miles west—home to Nazareth. In Nazareth, unbelief filled the hearts of His countrymen. Matthew ends this chapter saying of Jesus, "He did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief."

In recording the same incident, Mark takes it a step further when he writes, "And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them. And he marveled because of their unbelief." It is not simply that Jesus would do no mighty works in Nazareth. Mark tells us He could do no mighty works there. He was limited by their unbelief, even as the Old Testament declares that the people of Israel limited the Holy One of Israel through their unbelief (Psalm 78:41).

- Unbelief is hazardous to your health. In this passage, we see it affecting people in three ways.
- Unbelief blinds your eyes, and you become skeptical.
- Unbelief poisons your heart, and you become cynical.
- Unbelief robs your joy, and you become sterile.

First, look with me at the way unbelief blinds eyes.

> And when he was come into his own country, he taught them in their synagogue, insomuch that they were astonished, and said, Whence hath this man this wisdom, and these mighty works?
> Matthew 13:54

Miracles were happening—the dead were raised, the lame were walking, the blind were seeing, the deaf were hearing. It was obvious God was working. But unbelief blinds eyes to the obvious.

> People are still blinded today, even though it is obvious God is real. Just look up. On a clear night, you can see the Milky Way galaxy, consisting of four hundred billion stars. Traveling at tremendous speed, the Milky Way swirls within itself as it is hurled across the universe—all four hundred billion stars. Astronomers tell us there are at least one hundred billion more galaxies each containing at least one hundred billion stars. If you compute that out, it comes to ten billion billion stars spinning around and moving through the universe. Ten billion billion—that's more Big Macs than McDonalds serves in a year! And when you add the planets that circle many of these stars, the figures get even more astronomical.

"My, it must be crowded up there," you say. Well, state your coordinates and choose a point. Even though there are ten billion billion stars with billions of planets around them, what are the chances of your point landing on a star, a planet, a comet, or an asteroid? The chances are one in ten to the thirty-eighth power, or one in a billion trillion trillion—not very good odds. Space is huge, gang—enormous beyond our comprehension. And yet people have the audacity, the stupidity, and the idiocy to say, "Well, it just sort of all happened."

Truly, "the fool hath said in his heart, There is no God" (see Psalm 14:1). I recently talked with an atheist who said, "Jon, I hear all of your statistics on space, and I hear all of your illustrations on creation, but it still doesn't prove God exists. I would believe in God if He would prove His existence."

"Well, we have a problem here," I said, "because if God proved His existence, you couldn't be a believer. You might be a follower, but you couldn't be a believer, for if God proved Himself, there would be no faith required."

God is interested in developing your faith because faith is what is going to move on with you in the ages to come. He has given you evidence and indications, but He has not given you proof because if He gave you proof, you could never be a believer.

Second, notice not only the blindness of their eyes, which resulted in skepticism, but the poison in their hearts, which resulted in cynicism.

Is not this the carpenter's son? Is not his mother called Mary? And his brethren, James, and Joses, and Simon, and Judas? And his sisters, are they not all with us? Whence then hath this man all these things? And they were offended in him . . .

Matthew 13:55–57

When a person will not believe, his heart will inevitably become poisoned toward the family of God.

"Isn't His dad a carpenter—just an ordinary carpenter? He's not a scholar or a rabbi, a mystic or a miracle worker. We know His dad; he's the carpenter. And Mary? We've heard about her problem. She was pregnant before she got married."

You see, the unbeliever will always attack the family of God. His heart will become poisoned as he points out the problems of fallen Christian pastors or this Christian neighbor. He will point out problems in the family, even though, like those in Nazareth, his facts may be wrong. Since no one—not even the most avowed atheist or skeptical cynic—has ever been able to find one single fault with Christ, he or she will attack His family.

"Can you believe what a joke that minister on TV is?"

"Look at those hypocrites sitting in church."

"Some Christian she is."

And their hearts become cynical, hardened, and bitter.

Third, unbelief robs you of your joy.

And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

Matthew 13:58

When Jesus went to His hometown, He would have healed many if only they would have believed. Great joy would have filled that little hamlet of Nazareth. But God will not work outside the arena of faith. God has chosen to limit Himself in certain ways. And because they didn't believe, He couldn't work. As a result, miracles were missing. Healings weren't happening. Joy wasn't exploding.

Unbelief is hazardous to your health. It blinds your eyes; it poisons your heart; it steals your joy. What is the antidote for unbelief? What would the Great Physician prescribe to you and to me who, although we are believers in Jesus, are also guilty of limiting Him?

First, the antidote for the unbelief, which results in blinded eyes, is simply to offer prayer to God. Paul did this when, in Ephesians 1, he prayed for the believers at Ephesus—that their eyes might be enlightened. You see, faith is not blind. Faith sees what unbelief never will.

I am reminded of the story of Elisha in 2 Kings 6.

> As the Syrians waged war against the Jews, the king of Syria set an ambush for the Israelites. Elisha sent word to the king of Israel, saying, "Don't go through that pass. You'll walk into a Syrian ambush." The king of Syria then set a second ambush, and again the Lord spoke to Elisha the prophet. Finally, the king of Syria said, "Every time we set up an ambush, Israel suddenly changes directions to avoid it. Someone is spying, and I want his head."

One of his advisers said, "King, there's no spy in our midst. There's a prophet in their land. His name is Elisha. He knows everything you say—even what you say in your bedchamber."

"Where is this man Elisha?" barked the king.

"In Dothan," answered his advisers.

That same night, the Syrians surrounded the city of Dothan with soldiers, chariots, and armaments. The next morning, when Elisha's servant, Gehazi, woke up, he ran to his master, shouting, "Master! We're surrounded! We're through! We're history!"

> And he answered, Fear not: for they that be with us are more than they that be with them. And Elisha prayed, and said, LORD, I pray thee, open his eyes, that he may see. And the LORD opened the eyes of the young man; and he saw: and, behold, the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.

2 Kings 6:17

Elisha wasn't worried because faith sees what unbelief never will.

Second, the antidote for the unbelief that results in a bitter heart is to see people in God.

Paul said, "I know no man after the flesh" (2 Corinthians 5:16). In other words, "I see people in Christ—washed in His blood, robed in His righteousness. That's the way I choose to see people."

When you see people in God, suddenly you're not so cynical. You can just embrace, love, and enjoy them.

Third, to thwart the unbelief that robs you of joy, speak the promises of God.

> But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must believe that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.
> Hebrews 11:6

There are many ways to please God—but not one apart from faith.

> The word is nigh thee, even in thy mouth, and in thy heart: that is, the word of faith, which we preach: That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth the Lord Jesus, and shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised him from the dead, thou shalt be saved.
> Romans 10:8, 9

Faith is worked into our lives by God's Word. It is released from our lives by our spoken word. It's not enough to have a quiet, internal faith. Faith is released via the mouth.

Jesus said, "When you see an obstacle in front of you, a mountain looming before you, a problem facing you, say to the mountain, 'Be removed' and it shall be removed" (see Matthew 17:20).

Speak the praises of God. Scripture is packed with promises—over three thousand in number—a promise for every situation. Perhaps you have a difficulty in your life, a problem in your family, a hardship financially or vocationally, tough times in school or in friendship. Jesus desires to work in those situations. He really does. But we limit Him by unbelief.

God wants us to speak His promises because it's too easy for us to say, "Well, I've got some ideas and thoughts, some hopes and dreams, but I'm not going to go on record verbally lest I seem foolish." Once you have the promise of God in your heart, you need to release it via your mouth. Speak out that which has been worked in.

Either you will venture out in faith, or you will vegetate. Your Christian life will either grow in faith as you see wonderful things happen in your family, in your ministry, in your life personally, or you will shrink into a "church-ianity." God forbid.

> Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear.
> Hebrews 11:3

Hebrews says the worlds were framed by the Word of God. Whenever someone builds a house, he doesn't put up one wall and then move in. No, he constructs all the walls in order that there might be protection, symmetry, and balance.

So, too with God. When He framed the world, it was framed in totality. Therefore, we need to be students of His Word so we don't just put up one wall in our house of faith and say, "Well now, this is the way it has to be. I'm claiming the promise." No, solid faith, real faith, balanced faith comes by hearing the Word—not simply an isolated verse here or there.

As I study the Word, my focus changes. It's no longer me clenching my fists and gritting my teeth, saying, "I'm gonna trust or bust." No, my focus shifts from my faith to the Faithful One—Jesus Christ.

I don't know what struggle you might have, what difficulty you might face, but I know where the answer lies. It lies in the Faithful One—Jesus Christ.

Begin to venture out radically and watch what the Lord does joyfully. He wants to come into your Nazareth and do a mighty work.

14

Thus far in our study, we have seen that the purpose of Matthew's Gospel is to present Jesus as King—King of Israel, King of kings, King of all creation. His Person is revealed in chapters 1 through 4; His principles are recorded in chapters 5 through 7; His power is released in chapters 8 through 10. In chapters 11 through 13, the focus shifts from a revelation of the King to a rebellion against the King. And here in chapter 14, we will see the retreat of the King as Jesus pulls away from the crowds to share essential principles with His disciples.

Matthew 14:1

At that time Herod the tetrarch heard of the fame of Jesus.

You remember Herod from Matthew 2. He was the one who slaughtered all of the male children in Israel when he heard a new King had been born. The Herod referred to here is Herod Antipas, his son. Herod Antipas wasn't as bloodthirsty as his father was, but he was not a great leader in any sense of the word. He loved luxury and lived licentiously.

Matthew 14:2

And said unto his servants, This is John the Baptist; he is risen from the dead; and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him.

Hearing of the fame of Jesus, Herod thought John the Baptist had come back from the dead. Why? His conscience was pricking him, for he was the one who had put John to death.

Matthew 14:3–5

For Herod had laid hold on John, and bound him, and put him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife. For John said unto him, It is not lawful for thee to have her. And when he would have put him to death, he feared the multitude, because they counted him as a prophet.

Herodias was Herod's brother's wife. Herod took a liking to her, got rid of his own wife, and stole her from his brother. John confronted him, saying, "This is not right. You are king of the country and in a position of authority. You can't live in this kind of immorality." Herod responded by imprisoning the bold and radical Baptist. But Mark tells us when John was in prison, Herod talked with him and began to develop a real affinity for him. Herod saw that John was a just man, a godly man, a wise man. Thus, although he felt convicted by John, he respected him.

Matthew 14:6–11

But when Herod's birthday was kept, the daughter of Herodias danced before them, and pleased Herod. Whereupon he promised with an oath to give her whatsoever she would ask. And she, being before instructed of her mother, said, Give me here John Baptist"s head in a charger. And the king was sorry: nevertheless for the oath's sake, and them which sat with him at meat, he commanded it to be given her. And his head was brought in a charger, and given to the damsel: and she brought it to her mother.

At Herod's birthday party, with wine flowing freely, Herodias told her daughter to dance. Herodias' daughter complied, dancing seductively and sensually. Herod, probably under the influence of much wine, said, "Whatever you want to the half of my kingdom, you've got it." Herodias, angry with John the Baptist, instructed her daughter to ask for John's head.

Hardly a week goes by that I don't hear, "I was at this party," or "I was down at the bar," or "I was at the office get-together and I said something I shouldn't have said, and then I did something I shouldn't have done." These statements always come from broken, devastated people whose lives are permanently scarred because they were playing the game, trying to get ahead. Watch out for an environment wherein alcohol is flowing, and seductive music is playing. I don't care what society says. I don't care what the demands from your boss might be. Watch out. Herodias is dancing. You'll get sucked in, and you'll regret it later.

Matthew 14:12

And his disciples came, and took up the body, and buried it, and went and told Jesus.

Distressed and discouraged, the disciples of John went to Jesus—a good thing to do. Communication with Jesus is always the best insulation against depression.

Matthew 14:13 (a)

When Jesus heard of it, he departed thence by ship into a desert place apart . . .

Jesus and John were close not only in ministry, but as family, being that John was a cousin of Jesus. Hearing John had been beheaded, Jesus withdrew to a quiet place.

Matthew 14:13 (b), 14

. . . and when the people had heard thereof, they followed him on foot out of the cities. And Jesus went forth, and saw a great multitude, and was moved with compassion toward them, and he healed their sick.

Jesus had need of solitude, but when He saw the crowd, Matthew writes He was "moved with compassion, and he healed their sick." This is always a tension in our walks. We feel the need to get away and seek the Lord in quietness, yet there are needs all around us. The question arises: How do I know when to get involved with the needs I see around me and when to seek the Lord in solitude and tranquility? How do I know when it's time to plunge in and get involved, versus time to retreat and be quiet before the Lord? I believe the answer lies in this passage. As with Jesus, compassion within you and anointing upon you are good indicators that you need to get involved in the situation around you.

Matthew 14:15–20 (a)

And when it was evening, his disciples came to him, saying, This is a desert place, and the time is now past; send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages, and buy themselves victuals. But Jesus said unto them, They need not depart; give ye them to eat. And they say unto him, We have here but five loaves, and two fishes. He said, Bring them hither to me. And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the grass, and took the five loaves, and the two fishes, and looking up to heaven, he blessed, and brake, and gave the loaves to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. And they did all eat, and were filled . . .

Jesus took limited resources—five loaves and two fish—blessed them, gave them out, and fed five thousand. Notice, however, that in between blessing and giving, there was breaking. You might say, "I don't have much. My talents are limited. My gifts aren't great." That's Okay. In the Lord's hand, a little goes a long way if you will let Him bless you and break you.

I think of Mary with the alabaster box, anointing Jesus and ministering to Him. The box had to be broken before ministry could flow (Mark 14:3). I think of Gideon, whose three hundred men put torches in clay pots as they surrounded the hosts of the Midianites. On a given signal, they broke the clay pots, and the light flooded out. Confused by the light, the Midianites fought one another and destroyed themselves. Israel was victorious because before the battle was fought, the clay pots were broken (Judges 7:19).

People often say, "God has been good to me, and I want to be used in ministry. Why then am I going through the pits and through such difficulty?" The answer is very simple. Before the Lord can use a person greatly, He must allow him to be hurt and broken deeply. There's no other way. Pride must go. Self-sufficiency must die to make way for the tenderness and compassion that come only through the breaking process.

Matthew 14:20 (b)–23

. . . and they took up of the fragments that remained twelve baskets full. And they that had eaten were about five thousand men, beside women and children. And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get into a ship, and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the multitudes away. And when he had sent the multitudes away, he went up into a mountain apart to pray: and when the evening was come, he was there alone.

Now, after a time of ministry, Jesus at last had an opportunity to be alone with His Father. He sent His disciples across the sea and went to a mountain alone for contemplation and intercession.

Matthew 14:24–26 (a)

But the ship was now in the midst of the sea, tossed with waves: for the wind was contrary. And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them, walking on the sea. And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled . . .

"They were troubled"—that's putting it mildly! A more accurate translation would be, "They were scared to death!" Here they were, struggling against the storm, obedient to the command of Jesus to proceed to the other side, when suddenly, they saw a figure walking towards them.

Matthew 14:26 (b)–29

. . . saying, It is a spirit; and they cried out for fear. But straightway Jesus spake unto them, saying, Be of good cheer; it is I; be not afraid. And Peter answered him and said, Lord, if it be thou, bid me come unto thee on the water. And he said, Come. And when Peter was come down out of the ship, he walked on the water, to go to Jesus.

The reason Peter could walk on water was not because he wanted to write a book about walking on water, or to send out publicity photos of himself surfing without a board. Peter's motivation was neither notoriety nor fame. He simply wanted to go to Jesus.

Matthew 14:30–32

But when he saw the wind boisterous, he was afraid; and beginning to sink, he cried, saying, Lord, save me. And immediately Jesus stretched forth his hand, and caught him, and said unto him, O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt? and when they were come into the ship, the wind ceased.

In extra-Biblical literature, Peter is referred to as "the Giant." Historical writings corroborate the fact that he was a man of good size. Yet, Jesus was able to lift him out of the water with one hand. Artists' renderings over the centuries portraying Jesus as a wimp are false. Jesus was a carpenter in the days before power tools and lumberyards, which means He logged trees and finished lumber before even beginning the building process.

Anything but a weakling, Jesus was able to single-handedly lift a waterlogged Peter out of the sea and into the boat. And He does the same with us. We tire of our situation and become weary of the people in our boats, so we venture out upon the water and start to sink. Jesus pulls us out of the water and sets us back in the boat because there are yet lessons for us to learn there. He loves us enough to plop us back in the boat until the lesson is learned and His work is complete.

Matthew 14:33

Then they that were in the ship came and worshipped him, saying, Of a truth thou art the Son of God.

When you're in a storm with the wind raging and the waves pounding, and you feel like you're sinking, know this: The same Lord who stills the storm allows the storm. Why does God allow storms?

Scripturally, storms appear for two reasons. First, there are storms of correction. Ask Jonah about them. If we're out of the Lord's will, He will use a storm to get us back to where we need to be. Storms of correction discipline us. Second, there are storms of perfection that develop us. In this passage, the disciples were obeying Jesus' command to go to the other side. Thus, this was not a storm to correct them, but to perfect them. In this storm, Jesus was saying, "I want to test you now. I've been teaching you. I've been with you. And now I want you to exercise your faith to go through this storm."

You see, faith is developed through struggle. If you ask people what faith is, most will answer, "Faith is believing even though you don't have evidence." Not true. Faith is not "believing in spite of the evidence." Faith is obeying in spite of the consequence. Faith says, "I will do what the Lord says, even though it means a storm is headed my way. Even though it means there will be difficulties, obstacles, and challenges, even though it may be brutal and difficult, even though I must struggle, I will obey."

When Jesus came to His disciples, they thought He was a ghost. So, too, we can look around and say, "The Lord is nowhere." Or we can slow down and say, "Wait a minute. Is the Lord speaking to me through my sister, through my mother, through that preacher, or through the radio?"

And suddenly, "The Lord is nowhere" becomes "The Lord is now here" by adding a little space.

I find if I slow down and give the Lord a little space, He appears through my brother who shares with me, through my wife who gives encouragement to me, or through my children who challenge me. He sent you into the storm, He's praying for you through the storm, and He'll come to you in the storm—perhaps when you least expect Him.

Matthew 14:34–36

And when they were gone over, they came into the land of Gennesaret. And when the men of that place had knowledge of him, they sent out into all that country round about, and brought unto him all that were diseased; and besought him that they might only touch the hem of his garment: and as many as touched were made perfectly whole.

Throughout Scripture, blue is the color of heaven.

Speak unto the children of Israel, and bid them that they make them fringes in the borders of their garments throughout their generations, and that they put upon the fringe of the borders a ribband of blue.

Numbers 15:38

The color blue on the hem of the garments of the Jews was to be a reminder to them that they were a unique people, a heavenly people. As they dressed each morning and as they saw one another throughout the day, they were to remember they were pilgrims on this earth, headed for a heavenly city whose "Builder and Maker is God."

Maybe you've sought the Lord, but wonder, Why aren't I healed? I encourage you to touch the hem of the garment of Jesus Christ and be reminded of eternity. There is healing when you realize, "I might suffer for a few weeks, months, years, or even decades, but I'm going to Heaven. And when I see Him, I shall be like Him. And when I am like Him, I will have a body custom-made for space, the cosmos, and the ages to come. There will be no sickness, no infirmity, no weakness whatsoever."

The Scriptures from Genesis to Revelation call us to a heavenly perspective. I do not understand why we have fallen into this "I've got to have it all now—wealth and health, prosperity and healing" mentality. If God blesses you materially or if He heals you physically, great! But don't build your life on that. Set your heart on things above. Live for heaven. Touch the hem of His garment, and be reminded once again that it's blue.

RECOGNIZING OUR REDEEMER

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 14:22–33

Fighting the Philistines in a brutal battle, as the Israelites' losses mounted, so did their despair. Then someone had a brilliant idea: "Let's bring in the ark of the Covenant!" The ark of the Covenant, a box about three feet long and two feet wide, was instrumental in tabernacle worship.

When the ark was brought into the Israelite camp, the Israelites cheered so loudly that their shout of triumph could be heard in the Philistine camp. But though the Israelites charged ahead with the Ark leading them, they were defeated resoundingly. And the Philistines captured the Ark (1 Samuel 4).

The lesson? An obvious one. The people of God should not have tried to put God in a box, saying, "This box will represent God, and we will have victory because of it." Instead of looking to the Lord, they looked to the box and were beaten badly. If there is one thing many of us are learning, it is that the Lord works in mysterious ways. You just can't box Him in. He is predictably unpredictable. He comes at the unexpected time, in the unexpected way.

Here in Matthew 14, the disciples are out in the storm, toiling at the oars, continuing obediently in the directive Jesus had given them to "Go across the sea." And while they were working and perspiring, Jesus was watching and praying. He was letting them go through the struggle, knowing the struggle would strengthen them. Finally, at four o'clock in the morning, knowing His disciples were feeling anxious and fearful, He came to them, walking on the water. He came to them at the unexpected time in an unexpected way, and they, thinking He was a ghost, freaked out. So, too, I suggest to you that many times Jesus comes to us as well, but like the disciples, we don't recognize Him.

> When your boyfriend or girlfriend calls and says, "You know, I've been thinking. I really appreciate your personality. You've been a good friend, but . . ." Your heart stops, and you say, "This is frightening. It's a ghost."

> When your boss calls you into the office and says, “Don’t bother to take off your coat,” you know what’s coming, and you think, “It’s a ghost! I’m scared.”

Oftentimes, when we, like the disciples, are obedient to the Lord and toiling for the Lord, we call out, “Lord, save me. I’m perishing. Lord, help me. I’m struggling.” Then He comes to us—but in ways that are totally surprising, refusing to be boxed in by our preconceptions of how and when He should appear. I would like us to look at four obstacles that prevent us from seeing Jesus when He comes to us in the unexpected way, at the unexpected time.

Fear and Anxiety

When our hearts are full of fear and anxiety, what should we do? Look at Jesus' answer in the text before us. He said, "Be of good cheer. It is I." This intrigues me. He didn't say, "It is I. Be of good cheer." He said, "Be of good cheer. It is I." First, "Be of good cheer"—an exhortation; then, "It is I"—a revelation. The exhortation comes before the revelation.

Scripture says that in everything we are to give thanks, to rejoice evermore, for this is the will of God (1 Thessalonians 5:16–18). If you begin to rejoice—to be of good cheer—suddenly you will see that it isn't a ghost, but it's Jesus drawing near. He's freeing you from that job, or from that relationship that will drag you down. It's the Lord coming to you in the storm.

Next time fear and anxiety fill your heart, don't freak out—faith out. By faith, rejoice, and He will reveal Himself to you as He walks on the water in the midst of your storm.

False Familiarity

Jesus came into His hometown, and there the people said of Him, "Hey, isn't this the carpenter's son? And isn't Mary His mother? And don't we know His brothers and sisters?" They thought they knew Him, but their assumptions were mistaken. Matthew writes that Jesus could not do many mighty works there because of their unbelief (see Matthew 13:58).

So, too, Jesus will come to you, gang, in people you know very well. Our tendency, however, is to say,

- "That guy can't tell me anything. I know him."
- "I know her. She's my wife. She has nothing to say to me."
- "Him? He's only been a Christian six months. What could he possibly say to me?"

In reality, those people are Jesus coming to you. Jesus comes to us constantly, yet if we're not careful, we'll say, "I can't receive from her. I can't receive from him. I know them." Paul said, "I know no man after the flesh. I will no longer look at people with their faults, flaws, and failures. I will see people only in Christ" (see 2 Corinthians 5:16). When we begin to look at our husband, our wife, our friends, our kids, our brothers, and our sisters as people in Christ, realizing Jesus indwells them, suddenly we will lay hold of the most incredible understanding, profound revelation, and convicting challenges. Why is it that we are so ready to receive from someone we esteem highly—a Billy Graham, or a Chuck Swindoll? Wouldn't it be radical if we saw every man in Christ? Jesus will come to you through the people closest to you, but if you're not careful, you'll miss Him.

Personal Tragedy

It was Easter morning. Mary Magdalene stood outside the sepulcher weeping, thinking the One speaking to her was a gardener (John 20:15).

Sometimes the person who comes to us in time of tragedy, the person who ministers to us most effectively is not an angel or an apostle. In times of tragedy, Jesus will come to you in the most ordinary of people—the gardeners. Mary, no doubt, thought, If anyone is going to give me understanding, it will be Peter, John, or the angels at the tomb. They will help me. But Jesus came to Mary directly, and she mistook Him for a gardener.

Maybe you're going through a time of real personal tragedy. In those times of weeping and crying, be careful because sometimes you'll miss Jesus coming to you very personally. You will think He should come in Peter or in John or in an angel sent from heaven. But you know how He'll come? Through a very common person you wouldn't have expected. And if your antennae aren't up, you'll miss Him. You'll mistake Him as being insignificant and unimportant.

Too often we think we need to see the pastor, a staff member, an elder, or an angel, when we should really be looking for the gardener. Look for the person you thought wouldn't have much to say or much to offer. That's where the deep, beautiful ministry of Jesus will often flow most freely.

Despair and Despondency

In Luke 24, we read the account of two followers of Jesus walking on the road to Emmaus, depressed and despondent following the death of their Master. As Jesus joined them and asked the reason for their sorrow, they said, "Are You a stranger here? Don't You know what's happening? Where have You been?" Then Jesus began gently and lovingly rebuking them for their lack of faith. Beginning with Moses and going through the prophets, He told them how all of the Scriptures foretold His death and resurrection.

When you are depressed and despondent, the Lord will come to you. Initially, however, you might feel He's a stranger. Going through a time of emotional turmoil and great difficulty, unable to sleep, I turned on the television to a Christian station and watched a preacher who I had previously thought was very strange. He wasn't into heresy doctrinally, but his whole approach to the ministry was kind of weird. Normally, I wouldn't have given him the time of day, but in this instance, I listened to him, since his show was the only thing on at three o'clock in the morning. And guess what? His words spoke precisely and powerfully to my exact situation.

The Lord will often come through the person you might have previously thought strange. The eyes of the travelers on the Emmaus road were opened when Jesus broke bread with them. So too, when we break bread in Communion, we realize we are one body, all partaking of the same Lord, all cleansed by His blood. Our differences become irrelevant when we break bread, because suddenly our eyes are opened, and we see Jesus.

Fear and anxiety, false familiarity, personal tragedy, despair and despondency—all will keep you from recognizing your Redeemer. But if you say, "I will watch for You, Lord, in the storm. I will praise Your Name and embrace this difficulty, trusting You are revealing Yourself to me."

- I will receive from those who I think I know so well. I will take their words as Yours.
- I will listen for You in the common person, in the gardener, rather than waiting for an apostle or an angel to speak my name.

• I will embrace the stranger who walks alongside of me, and as we break bread at Your table, I will see Your face.

You will find Jesus will come to you in ways and through people you never expected.

15 Matthew 15:1–3

Then came to Jesus scribes and Pharisees, which were of Jerusa lem, saying, Why do thy disciples transgress the tradition of the elders? For they wash not their hands when they eat bread. But he answered and said unto them, Why do ye also transgress the commandment of God by your tradition?

A delegation of scribes and Pharisees came from Jerusalem to ask Jesus why His disciples did not follow the hand-washing tradition of the elders. You see, although the Jews rightly taught that the law was given to Moses on Mount Sinai, they also said that later on, the Lord gave further revelation to Moses that was not written in the Scriptures. This further revelation was passed down orally from generation to generation, and the Jews became so caught up in it, they actually went so far as to say that the word of the elders was weightier than the Word of God.

One such oral tradition dealt with the ceremonial washing of hands. The Rabbis taught that at night, the demon Shibna would often come and sit upon a man's hands as he slept. They went on to say that if anyone ate with hands that had been sat upon by a demon, the demon could enter into him through the food and take control of him. Therefore, the Rabbis concluded, before eating one needed to wash his hands in the following manner:

> One was to take one and a half eggshells of water and pour it over his hands as they were pressed together uprightly, letting the water drip only to his wrists and no further. Then, he would flip his hands over, pointing them downward while yet another one-and-a-half eggshells of water was poured over them. Finally, he was to rub his right fist with his left palm, then his left fist with his right palm. This procedure was followed not only before every meal, but between each course of every meal.

Jesus' complete disregard of this tradition infuriated the scribes and Pharisees.

Matthew 15:4–6

For God commanded, saying, Honour thy father and mother: and, He that curseth father or mother, let him die the death. But ye say, Whosoever shall say to his father or his mother, It is a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; And honour not his father or his mother, he shall be free. Thus have ye made the commandment of God of none effect by your tradition.

The tradition of the elders stated specifically that if you had something in your house which was of great value, you could say it was "corban," or "dedicated," which then made that object a gift to God. You could still keep it in your house and use it for your purposes, but it was technically dedicated to God. It was a convenient way to refuse help to people in need—even to those in your own family. Jesus indicts the people for this practice, saying, "The Scriptures declare, honor your father and your mother. But you have made the commandment of God of none effect by your vain traditions."

Matthew 15:7–9

Ye hypocrites, well did Esaias prophesy of you, saying, This people draweth nigh unto me with their mouth, and honoureth me with their lips; but their heart is far from me. But in vain they do worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men.

"Here's the problem," says Jesus—"People think they draw near to Me with their traditions and their songs, with their lips and with their words—but their hearts are far from Me. The issue is the heart."

For with the heart man believeth unto righteousness; and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

Romans 10:10 [emphasis mine]

> Let the word of Christ dwell in you richly in all wisdom; teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.
> Colossians 3:16 [emphasis mine]

> Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment.
> Matthew 22:37, 38 [emphasis mine]

> Every man according as he purposeth in his heart, so let him give; not grudgingly, or of necessity: for God loveth a cheerful giver.
> II Corinthians 9:7 [emphasis mine]

The issue is the heart. But there's a problem, for as Jeremiah declares, "The heart is deceitful above all things, and desperately wicked" (17:9). What then is the solution? David gave the answer when he said, "Thy word have I hid in mine heart, that I might not sin against thee" (Psalm 119:11).

How is the heart cleansed? By the Word. If people criticize you for something you are doing or not doing in the area of religion, say to them, "Show me in the Word where it says I should or should not do that, for unless you can show me in the Word, I don't care what the traditions might have been previously, or what our culture dictates presently. I am free in Jesus Christ."

> Matthew 15:10–12
> And he called the multitude, and said unto them, Hear, and understand: Not that which goeth into the mouth defileth a man; but that which cometh out of the mouth, this defileth a man. Then came his disciples, and said unto him, Knowest thou that the Pharisees were offended, after they heard this saying?

“It’s not what goes into your mouth; it’s what comes out of your heart. That’s the key.” In so saying, Jesus offended the pious, religious leaders.

Matthew 15:13–20

But he answered and said, Every plant, which my heavenly Father hath not planted, shall be rooted up. Let them alone: they be blind leaders of the blind. And if the blind lead the blind, both shall fall into the ditch. Then answered Peter and said unto him, Declare unto us this parable. And Jesus said, Are ye also yet without understanding? Do not ye yet understand, that whatsoever enter eth in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draught? But those things which proceed out of the mouth come forth from the heart; and they defile the man. For out of the heart proceed evil thoughts, murders, adulteries, fornications, thefts, false witness, blasphemies: These are the things which defile a man: but to eat with unwashen hands defileth not a man.

The issue is not washing of hands by the eggshell, but washing of hearts by the Word. Be free in Jesus. Enjoy your liberty and extend it to others graciously.

Matthew 15:21, 22

Then Jesus went thence, and departed into the coasts of Tyre and Sidon. And, behold, a woman of Canaan came out of the same coasts, and cried unto him, saying, Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David; my daughter is grievously vexed with a devil.

The phraseology this Canaanite woman uses is most enlightening. She approaches Jesus using a phrase made popular by Jews who were in need of healing. “Have mercy on me, Son of David,” they would cry whenever Jesus approached. Why did they refer to Jesus as “Son of David”? A thousand years earlier, a prophecy was given to David that he would have a Son, a descendant who would reign forever—Messiah. And when Messiah came, the lame would walk and blind eyes would be opened. Consequently, the Jews who recognized Jesus as their Messiah called Him “Son of David.”

Now suddenly, this Canaanite lady, upon hearing of Jesus' coming, searched for the most appropriate way to address Him. Having heard Him referred to as "Son of David" by Jews lining His path, she borrowed the phrase from them.

Matthew 15:23 (a)
But he answered her not a word.

If ever there were a situation to which I would think Jesus would respond quickly, it would be to a mother crying helplessly over her child. Yet, here this crying woman came to Jesus, and He answered her not a word.

Matthew 15:23 (b)
And his disciples came and besought him, saying, Send her away; for she crieth after us.

Her tears, no doubt, were having an effect on the disciples, and they came to Jesus, saying, "Lord, send her away. She's bothering us."

Matthew 15:24
But he answered and said, I am not sent but unto the lost sheep of the house of Israel.

If I were this woman, I think at this point I would have slunk away in despair. After all, she had nothing going for her. Her race was against her. She was a Canaanite—an enemy of the Israelites. Her sex was against her. She was a woman—in a time where women were held in low esteem. Even the disciples were against her, as they begged Jesus to send her away. But you've got to admire this lady because she didn't give up. And Jesus knew she wouldn't. You see, Jesus was not trying to be difficult with her. Rather, He was drawing out an understanding from her that would be helpful not only in her situation specifically, but to us and to all generations historically. Watch what happens.

Matthew 15:25

Then came she and worshipped him, saying, Lord, help me.

No longer concerned about the right phraseology and the proper presentation, in desperation and openness, she worships Jesus. In simplicity, she says, "Lord, save me," and a miracle was underway.

Sometimes when we're going through tough times, we hear how someone else prays, and we think, That must be the key. King James English is what moves the hand of God. So we pray, "Father, I thankest Thee that Thou beholdest the cries of all of Thy creation. Now, Father, in Thy magnificence and benevolence, have mercy upon me in my situation." And nothing happens. Or we hear someone share how they lifted their hand to the Lord, and He reached down and pulled them out of their depression. And we say, "Now how high did you hold your hand? Was it your right hand or your left hand?"

This Canaanite woman was in that same situation. She had the formula, but she failed miserably until she threw her formula aside and came in brokenness and openness to worship Jesus. Worship works where formulas fail. The word "worship," or proskuneo in Greek means, "to turn and kiss." Guys, when you kiss your wives, hopefully you don't follow a ten-step program to better kissing. I mean, it needs to be spontaneous and expressive, simple and sincere. The same is true of worship. Worship is not a procedure we follow. It's creative and spontaneous, simple and sincere. In II Samuel 6:12, we see an account of one who understood this principle. The ark of the covenant had been in the house of Obed-Edom for some time. David was bringing it back to Jerusalem.

> And it was told king David, saying, The Lord hath blessed the house of Obed-edom, and all that pertaineth unto him, because of the ark of God. So David went and brought up the ark of God from the house of Obed-edom into the city of David with gladness. And it was so, that when they that bare the ark of the Lord had gone six paces, he sacrificed oxen and fatlings. And David danced before the Lord with all his might; and David was girded with a linen ephod.
> 2 Samuel 6:12–14

There was a time when all the rage was dressing for success. Many years ago, I saw a picture of fifteen men standing with the then current President of the United States. Every single one had on a dark suit and a red tie. Evidently, they had all read the same book! In the things of God, however, it's not so much dressing for success, but undressing; not so much robing yourself in royalty and regality, but disrobing in humility and spontaneity. David laid aside his "Dress For Success" manual and danced in his underwear before the Lord with gladness and spontaneity, expressing his heart creatively, energetically, and sincerely.

> So David and all the house of Israel brought up the ark of the Lord with shouting, and with the sound of the trumpet. And as the ark of the Lord came into the city of David, Michal Saul's daughter looked through a window, and saw king David leaping and dancing before the Lord; and she despised him in her heart.
> 2 Samuel 6:15, 16

Observing her husband dancing in his boxers, Michal said, "This is terrible. He's the king of Israel. Where's his dignity?"

> Then David returned to bless his household. And Michal the daughter of Saul came out to meet David, and said, How glorious was the king of Israel to day, who uncovered himself to day in the eyes of the handmaids of his servants, as one of the vain fellows shamelessly uncovereth himself!
> 2 Samuel 6:20

"That was great, Dave," laughed Michal. "You made a big impression out there. You looked like a fool."

> And David said unto Michal, It was before the Lord, which chose me before thy father . . .
> 2 Samuel 6:21 (a)

"Remember your father, Michal? God was against him because although Saul was royal and regal, he was not humble and open. He was a worker, not a worshipper. He didn't have a heart after God." In other words, David is saying, "Michal, you're acting just like your dad."

> . . . and before all his house, to appoint me ruler over the people of the Lord, over Israel: therefore will I play before the Lord. And I will yet be more vile than thus, and will be base in mine own sight: and of the maidservants which thou hast spoken of, of them shall I be had in honour.
> 2 Samuel 6:21 (b), 22

"If you think I acted foolishly today, stick around," David declares. "What I have done, I have done unto the Lord as an act of worship. And those maidens you are worried about? They will see the honor of the Lord working in me."

> Therefore Michal the daughter of Saul had no child unto the day of her death.
> 2 Samuel 6:23

The same is true today. People or churches who feel worship is not important, or that it's foolish to express one's heart to the Lord publicly and privately will, like Michal, experience a barrenness, a dryness, and a lack of fruitfulness in their lives. Those of you who feel like the Lord is "answering you not a word," try worshiping Jesus. Put away your royal robes and futile formulas and say, "Lord, help me express my heart to You today."

> Matthew 15:26
> But he answered and said, It is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it to dogs.

Jesus responds to the woman allegorically. In speaking of children, He is referring to the children of Israel, the Jews. In speaking of bread, He is referring to Himself, the Bread of Life. In speaking of dogs, using the Greek word for a pet dog, He is referring to the Gentiles. In other words, Jesus is saying, "Since I have come first and foremost to the house of Israel, my primary focus must be upon the Jews."

Matthew 15:27

And she said, Truth, Lord: yet the dogs eat of the crumbs which fall from their masters' table.

"I hear You," she says. "I understand You're working according to certain priorities. Yet even though the puppy dogs don't get the best bread, they still get the leftover crumbs that fall from the table." Can't you see in your mind's eye a smile break out on the face of Jesus? This is what He was after all along—not to destroy her, but to develop her.

Matthew 15:28 (a)

Then Jesus answered and said unto her, O woman . . .

The word translated "woman" is gune, a term of respect. Jesus used the same word when He spoke of His mother.

Matthew 15:28 (b)

. . . great is thy faith: be it unto thee even as thou wilt. And her daughter was made whole from that very hour.

Jesus knew all along what He would be doing. He knew He would indeed heal and bless. But in the process, He taught this Canaanite woman, and all who have studied her story, the power and reality of true worship. I encourage you this day, precious people, to put away phrases and forms and instead follow the example of the Canaanite woman. Worship Jesus in simplicity and sincerity and watch Him work powerfully and radically.

Matthew 15:29–39

And Jesus departed from thence, and came nigh unto the sea of Galilee; and went up into a mountain, and sat down there. And great multitudes came unto him, having with them those that were lame, blind, dumb, maimed, and many others, and cast them down at Jesus' feet; and he healed them: Insomuch that the multitude wondered, when they saw the dumb to speak, the maimed to be whole, the lame to walk, and the blind to see: and they glorified the God of Israel. Then Jesus called his disciples unto him, and said, I have compassion on the multitude, because they continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat: and I will not send them away fasting, lest they faint in the way. And his disciples say unto him, Whence should we have so much bread in the wilderness, as to fill so great a multitude? And Jesus saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven, and a few little fishes. And he commanded the multitude to sit down on the ground. And he took the seven loaves and the fishes, and gave thanks, and brake them, and gave to his disciples, and the disciples to the multitude. And they did all eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets full. And they that did eat were four thousand men, beside women and children. And he sent away the multitude, and took ship, and came into the coasts of Magdala.

In this passage, we see Jesus feeding over four thousand people. Were these people praying? Were they asking to be fed? Did the disciples believe Jesus would feed the multitude miraculously? No. The people didn't pray. And even the disciples didn't have faith. Yet Jesus provided abundantly, graciously, and compassionately.

For topical study of Matthew 15:32–39, see "The Key: His Compassion" below.

THE KEY: HIS COMPASSION

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 15:32–39

The passage before us is controversial. Many scholars suggest it is nothing more than a retelling of the "feeding of the five thousand" story in Matthew 14. Why? It's the only explanation they can offer for the seeming stupidity of the disciples. You see, here in chapter 15, the disciples ask Jesus how they are to feed such a large crowd. Why would the disciples wonder how to feed four thousand if only a mere chapter earlier, they had seen Jesus feed over five thousand? "The only logical answer," conclude the scholars, "is that Matthew 14:14–21 and Matthew 15:32–39 are two different accounts of the same event." I, however, reject their premise for the following reasons:

- There were five thousand men in chapter 14.
- There were four thousand men in chapter 15.
- There were five loaves and two fish in chapter 14.
- There were seven loaves and a few fish in chapter 15.
- The multitude sat on the grass in chapter 14—the implication being it was springtime.
- The multitude sat on the bare ground in chapter 15—the implication being it was summertime.
- Jesus was in Bethsaida, the northern side of the Sea of Galilee, in chapter 14. • Jesus was in Decapolis (Mark 8), on the eastern side of Galilee in chapter 15. • After He fed the multitude in chapter 14, they wanted to make Him King. • After He fed the multitude in chapter 15, they made no such request.

Above all, however, the reason I know these two events are separate is because Jesus Himself referred to them as such in Matthew 16:9, 10. If the "scholars" are right in suggesting there was only one feeding with two accounts, then Matthew wasn't listening to the Spirit as he wrote his Gospel, and Jesus was mistaken and confused about His own miracles.

I find this hard to believe. Many read this story and struggle with it. "How can this be? How could the disciples forget about the miracle that happened only one chapter previously? Nobody's that dumb." I suggest to you that the answer to that very question is very applicable and helpful for me and for you. First, you must understand that Galilee and Decapolis were very different regions. Galilee was the "headquarters" of Jesus' ministry. Galilee was where He hung out, delivered significant teachings, and developed His disciples. Decapolis, on the other hand, was a confederation of ten Gentile cities with its own monetary system, judicial system, king, and army. Decapolis was financially prosperous and very worldly. Huge monuments to Zeus and Aphrodite dotted the landscape, and coliseums provided Roman-style entertainment.

I believe that's where the problem was. Here, the disciples were with Jesus in Decapolis. "Certainly Jesus won't do a miracle here," the disciples must have thought. "This is heathen territory. Most of this crowd is Gentile. The Lord isn't going to feed these people. Besides that, they've been with Him three days now. In Galilee, He fed the crowd after only one day. This is the wrong place. These are the wrong people. This is the wrong time."

The same thing happens to me and to you. The Lord blesses us. A miracle happens. Provision is made. Grace is shown. Then we get into a similar situation a month, a year, or a decade later. And we say, "Oh yeah, I know the Lord saw me through that previous difficulty. I know He provided for me graciously. But that was a different time. I was in Galilee then. I was having morning devotions. I was really close to Him. Now? I'm in the wrong place with the wrong people. This is the wrong time. Nothing is going to happen. The Lord isn't going to see me through this trouble. Not now. I'm out to lunch. I'm in Decapolis."

How easy it is to fall into the subtle trap of expecting the Lord to bless us because of our own worthiness or because we're in Galilee. "I'm praying. I'm studying. I'm close to the Lord. Of course He'll bless me!" But what we fail to factor into the equation is this very simple understanding. Jesus, we are told in verse 32, called His disciples and said, "I have compassion on the multitude." The word translated "compassion" is actually a Greek word that describes the retching of the intestines—something which one feels very deeply. Looking out upon the hungry people of Decapolis, Jesus said, "I hurt for them. Even though no one is asking Me to provide, even though no one is believing I can provide, I want to do something for these people because I have compassion upon them."

What a glorious day it is when you understand that Jesus, your Redeemer and your Friend, looks at you in your need and has compassion upon you—even when you're in Decapolis. What a freeing day it is when we finally learn that the blessings the Lord gives us are not based on anything we do, but just because He sees our hunger and has compassion upon us. There's only one prerequisite—just as there was only one prerequisite for the multitude to be fed with so much food that the Greek text says they were "glutted." They needed to be where Jesus was.

You see, the four thousand weren't making requests of Jesus. They weren't exercising faith in Him. They were merely where He was. They were "under the spout where the blessings come out." And that's the same place we need to be. I have found this to be so true in my own life. The Lord has blessed me above all I could ask or think. I wish I could say to you it was because of my powerful prayer life, my disciplined fasting, my great faith. But that's not true. The Lord has blessed me because He looked on me and said, "Wow. You're hurting. And I hurt for you." That's the way Jesus is—He's a compassionate, caring, loving, gracious, and giving Friend. And the only thing I need to do is hang around Him.

Spending time with God's people

As a three-year-old, I sat on the pew with my mom and dad at Calvary Temple in San Jose, California, as Pastor Kermit Jeffries gave a message on hell. Usually, when Pastor Jeffries preached, Mom would give me some cookies or Lifesavers, and I would lie down and fall asleep. But for some reason on this particular morning, when he started talking about the devil, my ears perked up, and I listened carefully. "Satan has a stopwatch in his hand," Pastor Jeffries said. "He realizes time is running out. He's grabbing every man and woman, boy and girl he possibly can, and he's pulling them into the fires of hell." As soon as Pastor Jeffries gave an invitation to those who wanted to escape Satan's grasp, I scooted down the aisle to the front as quickly as I could. I got saved. Why? Because I was seeking the truth? Exploring the philosophies of the Western mentality? Trying to determine esoterically if there is truth, or if existential thought was the conclusion of my pursuit? No. I wasn't seeking, pursuing, thinking, or working. I was just where Jesus was.

My heart breaks when I know people who are hurting are hanging out at the local tavern. They're missing relational, financial, emotional, and occupational blessings because they're not hanging out with Jesus. Those who were around Jesus were blessed just because He looked at them and had compassion on them.

Spending time in God's Word

Jesus is revealed not only through His people, but also in His Word. Often, I open the Scriptures and suddenly find something that answers the question for me, gives a solution to me, and satisfies the longing within me. Coming down from Highway 62 after the accident in which the Lord took my first wife Terry home, a word from the Lord was whispered in my heart that I didn't even know I knew:

> For I know the thoughts that I think toward you, saith the Lord, thoughts of peace and not of evil, to give you an expected end.
> Jeremiah 29:11

As I listen to His still small voice revealed through His Word to my heart, as I hang out with Him in the multitude of His people, I experience miracle after miracle, blessing after blessing. And when I feel like I'm in the wrong place with the wrong people at the wrong time, I have learned that He can work even in Decapolis because He looks upon me with compassion. I so appreciate our Lord Jesus. He is truly good. As the multitudes left, they did so with full stomachs and healed bodies, with praises flowing from their lips and excitement filling their hearts amazed by the compassion and goodness of Jesus Christ. Hang around Him, precious people, and you'll do the same.

16 As we have seen, the Gospel of Matthew is a presentation of Jesus Christ as King. Written from this perspective, chapters 1 through 10 reveal the King: His Person, His prophet, His precepts, His power. Chapters 11 through 13 portray the rebellion against the King: against His Person, His prophet, His precepts, and His power. Chapters 14 through 20 present the retreat of the King as Jesus pulls His disciples away for times of instruction and fellowship. He will still have encounters with His enemies, and from time to time, the crowds will still surround Him, but this section of Matthew is primarily a record of Jesus retreating with His disciples.

Matthew 16:1

The Pharisees also with the Sadducees came, and tempting desired him that he would shew them a sign from heaven.

The Pharisees and Sadducees tracked Jesus down as He withdrew into Galilee. Attempting to test Him, they asked Him for a sign. Now, this absolutely blows my mind because only two chapters earlier, Jesus fed five thousand men with a few loaves and fishes. And then in the sequel, Loaves and Fishes II, He fed four thousand. The Pharisees and Sadducees simply refused to see what was happening all around them. In 2 Corinthians 3:14, Paul writes that Satan has blinded the minds of those who have willingly rejected the gospel. If a person desires to see the light and to know the Truth, however, it will be revealed to him regardless of his surroundings or his situation.

I read about a French woman who lived fifty years ago and had been blind from birth. One day, someone gave her the Gospel of Mark in Braille. She was so blessed by the story of Jesus that she read it over and over until her fingertips became callused and lost their sensitivity. To regain feeling in her fingers, she cut off the calluses, and with bloody fingertips, read Mark's Gospel yet again. As she continued to cut away the skin and the calluses, however, she damaged her nerve endings so badly that soon she permanently lost all feeling in her fingertips. Devastated, she held her copy of the Gospel of Mark in her hands one last time and literally kissed it goodbye. It was then she discovered that her lips were more sensitive than her fingertips had ever been. She continued to study the Scriptures—with her lips—and went on to become a gifted teacher of the Word.

Those who are blind but want to see will see, regardless of the obstacles. Those who don't wish to see—Pharisees, scribes, and Sadducees, even though miracles are happening round about them—will not see because they don't want to see.

Matthew 16:2, 3

He answered and said unto them, When it is evening, ye say, It will be fair weather: for the sky is red. And in the morning, It will be foul weather to day: for the sky is red and lowring. O ye hypocrites, ye can discern the face of the sky; but can ye not discern the signs of the times?

In Jesus' day, the rabbis taught that a demon could perform earthly miracles, but only God could work miracles that related to the sky. Therefore, when these Pharisees said, "Show us a sign from heaven," they were actually saying, "Okay, so You fed five thousand, walked on water, and healed a leper. You might be a demon. Show us a sign from heaven to prove You're not."

Continuing with their line of reasoning, Jesus said, "Speaking of the heavens, you can predict the heavenly signs, why not the signs of the times?" Daniel prophesied precisely when Messiah would be on the scene (chapter 9). Thus, Jesus is saying, "Can't you discern the signs of the times? Don't you know Bible prophecy?" knowing that if the religious community of the day had been studying the Word like they should have been, they would have known that this was the exact time for Messiah to appear.

Matthew 16:4 (a)
A wicked and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign . . .

Miracles never convert a person. They can satisfy a person's curiosity, but they will never bring him into a born-again salvation experience.

- The world says, "If I can see it, then I'll believe it."
- The Bible says, "If you believe it, then you'll see it."

Signs and wonders can confirm the Scripture, but only faith can convert the sinner. Voltaire, the famous French infidel, was so bitter towards Christianity, it was claimed that he said,

"Even if a miracle should be wrought in the open marketplace before one thousand sober witnesses, I would rather mistrust my senses than admit a miracle took place."

Such is the mentality of the skeptic, of the sinner, of the non-believer. Interestingly, Voltaire also said, "In one hundred years from now, Christianity will be a thing of the past and the only Bibles will be in museums!"[3] "Twenty years after his death, the Geneva Bible Society purchased his house to be used to print the Bible. Later it became the Paris headquarters for the British and Foreign Bible society."[4]

Matthew 16:4 (b)

. . . And there shall no sign be given unto it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas. And he left them, and departed.

Jonah—the one who was thrown overboard in the sea and for three days was seemingly in hell itself in the belly of the great fish before being thrown out on the beach—was himself a symbol of resurrection. "Destroy this temple," Jesus declared referring to Himself, "and in three days I will raise it up" (John 2:19). That's the one sign Jesus promised.

Matthew 16:5–7

And when his disciples were come to the other side, they had forgotten to take bread. Then Jesus said unto them, Take heed and beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees. And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have taken no bread.

When Jesus talked about the leaven of the Pharisees and Sadducees, His disciples assumed He was speaking on a material level about something physical rather than something spiritual. This happened throughout the Gospels. Whenever Jesus spoke of a spiritual realm, people always confused it with the material world.

In John 3, Jesus said, "You must be born again."

"How does a man enter into his mother's womb the second time?" asked Nicodemus. Jesus was speaking spiritually, but Nicodemus was trying to figure it out materially.

In John 4, Jesus said, "I have water to give you which if you drink you shall never thirst again."

"Give me this water," said the woman at the well, "so I won't have to keep drawing out of the well!" She was thinking materially, but Jesus was speaking of the water of the Spirit internally.

In John 6, Jesus said, "Unless you eat of My body and drink of My blood, you can have no part of Me."

The crowds, thinking He was talking about cannibalism, began to turn away from Him. Yet again, He was speaking of a spiritual realm, but the people couldn't see past the material world.

Jesus' desire is to free us from this material, physical world in which we're so caught up. He longs for us to gain an eternal, spiritual perspective. But, like the disciples, we so often get hung up in the material realm. Even in our spiritual walk, we often count our blessings only in corporeal terms, and recognize only those miracles we see physically. Only the spiritual realm is eternal. That's why church is so important to me. As I come here to meet with you, to sing songs of praise to the Lord, to study the Word, my focus shifts from the material to the spiritual, from the temporal to the eternal.

Matthew 16:8–12

Which when Jesus perceived, he said unto them, O ye of little faith, why reason ye among yourselves, because ye have brought no bread? Do ye not yet understand, neither remember the five loaves of the five thousand, and how many baskets ye took up? Neither the seven loaves of the four thousand, and how many baskets ye took up? How is it that ye do not understand that I spake it not to you concerning bread, that ye should beware of the leaven of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees? Then understood they how that he bade them not beware of the leaven of bread, but of the doctrine of the Pharisees and of the Sadducees.

The leaven of the Pharisees is legalism. The Pharisees kept scores of rules and regulations, but their hearts were not right with the Lord. The leaven of the Sadducees is not legalism, but liberalism. The Sadducees said, "There are no miracles. There are no angels. There is no resurrection. This whole thing is really just to help you become a better person."

Beware of the leaven of legalism and liberalism. Galatians deals with the subject of legalism and Colossians with the subject of liberalism.

Matthew 16:13

When Jesus came into the coasts of Caesarea Philippi, he asked his disciples, saying, Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

Over eighty times throughout Scripture, Jesus refers to Himself as the Son of Man. I believe there is a two-fold reason He uses this term more than any other. First, it speaks of His humility and His ability to relate. He desires to be numbered among us. Second, it speaks of His position prophetically. Daniel 7:13 foretold that Messiah would be known as the Son of Man.

Matthew 16:14, 15

And they said, Some say that thou art John the Baptist: some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or one of the prophets. He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am?

This is the most important question ever asked any man. The door to eternity swings upon it: Who do you say Jesus is personally?

Matthew 16:16–18

And Simon Peter answered and said, Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Barjona: for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven. And I say also unto thee, That thou art Peter, and upon this rock I will build my church; and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

Jesus uses two Greek words for "stone" in this passage. Petros, or "Peter," means small stone. Petra means massive stone. In other words, Jesus is saying, "Blessed are you, little stone. Upon the massive stone of your confession, I will build My church."

Hadn't Peter and others already confessed that Jesus was the Christ?

In John 1, when Jesus told Nathanael He had seen him under the fig tree, Nathanael responded, "Truly Thou art the Son of God, the King of Israel." Yet Jesus didn't say, "Blessed are you, Nathanael. Upon that rock I'll build My Church."

In Luke 5, after a miraculous haul of fish, Peter acknowledged Jesus' lordship when he said, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." Yet at that point, Jesus didn't say, "Blessed are you, Peter. Upon that rock I will build My church."

In John 6, after five thousand were fed, Peter declared, "Truly thou art the Son of God. You alone have the words of eternal life." Yet Jesus didn't say, "Upon that rock I'll build My church."

Why? Because Jesus' disciples had acknowledged His deity previously; in every case their acknowledgements were an emotional response to a physical miracle . . .

- "You saw me under the fig tree? You must be the Son of God!"
- "Look at these fish! You must be the Son of God!"
- "Wow! Five thousand are fed! You must be the Son of God!"

Peter's statement here in Matthew 16, on the other hand, is not an emotional response. His is a carefully thought through conclusion based upon supernatural revelation. Why is this important? Because a lot of times people will make a vow, saying,

"My mom was healed of cancer. I'll start going to church." And they do—for about five months. Or, "My husband didn't get fired when everyone else did, so we'll go to church." And they go—for a few weeks.

But that isn't the foundation upon which Jesus builds. He's looking for a man or woman who will come to a rational, intellectual conclusion based upon deep, spiritual revelation. He's listening for those who say, "I have concluded that You're the Christ, not because I won the lottery, not because I feel better physically, but because You have revealed Yourself to my heart spiritually and to my mind rationally."

It is then Jesus says, "Blessed are you. You're not talking about an emotional response, or a five-month foray into Christianity. You have made a declaration, a decision, and I will build My church upon the reality, the rock of your confession."

True conversion is not based upon some emotion or some event. True conversion takes place when a man or woman says, "I have concluded that Jesus really is who He declared Himself to be. He is the Son of God. And I'm giving my life to follow Him totally."

Matthew 16:19

And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

This binding and loosing is not a picture of heaven doing our bidding; rather, it portrays us in harmony with heaven. Jesus is not saying, "Here are some keys. Whatever you want to do, I'll make it happen." No, it's just the opposite. We are to be binding and loosing even as it is done in heaven. We are to be in harmony with Jesus.

For topical study of Matthew 16:13–19 entitled "Just Jesus," turn to page* 130.

Matthew 16:20–22

Then charged he his disciples that they should tell no man that he was Jesus the Christ. From that time forth began Jesus to shew unto his disciples, how that he must go unto Jerusalem, and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and be raised again the third day. Then Peter took him, and began to rebuke him, saying, Be it far from thee, Lord: this shall not be unto thee.

In verse 16, when Peter spoke of Jesus as the Christ, he was into it. But now in verse 20, when Peter sees Jesus on the Cross, he wants no part of it.

Matthew 16:23

But he turned, and said unto Peter, Get thee behind me, Satan: thou art an offence unto me: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but those that be of men.

This verse tells me two things.

First, it disqualifies Peter as a candidate for pope. You see, one of the qualifications for the papacy is infallibility on spiritual matters. So fallible was Peter on this point that Jesus called him Satan.

"Well," some might say, "that was before Peter was filled with the Holy Spirit."

But in Galatians 2:11, Paul writes, "When I saw Peter I rebuked him to his face." Why? Because Peter was burdening Gentile believers with Jewish rules and regulations. Therefore, even after Peter was filled with the Spirit, he still blundered. I love Peter. But I acknowledge his fallibility.

Second, this verse answers the question, "How can a person speak a word of prophecy Sunday night when Sunday morning he kicked his cat and yelled at his wife? How can he speak with spiritual authority one minute and be so carnal the next?"

We see Peter doing the same thing. One minute he had revelation from the Father—genuine, true revelation, acknowledged by Jesus. The next, he spoke in the flesh. This teaches me to say, "I'm going to listen to what you're saying, even though two weeks ago you said something dumb." Gang, the frailty of humanity is such that we all can move into times of revelation and deep understanding—then moments later be off the wall and out to lunch.

Matthew 16:24

Then said Jesus unto his disciples, If any man will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

Taking up one's cross doesn't mean suffering from hay fever, foot problems, a heart murmur, or even cancer. Taking up your cross means that you identify with Jesus to the point of suffering and shame, rejection, and perhaps even death. Taking up your cross is something you choose to do, not something you put up with. It's a choice to deny yourself, a determination that, no matter what, you'll stand for Jesus.

Matthew 16:25, 26

For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will lose his life for my sake shall find it. For what is a man profited, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

Here's the irony: The more you live for yourself, the more miserable you'll be. But the more you say, "Lord, I'm going to live for You completely, wholeheartedly, and totally," the more abundant your life will be both now and eternally. If you think back on the happiest times of your life, you will most likely find they were when you were really going for it in Jesus—when He was the priority in your life and the passion of your heart.

Matthew 16:27

For the Son of man shall come in the glory of his Father with his angels; and then he shall reward every man according to his works.

If you take up your cross and follow Jesus, you'll be rewarded in the ages to come as well as presently.

Matthew 16:28

Verily I say unto you, There be some standing here, which shall not taste of death, till they see the Son of man coming in his kingdom.

"Wait," you say, "the disciples are all dead and Jesus' kingdom hasn't come yet. Did Jesus make a mistake?"

Stay tuned. The answer lies in chapter 17.

JUST JESUS
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 16:13–19

As we did every year for his birthday, my son Peter John and I traveled to the Bay Area one August to see the Oakland A's battle the Cleveland Indians. Quite honestly, however, although taking in a ballgame had become a tradition for Peter and me, I wasn't sure I'd ever go again. You see, I had some big problems with big-league baseball.

> Every time I went to the coliseum, I was asked for money. And none of the people sitting next to me introduced themselves. The manager never paid a call on me, never welcomed me to the coliseum, and didn't even know my name. And then there were all those hypocrites in the stands, like the ladies polishing their nails and talking about what everyone was wearing. Behind me were some fanatics who were worse than the hypocrites. Every time Jose Canseco got on base, they stood up, cheered, and looked silly. And the umpires? Some of their calls were ridiculous. I'm sure I know more about baseball than they do. As for Peter, I didn't want to force him to go to major-league baseball games any more. I thought I'd let him decide for himself when he got older.

Now, if someone said that, we would think he was crazy. Those reasons are all bogus. And yet, why is it that no one protests when those same objections are raised concerning church? Those are the exact reasons people give for not going to church: "People are too fanatical and too hypocritical; the pastor talks too much about money, and he didn't call on me; the people weren't friendly. I'll let my own kids decide eventually."

Our generation, it seems, has rejected church. In fact, I remember seeing a bumper sticker in the '60s that sort of summed up our generational mentality: "Jesus, Yes. Church, No." And a lot of people are in that place. "Yeah, I'm into Jesus, but I'm not into the church. No way."

I'm here to say that I am really into the Church. You might think, Well of course you are. You're a pastor. But let me tell you, I am not into the church because I'm a pastor. I am a pastor because I am into the church.

The passage before us in Matthew 16 is very important, for it is the first time Jesus Christ uses the word "church." There is a principle of hermeneutics called the Principle of First Mention, which says: You will usually find key foundational understandings about a subject in the first place it is mentioned. Thus, when Jesus first mentions the church in Matthew 16, we find three reasons why it is essential.

Jesus Takes Pride in His Church

. . . Upon this rock I will build my church . . .

Matthew 16:18

The language is important. It speaks of a possessiveness, of an intimacy with us. Jesus didn't say, "I will build a church," or "I'll put up with the Church." He said, "I will build My church." Jesus is proud of His people.

> For both he that sanctifieth [Jesus] and they who are sanctified [us] are all of one: for which cause he is not ashamed to call them brethren, Saying, I will declare thy name unto my brethren, in the midst of the church will I sing praise unto thee.
> Hebrews 2:11, 12

The writer of Hebrews declares Jesus is proud of us. Not ashamed of us, He sings praise to the Father right along with us in the midst of the congregation. Why isn't He ashamed of us? Because He sees our potential. When Jesus first called Peter, He said, "I call you Petros, "Small Rock," because I'm going to change you from one who is unsteady to someone who's solid, stable, and useful." Jesus doesn't see us with our present flaws, but in our potential usefulness.

Secondly, He sees us prophetically. Because we are already seated with Christ in the heavenly places (Ephesians 2:6), He sees us as already perfected.

Thirdly, He sees us positionally. Jesus sees us robed in His righteousness and washed with His blood. Our sins, failures, and shortcomings are completely out of His sight and gone from His memory.

So He looks at us potentially, prophetically, and positionally, and He sees us as perfect. Incredible! This past week the Lord has dealt very deeply in my own heart along these lines, telling me to look not on the outward appearance, but on the heart—the way He looks at me. I have discovered I have a tendency to judge people according to their actions, but to judge myself according to my intentions. And the Lord spoke to my heart, saying,

“Jon, your world would be a whole lot sweeter if you reversed that. Judge yourself by what you do, but judge others by what they meant.” Wouldn’t it be radical if we looked at people that way? At their intentions rather than their actions? That’s the way Jesus looks at His church. He says, “I see your hearts, and I’m proud of you.”

Jesus Prevails Through His Church

. . . And the gates of hell shall not prevail against it.

Matthew 16:18

For many years, a lot of us thought that the church was a refuge, a fortress where we could hole up until the Lord came back. The gates of hell would not prevail against us if we huddled together within the church singing, "Hold the Fort till the Lord Comes." But that's not what Jesus meant. Gates don't prevail in and of themselves. How many of you have ever been attacked by a gate?

No. Jesus is saying, "The gates of hell will not hold back My church. I am going to prevail through My church. I will storm the gates of hell, where people have been held in bondage, where there has been darkness, discouragement, disease, and death. I will prevail through My church." When Jesus wants to touch someone in love or talk to someone about salvation, He storms the gates of hell through us, His church.

Jesus Protects by His Church

> And I will give unto thee the keys of the kingdom of heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt lose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.
>
> Matthew 16:19

Dr. Kenneth Wuest gives this proper translation: "Whatever shalt be loosed on earth shalt be loosed even as it is in heaven." Jesus protects by His church, giving her the keys of His kingdom.

If you look at my wife's key chain, you will see keys identical to those on my key chain. I'm her bridegroom. She's my bride. And she has the same keys I do. Why? Because we share authority. We rule together over our Volkswagen fleet and our house. We are one.

So, too, Jesus Christ, the Head, has given His bride, the church, the keys to His kingdom. What does this mean? In Matthew 18 and John 20, this same concept is reiterated. Matthew 18 deals with relationships, while John 20 deals with the forgiveness and the retaining of sin. What Jesus is saying is, "I'm giving authority to the church, to bring together or to loosen, even as it is happening in heaven."

If people within the church are having problems with one another, they are to work them out individually. But if they can't, it's a matter for the church to deal with corporately. It's not that we make those decrees ourselves, but through the Word by the Spirit, the church can speak with authority, unlocking God's truth and revealing God's heart. You see, those who say, "I don't need church. I'll just do my own thing. I've got my own ideas about the gospel and about worship," are vulnerable to anyone who comes along saying, "Let's go to Guyana, or to Waco, and we'll start a whole new movement. Who cares about church history? Who cares about theology? Who cares about collegiality? We'll do our own thing."

That's what happened with Jim Jones and David Koresh. Hundreds were killed because they strayed from the protection that comes from the church, the authority of binding and loosing. And thus, there was death. Any Christian who ignores the church will become vulnerable to needless bruises and wounds. The question then arises, “Why have so many people in our generation rejected the church?” I suggest one reason:

Jesus Is Not the Priority of His Church

Whom do men say that I the Son of man am?

Matthew 16:13

Jesus had come to Caesarea Philippi, which is located twenty-five miles north of the Sea of Galilee. At Caesarea Philippi, where the waters of the Jordan begin, there is a massive rock face—sort of like a miniature El Capitan. It's one of the prettiest spots I've seen anywhere in the world. There, Jesus gathered His boys and asked this question: "Whom do men say I am?"

His disciples then repeated the theories concerning Him that were floating around Israel.

"Some say You're John the Baptist."

> John the Baptist came on the scene, saying, "Repent! The kingdom of God is at hand. You soldiers, quit oppressing the people. You tax collectors, quit extorting from the people. You fathers, be good to your children. Get it together. Repent."
>
> When Jesus appeared, He began His ministry with the same words: Repent, for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand. So, reasoned some, because of His moral teaching and call to repentance, Jesus must be John the Baptist, returned from the dead.

Others said, "No. He's Elijah, returned from heaven."

> Haven't you seen the miracles He's done? The lepers are cleansed. The blind see. The lame walk. Miracles happen. He must be Elijah.

Others said, "No. He's Jeremiah."

> Haven't you seen the care He shows to the lost, how they move His heart, how He weeps over them? He must be Jeremiah, the weeping prophet who cared so tenderly for the lost sheep of Israel.

"No," others said. "He must be that Prophet," referring to the prophet promised in Deuteronomy 18:15, who would come and fully explain the Law of Moses.

Scripture records that the people marveled at the gracious words of Jesus, saying, "No man speaks like this man." Truly, the common people heard Him gladly. Surely He must be "that Prophet."

As I look around the Rogue Valley in Oregon, the country, and the world, I see churches built upon one of those four misconceptions.

There are those who say, "We're going to build our church on John the Baptist. That's who Jesus is. We'll call it First Moral Majority Church. We'll tell our community to repent. We'll picket 7–11. We'll write our congressman. We'll organize and let our voice be heard in the community. We'll tell people to get it together morally. And we'll meet together to activate believers, to mobilize Christians, to get them going."

Others say, "No, no, no. Our church is going to be built upon Elijah. That's who Jesus is. We'll call our church Miracle Center. It will be filled with miracles, signs, and wonders. People will see the glory and power of God fall at every single meeting. It's going to be heavy!"

Others say, "No, no, no. Our church is going to be built upon Jeremiah. That's who Jesus is. We'll call our church The Evangelical Expression. We'll have a million-dollar mission budget. We'll offer classes in door-to-door evangelism. We'll spread throughout the community, expand throughout the world globally, and we'll reach the world evangelistically. Like Jeremiah, we'll weep over the lost."

"No, no, no," others say. "Our church is going to be built upon That Prophet. We'll have three-hour marathon Bible studies Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday nights. We'll have seminars and syllabi. We'll become hermeneutically flawless, exegetically excellent. We'll offer Hebrew, Greek, Chaldean, and Aramaic. We'll parse each verb. We'll know each doctrine thoroughly. We'll become a great teaching center."

Look at our text. Jesus responded to none of these suggestions. It was only when Peter said, "Thou art the Christ—the Christos, the Anointed One, the Messiah, the Son of the living God,"—that Jesus said, "Upon this rock I'll build My church."

The church—not a platform for ministry, political activity, or intellectual curiosity—which simply says, "We want to know Jesus personally," is the church Jesus will build. When people say, "Jesus, You're not simply a motivator for us politically, a teacher to us intellectually, a power for us miraculously, or a program for us in mission ministry. You're everything. You're all there is. We just want to know You. We want to love You. We want to walk with You, learn about You, and become more like You," Jesus will build His church upon their confession.

And when a group of people come together and say, "Jesus, we love You. We're impressed with You. We want to learn of You and walk with You," guess what happens? The community around such a group begins to change.

A sheriff in Jackson County, Oregon, who was not a believer wrote me saying that as far as he is concerned, Applegate Christian Fellowship was the best thing that ever happened to curb the drug problem there in the Applegate Valley because so many of the top drug producers in the valley have become converts. Were we marching against marijuana? Were we politically active? No. It's just that wherever Jesus is, the surroundings will be influenced very definitely.

Where Jesus builds His Church, there will be signs and wonders. Power will be experienced—not with fanfare or for itself—but in a supernaturally, natural way.

Where Jesus is the Christos, loved and honored, there will be evangelism, not because of a need to be a part of some program for ego gratification, but rather because people will want to share what they have discovered in Christ. They will be in love with Him and will find themselves talking about Him, taking every opportunity to share the One who means so much to them.

The person who is rock-solid in this life and on into eternity will be the one who says, "Jesus, it's You personally. Not ministry. Not study. Not anything but You. I appreciate You, I love You, and I'm committing myself to You. Jesus, You're everything to me."

That's my prayer for us. That's my prayer for you.

In Jesus' Name.

17 At the close of chapter 16, Jesus told His disciples that some of them would see the Kingdom before they died. Over the centuries, many have suggested that since all of the disciples died without witnessing His return, Jesus was amiss when He said this. Thus, they conclude, Jesus was actually fallible. Of course, this is blasphemy, for chapter 17 opens with three of His disciples about to see the glory of the kingdom . . .

Matthew 17:1

And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart.

Once again, we see Jesus calling His disciples apart. It has been often said that if we don't come apart, we'll fall apart. We need to get away from the trials and the daily routine of life to retreat into a "high mountain" where we can be apart with Jesus lest we fall apart under the pressures of the world. Jesus took Peter, James, and John up the mountain. Scripture records three times when Jesus took these same three and ministered to them in very unique ways. Interestingly, each of those occasions dealt with death.

The first time Jesus singled out Peter, James, and John, He took them into the house of a man whose daughter had died. After moving out the mockers, Jesus brought the young girl back to life, and Peter, James, and John saw that He was victorious over death (Luke 8:49–55).

On a second occasion, Jesus would take them into the Garden of Gethsemane. As He prayed, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from Me; nevertheless, not My will but thine be done," Peter, James, and John would understand that He was submitted to death (see Matthew 26:37–39).

And here in Matthew 17, Jesus takes the three up the mountain where they will see Him glorified in death.

I believe Peter, James, and John needed these special times of instruction concerning death because these three disciples would each have a very unique encounter with death.

Peter would be the first disciple to be told of his death. In John 21, Jesus said, "Peter, they're going to stretch out your hands and carry you where you don't want to go." And that is exactly what happened when Peter was crucified upside down.

James would be the first disciple put to death, sawed in half lengthwise by his persecutors.

John would be the last of the disciples to die. Banished to the seemingly God-forsaken island of Patmos, it was a ninety-year-old John who received the Book of Revelation.

The Lord uniquely prepared Peter, James, and John for what each of them would face. And He will do the same for you. He will prepare you through Bible studies, radio programs, friends, and books for what lies ahead for you personally. It's amazing to me how I'll study or hear something only to discover a week later that a situation arises in which I need that exact information. Remain sensitive to His voice, and then see the Lord's faithfulness in preparing you for the future.

Matthew 17:2 (a)
And was transfigured before them . . .

The Greek word translated "transfigured" is metamorphoo, from which we get our word "metamorphosis"—the same word used to describe what happens to a caterpillar inside a cocoon.

Matthew 17:2 (b)
. . . and his face did shine as the sun, and his raiment was white as the light.

After Moses received the Law on Mount Sinai, his face began to shine. But as time went on, it began to fade because the glory of Moses was a reflected glory (2 Corinthians 3:13). Jesus, on the other hand, shone not with a reflected glory, but with a radiant glory. As the Light of the world, the light emanated from within Himself (John 8:12).

Matthew 17:3–4 (a)

And, behold, there appeared unto them Moses and Elias talking with him. Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here . . .

Days earlier, as Jesus talked about suffering and death, Peter said, "Lord, be it far from Thee. This shall not be" (see Matthew 16:21, 22). Here, however, as he sees the glory of the Transfiguration, even though death was again the topic of conversation (Luke 9:31), Peter says, "Wow! It's good that we're here."

Matthew 17:4 (b)

. . . if thou wilt, let us make here three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias.

This is one of many arguments against reincarnation. Moses and Elijah returned not as cows, butterflies, or someone else living in some other time. They returned as Moses and Elijah. It is also interesting to me that Peter recognized them instantly. There is no record of a formal introduction, no record of Jesus saying, "Peter, meet Moses. Moses, Peter. Elijah, Peter. Peter, Elijah." No, there was simply immediate recognition. This tells me that when we get to heaven, we'll recognize everyone there. No need for introductions, no need for nametags, and no forgetting of names. Won't that be wonderful?

Matthew 17:5

While he yet spake, behold, a bright cloud overshadowed them: and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him.

"Peter, I'm going to interrupt you once again," said God the Father from the cloud over the mountain. "You want to build three booths, but you can't put the Law and the Prophets on the same plane as My Son."

Matthew 17:6, 7

And when the disciples heard it, they fell on their face, and were sore afraid. And Jesus came and touched them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

Whereas the voice of God knocks people down in brokenness, Jesus Christ—the Word made flesh—picks them up with tenderness. As I listen to the voice of God thundering from Mount Sinai, "Thou Shalt Not," I fall on my face in humility. Then Jesus comes and says, "Arise. Be not afraid." I'm so thankful for Jesus Christ. Were it not for Him, I would still be on my face. So would you. He is our salvation.

Matthew 17:8

And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only.

They saw Jesus only. That's the key. May we not try to keep the law. May we not try to follow the prophets. May we have eyes for Jesus only.

The Transfiguration verifies that for thirty-three years, Jesus moved through life flawlessly. He was tempted in all points as we are, yet remained without sin (Hebrews 4:15). And here He is, radiant in His transfiguration. I firmly believe that, had He so chosen, Jesus could have launched right off that mountain into heaven, saying, "So long, gang. I came and showed you that man can live sinlessly. Don't condemn or indict Me for giving you an impossible task. I came and proved it could be done." At that point, the world would have been damned, and God could not have been held accountable for being unfair. But instead of launching into heaven, what did Jesus do? He came down from Mount Hermon to climb Mount Calvary.

Matthew 17:9, 10

And as they came down from the mountain, Jesus charged them, saying, Tell the vision to no man, until the Son of man be risen again from the dead. And his disciples asked him, saying, Why then say the scribes that Elias must first come?

Malachi prophesied that Elijah would come before Messiah appeared (4:5). Believing Jesus to be Messiah, the disciples asked Him why Elijah hadn't yet made his appearance.

Matthew 17:11–13

And Jesus answered and said unto them, Elias truly shall first come, and restore all things. But I say unto you, That Elias is come already, and they knew him not, but have done unto him whatsoever they listed. Likewise shall also the Son of man suffer of them. Then the disciples understood that he spake unto them of John the Baptist.

Elijah had already come—in the spirit and power of John the Baptist.

Matthew 17:14, 15 (a)

And when they were come to the multitude, there came to him a certain man, kneeling down to him, and saying, Lord, have mercy on my son: for he is lunatic, and sore vexed . . .

The word "lunatic" literally means "smitten by the moon." People in Eastern cultures believed that the moon shining on one's face would drive a person crazy. Perhaps it was in reference to this belief that the Lord made a beautiful promise in Psalm 121:6 to be our covering by night.

Matthew 17:15 (b)

. . . for ofttimes he falleth into the fire, and oft into the water.

This man's son was falling into the fire and into the water in an attempt to kill himself. So too, we see a dramatic rise in teenage suicide today. The solution to teenage suicide begins with the understanding that it is a spiritual rather than a social problem.

Even Woman's Day magazine, a secular publication states: "For many teenagers, Satan has become part of their daily lives. Rock lyrics glorify him. Werewolves leer from T-shirts. Satanic symbols decorate jewelry. Some kids just want to shock adults, but for a disturbed many, the attraction to satanic ritual is great and deadly."

Matthew 17:16 (a)
And I brought him to thy disciples . . .

Realizing his son was in trouble, this dad did a very wise thing. He brought his boy to Jesus.

Matthew 17:16 (b)
. . . and they could not cure him.

I appreciate this father because he didn't give up, even though the disciples were unable to help. So often people say, "I took my kid to see this therapist, that counselor, or that minister, but nothing's happening. I quit." This dad didn't. And his persistence was soon to be rewarded.

Matthew 17:17, 18

Then Jesus answered and said, O faithless and perverse generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him hither to me. And Jesus rebuked the devil; and he departed out of him: and the child was cured from that very hour.

Mom and Dad, you have the responsibility to bring your child to Jesus. Pray for him constantly. Talk to him continually. Bring him to fellowship regularly. How many must die before we understand that the solution lies not in dealing with the drug lords in Columbia or banning music through legislation in Washington? The solution lies in bringing our kids to Jesus.

Matthew 17:19, 20

Then came the disciples to Jesus apart, and said, Why could not we cast him out? And Jesus said unto them, Because of your unbelief: for verily I say unto you, If ye have faith as a grain of mustard seed, ye shall say unto this mountain, Remove hence to yonder place; and it shall remove; and nothing shall be impossible unto you.

"Why couldn't we cast out the demon?" the disciples asked.

"Lack of faith," Jesus said. "If you had believed in your heart, spoken with your mouth, and expected things to happen, the landscape would have changed. Mountains would have moved."

Matthew 17:21
Howbeit this kind goeth not out but by prayer and fasting.

Mark this, Mom and Dad; remember this, Grandma and Grandpa next time your child or grandchild is in trouble: There is a powerful interaction between prayer and fasting. Prayer attaches us to God; fasting detaches us from the flesh. The disciples, no doubt, would have been thinking, This kind does not go out but by prayer and fasting? How were we to know we would be faced with a lunatic? We didn't have time for prayer and fasting! And that's exactly the point. Jesus is calling for a lifestyle of prayer and fasting, not an emergency session. Had the disciples been praying and fasting all along, they could have spoken the word of faith that would have resulted in deliverance and salvation.

Maybe you're smugly saying, "I'm glad my son, daughter, or grandchildren don't have problems." Please be wiser than that, dear people, because we do not know the battles they're facing or the strategy of the enemy being plotted in the boardroom of hell for their souls. Satan is a master strategist who invades the lives of our loved ones at the most opportune times—perhaps when we least expect it. Prayer and fasting should be a part of our lifestyle because we don't know what tomorrow holds.

If I hear Jesus right, He's saying, "It's too late to pray and fast when the emergency is before you. You must develop a life of prayer and fasting so that when the problem surfaces, you're already prepared." I am reminded of Job. Every morning, he sacrificed an ox for each one of his kids because "It may be that my sons have sinned, and cursed God in their hearts" (see Job 1:5).

What a glorious privilege we have as parents. We can do more than just hope our kids aren't sucked into drugs or into demonic activity. We can seek the Father fervently. We can fast and pray faithfully. We can take our kids to Jesus continually.

Why weren't the disciples praying and fasting? A possible answer is that they were jealous and had let down their guard, saying, "How come Peter, James, and John always get to see the miracles? Why should we even bother praying? It's obvious Jesus has His favorites." Maybe you feel the same way from time to time. Maybe you wonder why the Lord seems to use everyone else but you. And if you're not careful, that's when you stop praying and fasting. Then the moment comes when you need the power of the Spirit, faith in your heart, weaponry for warfare—and you come up empty.

Matthew 17:22, 23

And while they abode in Galilee, Jesus said unto them, The Son of man shall be betrayed into the hands of men: And they shall kill him, and the third day he shall be raised again. And they were exceeding sorry.

The disciples were "exceeding sorry" because they only heard part of the story. They heard Jesus say He would be betrayed and killed, but they didn't hear Him say the third day He would be raised again. All they heard was death, betrayal, and tragedy. And that's just like us. When someone dies, my first response is one of deep grief and sorrow. While that's understandable, it's only part of the story. If that person knew the Lord, he is in heaven. He is where we long to be. Sorrow and grief are completely understandable responses to tragedy. But if we take into account the whole story, there will also be glory.

Matthew 17:24

And when they were come to Capernaum, they that received tribute money came to Peter, and said, Doth not your master pay tribute?

As they entered Capernaum, tax collectors approached the disciples. They were not raising money for the Roman Empire or for the political system. They were collecting the temple tax. You see, in Jesus' day, the ministry of the temple was not supported by the tithes and offerings of the people. Rather, as outlined in Exodus 30, every man twenty years of age and older was to pay a half-shekel of silver for atonement lest plague come upon him. This has caused no little controversy in theological circles. Was the law suggesting that a person could buy his salvation? Isn't salvation a free gift? Salvation is indeed free to us, but it was costly for Jesus. Silver being the metal of redemption, the temple tax speaks of the fact that, although salvation is free to us, it cost Jesus His life.

Matthew 17:25 (a)

He saith, Yes. And when he was come into the house, Jesus prevented him . . .

When Peter was on the mountain, the voice of the Father interrupted him. Here in the house, he's interrupted by the Son. I hope you're "interrupt-able." I hope whether you're on the mountain or in the house, the Father and the Son can interrupt your thoughts and activities lest you become dogmatic and rigid.

Matthew 17:25 (b)

. . . saying, What thinkest thou, Simon? of whom do the kings of the earth take custom or tribute? of their own children, or of strangers?

"Tell me, Simon, who does a king tax?" Jesus asked Peter. "Does he tax the strangers—the citizens of the empire—or does he go through the castle knocking on his kids' doors, saying, 'Pay up, kids. We've got to keep this kingdom going'?" The answer is obvious. No king taxes his own children. He taxes the strangers, the citizens of the nation.

Matthew 17:26

Peter saith unto him, Of strangers. Jesus saith unto him, Then are the children free.

In other words, Jesus said to Peter, "Should we be taxed if I am the King and you are My child? Does that make sense?"

Matthew 17:27 (a)

Notwithstanding, lest we should offend them, go thou to the sea, and cast an hook . . .

"Peter, go throw your line in." This command in itself would have been most curious because professional fishermen like Peter didn't use a hook and line. That was rookie equipment. It would be like Jose Canseco using a batting tee. Real fishermen used nets and boats. But Peter humbly obeyed. And I can see him walking along the shore, carrying his little pole and tackle box, as his colleagues looked at each other and whispered, "What's he doing?"

Matthew 17:27 (b)

. . . and take up the fish that first cometh up; and when thou hast opened his mouth, thou shalt find a piece of money: that take, and give unto them for me and thee.

"Open the mouth of the first fish you catch, Peter, and you'll find a stater —a full shekel—enough tax for you and for Me," Jesus said. Thus, tucked away in this chapter that spans the heights of the Transfiguration and the depths of the Cross, we find this simple story about a fisherman, a fish, and a coin.

For topical study of Matthew 17:27, see "The Fisherman Casting His Care" below.

THE FISHERMAN
CASTING HIS CARE
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 17:27

The passage before us speaks to me in a number of ways and interests me on several levels. First of all, it is the only miracle Jesus ever did that dealt with money.

Second, it is the only miracle through which He did something for Himself. All too often, Christian TV and current books on faith say, "Want your needs met? Plant a seed in our ministry and watch what will happen to you financially." Folks, that's the opposite of what Jesus said and did. Although He had the power and authority to turn stones to bread, He refused to cater to His own needs (Matthew 4:3, 4).

Third, this was the only miracle Jesus did that dealt with a single fish. Other times Jesus did miracles with fish, it was always with multitudes of fish as His disciples either hauled them in (Luke 5:6) or gave them out (Matthew 14:19). Many commentators try to explain away the feeding of the five thousand by saying that the multitude was fed simply by people sharing the lunches they had packed. So, too, had Peter used a net in the account before us, commentators would probably say, "As Peter was fishing, he caught some fish, an old boot, and a few coins in his net. Therefore, the miracle of the coin and the fish was nothing more than the beautiful miracle of God's provision in the commonplace." But because Peter used a hook and a line and caught one fish with one shekel in its mouth, there's no way to rationalize such a miracle.

Fourth, the Lord provided the coin in the fish solely for Peter. It was one of a number of miracles done specifically for him.

Healing of His Mother-in-Law

We read in Mark that so complete was Peter's mother-in-law's healing, she immediately began to minister to those around her (Mark 1:31). So, too, maybe you've seen a lot of activity at church—people directing traffic on rainy mornings, tending crying babies in the nursery; or counseling into the wee hours of the morning. "Are they crazy?" you wonder. No, they're not crazy. They've simply been touched by the Lord. He removed the fear and the fever of eternal damnation when He saved their souls. Thus, like Peter's mother-in-law, they have no other choice but to serve Him by ministering to others.

A Boatload of Fish

Luke tells us that when pressed by the crowds while teaching on the seashore, Jesus borrowed Peter's boat (Luke 5:3). Using the water as a natural amplifier, He spoke from the boat to the crowd gathered on the shore. When He had finished speaking, He said, "Here's your boat back, Peter. Launch out into the deep and let down your nets." So Peter sailed to the deep, let down his nets, and the haul was so large that the boat almost sank.

What does this tell me? First, it tells me we can't outgive God. If you give to Him of your resources, your energy, your ability, or your money, He'll never "owe you one." If you let Him borrow your boat, He'll fill it with fish. Second, it tells me that the Lord will sometimes whisper in my ear, "Launch out to the deep. Go deeper than you've gone before in faith, in understanding, in praise, and in prayer. Go deeper. That's where the fish are."

Could that be a word from the Lord for you? Could the Lord be saying to some of you right now, "Launch out into the deep water. Go deeper in Me"?

Walking on Water

> Crossing the Sea of Galilee, Peter and the disciples were struggling in a storm when suddenly Someone came towards them, walking on the water.
>
> "It's a ghost!" they cried.
>
> "Be of good cheer," Jesus said. "It is I. Be not afraid."
>
> "If that's You, Lord, bid me come," said Peter.
>
> "Come, Peter," answered Jesus.
>
> Peter climbed out of the boat and began to walk on water. But you know the story. As soon as he took his eyes off Jesus, he began to sink.
> "Lord, save me," he cried. And Jesus stretched out His hand, grabbed Peter, and put him back in the boat (see Matthew 14).

I like this story because sometimes I get tired of the boat I'm in and weary of the disciples with whom I'm rowing. "Lord, get me out of here," I cry. "Even if it means going out where the waves are pounding and the wind is howling, get me out of this boat. I'll go anywhere." Sometimes I step out on my own and sink down in the waves only to have the Lord pick me up and put me right back in the same boat. As a result, I'm beginning to learn that God puts us in fixes to fix us. And if I get out of the boat to try to fix the fix God put me in, He'll have to put me in another fix to fix the fix He wanted to fix in the first place!

A Sword and an Ear

Jesus had taken Peter, James, and John into the Garden of Gethsemane to pray with Him the night before His crucifixion. But having fallen asleep, they were awakened by the sounds of Roman soldiers marching. Before Jesus could say, "Peter, put away your sword," Peter had sliced off the ear of Malchus, the high priest's servant. Jesus then picked up the severed ear and placed it back on the side of Malchus' head (John 18).

I wonder how many times we use the sword of the Spirit and hurt people in the process. How many times do we quote Scripture and recite verses only to bloody and beat people with our spirituality? If you've unsheathed your sword to cause hurt and damage to others, put it away. The last miracle Jesus ever performed was to heal one who had been hurt by the sword of His own disciple.

Praise, Prayer, and Peace

Some time later, we meet Peter again in another very difficult situation. In Acts 12, we read that Herod had sawn James, the brother of John, in half lengthwise. When Herod saw that this pleased the Jews, he imprisoned Peter as well. In other words, Peter was about to die. Yet we read that he was asleep between two guards—sound asleep and at peace. How could this be when the next day he knew he would either be sawn in half or beheaded?

Peter would later pen these words: "Casting all your care upon him for He careth for you" (see 1 Peter 5:7). The Greek word translated "cast" is a word that describes the process of rolling a heavy object like a stone or a wheel up a hill. Thus, "casting our care" means rolling our care upon Him. Now, if you roll a rock up a hill, what will happen? The rock will roll down again. People say, "I've prayed about that problem. I've rolled it upon Him. Why does it keep returning?"

Listen carefully. Scripture declares that "casting" is a process that happens continually. That is, you roll your care upon Him, and then it comes rolling back. You roll it on Him again, and it comes rolling back. You have peace for an hour, a day, or a month, and then you're troubled, perplexed, and anxious again. Why does God want us to roll our cares upon Him if they're only going to roll back upon us?

The story is told that centuries ago, in the city of Athens, there lived a man named Milo who was the strongest man in the world. How did he get so strong? When he was a young man, one of his cows gave birth to a calf. Every day, Milo picked up that calf, put it on his shoulders, and walked around his property. At first, it was relatively easy. But every day the calf got bigger and bigger, until one day, Milo was carrying an ox on his shoulders. You see, as sure as the calf was growing, so was Milo's strength and stamina.

I'm convinced the Lord wants us to be spiritual Milos. He says, "I'm going to allow this problem to come rolling back on you after a day or two because I want you to keep pushing it toward Me. And every time you do—as you commune with Me, wait upon Me, and talk to Me—you will gain strength. So keep rolling."

Clovis Chapman, a pioneer aviator, was one of the first men to attempt a solo flight around the world. During his journey, after a brief stop in Fremont, California, he heard the sound of gnawing directly behind him. Listening carefully, Clovis realized there was a rat in the cockpit, chewing on a cable. Knowing he couldn't leave the controls to catch the rat, he thought, "My cables will be destroyed. It's all over." But then he had an idea. Pulling the throttle back, the plane rose to five thousand feet and then to ten thousand feet. At twelve thousand feet, Clovis listened and heard nothing. You see, remembering rodents need a high proportion of oxygen, he took his plane where the oxygen was thin, and the rat died.

That's what it means to cast your care upon Him. When you feel a rat gnawing within you, an anxiety overwhelming you, or a concern or a burden pressing on you, kick back and cruise up. In the rarefied atmosphere of praise and prayer, the enemy can't survive. That's what Peter found as he lay sound asleep between two guards.

Truly the Lord does care for me, he must have thought. My mother-in-law was sick and He healed her. I wasn't catching any fish, and He filled my boat. I gave the wrong answer to some tax collectors, and He got me out of that jam. I chopped off someone's ear when I shouldn't have, and He healed it. And now that I'm in prison, I'll just trust Him. He's seen me through time and time and time again. So I'll just cast my care upon Him.

And so can you.

18 In chapter 17, the disciples saw Jesus shine miraculously with kingdom light. Here in chapter 18, they will hear Him speak practically about kingdom life.

Matthew 18:1

At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the kingdom of heaven?

According to Luke 9:46, the disciples here are actually arguing about who is the greatest in the kingdom of which they had just been given a sneak preview.

Matthew 18:2

And Jesus called a little child unto him, and set him in the midst of them.

This shows me something of the personality and character of Jesus. He called a little child to Him, and the child came readily. If you go to the mall and watch parents lining up their kids to sit on Santa's lap, you will invariably see tears and terror on the faces of the children. Told to sit on the lap of a big man with a big beard and black boots, it's no wonder they're fearful! But there is never an indication that kids were afraid of Jesus. There was something pure, gentle, and lovely about Him that made children come to Him rather than run from Him.

Matthew 18:3

And said, Verily I say unto you, Except ye be converted, and become as little children, ye shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven.

"You're asking who is the greatest?" Jesus said. "Unless you become like a child, you will not enter into the kingdom." How were the disciples to be childlike? First, they were to be childlike in sincerity. The word "sincere" literally means "without wax" and referred to the practice of merchants in Bible times who patched broken or chipped pieces of pottery with wax. If a vessel was not "sincere," an unsuspecting buyer would take it home and put it on his front porch only to see the wax melt and the vessel break in the heat of the sun.

Second, the disciples were to be childlike in sensitivity.

I remember once when Peter-John was about six, I was somewhat upset with him. Trying to control my feelings as best I could, I began to talk with him. "Daddy, you're mad," he said.

"No, I'm not, Peter," I argued.

"Well, your eyebrows, they're mad," he said.

Kids are sensitive indeed. They can read us like a book!

Finally, the disciples were to be childlike in simplicity.

I read about a kindergarten class on a field trip to the post office. As the postmaster pointed out the pictures of the Ten Most Wanted Men in America, one of the kids said, "Those are criminals?"

"Yes," answered the postmaster.

"Bad guys?"

"That's right."

"Well, then, why didn't you just keep them when you took their pictures?"

Those childlike qualities of sincerity, sensitivity, and simplicity are key ingredients of kingdom life. David wrote in Psalm 131, "I will not look into things that are too great for me, but will behave myself quietly as a weaned child." In other words, "I'm not going to get spun out or hung up on things that are too lofty or too great. Like a weaned child, I'll just keep it simple." A weaned child is neither an infant screaming for milk nor an adult checking out the refrigerator wondering who's going to pay the bills. A weaned child neither cries nor analyzes. He simply trusts that his father and mother will take care of him. And that quality is what Jesus held up to the disciples as a model.

Matthew 18:4

Whosoever therefore shall humble himself as this little child, the same is greatest in the kingdom of heaven.

We must guard against the tendencies of cynicism and sophistication and remain like children if we want to be great in the kingdom.

A distinguished elderly gentleman walked into a toy store and saw a Lionel train going around the track. With a sparkle in his eye, he said to the salesgirl, "I'll take one."

"Oh, your grandson will love it!" she replied.

"You know, you're absolutely right!" he said. "Make that two."

There is something good, Jesus is saying, about retaining a childlike mentality.

At a testimony meeting, a multimillionaire said, "When I was eighteen years old, I heard a missionary speak about the need in Africa. Having recently given my heart to Jesus, I was touched deeply and reached into my pocket for the last five dollars I had to my name. That was the turning point in my walk with God, and He has blessed me ever since."

"Ooh" and "Aaah," said the congregation, until one elderly sister stood up in the back row and said, "I dare you to do it again."

We might say, "Oh yes, there was a time when I was like a child. When I first heard the gospel, I approached Jesus simply and openly as I came forward at a meeting." Do it again! That's what Jesus is saying here. We need to be in the place where we're continually excited about the Word and enjoying the gospel in its simplicity and beauty. Jesus said if you want to be great in the kingdom, humble yourself as a child once again.

Matthew 18:5

And whoso shall receive one such little child in my name receiveth me.

A number of years ago, a Scottish pastor stood before his congregation and resigned, saying, "In the past two years, I have seen only one conversion in this congregation: wee Bobby Moffatt. With such little fruit, I can no longer serve in this ministry." And he walked away from the pulpit a broken man. Little did he know that wee Bobby Moffatt grew up to be Robert Moffatt, the missionary who opened the entire continent of Africa to the gospel of Jesus Christ.

If you are teaching Sunday school right now, it's very possible that you have a "wee Bobby Moffatt" in your class. If you work with kids, realize that Jesus places a very high value on children. He says if you receive them, you receive Him.

Matthew 18:6

But whoso shall offend one of these little ones which believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea.

I believe this verse should be written on every schoolteacher's desk. The word "offend" means "to throw off course." In other words, Jesus says, "If you cause one of these little ones to question Me or to be thrown off course in their walk with Me, it would be better for you to drown." This would have made a definite impact on Jesus' audience because the Jewish people of that time had a genuine fear of the open ocean. Yes, they were fishermen, but only on the Sea of Galilee. The Jews have never been a seafaring people. In fact, unlike other coastal countries of their day, they refused to use drowning as capital punishment because of their fear of the sea. Thus, Jesus was giving a very vivid and very real description of terror. "If you cause these little guys to stumble," He said, "you're in grave danger."

Matthew 18:7

Woe unto the world because of offences! for it must needs be that offences come; but woe to that man by whom the offence cometh!

The first "woe" is a lamentation. The second one is a condemnation. In other words, Jesus said, "Problems in this world are inevitable. But if people are being derailed in their faith because of your cynicism and unbelief, woe unto you."

Matthew 18:8, 9

Wherefore if thy hand or thy foot offend thee, cut them off, and cast them from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life halt or maimed, rather than having two hands or two feet to be cast into everlasting fire. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out, and cast it from thee: it is better for thee to enter into life with one eye, rather than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire.

"Take heed," Jesus said. "If something you are doing causes offense, deal violently with it. Get it away from you no matter what the price or how painful it may be."

Matthew 18:10

Take heed that ye despise not one of these little ones; for I say unto you, That in heaven their angels do always behold the face of my Father which is in heaven.

Here is where we get the understanding that each child has a guardian angel. Paul points out that when we get to heaven, we will actually judge angels (I Corinthians 6:3). I wonder if part of that might include asking the angel who was "assigned" to you, "Where were you when that baseball hit me in the head?!"

Matthew 18:11

For the Son of man is come to save that which was lost.

Children are lost so easily and disoriented so quickly. Continuing on that theme, Jesus begins to talk about His concern for those who are truly lost—not those who pretend to know where they're going and what they're doing, but those who humbly acknowledge that they're lost and hurting.

Matthew 18:12–14

How think ye? if a man have an hundred sheep, and one of them be gone astray, doth he not leave the ninety and nine, and goeth into the mountains, and seeketh that which is gone astray? And if so be that he find it, verily I say unto you, he rejoiceth more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray. Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these little ones should perish.

This analogy provides some interesting insights into our Lord. First, it tells me that His love is absolutely unconditional. Notice that although the lost sheep was one who had strayed, the shepherd didn't say, "That dumb sheep was off wandering where he shouldn't be. Why wasn't he with the rest of the flock? Well, maybe he'll learn a lesson out there." No, his love was independent of the obedience of the sheep.

So, too, whether you are staying or straying, God's love for you is absolutely unconditional. Then why not stray? Because there are problems out there: wolves, poisonous weeds, and all kinds of dangers that could bruise and break us. Slowly but surely, we're learning that it's safest to stay close to the Shepherd.

Second, His love is individual. He loves each of us as if there were only one of us. I tend to think, "Lord, You have millions and millions of sheep. Billy's always talking to You and working on the next crusade. Mother Teresa, while alive, was up at four o'clock in the morning talking with You daily. And then there's me—the dumb sheep who's strayed." But I'm beginning to understand that the Lord sees people individually. He would have sent His prophets and apostles and recorded the Scriptures just for me. He would have sent His Son just for me. He would have died just for me.

Finally, His love is emotional. When He finds the wandering, straying sheep, what does He do? Does He rebuke him? Lecture him? Shake him? Skin him? No, the Word says He rejoices. When we wander away, and the Lord comes after us and finds us, there follows an emotional outburst not of anger but of joy. He gathers the straying sheep in His arms and rejoices greatly because He loves him deeply.

Keep in mind that this illustration is all in answer to the question: Who is the greatest? Jesus said, "Check out this little child." That's the key. You'll not only enter the kingdom, but you'll be elevated within the kingdom as you continue to humble yourself.

Humility confuses a lot of us because we mistakenly think it means thinking less of ourselves. It doesn't. Humility is not a matter of thinking less of yourself. It's a matter of not thinking of yourself at all. There's a big difference. My saying, "I can't sing. I can't play guitar. I can't fix my car. I can't do anything," is not humility. It's pride because it's egocentric. I'm talking and thinking about me, me, me.

When the Lord called him, Moses said, "No one will listen to me because I stutter."

"Who made your mouth, Moses?" asked the Lord. "I will be with you. Quit stuttering about yourself and look to Me" (see Exodus 4:10–12).

Matthew 18:15–17

Moreover if thy brother shall trespass against thee, go and tell him his fault between thee and him alone: if he shall hear thee, thou hast gained thy brother. But if he will not hear thee, then take with thee one or two more, that in the mouth of two or three witnesses every word may be established. And if he shall neglect to hear them, tell it unto the church: but if he neglect to hear the church, let him be unto thee as an heathen man and a publican.

The first aspect of kingdom life is humility. The second is honesty. If I say I love you, but don't talk with you in honesty when you trespass against me because I'm afraid you won't like me, my love is not real. That would be like a doctor who notices a lump on your body but doesn't want to hurt your feelings by telling you that you need surgery. Love without truth is hypocrisy. But truth without love is brutality. If I speak the truth without love, I leave folks bruised, bloodied, and beaten.

The key is to speak the truth in love (Ephesians 4:15). If there's a trespass, a problem, or a difficulty between us, love requires me to lovingly speak to you about it personally. If you won't listen to what I say about the sin or the trespass, I am to come to you again, bringing one or two witnesses with me. If you won't hear them, I am to go to the church. And if you won't listen to the church, you are to be treated as an outcast. Why? It's not for punishment, but for reconciliation. It's not punitive, but restorative. In chapter 5 of Paul's first Epistle to the Corinthians, he gives the account of a man who, although he was living with his stepmother in immorality, refused to take correction. Paul told the church at Corinth to turn him over to Satan that his flesh might be destroyed but his spirit saved. In other words, "Let him live in the world for a while until he gets so sick of it that his flesh will be destroyed. Then, hopefully he'll come around again and be saved." And that's exactly what happened. He did indeed turn from his sin and return to the Church (2 Corinthians 7:11, 12). Why? Because the church took a strong stand and said, "This can't go on."

Matthew 18:18

Verily I say unto you, Whatsoever ye shall bind on earth shall be bound in heaven: and whatsoever ye shall loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven.

Jesus is saying, "Church, it's your job to bind sin. Sin is bound in heaven. Therefore you have authority to bind it on earth. Righteousness and holiness, mercy and forgiveness are released in heaven. Therefore you have been given authority to release them on earth." Binding and loosing speak of the authority the Church has in dealing with matters where sin is flagrantly, consistently, and obnoxiously practiced. As seen in 1 Corinthians 5, the church has the right to bind sin and then to release forgiveness and restoration following repentance.

Matthew 18:19

Again I say unto you, That if two of you shall agree on earth as touching any thing that they shall ask, it shall be done for them of my Father which is in heaven.

Private prayer is wonderful but I also believe that we need consistent times of prayer with others. Why? First of all, praying with others is motivating. You will pray more if you're involved in a prayer group than you would otherwise. It's like working out. If you work out by yourself, it's real easy to miss week after week. But if three or four guys are working out with you, they provide motivation for you to continue. The same is true of prayer.

Second, praying with others is purifying. When I'm praying in a group, I don't pray selfishly as I can do in my private prayer. In a group, I can't pray, "Lord, smash that guy. Teach that jerk a lesson." That kind of thing just doesn't flow when I'm praying in a circle.

Third, praying with others is confirming. As I pray in a group, if my petition is correct, those around me will say, "Amen, Lord! That's right. Yes, Lord." But if my request is out to lunch, I'll know by their silence that maybe I should reconsider my petition.

Matthew 18:20

For where two or three are gathered together in my name, there am I in the midst of them.

Keep these words of Jesus in the context of dealing honestly with church matters, relationships, and kingdom life. The church should pulsate with power when it comes to dealing with sin and releasing God's mercy with authority. Too often, however, the church is impotent because she fails to recognize Jesus in her midst. Where the church is moving in the power of prayer and in the authority of binding and loosing, she will make an impact.

Matthew 18:21

Then came Peter to him, and said, Lord, how oft shall my brother sin against me, and I forgive him? till seven times?

In kingdom life, there is humility, honesty, and finally, forgiveness. The rabbis taught that one who had been wronged was to forgive the perpetrator two or perhaps three times at the most. So Peter felt noble and generous in asking, "Should I forgive him seven times?"

Matthew 18:22

Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times: but, Until seventy times seven.

Jesus said, "Peter, you are to forgive four hundred and ninety times." Peter must have thought, Four hundred and ninety? How am I supposed to keep track? And that was the point. We are to just keep forgiving and forgiving and forgiving and forgiving. Where there is binding and loosing, there must also be a free, unending flow of forgiveness.

Matthew 18:23–35

Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain king, which would take account of his servants. And when he had begun to reckon, one was brought unto him, which owed him ten thousand talents. But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be sold, and his wife, and children, and all that he had, and payment to be made. The servant therefore fell down, and worshipped him, saying, Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt. But the same servant went out, and found one of his fellowservants, which owed him an hundred pence: and he laid hands on him, and took him by the throat, saying, Pay me that thou owest. And his fellowservant fell down at his feet, and besought him, saying, Have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. So when his fellowservants saw what was done, they were very sorry, and came and told unto their lord all that was done. Then his lord, after that he had called him, said unto him, O thou wicked servant, I forgave thee all that debt, because thou desiredst me: Shouldest not thou also have had compassion on thy fellowservant, even as I had pity on thee? And his lord was wroth, and delivered him to the tormentors, till he should pay all that was due unto him. So likewise shall my heavenly Father do also unto you, if ye from your hearts forgive not every one his brother their trespasses.

We all know people who are in torment and imprisoned because they will not forgive someone who's wronged them. They're small people in the sense that they're no longer embracive and free. Instead, they're restricted, tormented, uptight, tense, angry, bitter, and harsh. You see, the Lord tells us to forgive not for the sake of the offender, but for the sake of the one who has been offended. Regarding confronting problems, dealing with issues, binding and loosing, Jesus says, "Remember that you are to be a people known for forgiving over and over and over and over and over."

Maybe you see yourself in this story. Maybe you've been hurt so badly that you just can't forgive. Maybe you're imprisoned, robbed of joy and peace, but you don't know how to get out. The answer lies in this passage. The king commanded that the servant remain in prison until he paid his debt. But how could the servant earn money to pay his debt if he was in prison? The only way he could get out of prison was to go to his master and ask for forgiveness.

If Jesus says we are to be people who forgive over and over again, how much more will our Father forgive us when we go to Him and say, "Forgive me for not forgiving, Lord. Change my heart." And the great thing is that He'll not only forgive, but He'll also forget (Jeremiah 31:34).

- Humility: Getting our eyes off ourselves.
- Honesty: Dealing with problems in a Biblical manner.
- Forgiveness: Forgiving and forgiving until we lose count.

Lord, help us. Be merciful to us in an even greater measure by causing us to live in humility, not as cynics or sophisticates, but as children. I pray that there might be honesty in our lives, that we would care about others in such a way that we might speak the truth in love. Help us, Lord, to be forgiving, even as You are. We confess our bankruptcy and our inability to forgive apart from Your work in our hearts. May the characteristics You spoke of in Galilee become real in our lives.

19 Thus far in Matthew's gospel, we have seen the revelation of the King and the rebellion against the King. Now we come to the retreat of the King as Jesus takes His disciples away for a season of intensive discipleship.

Matthew 19:1

And it came to pass, that when Jesus had finished these sayings, he departed from Galilee, and came into the coasts of Judaea beyond Jordan.

Jesus is headed toward Jerusalem, the city wherein He will be crucified, buried, and resurrected.

Matthew 19:2, 3 (a)

And great multitudes followed him; and he healed them there. The Pharisees also came unto him, tempting him . . .

As Jesus heals the multitudes, the Pharisees are only interested in arguing with Him. This should not be surprising, for the Pharisaical mentality always wants to debate rather than celebrate.

Matthew 19:3 (b)

. . . and saying unto him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife for every cause?

The issue of divorce and remarriage was the hot controversy of the day. Two schools of thought proposed by two influential rabbis fueled the debate. Hillel was the liberal rabbi who said that, according to the Law of Moses, there were many justifications for divorce. For example, saying anything negative about her husband's mother would render a wife unclean and justify her husband divorcing her. Or if a husband saw a woman fairer to look upon than his wife, his wife would be unclean by comparison and he would be justified in divorcing her. Needless to say, Hillel had a great following among those looking for a way out of their marriages. Shammai, on the other hand, was very conservative and said there were virtually no grounds for divorce. Thus, the debate concerning divorce and remarriage was as heated as it is in the church today.

Matthew 19:4–6

And he answered and said unto them, Have ye not read, that he which made them at the beginning made them male and female, and said, For this cause shall a man leave father and mother, and shall cleave to his wife: and they twain shall be one flesh? Wherefore they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

In answer to their question, Jesus said, “Go back further than the Law of Moses. Go back to the Garden of Eden, for there you will discover the root of the matter.”

Matthew 19:7

They say unto him, Why did Moses then command to give a writing of divorcement, and to put her away?

In other words, the Pharisees are asking Jesus, “If the union of two who become one is to remain for as long as they live, why does the Old Testament offer the option of divorce at all?”

Matthew 19:8

He saith unto them, Moses because of the hardness of your hearts suffered you to put away your wives: but from the beginning it was not so.

Jesus answered by saying that the Law of Moses made provision for divorce not because God desired it, but because of the hardness of men’s hearts. Divorce was never God’s heart or God’s intention. But because the people had become so hardened, the Law of Moses allowed this heathen custom of divorce to take place within prescribed boundaries (Deuteronomy 24). Notice, divorce is not mandated in the event of adultery. It is simply allowed. While Jesus is not saying there must be divorce if there is infidelity, He acknowledges that it is possible for a relationship to be dealt a deathblow by infidelity, making it the one ground for divorce.

According to Old Testament Law, the penalty for adultery was not divorce but death. Then came Jesus. In John 8, the Pharisees brought Him a woman who was caught in the act of adultery and He said to her, “I don’t condemn you. I forgive you and free you to a better way of living. Go your way and sin no more.” Though the law came by Moses, grace and truth indeed came by Jesus (John 1:17).

Matthew 19:9

And I say unto you, Whosoever shall put away his wife, except it be for fornication, and shall marry another, committeth adultery: and whoso marrieth her which is put away doth commit adultery.

Jesus is saying, "Divorce, not the result of adultery results in adultery if there is remarriage." This raises all kinds of questions. What if a person falls into trouble and difficulty in his marriage when he's twenty years old, and, after going through twenty-five years of being single and walking with the Lord, he meets someone special and wants to get married? If he does so, will the couple live in adultery? Is adultery the unpardonable sin? Is divorce the unpardonable sin? To answer, look at perhaps the most famous marital failure in history, a man after God's own heart, a man named David.

After his affair with Bathsheba, David killed her husband to cover his sin. God dealt with David by allowing the child conceived to be short-circuited into eternity. His death greatly affected David. But once David was dealt with, the next child from his union with Bathsheba was Solomon, the subsequent king of Israel and part of the Messianic line. Of all David's wives, which were many, Bathsheba remained in a prominent place. Even at the end of his life, it was Bathsheba who had access to David and who was instrumental in establishing the next phase of his kingdom.

On the basis of David's life, in which we see the Lord dealing with the situation through chastening, adjusting, and correcting, I do not believe a person who has had a failure in a previous marriage lives in continual adultery in a second marriage. If such were the case, God would not have blessed Solomon. I do believe that where there is divorce and remarriage, there is inevitably a tearing away of a previous relationship and a coming together of a new relationship. Thus, there is in that act adultery. Jesus does not say, however, that although there is an act of adultery, the person who remarries lives in adultery.

I once talked with a young man about twenty-five years of age who was part of our church family and on leave from an elite branch of the air force. He had fallen in love with a lady who also loved the Lord but who had been married at age seventeen. After her marriage failed, she was, at age twenty-five, a single mom. This young pilot sat in my office weeping as he said, "I love this lady deeply. But if I marry her, I fear we'll be living in adultery all of our lives."

"I can't tell you what to do," I said. "But I do know this: I'm a bride and I have failed greatly. But my Bridegroom, Jesus Christ, was willing to absorb my pollution and iniquity to bring me into His love and into His family. Therefore, I do not believe it is against the heart of God for you to enter into a relationship to redeem that mother and child—even if it means absorbing pollution and bearing iniquity—because that's exactly what Jesus did for me."

I take time to address this issue because I believe it is important. On one hand, people are taking divorce far too lightly because they fail to realize its seriousness. On the other hand, the church too often mistakenly stands ready to judge and condemn couples who have admittedly failed, but who have sought the Lord and are now starting a new life together. There needs to be a balance in this very sober and serious matter of divorce.

Matthew 19:10

His disciples say unto him, If the case of the man be so with his wife, it is not good to marry.

The disciples said, "If what You say is true, Master, it's better not to get married at all. It's too tricky, too dangerous, and too troublesome."

Matthew 19:11, 12

But he said unto them, All men cannot receive this saying, save they to whom it is given. For there are some eunuchs, which were so born from their mother's womb: and there are some eunuchs, which were made eunuchs of men: and there be eunuchs, which have made themselves eunuchs for the kingdom of heaven's sake. He that is able to receive it, let him receive it.

Jesus answered that there are some who are born eunuchs. That is, they remain single because they were born without any desire for the opposite sex. Others were made eunuchs. That is, they were made eunuchs through castration, which was a common practice of conquering nations upon men placed in certain positions; for example, those in charge of the king's harem. Still others made themselves eunuchs by choosing to live a single lifestyle for the sake of the kingdom.

The apostle Paul would later write that the single state was a superior state (1 Corinthians 7:25, 26) because one could devote himself fully and completely to the work of the kingdom. On the other hand, Philip, the great evangelist who preached to the city of Samaria in Acts 8 and saw virtually the entire city get saved, had a wife and four daughters who grew up to be prophetesses.

So, if you're given the grace and the calling to remain single, rejoice in that and in the freedom it affords you to serve God with abandon. If you're not single, be like Philip and raise godly kids. And if there has been a failure in your past, know there is a redemptive plan for your future as you seek the Lord with sincerity.

Matthew 19:13 (a)

Then were there brought unto him little children . . .

I don't think it's coincidental that right after dealing with the issue of divorce, Jesus turns His attention toward the children, for children are always directly affected by the divorce of their parents. Of this same event, Luke writes: "And they brought unto him infants . . ." (18:15). The Greek pronoun he uses for "they" is masculine. In other words, it was the men who brought their kids to Jesus. I like that!

Matthew 19:13 (b)

. . . that he should put his hands on them, and pray . . .

Dad, how do you lay hands on your kids? While I think it's important that we discipline them, I do wonder sometimes if a lot of us aren't heavy on the laying on of hands in discipline and too light on the laying on of hands in blessing. When was the last time you pronounced a blessing on your child?

Matthew 19:13 (c)
. . . and the disciples rebuked them.

Whenever Jesus ministered, there was a release of His virtue so noticeable to Him that even in the midst of a crowd He was aware of it (Luke 8:46). No doubt, ministry exacted a toll on Jesus, which may explain why His disciples were trying to protect Him.

Matthew 19:14, 15
But Jesus said, Suffer little children, and forbid them not, to come unto me: for of such is the kingdom of heaven. And he laid his hands on them, and departed thence.

Contrary to what His disciples thought, Jesus is never too tired for anyone—especially children.

Matthew 19:16
And, behold, one came and said unto him, Good Master, what good thing shall I do, that I may have eternal life?

This one who came was rich; he was young; and he was a ruler. In other words, he had made it to the top occupationally; he was set financially; and he was young and healthy physically. In response to this encounter with the rich young ruler, throughout the rest of this chapter Jesus will contrast the poverty of riches with the richness of poverty.

Matthew 19:17 (a)
And he said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God . . .

Scripture records that there is none righteous, no not one (Romans 3:10). Only God is good. Thus, Jesus asks, “Since God alone is good, are you saying I am God?"

Matthew 19:17 (b), 18 (a)

. . . but if thou wilt enter into life, keep the commandments. He saith unto him, Which? Jesus said, Thou shalt do no murder . . .

There are those who declare that on the basis of the Seventh Commandment, we should never kill under any circumstance. However, Jesus' rendering of the Seventh Commandment, given here, is, "Thou shalt do no murder." You see, freedom and redemption often come only by the shedding of blood. Politically and historically, we are free today because many men shed blood and gave their lives for the freedom we enjoy in this country. The same is true spiritually and eternally. We are free because one Man shed His blood and paid the price for our salvation.

Matthew 19:18 (b)–20

. . . Thou shalt not commit adultery, Thou shalt not steal, Thou shalt not bear false witness, Honour thy father and thy mother: and, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. The young man saith unto him, All these things have I kept from my youth up: what lack I yet?

"What lack I yet?" That is the question still being asked. According to an article in a newsmagazine, in the '80s people made a living. In the '90s, they were to make a life. No longer would young executives arrive at the office at six o'clock in the morning and be the last to leave at night. Long weekends, family time, and recreation would be the order of the day. In going from one extreme to another, however, our generation found emptiness once again. The only way to be fulfilled in life is through a relationship with God through Jesus Christ.

Matthew 19:21, 22

Jesus said unto him, If thou wilt be perfect, go and sell that thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven:

and come and follow me. But when the young man heard that saying, he went away sorrowful: for he had great possessions.

Knowing his possessions were possessing him, Jesus' desire was to free this rich young ruler. "Simplify your life," He said, "and follow Me." Please understand that poverty does not produce automatic spirituality. That's not what Jesus is saying. Many of the greatest men in Scripture were exceedingly wealthy. Abraham, David, and Solomon; Nicodemus, Zacchaeus, and Joseph of Arimathea were all men of great possessions. Possessions are not inherently wrong. But when they begin to dictate how you spend your time and how you make decisions, you're in trouble. Jesus was dealing with the particular issue in this man's life that was holding him back. In your life, in my life, there might be another issue entirely.

Matthew 19:23

Then said Jesus unto his disciples, Verily I say unto you, That a rich man shall hardly enter into the kingdom of heaven.

It's hard for a rich man to enter the kingdom because riches can make one independent of God and intolerant of others. Riches can cause us to say, "Why should I pray or seek God when I can consult my banker or stockbroker?" Riches can cause us to ask, "Why is everyone so poor? Why don't they have the initiative, the industry, or the energy I do? What's wrong with them?" When you become independent of God and intolerant of others, you forfeit the kingdom. Riches can be dangerous indeed if they make us stiff of knee and hard of heart.

Matthew 19:24

And again I say unto you, It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God.

The Talmud, the Jewish body of teaching present in Jesus' day, contained the similar phrase, "It is easier for an elephant to go through the eye of a needle." Elephants were common in Persia or Iran, where the Talmud was written, but not in Jerusalem. So Jesus modified the Talmud with something His Jerusalem audience could relate to: a camel. Was He talking about a literal needle and camel, or was He, as G. Campbell Morgan strongly suggests, speaking of something else?

> In Jerusalem, all commerce would stop when the gates of the city of Jerusalem were closed on the Sabbath day and every evening at sunset. Commerce stopped because camels and caravans could no longer enter. But there was a little gate called the Needle Gate that was actually a gate inside of the main gate. It could be opened to allow access and egress to only one person at a time. The only way a camel could possibly get through this Needle Gate would be if all of the baggage was removed from his back and if he crawled through the gate on his knees.

I believe it is very possible that this is what Jesus was alluding to, saying, "There is a way for a rich man to enter the kingdom, but only if he places no priority on his possessions and is willing to fall to his knees in humility."

> Matthew 19:25
> When his disciples heard it, they were exceedingly amazed, saying, Who then can be saved?

The disciples were amazed because in those days, the rabbis taught that the closer one was to God, the richer he would be. Prosperity theology was around even back then. Here, however, Jesus totally shoots that theory down by saying, "Contrary to Jewish theology, riches can actually hinder one entering the kingdom."

> Matthew 19:26
> But Jesus beheld them, and said unto them, With men this is impossible; but with God all things are possible.

Even a rich man can be saved by the grace and power of God.

Matthew 19:27

Then answered Peter and said unto him, Behold, we have forsaken all, and followed thee; what shall we have therefore?

"We've left everything to follow You," Peter says. "What the rich young ruler wasn't willing to do, we've done. How will our faithfulness be rewarded?"

Matthew 19:28, 29

And Jesus said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That ye which have followed me, in the regeneration when the Son of man shall sit in the throne of his glory, ye also shall sit upon twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes of Israel. And every one that hath forsaken houses, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my name's sake, shall receive an hundredfold, and shall inherit everlasting life.

Jesus answers Peter by saying, "Any who forsake land, wealth, or family to follow Me will be ushered into the kingdom with great rewards."

Big deal, you might be thinking. Heaven's too far away to think about. I don't care about rewards there. But you will definitely care then. Only what you do for the Lord will bring you eternal reward. Jesus will reward you greatly for whatever you're giving up for Him now.

Mark adds this promise to his account of the same story:

> And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, But he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.
>
> Mark 10:29, 30

In other words, what you give up for the Lord and for His kingdom will not only be rewarded eternally but will be returned to you a hundred times over presently. What does this mean? Does it mean, as some suggest, that if I make a vow or "plant my seed," I'll get a whole bunch of money in the mail next month? I don't think so. I believe Jesus is saying that, as part of the kingdom, we have access to a hundred houses and a hundred families. I'm so thankful for the church—for people who love the Lord, who care about each other, who stand by one another, and who share with those in need. Those who are radically following Jesus will find not only rewards in Heaven, but benefits on earth. Our needs will be met a hundred times over because we're part of a community; we're part of a family; we're part of the Kingdom.

Matthew 19:30

But many that are first shall be last; and the last shall be first.

"Watch out, Peter," Jesus says. "You're proud of the fact that you have given much to follow Me. But many that are first shall be last, and many that are last shall be first. There will be some surprises in heaven."

20 Matthew 20 is the last chapter in the section dealing with the retreat of the King. It opens with a continuation of the dialogue that began in chapter 19 between Peter and Jesus concerning the rewards of service for the kingdom.

Matthew 20:1, 2

For the kingdom of heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire labourers into his vineyard. And when he had agreed with the labourers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard.

A penny, or a denarius, being the daily salary of a Roman soldier, Jesus was speaking of a day's fair wage.

Matthew 20:3–10

And he went out about the third hour, and saw others standing idle in the marketplace, And said unto them; Go ye also into the vineyard, and whatsoever is right I will give you. And they went their way. Again he went out about the sixth and ninth hour, and did likewise. And about the eleventh hour he went out, and found others standing idle, and saith unto them, Why stand ye here all the day idle? They say unto him, Because no man hath hired us. He saith unto them, Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive. So when even was come, the lord of the vineyard saith unto his steward, Call the labourers, and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first. And when they came that were hired about the eleventh hour, they received every man a penny. But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every man a penny.

The men who started work at nine o'clock in the morning received the same wage as those who started at five o'clock in the afternoon.

Matthew 20:11–16

And when they had received it, they murmured against the goodman of the house, saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny? Take that thine is, and go thy way: I will give unto this last, even as unto thee. Is it not lawful for me to do what I will with mine own? Is thine eye evil, because I am good? So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

This account of the vineyard and the harvest would have been very familiar to the disciples. The grape harvest usually took place in August. Because August was also the beginning of the rainy season in Israel, foremen in charge of the vineyards were always watching for the rains that could ruin the crops. In the morning, if a foreman saw rain coming, he would quickly go to the town square and hire workers to harvest the grapes. If the skies became even more threatening, he would go yet again and hire more workers. This would continue until the foreman had all the workers he needed to beat the rain.

In this story, those who had been hired early in the morning were upset because the men who were hired an hour before quitting time were paid the same amount they were. "Unfair!" they protested.

"The terms upon which I hired you were met," countered the owner of the vineyard. "You received your denarius, didn't you? If I choose to be generous with those who came late, that is my business."

What meaning does this parable have for us? Keep in mind that the parable was given in response to Peter's question about rewards. Through it, Jesus is saying, "You'll have rewards eternally. You will have everything returned one hundred-fold presently. But because the first shall be last and the last shall be first, when payday comes and rewards are given, there will be some big surprises."

This tells me a couple of key things. First of all, we'll be surprised in heaven. We have a tendency to think that Billy Graham will receive all kinds of crowns and rewards. And no doubt he will. However, I think there will be some cleaning ladies who worked in obscurity and during their breaks went to their knees in a broom closet somewhere to intercede on behalf of Billy Graham's ministry who will be brought to the front and rewarded greatly. I believe sitting in this group tonight are those who have worked quietly and in anonymity who will be escorted to the front when rewards are given. "We didn't do much," they'll say. "We weren't hired until five o'clock. We didn't make much of a mark." But because they were exceedingly faithful, in what the Foreman assigned them to do—visiting rest homes, chopping wood for those who are unable, praying and doing battle in intercession, changing diapers in the nursery—they will be brought to the front. And perhaps a lot of us who have visibility and prominence presently will be sitting in the back. Truly, the last shall be first and the first last.

The second lesson I see in this radical teaching is that we are to watch out for jealousy. "Hey, we were out here all day. These guys just worked for an hour. Unfair!" cried the servants. So, too, there can be a tendency for our flesh to say, "How come he's getting blessed when I've been faithful for years and years?"

In Numbers 12, Miriam asked why Moses was always the one who got to say, "Thus saith the Lord." "Why is Moses the one who gets to go up the mountain and come down shining, and all I get to do is play a tambourine?" she asked. The result? She was stricken with leprosy. That's what jealousy always does. Like leprosy, it starts small, but consumes us in the end.

A third principle this story teaches me is that it's never too late to start. You might be saying, "I'm old. I'm thirty." Listen, gang—even though sportscasters talk about thirty-year-olds as if they're dinosaurs, such is not the case with ministry. You might be at five o'clock in your lifespan. You might be fifty, sixty, seventy, or eighty years old. You might be saying, "I've walked with the Lord for ten years and haven't done a thing for Him." Take heart! It's never too late. Those who show up at five o'clock saying, "I'm ready—just point me in the right direction," have a definite job to fulfill in the vineyard.

Matthew 20:17–19

And Jesus going up to Jerusalem took the twelve disciples apart in the way, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be betrayed unto the chief priests and unto the scribes, and they shall condemn him to death, And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to mock, and to scourge, and to crucify him: and the third day he shall rise again.

Since Matthew 16, we have seen Jesus underscoring and repeating that He was going to die. Yet I call your attention to the fact that Jesus never spoke of the Cross without speaking of the Resurrection. I point this out because I often hear brothers and sisters talking about the Cross, saying, "I'm going through this trial," or "I'm dealing with this struggle," or I'm paying this price," but I don't hear them talking about the Resurrection. If you talk about the Cross, follow the example of Jesus and talk about the Resurrection as well.

Precious people, if you think it's tough following Jesus, try not following Him. That's what's tough. Going through disease, death, divorce, bankruptcy, being fired from your job, or being prosperous on Wall Street but empty internally—that's what's tough! If you who are struggling and suffering weren't a Christian, you would still go through difficult times. The difference is, you would go through them with no solution, no promise, and no hope. That is why every time Jesus talked about the Cross, He never failed to speak of Resurrection.

> Menelik II, Emperor of Ethiopia from 1889–1913, heard that in Europe and America, criminals were executed with an efficient new device called an electric chair. He immediately ordered one for his country and was excited when it arrived—until he realized it needed electricity. There was no electricity in Ethiopia at that time. Undaunted, he said, "If the electric chair can't be used for the execution of criminals, it will be used for the execution of my commands." Thus, for fifteen years, Menelik II sat in an electric chair when he issued his proclamations. He turned the electric chair into a throne.

When Jesus went to the Cross, He did something infinitely greater. He turned an instrument of death into the pinnacle of power as He transformed shame into salvation, rejection into redemption, and grief into glory.

> Matthew 20:20
> Then came to him the mother of Zebedee's children with her sons, worshipping him, and desiring a certain thing of him.

Mark's Gospel tells us James and John persuaded their mother to talk to Jesus on their behalf (10:35). So she went to Jesus and began to worship Him because she wanted something from Him. All too often I fear, like James, John, and their mother, we worship in order to get something. But that's not what worship is about. Worship is about giving, about offering the sacrifice of praise (Hebrews 13:15).

> Matthew 20:21
> And he said unto her, What wilt thou? She saith unto him, Grant that these my two sons may sit, the one on thy right hand, and the other on the left, in thy kingdom.

Why did James and John deal with this issue during this particular time? Perhaps they were attempting to demonstrate their faith and devotion. "Lord, You're talking about death, but don't You remember all Your teachings on the kingdom? We believe You're still going to make it, Lord. Let's not talk about death. Let's not talk about the Cross. Let's talk about the seating arrangement in the kingdom."

Matthew 20:22

But Jesus answered and said, Ye know not what ye ask. Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? They say unto him, We are able.

"Do you know what you're asking?" Jesus said. "The cup in the kingdom is the cup of death. The baptism is the baptism of suffering. Do you understand what you're asking?"

"Oh, we understand, Lord," insisted James and John.

But they didn't.

Matthew 20:23

And he saith unto them, Ye shall drink indeed of my cup, and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with: but to sit on my right hand, and on my left, is not mine to give, but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared of my Father.

Jesus answers, "My Father is preparing positions of authority in the heavenly arena for those who are preparing for those places." You see, salvation is free but position and rewards in the kingdom are dependent upon what we're doing right now. We want more prestige, more prominence, more power, more toys and more trinkets in this life. But Jesus is ever desirous of lifting our eyes from the temporal to the eternal and from the physical to the spiritual.

Matthew 20:24

And when the ten heard it, they were moved with indignation against the two brethren.

Why were the other disciples upset with James and John? Because they were trying to get a jump on the good seats in the kingdom. Next time you feel moved with indignation, ask yourself if you're upset because there's been a spiritual violation or merely because someone's getting ahead of you in some way.

Matthew 20:25–28

But Jesus called them unto him, and said, Ye know that the princes of the Gentiles exercise dominion over them, and they that are great exercise authority upon them. But it shall not be so among you: but whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister [servant]; And whosoever will be chief among you, let him be your servant [slave]; Even as the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

If you want to be great, don't seek prominence. Seek service. Don't say, "Who's praying for me? Who cares about me?" Instead ask, "Who can I serve?"

"Go here. Do that. Get me this." The way you feel when people treat you like a slave is a good indication of how you're doing in the arena of servanthood.

Matthew 20:29, 30 (a)

And as they departed from Jericho, a great multitude followed him. And, behold, two blind men sitting by the way side . . .

Jericho was a beautiful desert oasis located fifteen miles from Jerusalem. A certain bush grew there which was believed to have medicinal value for the treatment of blindness. Thus, there was a large population of blind people in Jericho.

Matthew 20:30 (b)

. . . when they heard that Jesus passed by, cried out . . .

The Greek word translated "cried out" is krazo, a word that refers to the cry of a woman in childbirth.

Matthew 20:30 (c)–34

. . . saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. And the multitude rebuked them, because they should hold their peace: but they cried the more, saying, Have mercy on us, O Lord, thou Son of David. And Jesus stood still, and called them, and said, What will ye that I shall do unto you? They say unto him, Lord, that our eyes may be opened. So Jesus had compassion on them, and touched their eyes: and immediately their eyes received sight, and they followed him.

These two men without eyesight had remarkable insight. "Son of David," they cried, "we recognize You as Messiah."

"Quiet down," said the crowd. But the blind men cried out all the more until Jesus healed them.

This story shows me three things about the nature and character of Jesus. First, it's a demonstration of His compassion. He took time to care for two blind men in a huge crowd. Second, it's an illustration of coming attractions. When He returns, all blind eyes shall be opened and all sickness healed forever. Finally, it gives illumination concerning our salvation. We too were blind, but when we cried out to our Messiah, we received sight and were then able to follow Him.

21 Following the retreat of the King in chapters 14 through 20, Matthew 21 marks the beginning of a new section: that of the rejection of the King as Jesus heads toward Jerusalem.

Matthew 21:1–3

And when they drew nigh unto Jerusalem, and were come to Bethphage, unto the mount of Olives, then sent Jesus two disciples, saying unto them, Go into the village over against you, and straightway ye shall find an ass tied, and a colt with her: loose them, and bring them unto me. And if any man say ought unto you, ye shall say, The Lord hath need of them; and straightway he will send them.

The city of Jerusalem was teeming with people, probably two million in number. They were there to commemorate Passover, an event that had taken place fifteen hundred years earlier . . .

While His people were being held captive, the hardness of Pharaoh's heart caused God to send a series of plagues upon Egypt, the tenth of which was the death of the firstborn in every home. The only way a family could escape this tragedy was to slaughter a lamb and mark the top, sides, and bottom of their door with blood, thereby painting a prophetic picture of the Cross that would one day save all mankind from the curse of sin and death.

Here, Jesus, the Passover Lamb, heads into Jerusalem, where He will orchestrate a massive public demonstration as He offers Himself to be King of Israel. Keep in mind that normally Jesus moved quietly and preferred obscurity, many times charging those He healed to "tell no man" (see Matthew 8:4). Here, however, He organizes a huge crusade. Why? I suggest it was so the Jews would never be able to say, "If we had only had the opportunity to embrace You as our King, we certainly would have done so." He stripped away that excuse from the Jewish nation when He rode into Jerusalem and publicly offered Himself to them as their Messiah.

Matthew 21:4, 5

All this was done, that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, saying, Tell ye the daughter of Sion, Behold, thy King cometh unto thee, meek, and sitting upon an ass, and a colt the foal of an ass.

Can't you hear the Roman soldiers garrisoned in Jerusalem snickering as they saw Jesus ride in on a donkey? When a Roman leader came cruising into a city, it wasn't on a donkey. No, Roman rulers rode black stallions followed by chariots and thousands of soldiers marching in step with shields gleaming. But I wonder what the Romans of this world will say when Jesus comes again, for next time He comes, it won't be on a donkey. He'll come back riding a white horse followed by ten thousands of His saints (Jude 14). You see, the first time Jesus came, He came as the suffering Servant. But the next time He comes, it will be as the conquering King.

Matthew 21:6–9

And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them, and brought the ass, and the colt, and put on them their clothes, and they set him thereon. And a very great multitude spread their garments in the way; others cut down branches from the trees, and strawed them in the way. And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the Son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord; Hosanna in the highest.

Because the word "Hosanna" means "Save now," the crowd was essentially saying, "Overthrow the Roman yoke politically. Help us economically. Lead us militarily. Save Now!" No wonder that, as the week went on and they realized none of that was His intent, they turned against Jesus.

I see the same thing happen today, for there can be a tendency within the heart of each of us to cash it in when things don't work out. If you are expecting Jesus to be a "good luck charm" for you, if you expect Him to help you financially or physically, socially or vocationally, you will be disappointed when things don't go the way you thought they would.

We need to realize that Jesus Christ came to die for our sin and pay the price for our iniquity. If He never does anything else in this life presently, that is more than enough to merit our loyalty, our affection, and our devotion eternally. If He never does another thing for me, if He never gives another blessing to me, I owe Him my life because of what He did on Calvary.

Matthew 21:10, 11

And when he was come into Jerusalem, all the city was moved, saying, Who is this? And the multitude said, This is Jesus the prophet of Nazareth of Galilee.

The Greek word translated "moved" is seio from which we get our word "seismic." In other words, Matthew writes that the whole city was "quaking"—not physically, but mentally and emotionally— when Jesus made His entry.

Matthew 21:12 (a)

And Jesus went into the temple of God . . .

When Jesus came into the city, the multitude must have thought He would head straight for the fortress Antonia to deal with the Romans. Instead, He went into the temple to deal with the Jews.

Matthew 21:12 (b)

. . . and cast out all them that sold and bought in the temple, and overthrew the tables of the moneychangers, and the seats of them that sold doves.

Keep in mind that Jesus had already cleansed the temple at the outset of His public ministry (John 2:13–15). So, too, because I myself am a temple (1 Corinthians 3:16), the Lord has to come and overturn the tables of my life. And although I wish this were a one-time process, it's not. Just when I think I've learned a lesson, suddenly I find the old junk back in my temple once again. Then the Lord comes in faithfully and deals with it radically.

The Lord not only desires purity in our temples individually, but also corporately. In the following passage, I see four characteristics He is looking for in us, His corporate temple (1 Peter 2:5).

Matthew 21:13

And said unto them, It is written, My house shall be called the house of prayer; but ye have made it a den of thieves.

First of all, we are to be a house of prayer. I thank the Lord for times of corporate prayer. I continue to be blown away by the reports I hear from people, saying, "We prayed specifically for this and here is how the Lord answered our prayer. . . ."

Matthew 21:14

And the blind and the lame came to him in the temple; and he healed them.

Second, this is to be a place where people are helped. The blind and the lame came to Jesus in the temple and He healed them. So, too, we who have been spiritually blinded and we who are lame-brained should be able to come into this place and hear the Word, study the Scriptures, and receive help and healing.

Matthew 21:15 (a)

And when the chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful things that he did . . .

Third, this is to be a place where power is released. The chief priests and scribes saw the wonderful—or awesome—things He did. You should have seen the awesome things God did in the amphitheatre at Applegate Christian Fellowship one Sunday: On that cold and rainy day, eight or ten radical kids went on record, saying, "You can say we're all wet; you can call us drips; but we're taking the plunge. We're going for it. We're getting baptized. From this point on, Jesus Christ is our Savior and our Lord!"

Matthew 21:15 (b), 16

. . . and the children crying in the temple, and saying, Hosanna to the Son of David; they were sore displeased, And said unto him, Hearest thou what these say? And Jesus saith unto them, Yea; have ye never read, Out of the mouth of babes and sucklings thou hast perfected praise?

Finally, this is to be a place where praise is expressed. The old fuddy-duddies in our text were "sore displeased," but the kids were crying, "Hosanna." You see, when the kids cried "Hosanna" it wasn't for political reasons; it wasn't for economic reasons; it wasn't for vocational reasons. They cried "Hosanna" simply because they were excited about Jesus. I find that to be true with young Christians as well. It's often the young brother or sister who can lead the way in simple and sincere praise. This house must be a place where such praise is expressed. Following are four key Hebrew words that shed light on the meaning of true praise.

One Old Testament word for praise is halal which literally means, "to acclaim or to glory in God who brings the deepest of satisfaction." I like that! Late at night when you think you're hungry, instead of making yourself a peanut butter and pickle sandwich, try worshiping. Over and over again, I have found that when I think I want to listen to some classical music, watch TV, read a book, or have a snack, if I get away and begin to worship, suddenly the deepest satisfaction overwhelms me and I realize that time with God was what I craved all along. If you have been frustrated or restless lately, try worshiping. Halal means you will find all you're longing for internally in the One who satisfies you totally.

The second word used for praise is towdah which means "acknowledging God's work and His character and commending it." Towdah says, "Yes, Lord, You are good. You are holy and righteous. At last, we have found Someone in this universe worthy of our commendation."

The third word is zamar which means "to break out in song." When you find yourself singing joyfully about something of the goodness of God, that is zamar.

The fourth word is shabach, which means, "to commend God with thanksgiving." Shabach is saying, "Lord, we commend You for the way You've seen us through our trials, the way You've answered our prayers, the way You purchased our salvation."

Matthew 21:17

And he left them, and went out of the city into Bethany; and he lodged there.

The day after Jesus entered Jerusalem, He departed for Bethany. Mark tells us that on His way to Bethany, He went through the tiny town of Bethphage, or "House of Figs" (Mark 11:1). It was in Bethany where His friends Mary, Martha, and Lazarus lived, and no doubt He stayed with them.

Matthew 21:18–20

Now in the morning as he returned into the city, he hungered. And when he saw a fig tree in the way, he came to it, and found nothing thereon, but leaves only, and said unto it, Let no fruit grow on thee henceforward for ever. And presently the fig tree withered away. And when the disciples saw it, they marvelled, saying, How soon is the fig tree withered away!

On the way from Bethany to Jerusalem, on the slopes of the Mount of Olives, Jesus saw a fig tree. Fig trees were common in Israel. Growing to heights of twenty-five feet and widths of twenty to twenty-five feet, they covered the countryside. Because of their abundance, figs were a staple of the Hebrew diet. Here, Jesus—hungry for breakfast—saw a fig tree covered with leaves. Fig trees are unusual in that the appearance of fruit precedes the appearance of leaves. Jesus assumed, therefore, that since this particular tree was covered with leaves, it must surely contain fruit as well. But this fig tree was a hypocrite. It had leaves—the outward appearance of vitality and health—but no fruit. So Jesus cursed it. And it withered, Mark tells us, beginning with the roots (Mark 11:20).

Many people have a real problem at this point. Environmentalists say, "How could this be? What kind of person is this Jesus of Nazareth? Is He just venting His anger by cursing this poor, helpless tree?" Yet if Jesus and the disciples were cold and they used the tree for firewood to warm themselves, no one would think anything of it. Here, Jesus uses the tree not to warm the hands but to warn the hearts of His disciples.

To those who question the environmental correctness of Jesus' action, I say, "Consider what He could have done. Think of Elijah. When a group of soldiers came to get him, he called down fire from heaven and burned them up. Think of Elisha. When some young men were making fun of his bald head, he called a bear out of the woods and they became lunch." When you look at the Old Testament prophets and see the severity of the lessons they taught, cursing a fruitless fig tree should pose no problem for us. Seeing a barren fig tree, Jesus seized the moment to teach a lesson to His disciples, to you, and to me about hypocrisy, hope, and healing.

Matthew 21:21, 22

Jesus answered and said unto them, Verily I say unto you, If ye have faith, and doubt not, ye shall not only do this which is done to the fig tree, but also if ye shall say unto this mountain, Be thou removed, and be thou cast into the sea; it shall be done. And all things, whatsoever ye shall ask in prayer, believing, ye shall receive.

In contrast to the impotent, barren state of the fig tree, here Jesus speaks of the power of prayer and the potency of faith.

Matthew 21:23

And when he was come into the temple, the chief priests and the elders of the people came unto him as he was teaching, and said, By what authority doest thou these things? and who gave thee this authority?

Upon His return from Bethany, Jesus taught in the Temple. With the cleansing of the Temple fresh in their minds, the chief priests and elders demanded to know by whose authority He overturned the tables and drove out the sheep and cows.

Matthew 21:24, 25 (a)

And Jesus answered and said unto them, I also will ask you one thing, which if ye tell me, I in like wise will tell you by what authority I do these things. The baptism of John, whence was it? from heaven, or of men?

Jesus answered their question with a question. "Remember John?" He said. "Was his ministry from God or simply done by his own energy?"

Matthew 21:25 (b)–27

And they reasoned with themselves, saying, If we shall say, From heaven; he will say unto us, Why did ye not then believe him? But if we shall say, Of men; we fear the people; for all hold John as a prophet. And they answered Jesus, and said, We cannot tell. And he said unto them, Neither tell I you by what authority I do these things.

Realizing they were backed into a corner, the chief priests and elders refused to answer. "If you won't answer Me, I have no obligation to answer you," Jesus said. Next, we see Him launch into a series of three parables in which He will answer them, but indirectly. "By whose authority did I cleanse the temple? He asked. "By the authority of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit," He'll answer.

Matthew 21:28–32

But what think ye? A certain man had two sons; and he came to the first, and said, Son, go work to day in my vineyard. He answered and said, I will not: but afterward he repented, and went. And he came to the second, and said likewise. And he answered and said, I go, sir: and went not. Whether of them twain did the will of his father? They say unto him, The first. Jesus saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That the publicans and the harlots go into the kingdom of God before you. For John came unto you in the way of righteousness, and ye believed him not: but the publicans and the harlots believed him: and ye, when ye had seen it, repented not afterward, that ye might believe him.

First, Jesus cleansed the temple by the authority of the Father. Jesus likened the prostitutes and publicans to the first son. They seemed unlikely candidates to receive John's message, but receive it they did. On the other hand, like the second son, the pseudo-religious scribes and Pharisees gave only lip service to the preaching of John.

Matthew 21:33–41

Hear another parable: There was a certain householder, which planted a vineyard, and hedged it round about, and digged a winepress in it, and built a tower, and let it out to husbandmen, and went into a far country: And when the time of the fruit drew near, he sent his servants to the husbandmen, that they might receive the fruits of it. And the husbandmen took his servants, and beat one, and killed another, and stoned another. Again, he sent other servants more than the first: and they did unto them likewise. But last of all he sent unto them his son, saying, They will reverence my son. But when the husbandmen saw the son, they said among themselves, This is the heir; come, let us kill him, and let us seize on his inheritance. And they caught him, and cast him out of the vineyard, and slew him. When the lord therefore of the vineyard cometh, what will he do unto those husbandmen? They say unto him, He will miserably destroy those wicked men, and will let out his vineyard unto other husbandmen, which shall render him the fruits in their seasons.

Second, Jesus cleansed the temple by the authority of the Son. Taken from Isaiah 5, this parable speaks of Israel as a vineyard and of God as the owner who went to a far country, expecting to receive payment as the grapes were harvested. When the owner sent messengers to collect, the stewards killed the messengers just as the people of Israel had killed the prophets God had sent to them.

- Did the Owner then say, "I'm going to send soldiers"?
  No, He said, "I'll send My Son."
- Did He say, "I'll send lightning to strike them"?

No, He said, “I’ll send the Light of the world to instruct them.”

Nonetheless, rather than respond to Him, they killed Him.

Matthew 21:42–44

Jesus saith unto them, Did ye never read in the scriptures, The stone which the builders rejected, the same is become the head of the corner: this is the Lord’s doing, and it is marvellous in our eyes? Therefore say I unto you, The kingdom of God shall be taken from you, and given to a nation bringing forth the fruits thereof. And whosoever shall fall on this stone shall be broken: but on whomsoever it shall fall, it will grind him to powder.

This reference to Psalm 118, the very psalm sung during Jesus’ triumphal entry into Jerusalem, speaks of the temple. When the temple was under construction, stones were quarried miles away and transported to the temple mount. Forty feet wide and twenty feet high, these stones were massive. Yet they fit together so perfectly that no mortar was needed, for not even a knife blade could fit between them. Tradition had it that one stone arrived on the scene but, because no one could figure out where it was supposed to go, the builders rolled it off a cliff into the Kidron Valley. Not until the foundation was complete did the builders discover they were one stone short. Sure enough, the stone they had rejected was none other than the cornerstone. Here, Jesus pulls from that tradition as well as from Psalm 118, and says, “Haven’t you read? The One who was rejected, the One who was cast away is indeed the chief cornerstone, the foundation stone.”

Truly, Jesus is our Rock. To the Jews, He is a stumbling stone (Romans 9:32, 33). To the Gentiles, He is a smiting stone (Daniel 2:34). To the believer, He is the foundation stone (Ephesians 2:20). Either you will fall on Him and be saved, or He will fall on you and you’ll be crushed. It’s your choice. I highly recommend the first. I recommend building your life upon the solid rock of Jesus Christ.

Matthew 21:45, 46

And when the chief priests and Pharisees had heard his parables, they perceived that he spake of them. But when they sought to lay hands on him, they feared the multitude, because they took him for a prophet.

At last, the chief priests and elders were getting the point that Jesus did what He did in the authority of the Father and of the Son. But, as we will see in chapter 22, He had one more parable left.

THE FATE OF THE FIGLESS TREE

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 21:17–20

Jesus deals with the issue of hypocrisy in the miracle of the fig tree. You see, although this fig tree was covered with leaves, it was a hypocrite because it had no fruit. Why wasn't there fruit? To answer this question, consider three aspects of this miracle, each of which has practical application for us today. . . .

Practical Application

Verse 19 says it was a lone fig tree. This tree bore no fruit because there was no cross-pollination. It's a matter of biology and a fact of life: A lone fig tree cannot bear fruit.

> Not forsaking the assembling of ourselves together, as the manner of some is; but exhorting one another: and so much the more, as ye see the day ap proaching.
> Hebrews 10:25

You see, gang, when we meet together, a spiritual "cross-pollination" takes place. There's a dynamic unlike any other when people come together corporately to praise, pray, and study the Word. This only makes sense, for our God is a Father who loves His family.

When my kids were all at home, I wanted them to sit around the table and eat together. We didn't serve Peter-John in his room, Jessie and Christy in their room, and Mary and Ben in their rooms because something special happened when we were all together. So, too, our Father desires that His children come together around His table, the table of Communion. Secondly, our Father calls us to come together to the table of Bible study, where the manna of the Word is opened for us to partake of its spiritual nutrition. If you are a lone fig tree, you might appear to be healthy for a while. You might have all the leaves of right theology. Others might be fooled by your outward appearance. But there will be no real fruit found on you. As "living stones being fit together for His glory" (see 2 Peter 2:5), we need each other.

Prophetic Illustration

Scripturally, historically, and presently, the fig tree is a symbol of the nation of Israel. Jeremiah, Amos, Ezekiel, Hosea, and Isaiah all liken Israel to the fig tree. Just as the eagle symbolizes America and the bear represents Russia, so Israel is portrayed by the fig tree. Like the fig tree in this account, Israel had lots of leaves. This nation appeared to be so religious—with temple worship, traditions, and the Torah; with Pharisees, scribes, and Sadducees—but Jesus found no fruit in her land. Forty years later, the Romans marched into Jerusalem, destroyed the temple, and slaughtered thousands. And the nation of Israel lost her identity until 1948. Thus, for almost two thousand years, the Jews, like the fig tree, shriveled and withered.

Personal Exhortation

When the first Adam came to a fig tree in the Garden of Eden, he was not looking for fruit. He was looking for leaves to cover his nakedness (Genesis 3:7). That's always the tendency of humanity. We cover up our nakedness with outward activity. We join Rotary. We volunteer for the Red Cross. We teach Sunday school. We do whatever it takes to cover our sinfulness because we know what lurks within us. The last Adam, as Paul calls Jesus in 1 Corinthians 15, came looking not for leaves, but for fruit. He didn't care about the leaves of outward demonstration. He desired fruit for inner satiation. And He still hungers for fruit. What fruit? The fruit of His Spirit: love, joy, peace, longsuffering, gentleness, goodness, faith, meekness, temperance (Galatians 5:22, 23); the fruit of our thanksgiving (Hebrews 13:15); the fruit of the gospel (Colossians 1:6); and the fruit of righteousness (James 3:18).

Jesus comes by your tree every day, saying, "I'm hungry."

What do you have for Him? A bunch of leaves?

"Oh, I'm doing fine," you might say. "I'm involved in this activity. I'm supporting that mission. I'm going to this meeting." Your tree may look healthy. Others might be attracted to it and impressed by it. But Jesus isn't fooled. What is there for Him?

When He comes morning by morning seeking satiation and satisfaction, does He find real fruit? Does He say, "It's such a joy being with you in the morning hour or in the cool of the day as we walk together. It's so wonderful that someone would take ten minutes to thank Me specifically for what I've done, that someone would worship Me for who I am"? Or does He see a tree filled with leaves but lacking fruit?

> And seeing a fig tree afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but leaves; for the time of figs was not yet. And Jesus answered and said unto it, No man eat fruit of thee hereafter for ever. And his disciples heard it.
> Mark 11:13, 14

"No man eat fruit of thee." If we are not satisfying Jesus intimately and personally, we will not satisfy anyone else through service or ministry. What has He found in you today? What will He find in you tomorrow morning? Figs or leaves?

Maybe you're saying, "I don't know if there is any fruit in my life for Him to enjoy. What can I do?" Take a look at Luke 13 . . .

> He spake also this parable; A certain man had a fig tree planted in his vineyard; and he came and sought fruit thereon, and found none. Then said he unto the dresser of his vineyard, Behold, these three years I come seeking fruit on this fig tree, and find none: cut it down; why cumbereth it the ground?
> Luke 13:6, 7

For three years this fig tree had been tended, cultivated, and watered even as Jesus had publicly ministered to the Jews for three years. But there was no fruit. And so the owner said, "Why should it continue to sap nutrients from the soil? Cut it down!"

> And he answering said unto him, Lord, let it alone this year also, till I shall dig about it, and dung it: And if it bear fruit, well: and if not, then after that thou shalt cut it down.
> Luke 13:8, 9

Here, the vinedresser pleads on behalf of the barren fig tree even as Jesus lives to make intercession for us (Hebrews 7:25). Jesus is our Advocate, our Defense Lawyer. Like the vinedresser, He says, "Give Me one more year to dig around it." In the parallel passage to Matthew 21, Mark 11 says the fig tree dried up from the roots. That's where dryness always begins. You see, it's what takes place in the quiet, secret, hidden time that matters. Is there a heart for God? Is there communication with the Lord? Is there an expression of thanks to the Lord? Or is there nothing beneath the surface because the roots are dry? The Vinedresser says, "Let Me dig it. Let Me expose sin. Let Me get to the heart of the matter."

What about your root system that was once so vibrant? What about your time with the Lord, your time in the Word, your time of praise and thanksgiving and adoration? Is it withered? Let Him dig it.

Secondly, let Him dung it. What is dung? Manure. In Philippians 3:4–6, speaking of past accomplishments, Paul wrote, "I have quite a record. I was born into a godly tribe, lived an upright life, worked zealously, and studied steadfastly." And then he added: "But what things were gain to me, those I counted loss for Christ" (see Philippians 3:7). Interestingly, the Greek word translated "loss" is "dung."

You might be saying, "I used to be a deacon" or "I used to be a pastor, gospel singer, or Sunday-school teacher." Gang, it doesn't matter what you were. You cannot live in the glory of what you were doing in 1942, the revival of 1964, or the spiritual high you felt three years ago. Only what you're doing presently matters. It is only where you're at with the Lord today that counts. When you allow the Vinedresser to dig and to dung, to expose sin and to expel self, fruit will come.

May the Lord make you fruitful. May Jesus come by your tree this week and eat of the abundance. May your goal not be to impress others, but to satisfy your Master. And may this be the fruitiest year of your whole life!

22 Chapter 21 ended with two parables illustrating that Jesus acted with the authority of the Father and the Son. Chapter 22 opens with the third and final parable in this series, a parable that illustrates He carried the authority of the Spirit as well.

Matthew 22:1–3 (a)

And Jesus answered and spake unto them again by parables, and said, The kingdom of heaven is like unto a certain king, which made a marriage for his son, And sent forth his servants to call them that were bidden to the wedding . . .

God the Father sent His Spirit to woo a bride for His Son. The ministry of the Spirit is to call people to the wedding, to win a bride for Jesus Christ.

Who did He call first? Salvation is to the Jew first and then the Gentile (Romans 2:9, 10).

Matthew 22:3 (b)–6

. . . And they would not come. Again, he sent forth other servants, saying, Tell them which are bidden, Behold, I have prepared my dinner: my oxen and my fatlings are killed, and all things are ready: come unto the marriage. But they made light of it, and went their ways, one to his farm, another to his merchandise: And the remnant took his servants, and entreated them spitefully, and slew them.

Just as the Jews had rejected the authority of the Father and the Son, they rejected the ministry of the Spirit. They rejected Jesus when He came to Jerusalem just as they would reject the apostles when they ministered there after Pentecost.

Matthew 22:7–9

But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his armies, and destroyed those murderers, and burned up their city. Then saith he to his servants, The wedding is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy. Go ye therefore into the highways, and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage.

"We're too busy. We're not interested," said the Jews. So the Father said to the Spirit, "Go to the highways and byways. Go to the Gentiles. Go to the Oregonians and tell them to come. The meal is ready. The doors are open. Whosoever will, let him come" (see Revelation 22:17).

Matthew 22:10

So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests.

Good and bad came. That's the church. That's us.

Matthew 22:11, 12

And when the king came in to see the guests, he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment: And he saith unto him, Friend, how camest thou in hither not having a wedding garment? And he was speechless.

Jesus is telling us that in the church, there will be those traveling in our midst and sitting at the table who are not dressed properly. What does this mean?

> I will greatly rejoice in the LORD, my soul shall be joyful in my God; for he hath clothed me with the garments of salvation, he hath covered me with the robe of righteousness, as a bridegroom decketh himself with ornaments, and as a bride adorneth herself with her jewels.
> Isaiah 61:10

Who is dressed appropriately? Who is really saved? The one who says, "I need a Savior. I don't have the answer. I'm not righteous. Lord, I need You to robe me with Your robe of righteousness."

Matthew 22:13, 14

Then said the king to the servants, Bind him hand and foot, and take him away, and cast him into outer darkness; there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth. For many are called, but few are chosen.

You see, it's not the person who sits in the pew or is dipped in the water who is saved. It's the one who says, "Lord I need You. You are my Savior. You are my Redeemer."

Matthew 22:15

Then went the Pharisees, and took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk.

The Pharisees and Sadducees decided to counterattack with a series of political, ethical, theological, and personal questions for Jesus. Why? Unknowingly, they were fulfilling the prophecy of Exodus 12 which says that before the Passover lamb was sacrificed, it was to be inspected and observed for five days in order to make sure it was free of blemish or disease. So, too, before the Passover Lamb of God was sacrificed on the Cross, He underwent a period of scrutiny and examination by the most brutal inspectors of all: the Pharisees, Sadducees, scribes, and Herodians—His enemies.

Matthew 22:16 (a)

And they sent out unto him their disciples with the Herodians . . .

First came the Pharisees and Herodians. The Pharisees were those who kept the most minute details of the law. The Herodians, on the other hand, were a political party. It was an interesting combination because the two didn't normally get together. But political and philosophical enemies will often unite in opposition to Jesus Christ.

Matthew 22:16 (b), 17

. . . saying, Master, we know that thou art true, and teachest the way of God in truth, neither carest thou for any man: for thou regardest not the person of men. Tell us therefore, What thinkest thou? Is it lawful to give tribute unto Caesar, or not?

The Pharisees and Herodians thought they had Jesus cornered. If He said, "Yes, pay taxes to Caesar," that would be a most unpopular sentiment. You see, Caesar claimed to be God, and the Jews felt that by paying taxes to Caesar, they were in essence acknowledging him as such. On the other hand, if Jesus said, "No, don't pay taxes," He could be arrested for tax evasion and political rebellion.

Matthew 22:18–22

But Jesus perceived their wickedness, and said, Why tempt ye me, ye hypocrites? Shew me the tribute money. And they brought unto him a penny. And he saith unto them, Whose is this image and superscription? They say unto him, Caesar's. Then saith he unto them, Render therefore unto Caesar the things which are Caesar's; and unto God the things that are God's. When they had heard these words, they marvelled, and left him, and went their way.

In other words, Jesus said, "Because coins are stamped with the image of Caesar, they belong to Caesar. But because man is made in the image of God, man belongs to God."

Matthew 22:23–28

The same day came to him the Sadducees, which say that there is no resurrection, and asked him, Saying, Master, Moses said, If a man die, having no children, his brother shall marry his wife, and raise up seed unto his brother. Now there were with us seven brethren: and the first, when he had married a wife, deceased, and, having no issue, left his wife unto his brother: Likewise the second also, and the third, unto the seventh. And last of all the woman died also. Therefore in the resurrection whose wife shall she be of the seven? for they all had her.

The Sadducees brought the next question. As those who didn't believe in resurrection, they asked a question that inferred there were practical problems with a belief in life after death. "If a woman had seven husbands," they asked, "which one would she be married to in heaven?"

Matthew 22:29, 30

Jesus answered and said unto them, Ye do err, not knowing the scriptures, nor the power of God. For in the resurrection they neither marry, nor are given in marriage, but are as the angels of God in heaven.

Jesus simply said, "In heaven, relationships are different than they are on earth." But then He continued . . .

Matthew 22:31–33

But as touching the resurrection of the dead, have ye not read that which was spoken unto you by God, saying, I am the God of Abraham, and the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob? God is not the God of the dead, but of the living. And when the multitude heard this, they were astonished at his doctrine.

God didn't say, "I was the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." He said, "I am the God of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob." By quoting this verse, Jesus gave the Sadducees this message: God is the God of the living. Heaven is real.

Matthew 22:34–36

But when the Pharisees had heard that he had put the Sadducees to silence, they were gathered together. Then one of them, which was a lawyer, asked him a question, tempting him, and saying, Master, which is the great commandment in the law?

The scribes had determined that of the 613 commandments in the Old Testament, 248 were positive injunctions and 365 were negative prohibitions. No doubt hoping to spark a controversy, the lawyer asked Jesus which of the 613 was the greatest commandment.

Matthew 22:37, 38

Jesus said unto him, Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy mind. This is the first and great commandment.

Jesus went right to the heart of the law: the Shemah. "And thou shalt love the LORD thy God with all thine heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy might" (Deuteronomy 6:5). The Jews knew this was the Great Commandment. Orthodox Jews wrote it out and put it in their mezuzahs—the small, elongated boxes they fastened to their front doorposts. They wrote it out and put it in their phylacteries—the leather pouches they wore on their foreheads in obedience to the command to keep the Word always on their minds. Thus, it would have been no surprise that Jesus named the Shemah, Deuteronomy 6:4, as the greatest commandment. But then He went on. . . .

Matthew 22:39

And the second is like unto it, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself.

"Like unto it" means "linked to it." In other words, the First and Second Commandments are inextricably linked together. Using this commandment, there are those who say that in order to love our neighbor, we must first love ourselves. I don't believe that is what Jesus is saying here. Rather, I believe He is saying, "Just as you already love yourself, care for yourself, and think about yourself, you are to love your neighbor in the same way." You see, according to 1 John 4:20, loving my neighbor is not dependent upon loving myself. It is dependent upon loving God.

The ability to love God and to love people are inextricably linked. The problem is, most of us separate the two because of our "TV dinner" spirituality. In a TV dinner, the Salisbury steak, peas, mashed potatoes, and cherry cobbler are all in separate compartments. And that's just what we do spiritually. "Oh yes, I love God," we say. "I'm going to worship Sunday night." But on Monday we call our boss an idiot behind his back, and on Wednesday we complain about how our neighbor idles his car too early in the morning. Yet Sunday finds us worshiping the Lord once again. We compartmentalize our lives thinking that how we treat people has nothing to do with our relationship with God.

Jesus says our walk with God is not a TV dinner. Rather, if we really love God, we'll inevitably love people, and our lives will become like a chicken pot pie. No longer compartmentalized, the peas, potatoes, and chicken will all be mixed together. Truly, if our love for God is genuine, it will naturally flow into a love for people.

Matthew 22:40

On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets.

The message of the Law and the Prophets, indeed the message of the entire Old Testament is summed up in one word: love. That is why Jesus says, "Love the Lord and love your neighbor and in so doing, you will exemplify the essence of all Old Testament teaching." I love the picture Jesus painted when He said that the Law and the prophets hang on loving God and loving our neighbor. As I look to heaven and love God; and as I look to my right and left and love people, I see the picture of a Cross. On these two hang all the Law and the Prophets. Who hung on the Cross? The One who loved His Father with all of His heart and soul, mind and strength; the One who loved us and gave Himself for us. Jesus is the Perfect One who loves His Father and who loves us.

Matthew 22:41–45

While the Pharisees were gathered together, Jesus asked them, saying, What think ye of Christ? whose son is he? They say unto him, The Son of David. He saith unto them, How then doth David in spirit call him Lord, saying, The LORD said unto my Lord, Sit thou on my right hand, till I make thine enemies thy footstool? If David then call him Lord, how is he his son?

Jesus quotes here from Psalm 110. We will see Peter use this same reference in his first sermon on the Day of Pentecost (Acts 2:34). This passage would have caused great consternation in the minds of the Pharisees who were so eager to confound and confuse Jesus. You see, in the Jewish culture, one would never call his offspring "Lord."

"Why, then," asked Jesus, "is David calling his own offspring Lord? Truly, David is referring to Someone greater than himself. If Christ be merely the Son of David as you suppose, David would never have called him Lord."

Matthew 22:46

And no man was able to answer him a word, neither durst any man from that day forth ask him any more questions.

The scribes and Pharisees, who prided themselves on their deep knowledge of Scripture, were stumped. Using the written Word, Jesus Christ —the Living Word—had beaten them at their own game.

23 We now come to the last public sermon of Jesus Christ, given only days before His death. I would have thought this last message would have been one of salvation and invitation. On the contrary, it was a message of condemnation and denunciation against the religious hierarchy of the day. Calling the Pharisees blind guides, fools, and whitewashed tombs, Jesus didn't hold back but spoke pointedly and powerfully concerning their hypocrisy.

The apostle Paul wrote that it is the goodness of God that leads men to repentance (Romans 2:4). In other words, God's love and grace are a greater motivation to salvation than hellfire and damnation. But Paul went on to say that some will be saved by fire (1 Corinthians 3:15). That is, those who will not respond to God's grace and goodness need to hear a strong message of judgment. That is why, after spending three years preaching the grace and goodness of His Father, Jesus gave this final word of judgment.

So, too, as you share the gospel with people, I encourage you to approach them first on the basis of God's goodness and grace. But if they continually harden their hearts, it may be that they need to feel the heat of His judgment.

Matthew 23:1, 2

Then spake Jesus to the multitude, and to his disciples, saying, The scribes and the Pharisees sit in Moses" seat.

Newer translations properly render this verse: "The scribes and the Pharisees have seated themselves in Moses' seat." In other words, the scribes and Pharisees had seized the position of authority, even though they were not called by God to do so. The first sign of false spiritual leadership is that it lacks God-given authority.

Matthew 23:3

All therefore whatsoever they bid you observe, that observe and do; but do not ye after their works: for they say, and do not.

Second, false spiritual leaders lack integrity. Although they may teach others to do right, they themselves only talk about it.

Matthew 23:4

For they bind heavy burdens and grievous to be borne, and lay them on men's shoulders; but they themselves will not move them with one of their fingers.

Third, false spiritual leaders lack sympathy. They bind heavy, legalistic burdens on others but won't lift a finger to help anyone bear them.

Matthew 23:5–7

But all their works they do for to be seen of men: they make broad their phylacteries, and enlarge the borders of their garments, love the uppermost rooms at feasts, and the chief seats in the synagogues, and greetings in the markets, and to be called of men, Rabbi, Rabbi.

Finally, false spiritual leaders lack humility. When the Pharisees went into the synagogue, they sat on the platform in large chairs in order to be seen by all. As time went on, they made phylacteries so big that some could hardly stand straight under the weight. They obeyed the command in Numbers 15 to place blue cloth on the hem of their robes as a reminder of their heavenly calling. But as their pride increased, so did the size of their blue borders.

Matthew 23:8–12

But be not ye called Rabbi: for one is your Master, even Christ; and all ye are brethren. And call no man your father upon the earth: for one is your Father, which is in heaven. Neither be ye called masters: for one is your Master, even Christ. But he that is greatest among you shall be your servant. And whosoever shall exalt himself shall be abased; and he that shall humble himself shall be exalted.

Jesus says the true spiritual leader does two things: He avoids elevated titles and he accepts lowly tasks. Jesus avoided the titles and honors that people wanted to heap upon Him in His early ministry, choosing instead to humble Himself, to eat with sinners, to wash feet, and to touch lepers. Jesus is the ultimate spiritual Leader.

Following His description of a true spiritual leader, Jesus did something I find intriguing. He ended His last sermon pronouncing eight woes. Bible students, think back. How did Jesus begin His public ministry? By pronouncing eight blessings in the form of the Beatitudes. Watch and see how the eight woes at the end of His preaching ministry correlate perfectly with the eight blessings given at the beginning of His ministry.

Matthew 23:13

But woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye shut up the kingdom of heaven against men: for ye neither go in yourselves, neither suffer ye them that are entering to go in.

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Matthew 5:3

Although the kingdom of heaven belongs to the poor in spirit, the Pharisees were proud in spirit. "I thank You, God, that I am not as other men," they prayed (see Luke 18:11). Their pride, Jesus said, would not only keep them from entering the kingdom, but would prevent others as well.

Matthew 23:14

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye devour widows' houses, and for a pretence make long prayer: therefore ye shall receive the greater damnation.

Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.

Matthew 5:4

Jesus promised that the mourners will be comforted. The Pharisees, however, manipulated those who mourned. You see, when a man died, the Pharisees would show up on his doorstep telling his widow that if she wanted to honor her husband's memory, she would make a donation to their ministry. Watch out for that, precious people. In this day when there's an abundance of fund-raising, be on guard against those who seek to manipulate rather than to comfort.

Matthew 23:15

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye compass sea and land to make one proselyte, and when he is made, ye make him twofold more the child of hell than yourselves.

Blessed are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.

Matthew 5:5

The meek were to inherit the earth. The Pharisees, on the other hand, were trying to convert the earth to their legalistic, hypocritical, religious system. The tragedy is that when a legalist lays his trip on someone else, the convert or proselyte becomes more zealous than the teacher and the end result is damnation.

Matthew 23:16–22

Woe unto you, ye blind guides, which say, Whosoever shall swear by the temple, it is nothing; but whosoever shall swear by the gold of the temple, he is a debtor! Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gold, or the temple that sanctifieth the gold? And, Whosoever shall swear by the altar, it is nothing; but whosoever sweareth by the gift that is upon it, he is guilty. Ye fools and blind: for whether is greater, the gift, or the altar that sanctifieth the gift? Whoso therefore shall swear by the altar, sweareth by it, and by all things thereon. And whoso shall swear by the temple, sweareth by it, and by him that dwelleth therein. And he that shall swear by heaven, sweareth by the throne of God, and by him that sitteth thereon.

Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.

Matthew 5:6

Blessed are those who hunger and thirst for righteousness—for integrity, truth, and simplicity. The Pharisees weren't hungering for righteousness. They were playing games with semantics and vocabulary. In Jesus' day, if one took an oath saying, "I swear by the temple," he could be lying through his teeth, and that would be acceptable. It was only when he said "I swear by the gold in the temple," that he was obligated to tell the truth. Thus, righteousness became a game.

Matthew 23:23, 24

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye pay tithe of mint and anise and cummin, and have omitted the weightier matters of the law, judgment, mercy, and faith: these ought ye to have done, and not to leave the other undone. Ye blind guides, which strain at a gnat, and swallow a camel.

Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

Matthew 5:7

According to Leviticus 11, the largest unclean animal was a camel. The smallest was a gnat. Jesus said the Pharisees picked gnats out of their soup but missed the big camel swimming around. They had all the little details down—even tithing their spice seeds—but missed the big picture of love, faith, mercy and righteousness.

Matthew 23:25, 26

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye make clean the outside of the cup and of the platter, but within they are full of extortion and excess. Thou blind Pharisee, cleanse first that which is within the cup and platter, that the outside of them may be clean also.

Blessed are the pure in heart: for they shall see God.

Matthew 5:8

The purity of the true believer enables him to see God. The hypocrisy of the Pharisee blinds him to the things of God.

Matthew 23:27, 28

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! for ye are like unto whited sepulchres, which indeed appear beautiful outward, but are within full of dead men's bones, and of all uncleanness. Even so ye also outwardly appear righteous unto men, but within ye are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

Blessed are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.

Matthew 5:9

At the same time the Pharisees claimed to be men of peace, they were secretly plotting the murder of the Prince of Peace.

Matthew 23:29–35

Woe unto you, scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites! because ye build the tombs of the prophets, and garnish the sepulchres of the righteous, And say, If we had been in the days of our fathers, we would not have been partakers with them in the blood of the prophets. Wherefore ye be witnesses unto yourselves, that ye are the children of them which killed the prophets. Fill ye up then the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, ye generation of vipers, how can ye escape the damnation of hell? Wherefore, behold, I send unto you prophets, and wise men, and scribes: and some of them ye shall kill and crucify; and some of them shall ye scourge in your synagogues, and persecute them from city to city: That upon you may come all the righteous blood shed upon the earth, from the blood of righteous Abel unto the blood of Zacharias son of Barachias, whom ye slew between the temple and the altar.

Blessed are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.

Matthew 5:10

Jesus said, "Blessed are the persecuted and woe to the persecutors."

"If they had been alive in our day, we wouldn't have killed the prophets," boasted the Pharisees. But their claim was invalidated by the fact that at that very moment they sought to execute the One of whom the prophets spoke. From Abel to Zechariah—from A to Z—they killed the prophets.

Matthew 23:36

Verily I say unto you, All these things shall come upon this generation.

What will come upon them? The blood, the death, the scourging, the tribulation, the persecution that had befallen the prophets throughout history. "His blood be upon our heads and our sons' heads," the Jews cried a few days later when they demanded the crucifixion of Jesus (see Matthew 27:25). And His blood would indeed be on their heads, for less than forty years after this, the Romans annihilated Jerusalem and slit the throats of ten thousand Jews living in Damascus.

Matthew 23:37, 38

O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, thou that killest the prophets, and stonest them which are sent unto thee, how often would I have gathered thy children together, even as a hen gathereth her chickens under her wings, and ye would not! Behold, your house is left unto you desolate.

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem . . ." Every time Jesus used a name twice, it was because His heart was breaking. . . .

And the Lord said, Simon, Simon, behold, Satan hath desired to have you, that he may sift you as wheat: But I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not: and when thou art converted, strengthen thy brethren.

Luke 22:31, 32

> And Jesus answered and said unto her, Martha, Martha, thou art careful and troubled about many things: But one thing is needful: and Mary hath chosen that good part, which shall not be taken away from her.

Luke 10:41, 42

Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me? Acts 9:4

"O Jerusalem, Jerusalem, how I wanted to gather you under My wings like a mother hen, to shield you from the heat, but you wouldn't let Me."

Matthew 23:39

> For I say unto you, Ye shall not see me henceforth, till ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.

I love the way Jesus ends this sermon. What were the people crying when He first rode into Jerusalem on a donkey? "Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord." Now Jesus refers back to that cry and says, "You'll say it again, only next time you'll say it with new understanding."

Notice He didn't say, "Ye shall not see me henceforth unless ye say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." He said, "Ye shall not see me henceforth until ye shall say, Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord." In other words, it's going to happen. The time is coming when the Jews will acknowledge Jesus as Lord.

There are three things of which the Bible says we are not to be ignorant: spiritual gifts (1 Corinthians 12:1), the Rapture (1 Thessalonians 4:13), and the salvation of Israel (Romans 11:25, 26). God is not finished with Israel, folks. The day is coming when Israel will say, "Blessed is he that comes in the name of the Lord." When will that happen? In Luke 21, Jesus said Jerusalem would be trodden down until the Gentile age was complete. Jerusalem was trodden down by the Gentiles from the time Rome destroyed the city in A.D. 70 until the return of Jewish control after the seven-day war. Thus, 1967 signaled the end of the Gentile age.

"Well," you say, "if the Gentile age ended in 1967, why haven't we been raptured yet?" According to Romans 11 and Luke 21, we're in overtime, the fifth quarter. Scripture says the Lord is longsuffering, not willing that any should perish (II Peter 3:9). Think of it this way: How many of you have been saved since June 1967? Aren't you glad we were given a "grace period"?

The time is at hand. Jesus will come and establish His throne in Jerusalem. Until then, His desire for us is the same as for the nation Israel. "Let Me gather you under My wings today," He says. "Come back to where you once were. Put away your worldly priorities, your backsliding, and your legalism. Time is short. It won't matter eternally how much money you saved, where you went to college, or how your career developed. What will matter is whether or not you were radical for Me, whether or not you lived to worship Me, whether or not you loved Me."

24 Matthew 24 and 25 comprise what is known as the Olivet Discourse, so named because it is a teaching Jesus gave to His disciples on the Mount of Olives overlooking Jerusalem. Chapter 24, the prophetic portion of the discourse, is basically a three-point message. In verses 1 through 14 Jesus speaks about the end times as they relate to the nations. In verses 15 through 36 He speaks about the end times as they relate to Israel specifically. In verses 37 through 42 He speaks about the end times as they relate to the church.

And Jesus went out, and departed from the temple: and his disciples came to him for to shew him the buildings of the temple.

As the disciples showed Jesus the temple, perhaps they were thinking, Wait a minute, Lord. Yes, the scribes and Pharisees are fools and hypocrites, but look at this temple! Surely there's something good here. The temple was indeed an incredible building. The gates were brass. The courts were marble. The furnishings were gold. The stones were huge. The chipping and carving of these stones was done in a rock quarry miles away so that during construction not a sound was heard on the temple mount (I Kings 6:7). Since chiseling and shaping took place in the quarry, when the stones arrived at the temple mount, they fit together perfectly.

Peter tells us we are living stones (I Peter 2:5). All of us will fit together perfectly in heaven. So guess what this world is. It's the rock quarry. Do you ever feel like you're being hammered on? Worn down? Chipped away? Welcome to the rock quarry. The Lord is smoothing us and preparing us here so that when we get to heaven, the sound of a hammer will not be heard.

Matthew 24:2

And Jesus said unto them, See ye not all these things? verily I say unto you, There shall not be left here one stone upon another, that shall not be thrown down.

This would seem impossible in the minds of the disciples. After all, the stones Jesus was talking about were massive in size, measuring twenty feet high, twenty feet wide, and forty feet long. But guess what happened. Less than forty years after Jesus spoke these words, the Romans stormed Jerusalem and, although Titus commanded his soldiers not to desecrate or harm the temple, one of them threw a torch into it. The ensuing fire became so hot that the gold inside began to melt and run down the walls between the rocks. When it cooled and solidified, the Roman soldiers began to pull down the stones of the temple in order to get to the gold hidden in the crevices. They didn't quit until they had managed to pull down every single stone. Exactly as Jesus had prophesied, not one stone remained upon another. That is why if you go to Jerusalem today, all you will see is the Wailing Wall, a part of the temple foundation. It's a massive wall, but small in comparison to what the temple had been.

Matthew 24:3

And as he sat upon the mount of Olives, the disciples came unto him privately, saying, Tell us, when shall these things be? and what shall be the sign of thy coming, and of the end of the world?

Associating the destruction of the temple with the end of the world, the disciples asked Jesus specifically, "What will be the sign of Your coming and the end of the world?"

Matthew 24:4, 5

And Jesus answered and said unto them, Take heed that no man deceive you. For many shall come in my name, saying, I am Christ; and shall deceive many.

Although there were many Messianic promises and great expectation among the Jewish people, not one person came on the scene claiming to be Messiah until after Jesus came. Why? For the same reason no one counterfeits two hundred dollar bills. Counterfeiters only counterfeit that which is real.

Matthew 24:6, 7 (a)

And ye shall hear of wars and rumours of wars: see that ye be not troubled: for all these things must come to pass, but the end is not yet. For nation shall rise against nation, and kingdom against kingdom . . .

With forty tons of explosives and a sophisticated weapon for every person on this planet, mankind has armed himself to the proverbial teeth. One scientist was recently asked which weapons would be used in World War III. This atomic scientist gave an answer that I thought was insightful when he said, "I'm not sure exactly which weapons will be detonated in World War III. But I'll tell you which ones will be used in World War IV: rocks."

"Rocks?"

"Yes. Rocks will be all that's left if World War III ever takes place."

Matthew 24:7 (b)

. . . and there shall be famines . . .

Famine is the result of a population explosion. It took from the time of Adam until 1857 for the population of this planet to reach one billion. Since then, we add a billion people every twenty years. We now have seven billion people. It's getting crowded, folks. And the effects are felt particularly in the third world.

Matthew 24:7 (c)
. . . and pestilences . . .

The Greek word translated "pestilence" implies unusual pestilence. Consider the AIDS virus. As of May 2001, the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) claimed that over one million Americans had been infected with AIDS. But the Brookings Institution and others dispute that figure, claiming the number of Americans infected is much higher, possibly three to four million.

Matthew 24:7 (d)
. . . and earthquakes, in divers places.

In 1976 a geological survey team discovered an interesting change happening in the tectonic plates upon which the earth rests. These gigantic plates are shifting in such a way that earthquakes now occur with greater frequency and intensity than at any time in recorded history. Jesus said when we begin to see pestilence, superpowers at war, famine, and earthquakes, we are to know the end is near.

Matthew 24:8
All these are the beginning of sorrows.

The Greek word translated "sorrows" is what we think of as "birth pangs." Like labor pains, war, famine, earthquakes, and pestilence will erupt and then subside. As we get closer to the time of "delivery," these "contractions" will intensify. I personally believe that the next birth pang will birth the kingdom. We're at eight centimeters, folks. Keep your eyes open and your ears tuned!

Matthew 24:9

Then shall they deliver you up to be afflicted, and shall kill you: and ye shall be hated of all nations for my name's sake.

Who shall be afflicted, killed and hated by all nations? The Jews. Yes, the Jews will experience a great revival during this time of tribulation. Yes, they will be saved by the millions. But they'll also be hated. All nations of the world will vent their anger and their hostility on one small nation, the nation of Israel.

Matthew 24:10, 11

And then shall many be offended, and shall betray one another, and shall hate one another. And many false prophets shall rise, and shall deceive many.

Although millions will be saved, false prophets will come on the scene and attempt to deceive the whole world.

Matthew 24:12 (a)

And because iniquity shall abound . . .

After Christians are removed from this planet in the Rapture, sin will run rampant. Part of the reason for the Tribulation is that, through it, sin will be exposed in all its grotesqueness. Then, when Jesus comes back seven years later, after experiencing the hideous results of unchecked sin, people will be ready to submit to His righteousness. Yet after one thousand years of living in a virtual Garden of Eden during the millennium, those born during that time and raised in that environment will have one last opportunity to choose. Satan will be released and, incredible as it seems, many will choose to follow him. So much for the theories of B. F. Skinner and other psychologists who contend that environment is responsible for man's problems.

"If you change man's environment, man will be good," they say. Not so. Man will have a perfect environment for one thousand years. Yet he will still rebel against God. Why? Because people are born sinners (Psalm 51:5). The solution, therefore, is not political reformation. The solution is spiritual regeneration. You can try to reform the political system. You can try to change the environment. But those are not the ultimate solutions. "Ye must be born again," Jesus said (John 3:7). Man must be changed from the inside out. That's the only answer.

Matthew 24:12 (b), 13

. . . the love of many shall wax cold. But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.

Because of sin, the love of people—both for God and for each other—will grow cold. But he who endures the Tribulation will be saved.

For topical study of Matthew 24:13 entitled "Enduring Through Tribulation," turn to page* 174.

Matthew 24:14

And this gospel of the kingdom shall be preached in all the world for a witness unto all nations; and then shall the end come.

Sometimes I hear preachers say that, on the basis of this verse, we must evangelize the world so Jesus can come back. I personally don't believe that is a correct understanding of this Scripture. Jesus will come back at a time already appointed by the Father. Surely the gospel is to be preached, and surely we are to participate in the process. But the second coming is not dependent upon us, for the greatest explosion of evangelism this world has ever seen will not take place until after we're gone. Revelation 7 tells us that after the Rapture, 144,000 Jewish evangelists will be anointed. Moses and perhaps Elijah will come back on the scene, working miracles and calling down fire from Heaven. An angel will fly across the sky saying, "Don't be fooled by Antichrist's system. Don't take the mark of the beast."

Matthew 24:15, 16 (a)

When ye therefore shall see the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, stand in the holy place, (whoso readeth, let him understand:) Then let them which be in Judaea flee . . .

Verse 15 begins the second section of Matthew 24. Jesus had spoken of the nations in verses 1–14. In verses 15–36, He will speak of the Jews. Speaking to the Jews, Jesus says very pointedly, "When you see the event spoken of by the prophet Daniel, called the abomination of desolation, run to the wilderness as fast as you can. Get out! Things are coming down!" What is the abomination of desolation? There are two parts to this cataclysmic event —one historic, one prophetic.

Daniel 11:31 speaks of the historic aspect of the abomination of desolation in reference to a tragic event in Jewish history. Following the reign of Alexander the Great, a king named Antiochus Epiphanes ruled Syria. He was an egomaniacal madman who believed he was the embodiment of the Greek god Zeus. When Antiochus realized that the Jews in Israel were not acknowledging him as God, he became enraged and ordered the destruction of Jerusalem. Thus, on a single day in 170 B.C., one hundred thousand Jewish males were slaughtered, the women raped, the city looted. Then Antiochus himself entered the temple, butchered a pig on the altar, and forced the priests to drink its blood and eat the raw pork. Finally, he smeared the remainder of the blood on the temple walls. It was the abomination of desolation for it was abominable and it left the people desolate.

The second aspect, an event yet to happen, is prophesied in Daniel 9:27. In the last days, a man will come on the scene who will make a seven-year peace treaty with Israel. Appearing to be her friend and protector, this leader will seem to defuse all of the problems in the Middle East. He will be charismatic and persuasive, an impressive intellectual, and a skilled orator. Called Antichrist in Scripture, he will capture the attention of the entire world. Although he will initially come across as a man of peace, in the middle of his seven-year peace treaty, 2 Thessalonians 2 tells us he will set up his image in the temple and demand to be worshipped as God. This second abomination will result in desolation across this planet. Jesus said, "When you see this happen—Run!" Where?

Matthew 24:16 (b)

. . . into the mountains.

Zechariah declares that following the abomination of desolation, the Jews will indeed flee. But only one-third of them will make it to safety (Zechariah 13:8, 9). Tragically, two-thirds of the Jewish nation will be caught in the flood of persecution that will follow Antichrist's declaration of war against them. The violence and bloodshed will be staggering—beyond anything this world has ever seen. Most Bible teachers believe the remainder of the Jews will run to the ancient city of Petra. Located in present-day Jordan, Petra is a mysterious, miraculous city indeed. . . .

> In approximately 2000 B.C., Esau settled in a volcanic crater that was approximately a mile in length. It was an incredibly secure place, for to get into the crater, one had to go through a narrow canyon only twelve feet wide in many places with a rock face between two hundred feet and one thousand feet high on either side. The entire city could be easily guarded by only fifteen soldiers marching along the ridges above its narrow entrance. Thus, the descendants of Esau, called the Edomites, dwelt in this city of Petra for centuries, believing they were invincible. Over the years, they constructed an architectural phenomenon. Carved right into the rock are amphitheatres, banks, temples, and an aqueduct system that baffles scientists to this day. With a population of one million, no one can figure out how they got enough water into the city to sustain the inhabitants. The Edomites were a proud people who trusted in their fortress, rested in their cliff city, and had no need of Jehovah. So Obadiah came on the scene in the name of the Lord and said they would fall. And guess what. They did. The city began to weaken when it was struck with a plague. Eventually, the Edomites were wiped out entirely.

For many years, people heard stories about the rock city of Petra. Bible teachers would talk about it, but in most people's minds, it had been relegated to the same status as the lost city of Atlantis—a mythological place that never really existed.

In 1812, however, a Bible teacher/explorer/adventurer named Johann Burckhardt was determined to find Petra. And when he finally did, he couldn't believe what he saw, for although it had been abandoned for centuries and remains desolate to this day, he was amazed by its grandeur and splendor. Perhaps most arresting, however, were the two huge eagles' wings carved into the rock at the very entrance of the city, for the Book of Revelation declares that the remnant of Israel will be saved by the wings of an eagle (Revelation 12:14). A number of years ago, W. E. Blackstone, another Bible teacher, was so convinced that Petra will be the place in which the Jews are kept safe, he purchased thousands of Hebrew New Testaments, underlined passages like Matthew 24 and Revelation 12, and left them in earthen jars throughout Petra.When the Jews get there, the Bibles will be waiting for them. I love it!

Matthew 24:17

Let him which is on the housetop not come down to take any thing out of his house.

You might be thinking, What is this about a housetop? How many times are we on our roofs? Remember, this section is speaking to the Jews, and in Israel even to this day, people relax on roof-top decks.

Matthew 24:18–21

Neither let him which is in the field return back to take his clothes. And woe unto them that are with child, and to them that give suck in those days! But pray ye that your flight be not in the winter, neither on the sabbath day: For then shall be great tribulation, such as was not since the beginning of the world to this time, no, nor ever shall be.

Pray that the abomination of desolation doesn't come on the Sabbath day. Why? Because in Israel, transportation comes to a standstill on the Sabbath. This is another indication that Jesus is speaking to the Jews. It wouldn't matter if the abomination of desolation came on the Sabbath in our country. Sadly, our nation treats the Sabbath no differently than any other day.

Matthew 24:22

And except those days should be shortened, there should no flesh be saved: but for the elect's sake those days shall be shortened.

The final three-and-one-half years after Antichrist reveals his true nature in the temple and the Jews flee to the wilderness will be a time of disaster, destruction, and death unlike any other in history. Here, Jesus is saying that unless the days were shortened, no one would survive them. The entire world would be annihilated. But God will shorten those days for the elect's sake. And here is where controversy arises.

There are those who say that since the church is called "the elect," the church must be in the Tribulation period. Mark this down, students of prophecy: In passages such as Isaiah 45:4; 65:9; and Romans 11:28, God specifically calls Israel "His elect." It's not just Christians who are called "the elect." In fact, there are three groups in the Bible who are called by that name: Israel, the church, and those saved in the Tribulation. Keep in mind that in verses 15–36—with references to Judaea, the Sabbath, and the temple—Jesus is still speaking to Israel.

Matthew 24:23–27

Then if any man shall say unto you, Lo, here is Christ, or there; believe it not. For there shall arise false Christs, and false prophets, and shall shew great signs and wonders; insomuch that, if it were possible, they shall deceive the very elect. Behold, I have told you before. Wherefore if they shall say unto you, Behold, he is in the desert; go not forth: behold, he is in the secret chambers; believe it not. For as the lightning cometh out of the east, and shineth even unto the west; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

False spiritual leaders will come on the scene, saying, "We have found Messiah. He's in the desert," or "He's over here," or "He's over there."

Jesus said, “Don’t believe any of them. When I truly come, it will be like lightning. It will be obvious to everyone.” He didn’t say, “I’m coming again to Brooklyn in 1921 to reveal Myself to the Watchtower Society.” He didn’t say, “I’m coming again in the late 1800s to reveal Myself through magic spectacles to Joseph Smith.” No. He said, “When I come, it will be like lightning. Everyone will see Me.”

Matthew 24:28

For wheresoever the carcase is, there will the eagles [vultures] be gathered together.

Here, Jesus makes an allusion to the battle of Armageddon that is further illuminated in Revelation 19. When the nations of the world come together for war in the Valley of Megiddo, carcasses will indeed abound and vultures will follow. So, too, the world system with all its pride, pomposity, and prowess will become nothing more than a dead carcass. No matter how much progress we might make politically, the system will always be corrupt because of depravity. Things are wrong in society, and the answer lies not in capitalism, socialism, or communism. The answer is not democracy, oligarchy, or anarchy. The only answer is the return of Jesus Christ.

Matthew 24:29, 30

Immediately after the tribulation of those days shall the sun be darkened, and the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall fall from heaven, and the powers of the heavens shall be shaken: And then shall appear the sign of the Son of man in heaven: and then shall all the tribes of the earth mourn, and they shall see the Son of man coming in the clouds of heaven with power and great glory.

Why will the tribes of the earth mourn? Zechariah tells us that when Israel looks at Jesus and sees the wounds in His hands, the Jews will say, “Where did You get those wounds?”

“I received these in the house of My friends,” He will answer (Zechariah 13:6).

And Israel will mourn as they look upon the One they have pierced.

Matthew 24:31

And he shall send his angels with a great sound of a trumpet, and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, from one end of heaven to the other.

The angels shall gather the elect. Which elect? The Jews. Remember, Jesus is still dealing with Israel in this section. In 1948, something took place that had never before happened in history: a nation was re-birthed. A nation that hadn't existed for almost two thousand years was suddenly re-established exactly as the Old Testament prophesied when Jews from all over the world gathered in Israel once again. But their gathering has not been even close to complete. For example, more Jews live in New York City than live in the entire nation of Israel. And even though thousands of Russian Jews immigrated into Israel each week in the wake of the fall of the iron curtain, most of them immediately sought to leave Israel for New York. When Jesus comes back again, there will be a complete re-gathering. When will that happen? Look at verse 32.

Matthew 24:32–35

Now learn a parable of the fig tree; When his branch is yet tender, and putteth forth leaves, ye know that summer is nigh: So likewise ye, when ye shall see all these things, know that it is near, even at the doors. Verily I say unto you, This generation shall not pass, till all these things be fulfilled. Heaven and earth shall pass away, but my words shall not pass away.

The fig tree is the symbol of Israel nationally, historically, and scripturally. On May 14, 1948, the fig tree blossomed once again when the land of Israel was returned to the Jews. Jesus said the generation that sees that event take place will not pass away. Who is that generation? We are.

Matthew 24:36

But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of heaven, but my Father only.

Jesus used the budding fig tree as an example of what to watch for regarding His return, for although no one will know the exact day and hour of His arrival, Paul tells us we will recognize the times and seasons (1 Thessalonians 5:1).

Matthew 24:37

But as the days of Noah were, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be.

Like Noah, you and I are end times believers. Noah lived before the Flood, we before the fire. Noah spoke of coming rain, we of the coming reign. And just as it was in Noah's day, so it will be in the day of Jesus' coming. What was it like in Noah's day? In Genesis 6, we see four parallels between Noah's day and the days in which we live.

In the days of Noah, there was a population explosion (Genesis 6:1). Due to the fact that in Noah's day, men lived for eight or nine hundred years, there were probably five to six billion people on the planet during the time of the Flood.

In the days of Noah, abnormal sexual practices abounded (Genesis 6:4). Most Bible scholars believe that Genesis 6:4 is a reference to fallen angels having sexual relationships with human women. So, too, we live in a time of abnormal sexual practices. Things that were unthinkable a generation ago are now commonplace and accepted.

When the hierarchy of the Episcopal Church is encouraging homosexual union as a pathway to personal holiness (Newsweek: 2/90), we are indeed living in dark, dark days.

In Noah's day, the imagination of man was evil continually (Genesis 6:5). Seeing that men's hearts were only evil continually, God decided to lovingly put them out of their misery. Thus, the Flood accomplished quickly and mercifully the destruction their sin and perversion would bring about inevitably. So, too, the imagination of people in our society is evil continually—as evidenced by the fact that in our country, legal pornography is now a multi-billion dollar industry.

In Noah's day, violence filled the earth (Genesis 6:11). I read recently that the high rate of suicide among policemen is attributed to the fact that of the thousands of violent crimes committed in this country, only a handful of criminals are brought to justice. No wonder policemen are frustrated and suicidal. Violence runs rampant, while justice is hamstrung.

Matthew 24:38

For as in the days that were before the flood they were eating and drinking, marrying and giving in marriage, until the day that Noah entered into the ark.

Although Noah had been pounding on his ark and preaching to the people for one hundred and twenty years, they didn't listen. Since it had never rained on the planet before, they must have thought Noah was all wet.

Matthew 24:39–41

And knew not until the flood came, and took them all away; so shall also the coming of the Son of man be. Then shall two be in the field; the one shall be taken, and the other left. Two women shall be grinding at the mill; the one shall be taken, and the other left.

This is a controversial passage. Many say Jesus is speaking of the judgment that will take place when He comes back to rule and reign in Jerusalem. However, I join those who believe Jesus is speaking not of judgment but of the Rapture. You see, the Greek word translated "took" in verse 39 is airo. But in verses 40 and 41, the word translated "taken" is paralombano. Why? Looking through my concordance, I find three other times paralombano is used. In Matthew 1:20, the angel told Joseph not to be afraid to take Mary as his bride: In Matthew 17:1, Jesus took Peter, James, and John with Him up the Mount of Transfiguration. In John 14:3, Jesus said, "I will come again and take you unto Myself, that where I am there ye may be also." And I begin to see a pattern. Using paralombano, Jesus is not talking about judgment, punishment, and damnation. He's talking about a bride, glory, and Heaven. In other words, He's talking about the Rapture.

Matthew 24:42–51

Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh. Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods. But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to smite his fellowservants, and to eat and drink with the drunken; the lord of that servant shall come in a day when he looketh not for him, and in an hour that he is not aware of, and shall cut him asunder, and appoint him his portion with the hypocrites: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

In light of the end times, Jesus instructs us to be faithful servants—to be watchful, wise, and warned concerning our Master's return.

ENDURING THROUGH TRIBULATION
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 24:13

Matthew 24:13 is not only applicable prophetically but also presently, for in this world, Jesus said we would have tribulations. Our Christian life is a race to be run (Hebrews 12:1). And that race, dear people, is not a one hundred-meter sprint. It's a marathon.

> But he that shall endure unto the end, the same shall be saved.
> Matthew 24:13

The Greek word translated "saved" is sozo, a word that refers to the full orb of God's blessing. In other words, according to Matthew 24:13, those who endure the marathon will experience the blessing of God upon themselves, their families, their ministries, their finances, and their vocations. They will experience the full orb of God's blessing in every area of their lives.

The Call to Endurance

In the fifth chapter of his book, James picks up on the theme of enduring to the end . . .

> Behold, we count them happy which endure. Ye have heard of the patience of Job, and have seen the end of the Lord; that the Lord is very pitiful [compas sionate], and of tender mercy.
> James 5:11

This passage brings a question to our minds: "Lord, if You are merciful and compassionate, then why do You allow troubles to come against us and problems to plague us? Why don't You do something, Lord?"

James says, "Remember Job. Remember the heroes of the Old Testament. Don't lose sight of their example." There was one prophet who felt exceedingly weary. His name was Jeremiah. Jeremiah's problems were mounting on all sides, and he was about to throw in the towel as far as ministry was concerned. "Jeremiah," the Lord said to him, "you have run against the footmen and if you faint in running against the footmen, how will you run against the horses? You've been engaged in some battles. But if you're fainting now, what will you do when the horses come, when the big problems hit you?" (see Jeremiah 12:5). The Lord went on to tell him that the Babylonians were coming to carry the Jews out of their homeland. It's as if God said, "You think it's tough now, Jeremiah, but I see what's coming, and I am preparing you by allowing you to go through these difficulties and trials. I'm allowing you to go through hard times to prepare you for what I know lies ahead."

If God used hard times to prepare Jeremiah for the Babylonians, why didn't He save Himself and Jeremiah a lot of trouble and just destroy the Babylonians in the first place? For the same reason He doesn't destroy the problems in our lives: because this world has rejected His rule. Ever since the Garden of Eden, mankind has thumbed his nose at God and demanded liberation, saying, "We will do what we want."

It is because all of humanity throughout all of history has rebelled against God that we have disease and death, pollution and war, troubles and problems. Not only in the world generally, but in our worlds personally, whenever you and I rebel against the way of God, we reap devastation, destruction, and sadness. The Father does not promise to keep us from problems, but to be with us in them. Since He sees what is coming two years down the road, He says, "I see what's ahead and I'm going to work with you right now to get you ready. I'm going to have you race against the footmen so that when the horses come stampeding through, you'll be able to endure."

I think of Mama giraffe. When she gives birth, she does so from a standing position. This means when Baby giraffe is born, he immediately falls on his head ten feet to the ground. Mama then does something that absolutely intrigues me. After quickly stretching her neck down to check Baby's condition, she stands upright once again, swings her front leg, and kicks him. Baby then tries to stand up, wobbles, and falls to the ground in exhaustion. No sooner does Baby collapse than Mama winds up her leg and kicks him once more. This happens, three, four, or five times until Baby finally musters up enough strength—the adrenaline flowing and terror filling his heart—to stand up.

Once Baby gets up on all fours, Mama again swings her leg and kicks his legs out from under him. And the process is repeated two, three, or four more times. The result? Within the first hour of his life, Baby learns how to get up quickly and to move away from Mama readily. Why does Mama giraffe do this? She's not trying to be mean, but she instinctively understands that leopards, lions, hyenas, and jackals were watching the birth of her baby. Because giraffes are defenseless if they cannot move together in a pack, Baby must learn quickly how to stand up and get moving—even if it means getting mad at Mama and not understanding what she's doing.

Maybe you can relate. "What are you doing, God?" you might be asking. "I just barely get up and BAM! I'm down again. I just get going and BOOM! I'm flat on my face once more. What's happening?" The Lord is teaching you something. He loves you and me enough that even though we misunderstand Him, shake our fist at Him, or turn our back on Him, He says, "I know this is needed in your life in order that you might stand and be established, in order that you might be able to run with the horses, in order that you might endure."

The Key to Endurance

God is with us. That is the secret of endurance.

> By faith Moses, when he was come to years, refused to be called the son of Pharaoh's daughter; choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; esteeming the reproach of Christ greater riches than the treasures in Egypt: for he had respect unto the recompence of the reward.
> Hebrews 11:24–26

Having grown up in Pharaoh's court, Moses was in line to ascend the very throne of Pharaoh. Yet he chose instead to take on the reproach of Christ, for it was a greater treasure than the best Egypt had to offer. I like that! Sure, we go through suffering and reproach, tribulations and difficulties. But even they are better than the best the world has to offer us, with its heartache, disappointment, and disillusionment.

At forty years of age, Moses said, "I would rather be with God's people and suffer than remain in this place where the pleasures of sin are for but a season." And he split the scene. Then he began to lead the people out of Egypt. For forty years, he led them through the wilderness. It wasn't easy. It was hot and dry. You think you're going through dry times? Think of Moses! You think people don't like you? Scripture says three million Jews rose up as a single man with rocks in hand, ready to stone him (Exodus 17:4).

How did Moses make it? How did he endure the rejection, dry times, and constant troubles from within and without? Look at verse 27: "By faith he forsook Egypt, not fearing the wrath of the king: for he endured as seeing him who is invisible." In other words, Moses saw God's hand in every situation.

> Several years ago, I talked with a lady who was devastated. She was ready to leave everything to marry a man who lived across the country. Although she hadn't known him very long, she felt it was providential. But the day before she was to leave, she discovered some things about him that indicated he had some serious problems. She had packed her goods, cut all her ties, and sold her business only to discover a day before the wedding that it wasn't going to happen. I understood her feeling of disappointment as she wondered, What's the Lord doing? Where is He? Why is He allowing this to happen to me?

In response, I told her it would be like if I had come home and seen my daughter Christy unwrapping a king-size Snickers bar. As she was just about to take a big bite, I lunged at her, grabbed the Snickers from her, and threw it to the floor, saying, "Christy, haven't you heard the news? Every Snickers in Oregon has been laced with arsenic. One bite will kill you!" Now, at that point, Christy would either have said, "Oh, Dad, I was just ready to enjoy that Snickers bar, and you took it from me. How mean!" Or she could say, "Oh, Daddy, thanks for rescuing me! You knew something I didn't. You saved my life!"

So, too, when the Father intervened in that lady's situation, she had a choice to make. She could have said, "Why is this happening to me?" Or she could have seen Him who is invisible, seen His hand in everything, and said, "Father, thank You for grabbing the Snickers from me. You caught me just in time!"

Dear saint, you have a choice to make right now in whatever you're going through. You can either shrivel up and fade away like the shallow seed in Mark 4, or you can endure, seeing God's hand in everything and everything in His hand.

Look at God's hand, and what will you see? A nail print. The invisible God became a visible Man in Christ Jesus. And as I see His nail-scarred hand, I have no choice but to say, "If You loved me enough to be pinned to the Cross for me and to plunge into hell for me, I will trust You, even though I may not understand what's happening presently."

What is faith? According to Hebrews 11, it is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. There is no such thing as "blind faith." On the contrary, faith sees more than unbelief ever will because it sees into an entirely different dimension. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the Word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear" (see Hebrews 11:3).

The Hebrew word for create is bara, which means "to make something out of that which does not exist previously." In other words, God made everything from nothing. It wasn't that He refashioned material that already existed, but rather that He started "from scratch" when He spoke the worlds into existence. So, too, the world in which you live personally—your children, your job, your ministry, your marriage, and your finances—is presently being framed. You are framing your world, even as God framed this world by speaking the Word.

Think of a carpenter framing a house. The house is formed by how it's framed. Maybe you have framed your world with unbelief and griping, complaining and doubting, saying, "Why me? How come? Where's God?" Maybe you don't like the house you live in because the walls are falling down, the tiles are falling off, and it's a miserable place to live. Don't blame God. You built it. You framed it with complaints, cynicism and faltering faith. We have another option. We can say, "By faith I will frame my world with the Word of God. I will study the Scriptures. I will claim the promises and speak them in faith."

> And we know that all things work together for good to them that love God, to them who are the called according to his purpose.
> Romans 8:28

> . . . For the joy of the LORD is your strength.
> Nehemiah 8:10

> But my God shall supply all your need according to his riches in glory by Christ Jesus.
> Philippians 4:19

Today I can build a house trusting God, seeing Him who is invisible, and believing His promises—or I can murmur to my wife when I get home. God judged the nation of Israel because they murmured in their tents (Deuteronomy 1:27). Husbands and wives got together, spoke words of complaint and unbelief to each other, and a great plague struck the land.

Speak the promises of God to each other. Go on record. Build a world that is in accordance with the Word of God as revealed in Scripture. Speak words of faith, and you'll endure.

> Winston Churchill, 248 pounds of solid inspiration, saw England through Germany's blitzkrieg. As the Third Reich dropped thousands of bombs on London, Hitler felt, as did other international observers, that England would fall easily. But this bulldog of a man, Winston Churchill, went on the air time and time again, calling his nation to hang on and to believe. And England didn't go down. Years later, one of his alma maters, an exclusive prep school, asked him to speak at graduation. When he accepted the invitation, the headmaster of the school was elated. For weeks he told the student body, "Soon Winston Churchill is coming. The most powerful orator in history is going to speak here. When he comes, bring your pencils and paper and take note of every word he says." Finally the day came. The graduation service began. The students, sitting behind the speakers' podium, had pencils and paper poised. The parents and guests settled in for a long, inspirational speech. After many flowery introductions, Churchill finally arose from his chair, took the podium, and turned around to address the young men behind him.
> "Gentlemen," he said, "Never give up. Never give up. Never, never, never, never, give up."
>
> Then he sat down. The students were stunned. The audience was amazed. And none of them ever, ever, ever forgot it.

That's what Jesus says to us. Never give up. He that endures to the end shall be saved.

So when the Father seems to be kicking your wobbly legs out from under you or when you seem to be running hard against the footmen, know this: It's all working for your ultimate salvation. Endure, gang, by seeing the invisible. Endure by framing your world with faith.

And never give up.

THE FINAL GENERATION

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 24:32–35

Written by a then-unknown author named Hal Lindsay, The Late Great Planet Earth exposed an entire generation to the concepts of the Rapture of the church and the return of Jesus Christ. It was foundational to the Jesus Movement of the '70s, which started on the West Coast, spread across the country, and eventually circled the globe. Lindsay and other teachers of prophecy during that time stressed this teaching in Matthew 24. The parable of the fig tree enflamed the hearts of an entire generation—for Jesus said the budding of the fig tree signaled His impending return.

What is the budding of the fig tree? Scripture interprets Scripture. Thus, Jeremiah, Joel, Hosea, and others identify the fig tree as the nation Israel. For centuries, Israel seemed to be a dead tree. In the year A.D. 70, the Romans marched into Jerusalem, destroyed the city, and took over the country. The Jews scattered every direction in fulfillment of Deuteronomy 28:64–67. But in addition to saying the Jews would be scattered throughout the world, God also said, "But The Lord liveth, which brought up and which led the seed of the house of Israel out of the north country, and from all countries whither I had driven them; and they shall dwell in their own land" (Jeremiah 23:8).

You see, when the Jews were scattered, something happened historically that had never happened previously in world history. Without a homeland, the Jewish people kept their identity, religion, and ethnicity intact. No other nation in the history of the world has ever done that. Every other country swallowed by another has become assimilated by the conquering culture within two generations. That is why you never hear of Babylonians today and why none of you have Assyrian neighbors. The Jews kept their identity—not for two generations, but for two thousand years. Through wave after wave of persecution, prejudice and bigotry, Satan was relentless in his attempt to destroy them. But he failed.

Satan's plans always backfire. In the aftermath of the Holocaust, the world said, "The Jews deserve a land of their own. World sympathy was with the Jewish people for the first and only time in history. So it was that on May 14, 1948, Israel became a nation again. The fig tree that had appeared to be dead and hopeless suddenly sprang back to life and blossomed—just as Jesus prophesied. And, according to Matthew 24:34, the generation that saw that happen would be the final generation.

What constitutes a generation? Hal Lindsay and others taught that a Biblical generation could be a thirty-eight to forty-year time period.

> And the Lord's anger was kindled against Israel, and he made them wander in the wilderness forty years, until all the generation, that had done evil in the sight of the LORD*, was consumed.*
> Numbers 32:13

> And the space in which we came from Kadesh-barnea, until we were come over the brook Zered, was thirty and eight years; until all the generation of the men of war were wasted out from among the host, as the LORD sware unto them.
> Deuteronomy 2:14

Thus, anticipation grew. Excitement and expectancy filled the hearts of many, for if you add forty years to 1948—and if you believe the rapture of the Church takes place seven years before the return of Jesus, the Rapture would take place in 1980 or 1981. Truly the time was near! T-shirts, bumper stickers, and posters were printed. Maranatha—"Come quickly, Lord"—became the watchword of believers. 1981 came. So did 1982, '83, '84, '85, and '86. And then something began to happen. A whole bunch of radical Christians began to cool off, saying, "Maybe we're here for a while after all. Maybe we shouldn't be so committed to this kingdom thing." Oh, they didn't say it in those exact words, but that's what they were thinking. And a dulling of expectancy swept over our generation.

What went wrong? Perhaps forty years is not the figure we should work with when looking at a Biblical generation. Take a look at Genesis 15 . . .

> And he said unto Abram, Know of a surety that thy seed shall be a stranger in a land that is not theirs, and shall serve them; and they shall afflict them four hundred years; and also that nation, whom they shall serve, will I judge: and afterward shall they come out with great substance. But in the fourth generation they shall come hither again. . . .

Genesis 15:13, 14, 16

Here in Genesis 15, God refers to the four-hundred-year period the Jews were in Egypt as four generations. Therefore, in this model, a generation is not forty years but one hundred years. If a generation is one hundred years, am I suggesting that the Rapture will take place in 2048—one hundred years after the rebirth of the nation of Israel? No. I suggest it will be before then. You see, there is a principle in Bible interpretation called the Principle of First Mention that says foundational understanding about any given subject is usually found in the first place it is mentioned in Scripture. Where is the Greek term, "generation" first mentioned? In Matthew 1:17 we read: So all the generations from Abraham to David are fourteen generations; and from David until the carrying away into Babylon are fourteen generations; and from the carrying away into Babylon unto Christ are fourteen generations.

Sharpen your pencils and think with me: Christian and Jewish theologians alike agree that, based on Biblical genealogies, Abraham was called by God in the year 2085 B.C. Genesis 2 tells us he was seventy-five years old at that time, which means Abraham was born in 2160 B.C. Matthew 1:17 tells us there were forty-two generations (14x3) from Abraham to Christ. So, if you divide 2160—the year of Abraham's birth—by 42, you get 51.4. Thus, scripturally, there is validity for a Biblical generation to be 51.4 years.

Jesus told us that no man knows the day or the hour of His return. But of the times and season we are not to be ignorant (1 Thessalonians 5:1). Hebrews 10:25 says we are not to forsake assembling ourselves together so much the more as we see that day coming. 1 Thessalonians tells us that the return of Christ will surprise the world but not us (1 Thessalonians 5:4).

But, beloved, be not ignorant of this one thing, that one day is with the Lord as a thousand years, and a thousand years as one day.

2 Peter 3:8

From the Lord's perspective, one thousand years equals one day and one day equals one thousand years. This answers a lot of questions. For example, God told Adam that the day he ate of the forbidden fruit he would surely die. Yet Adam lived to be 938 years old. Why? From God's perspective, a day being a thousand years, Adam died towards the end of the "day" in which he sinned. God kept His promise perfectly.

From this perspective, the early church fathers taught that the Genesis account of creation is not only history, but prophecy. God worked for six days. So, too, this world will work for six thousand years. On the seventh day of creation, God rested. So, too, in the seven thousandth year, there will come a one thousand-year period of time called the millennium when there will be rest and peace.

When is the seven thousandth year? When will Christ return?

In the year 1670, a brilliant thinker and theologian, Archbishop Usher, made some calculations that have withstood computer confirmation. By adding the years of the genealogy in Genesis, he calculated that Adam appeared on the scene in 4004 B.C.

"Wait a minute," you say. "It is well known that man has been on the earth for multiplied millions of years. How can you say that the first man appeared only six thousand years ago?"

Science is not at all committed to an ancient earth theory any longer.

Dr. Stuart Ross, a brilliant astronomer and thinker, but not a believer, wrote a book entitled The Lunar Silence—A Post-Apollo View, in which he makes a number of fascinating observations, among them the following. . . .

> In our first manned shot to the moon about twenty years ago Neil Armstrong stepped on to the moon's surface saying, "One small step for man, one giant leap for mankind." Did you ever wonder why it was that he had to climb so far down from the module to actually set foot on the moon? Why was the module perched twenty-five feet off the moon's surface? Ross writes that scientists, believing the moon to be 4.6 billion years old, were convinced that the accumulation of > meteorite dust on the moon's surface would be at least two thousand and perhaps as much as twenty thousand feet deep. After all, if you didn't dust your house for 4.6 billion years, what would your house look like? So, twenty-five-foot legs with big cushions were constructed in order that the module could compact the dust as it landed and not sink indefinitely into a sea of meteorite powder. Imagine the scientists' surprise when they watched the lunar module set down without sinking a bit. In fact, the greatest depth of lunar dust measured thus far is two inches. Consequently, a number of scientists, including Dr. Stuart Ross, are now saying the moon can be no more than ten thousand years old.

On the other hand, even if you opt for an ancient earth, I still believe that the genealogies of Genesis take you back accurately to 4000 B.C.—or six thousand years ago. Genesis 1:1 says, "In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth." Genesis 1:2 says, "And the earth was without form, and void." The Hebrew translation of "without form and void" is tohuw va bohuw, which means "chaotic, turned upside-down, emptied."

Isaiah 45:18, however, says ". . . God himself that formed the earth and made it; he hath established it, he created it not in vain." In other words, He created the earth with form.

Is this a contradiction? No. Along with many Bible scholars, I believe a cataclysmic event occurred between Genesis 1:1 and Genesis 1:2. I believe it was between these two verses that Lucifer, the highest angel in Heaven, launched a rebellion against God and was cast out of Heaven. And it was when he fell to earth that the earth became "tohuw va bohuw." So God recreated the earth. That's why, in Genesis 1:28, He told Adam to replenish and subdue the earth (Genesis 1:28). Subdue it from whom? From Satan, who had set up his headquarters on this planet.

Whether you espouse an "old earth" theory or a much younger earth theory, the genealogies of Genesis meet with no scientific contradiction. Adam made his entrance in 4000 B.C. What does this mean? The answer is found in the Book of Hosea. . . .

Come, and let us return unto the LORD*: for he hath torn, and he will heal us; he hath smitten, and he will bind us up. After two days will he revive us: in the third day he will raise us up, and we shall live in his sight.* Hosea 6:1, 2

Writing of the End Times, Hosea says for two days the Jewish people will go through hard, tearing, difficult times. But on the third day, they will be revived. Thus, the calculation is complete:

Day 1	Adam is created	4000 B.C.
Day 4	The coming of Jesus Christ	A.D. 1
Days 5–6	Israel goes through hard times	A.D. 1–2000
Day 7	Israel revived during millennium	A.D. 2000

I am not alone in this interpretation.

In A.D. 150, Iranius wrote concerning the Book of Genesis: "This is an account of things formerly created as it is also a prophecy of things which are yet to come, for the day of the Lord is as one thousand years. And in six days, created things were completed. It is evident, therefore, they will come to an end at the end of six thousand years." Lactanius said this in A.D. 300: "Because all the works of God were finished in six days, it is necessary that the world should remain in this state for six thousand years. Because having finished works, He rested on the seventh day and blessed it, it is necessary then, at the end of the six thousandth year, wickedness should be abolished out of the earth and righteousness should then reign for one thousand years."God's week of human history is rapidly coming to completion. The return of Christ is nigh.

I believe you who are in your teens and early twenties are very possibly the last generation. Set your heart on things above. Live for heaven. Seek first the kingdom, and you will be happy presently, rewarded eternally, and grateful constantly.

You who are older, continue setting an example for us who are younger. Continue to make the Lord top priority in your life. We're looking to you in a very real sense. Please keep the fire hot.

Fellow baby boomers, we need to realize that Jesus Christ is coming soon. We don't have time to play around. We don't have time to chase worldly pursuits any longer. We need to return to ministry and service, worship and prayer, Bible study and street witnessing. Whatever it was you used to do when you were fired up about Jesus in the '70s, do it again.

Maranatha!

BEING WATCHFUL, WISE, WARNED

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 24:42–49

After giving His disciples information concerning the end times, Jesus now gives them inspiration for all times. You see, prophecy is not given to titillate our curiosity. Rather, prophecy should motivate us to sobriety.

An Exhortation to Be Watchful

> Watch therefore: for ye know not what hour your Lord doth come. But know this, that if the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched, and would not have suffered his house to be broken up. Therefore be ye also ready: for in such an hour as ye think not the Son of man cometh.
> Matthew 24:42–44

When will Jesus come?
If you're not watching, He'll come when you least expect Him.

The story is told of a lady in Czechoslovakia who was in great despair. Having recently discovered that her husband had been seeing another woman, she stood on her fifth-floor balcony, wondering whether she should kill him or whether she should take her own life. She decided to do the latter. She jumped. Little did she know that at that very moment, her husband was walking on the sidewalk directly below. She landed right on top of him. He died. She lived.

Watch! You never know who will be dropping in! You who are feeling despondent, discouraged, defeated, and depressed, know this: The Lord is coming! Watch!

An Exhortation to Be Wise

> Who then is a faithful and wise servant, whom his lord hath made ruler over his household, to give them meat in due season? Blessed is that servant, whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing. Verily I say unto you, That he shall make him ruler over all his goods.
>
> Matthew 24:45–47

What are we to be doing in Jesus' absence? We are not to be sitting around, goofing off, or kicking back. Jesus says the wise servant is the one who is doing good.

"But my doing good doesn't seem to be doing any good," you say.

> I heard the story of a man who lived in the North Beach section of San Francisco—an area known for sin and carnality of the worst sort. As he watched the neighborhood begin to sink into sin, he went out on the streets and, while the barkers were trying to pull people into their topless bars, he talked to people about Jesus. In the early '40s and '50s he even wore a sandwich sign with a gospel message neatly lettered on both sides. A few years ago, this precious old man was asked, "Why do you keep doing this? It's not doing any good."
> "I may not be changing them," he said. "But I'm doing this lest they change me."

Truly, this was a wise servant.

An Exhortation to Be Warned

> But and if that evil servant shall say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; And shall begin to smite his fellowservants, and to eat and drink with the drunken . . .
> Matthew 24:48, 49

The word "evil" here is interesting. Kakos in Greek, it means "something that was once good but has gone bad." It's a word used to describe an instrument out of tune or a piece of fruit gone bad. How did this servant go bad? He simply tired of waiting for his master's return. His sense of urgency and expectancy was replaced with brutality and carnality.

First, brutality. You can tell when you are falling into the "evil servant" mentality when you begin to "smite your fellowservants," when you begin to beat up on people verbally and treat them unkindly. You see, if I am truly looking for the Lord's coming today, it will affect how I treat every person with whom I come in contact. I will treat my wife differently if I believe Jesus is coming back within the hour. I'll talk to the guys at work differently if I believe Jesus will show up there any moment. You won't push people around; you won't put people down; you won't beat people up if you believe Jesus is coming back soon.

Second, carnality. The evil servant began to "eat and drink with the drunken." That's why almost one-third of the Bible deals with prophecy and why prophecy can never be over-emphasized. Speaking of the coming of Jesus, the apostle John said, "And every man that hath this hope in him purifieth himself" (1 John 3:3a). Truly, I am blessed as I look at Applegate Christian Fellowship and see the process of purification taking place. The Lord is changing the congregation there. Why? Because they are looking for His coming. They may have had setbacks. They might yet have struggles. But year after year, decade after decade, we who are looking for His coming find ourselves saying, "Lord, I want to be ready. I want to put away those things with which I once flirted. I want to keep looking for You."

Folks, heavenly rewards are not going to be little medals to pin on our shirts or flimsy trophies to put on our shelves. No, our rewards will affect our very beings for all of eternity (1 Corinthians 15:40, 41, Daniel 12:3). That's why the Lord talked so much about His coming. That's why He gave us the Book of Revelation. Heaven is real, gang. And when you get there, my prayer is that you will hear the words, "Well done, good and faithful servant."

How can that happen? One way. Priority is the key. Even though there were still millions of people who were physically diseased and spiritually lost, Jesus said, "Father I have glorified thee and finished the work which thou hast given Me to do" (see John 17:4). How could Jesus say this? Because He finished the work the Father gave Him to do.

To make your life meaningful presently and to prepare for eternity, you must hear what the Father tells you to do instead of listening to the pressures and demands of people. Burdens from people and preachers, churches and organizations are heavy. But Jesus says, "My yoke is easy. My burden is light" (see Matthew 11:30).

In Ezekiel 44, God told the priests they were to wear no wool, lest it cause them to perspire. They were to wear only linen because He didn't want them "sweating" in their service for Him. The same is true for us. It is not the heart of our Father that we frantically try to meet every need and minister to every problem. We'll burn out in the process. Rather, it is His desire that we are faithful in the work He gives us to do.

How do we find out what His work for us is? Moses went to the mountain to meet the Lord and came down with the Commandments (Exodus 19:20). A great while before morning, Jesus would go to a solitary place to pray (Mark 1:35). Follow the example of Moses and Jesus and daily enter the presence of the Lord, saying, "Lord, guide my thoughts right now as I spend time in Your Word and talk about the day ahead with You."

He might say, "I want you to mow your neighbor's lawn." He might whisper, "Can you take an hour away from TV tonight and pray for the mission in Carmen Serdan?" His answer might be, "Write a letter to your brother." The Lord isn't cracking the whip, saying, "Do more. Get busy." No, He's saying, "Let Me guide you and lead you day by day."

That is why I encourage you to take time to seek Him each and every day in a quiet, solitary place. Like Moses, go to the mountain with tablet in hand and write down whatever He places on your heart. You won't be burdened by His requests. You won't get an ulcer. You won't even sweat. Yours will be a beautiful ministry that will be rewarded eternally if you focus on the work He gives you to do.

25 In chapter 25, Jesus closes His Olivet Discourse with a practical exhortation. Hear His heart as He says, "In light of end times understanding, there are three things you must consider: personal salvation (verses 1–13), responsible stewardship (verses 14–30), and practical servanthood" (verses 31–46).

Matthew 25:1–13

Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto ten virgins, which took their lamps, and went forth to meet the bridegroom. And five of them were wise, and five were foolish. They that were foolish took their lamps, and took no oil with them: But the wise took oil in their vessels with their lamps. While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and slept. And at midnight there was a cry made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him. Then all those virgins arose, and trimmed their lamps. And the foolish said unto the wise, Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out. But the wise answered, saying, Not so; lest there be not enough for us and you: but go ye rather to them that sell, and buy for yourselves. And while they went to buy, the bridegroom came; and they that were ready went in with him to the marriage: and the door was shut. Afterward came also the other virgins, saying, Lord, Lord, open to us. But he answered and said, Verily I say unto you, I know you not. Watch therefore, for ye know neither the day nor the hour wherein the Son of man cometh.

In Jesus' day, although the day of a wedding was known in a community, the exact hour was unknown. The bridegroom could show up at his bride's house any time during the day or night. He could come in the morning, at noon, even at midnight. But as soon as he arrived at the house of the bride, word passed quickly that the bridegroom had come and the marriage was about to begin. The community would then accompany the bride and the bridegroom as they made their way to the ceremony.

In this parable, there were ten maidens. Ten is the Jewish number of completion, as illustrated by the fact that there were ten Commandments and that ten Jewish males in a community warranted a synagogue. But of the ten maidens, only five had oil for their lamps. And when the bridegroom came at midnight, the other five were left out of the procession. What is Jesus saying? He's saying that when He, the Bridegroom, comes for His bride at an unknown hour, some will be ready to join the procession but others will not because they lack oil in their lamps. Scripturally, oil is a symbol of the Holy Spirit. Thus, those not born of the Spirit will be left behind.

If the Rapture occurred tonight, I fear some of you would still be sitting here while the rest of us went up. Yes, you've been hanging out with the wedding party—but there's no oil in your vessel. We must realize that many who think they are going up in the wedding party will be left behind for lack of oil. I believe the heartbeat of Jesus revealed in this parable is one which should sober every person. In Luke 21:36, Jesus said, "Pray that you might be found worthy to be kept from the hour of tribulation"—the implication being that some who mistakenly thought they were part of the procession will go through that terrible time of tribulation.

I would rather see my own family and my church family soberly on our knees, saying, "Please, Lord, fill us with the oil of Your Spirit and seal our salvation," than to give anyone false assurance and have him miss the wedding party, lulled to sleep by a false theology. I would rather see a person come forward fifty times to make sure of his salvation than to have him think that because he sits in a pew he's going to heaven.

The story is told of a meeting Satan held with his demons, trying to figure out how to trick people into eternal damnation . . .

One demon said, "I've got a plan. Let's whisper in people's ears that there is no God."

"No," Satan said, "creation declares the reality of God. People are too smart to deny His existence. A few idiots might be sucked in, but not the masses."

"I've got it," a second demon said. "We'll say there's no hell."

"No," said Satan. "People innately understand the need for retribution and judgment. People won't buy that."

A third demon said, "Let me suggest how we might trick them. Instead of saying 'No God' or 'No Hell,' we'll just say 'No Hurry."
'

"That's it!" Satan said gleefully. And he commissioned his demons to go throughout the world whispering, "No hurry."

Many have lost their sense of urgency. But the cry will soon go forth: behold the bridegroom cometh! Brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure (2 Peter 1:10). Don't miss the party.

Matthew 25:14–30

For the kingdom of heaven is as a man travelling into a far country, who called his own servants, and delivered unto them his goods. And unto one he gave five talents, to another two, and to another one; to every man according to his several ability; and straightway took his journey. Then he that had received the five talents went and traded with the same, and made them other five talents. And likewise he that had received two, he also gained other two. But he that had received one went and digged in the earth, and hid his Lord's money. After a long time the lord of those servants cometh, and reckoneth with them. And so he that had received five talents came and brought other five talents, saying, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me five talents: behold, I have gained beside them five talents more. His lord said unto him, Well done, thou good and faithful servant: thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord. He also that had received two talents came and said, Lord, thou deliveredst unto me two talents: behold, I have gained two other talents beside them. His lord said unto him, Well done, good and faithful servant; thou hast been faithful over a few things, I will make thee ruler over many things: enter thou into the joy of thy lord. Then he which had received the one talent came and said, Lord, I knew thee that thou art an hard man, reaping where thou hast not sown, and gathering where thou hast not strawed: And I was afraid, and went and hid thy talent in the earth: lo, there thou hast that is thine. His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful servant, thou knewest that I reap where I sowed not, and gather where I have not strawed: Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the exchangers, and then at my coming I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the talent from him, and give it unto him which hath ten talents. For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer darkness: there shall be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

As with the previous parable, this situation would have been familiar to Jesus' audience. When the owner of a house went on a long journey, he would give his servants the responsibility of caring for his property. In this case, the owner gave varying sums of money to his servants before he left, a talent being a year's wage. Upon his return, he learned that the five-talent servant had doubled his investment. The two-talent servant did the same. But the one-talent servant, afraid to invest his talent, buried it. And the owner of the house rebuked him radically.

So, too, Jesus has gone away to heaven to prepare a place for us. In the meantime, He has given us talents—money, energy, and abilities. It's interesting to me that the fellow who didn't show responsibility was the one with only one talent. That's often where the danger lies with us as well. The person who realizes he has a great musical gift will more often than not develop his gift and seek to use it. But the person who says, "I can't sing. I can't preach. I can't do miracles," often buries his one talent, whatever it might be.

Precious people, we all have been given at least one talent. "Not me," you say. "I have no talents and no abilities. I can't do anything." Can you change a diaper? Sign up to help in the nursery. Can you listen? Call on people at the rest home. Can you feed a child? Spend a month at a mission. You can do so much. The problem is, the one-talent person has a tendency to bury it. Here, Jesus is telling us that we will give an account for that which has been entrusted to us. If you are one who doesn't think you have been given much, you are one who needs to be especially careful that you don't bury that which you do have.

Matthew 25:31–46

When the Son of man shall come in his glory, and all the holy angels with him, then shall he sit upon the throne of his glory: And before him shall be gathered all nations: and he shall separate them one from another, as a shepherd divideth his sheep from the goats: And he shall set the sheep on his right hand, but the goats on the left. Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungred, and ye gave me meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me in: Naked, and ye clothed me: I was sick, and ye visited me: I was in prison, and ye came unto me. Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? When saw we thee a stranger, and took thee in? or naked, and clothed thee? Or when saw we thee sick, or in prison, and came unto thee? And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me. Then shall he say also unto them on the left hand, Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire, prepared for the devil and his angels: For I was an hungred, and ye gave me no meat: I was thirsty, and ye gave me no drink: I was a stranger, and ye took me not in: naked, and ye clothed me not: sick, and in prison, and ye visited me not. Then shall they also answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, or athirst, or a stranger, or naked, or sick, or in prison, and did not minister unto thee? Then shall he answer them, saying, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me. And these shall go away into everlasting punishment: but the righteous into life eternal.

In this parable, Jesus refers to the judgment of nations that will take place at the end of the Tribulation. According to Zechariah 14:4, when Jesus comes back to earth, the Mount of Olives will split in half the moment His feet touch down upon it. I found it interesting that contractors were denied a permit to build a hotel on the Mount of Olives because seismological studies indicated a major fault running through it. When Jesus comes, that fault will split the mountain in half, a great valley will open up, and a new stream will begin to flow from the Dead Sea to the Mediterranean. Joel refers to this valley as the valley of decision (Joel 3:14) because those who survive the Tribulation will be brought there to stand before the Lord at the judgment of the nations. The sheep will be allowed to enter into the millennium. The goats will be sent away to destruction. Who are the sheep? "The ones who clothed Me; fed Me; and cared about Me," answers Jesus.

"When did we do that, Lord?" the sheep ask.

"When you did it to the least of My brethren—the Jews," Jesus answers.

You see, midway through the Tribulation, Antichrist's determination to destroy the Jews will come to light. All over the world, anti-Semitism will run rampant. At that time, however, many will refuse to take the mark of the beast and will help the Jews, even as some did in Nazi Germany. They will visit those in prison. They will hide those in need of protection. They will reach out to those who are hurting. They will go on record, saying, "We will not take the mark of the beast. We will stand with these persecuted people." Jesus said in so doing, they will demonstrate outwardly their faith in Him.

Years ago, I sat on a hill outside Galilee and watched a single shepherd boy lead a flock of sheep. It was a beautiful sight. Goats, on the other hand, are impossible to lead. They would rather butt heads and eat trash than follow anyone. Goats do what they want. I know those of us who have embraced Jesus Christ as Lord are all sheep, but I fear sometimes there's too much goat in me. May we be like sheep who travel as a flock following the Lord's leading.

26 Matthew 26:1 (a)

And it came to pass, when Jesus had finished all these sayings . . .

Chapter 25 marked the end of the preaching and teaching ministry of Jesus Christ.

Matthew 26:1 (b), 2

. . . he said unto his disciples, Ye know that after two days is the feast of the passover, and the Son of man is betrayed to be crucified.

The Passover feast was a yearly event in Jerusalem commemorating the delivery of God's people from Egypt. Josephus tells us that in Jesus' day, 250,000 lambs were slaughtered in commemoration of Passover. Since Exodus prescribed that one lamb be sacrificed for every ten people, we can conclude that there must have been at least 2.5 million people in Jerusalem for this festival.

Between the hours of three and five o'clock, the 250,000 lambs would be slaughtered in the temple in preparation for Passover. Blood would have flowed freely from the temple into the Kidron Valley below the temple mount, causing the Kidron brook to actually turn blood-red. Later in this chapter, we will see Jesus leaving Gethsemane and crossing over this creek. Its color must have been a graphic reminder to Him of what was to come as He, the Lamb of God, would shed His own blood for our sin.

Matthew 26:3–5

Then assembled together the chief priests, and the scribes, and the elders of the people, unto the palace of the high priest, who was called Caiaphas, and consulted that they might take Jesus by subtilty, and kill him. But they said, Not on the feast day, lest there be an uproar among the people.

Originally, the position of high priest was passed from father to son through the Levitical line. But when the Romans came into the area and seized control of the nation, they began appointing the high priest and he became their political puppet. Caiaphas was the son of Annas. Annas chose to remove himself from the office of high priest, allowing Caiaphas to serve in his place. This was because Annas had four other sons who were making money from temple concessions, and he didn't want to jeopardize their thriving business.

Think back with me. What did Jesus do with their concession tables? He overturned them (Matthew 21:12). Consequently, Caiaphas and Annas were determined to destroy Jesus. Not only were they jealous of His widespread fame and following among the people, but they were angry that He was upsetting their moneymaking operation and cutting into their profit margin.

Matthew 26:6

Now when Jesus was in Bethany, in the house of Simon the leper.

Simon the leper must have been one who had been healed by Jesus. Otherwise, he would have lived in a leper colony outside the city limits.

Matthew 26:7

There came unto him a woman having an alabaster box of very precious ointment, and poured it on his head, as he sat at meat.

We know from John's Gospel that this woman was Mary, the sister of Martha. Mary was a worshiper. She is mentioned three times in Scripture, each time at the feet of Jesus.

Mary found her blessing at Jesus' feet. Luke writes of the time Jesus was at the home of Mary and Martha. Martha was in the kitchen, saying, "Lord tell Mary to come here. She's just sitting at Your feet, listening to Your words, and I need help." Jesus, however, told Martha that Mary had chosen the better part (Luke 10:42).

Mary brought her burden to Jesus' feet. John writes that when Lazarus died, Mary ran out to meet Jesus, fell at His feet, and said, "Lord if You had been here, our brother would not have died" (John 11:32).

Mary gave her best at Jesus' feet. John writes that after she anointed Jesus with the oil in the alabaster box, she wiped His feet with her hair. John tells us that the ointment within the alabaster box was worth three hundred pence. This was Mary's dowry, her ticket to marriage (John 12:3).

Matthew 26:8, 9

But when his disciples saw it, they had indignation, saying, To what purpose is this waste? For this ointment might have been sold for much, and given to the poor.

John's Gospel tells us exactly which disciple was the most indignant. It was Judas who said, "This is a waste. You could have done something much more practical with this ointment."

"It's a waste," Judas said. Yet in a few hours, Jesus would call Judas himself the son of perdition, or literally, "the son of waste" (John 17:12). People who don't love God or understand His ways always see worship as a waste.

Please understand this about worship, fellow worshipers: As she broke the alabaster box and poured the ointment upon Jesus, Mary showed us that worship often comes through breaking,. When do you really become a worshiper? When you're broken. When finally you're at your wits' end, you humble yourself before the Lord and worship Him. Worship comes from brokenness.

Worship not only comes from brokenness, but true worship is often costly. It cost Mary her dowry. What does worship cost you and me? Our image. "There's no way I'm going to sing those songs. I'm too cool for that," some say.

"I don't care if Scripture declares lifting hands is a sign of submission and adoration, I'll never lift mine. People will think I'm weird."

Worship is often misunderstood. There will always be those in Judas' corner who say, "Quit trying to be so holy. Do something more practical." But although worship comes through brokenness and although worship is sometimes costly, worship is always beneficial. After Mary wiped the feet of Jesus with her hair, her hair took on the same fragrance as Jesus' feet. That's what worship does. When you're worshiping the Lord, you take on the fragrance of the Lord.

John goes on to tell us that after Mary broke the alabaster box, the entire house was filled with the aroma of the ointment (John 12:3). Mom and Dad, does your house stink? Do you find there's tension in the air? Do you feel your marriage is on the rocks? Do you worry your kids are falling apart? Let me tell you the secret of Mary: The whole house took on the fragrance of Jesus because she was at His feet. Take Mary's mindset. Dad, when your house "stinks," gather your wife and your kids around you and say, "Let's stop and seek the Lord's blessing for a few minutes." You will be amazed how this will affect the aroma of your house. I suggest that perhaps the key isn't always counseling or child-rearing classes. As helpful as those things might be, the real power lies at Jesus' feet. Mary discovered this and the whole world knows her story.

Matthew 26:10–13

When Jesus understood it, he said unto them, Why trouble ye the woman? for she hath wrought a good work upon me. For ye have the poor always with you; but me ye have not always. For in that she hath poured this ointment on my body, she did it for my burial. Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached in the whole world, there shall also this, that this woman hath done, be told for a memorial of her.

Why did Mary anoint Jesus' body for burial? Because, although He had told His disciples repeatedly that He had come to Jerusalem to die, I suggest Mary was the only one who really understood this. You see, in Jesus' time, bodies were anointed after burial in order to reduce the stench of putrefaction. Yet Mary anointed His body before He died. Why? Because, just as David prophesied, I suggest it was because she knew He would not see corruption, or literally, putrefaction (Psalm 49:9). She knew He would rise again. How did she know this? Revelation and adoration are intricately linked together. When you're at the feet of Jesus in worship, you see things others don't. It's amazing what you'll see when, like Mary, you take the time to sit at His feet.

Matthew 26:14 (a)

Then one of the twelve, called Judas Iscariot . . .

"Judas" means "praise." It's a beautiful name, but Judas wasted it and ruined it for future generations. How many parents name their kids Judas today? "Isacariot" most likely means he was from the town of Carioth. Judas of Carioth was the only one of all the disciples from the southern region of Israel—the educated, wealthy region of the country. So impressive was Judas that the disciples appointed him treasurer.

Matthew 26:14 (b), 15

. . . went unto the chief priests, and said unto them, What will ye give me, and I will deliver him unto you? And they covenanted with him for thirty pieces of silver.

I believe it was his disappointment with Jesus that prompted Judas to entertain a betrayal mentality. I believe that when Judas initially followed Jesus, he was excited about the prospect of a kingdom being set up on earth. But when Jesus began leaving the area every time the multitude wanted to make Him king, perhaps Judas felt his heart sink. So, too, I see a tendency in people today to sell out when they get disappointed in Jesus. "I thought Jesus would bless my business if I became a Christian," they say. "But what happened? I went bankrupt." If we're not careful, a Judas mentality will creep in and we'll sell out.

Matthew 26:16–19

And from that time he sought opportunity to betray him. Now the first day of the feast of unleavened bread the disciples came to Jesus, saying unto him, Where wilt thou that we prepare for thee to eat the passover? And he said, Go into the city to such a man, and say unto him, The Master saith, My time is at hand; I will keep the passover at thy house with my disciples. And the disciples did as Jesus had appointed them; and they made ready the passover.

The other Gospels tell us that the man the disciples were to look for would be carrying a water jug. In those days, men didn't carry water jugs. That was "woman's work." Thus, a man carrying a water jug would have stood out. Evidently, the owner of this house was an unnamed friend of Jesus. He was one who worked behind the scenes, making the necessary preparations so Jesus could celebrate Passover with His disciples. I believe there is a special place in heaven for the unnamed servant.

You might be one of those people no one applauds or even acknowledges. You simply serve behind the scenes, making things right for Jesus and His people. God bless you! I'm convinced that a whole bunch of us who are seen and applauded are getting our reward now. But those who are serving secretly, those who are unnamed and unknown will be rewarded openly by our Father who sees in secret (Matthew 6:6).

Matthew 26:20–22

Now when the even was come, he sat down with the twelve. And as they did eat, he said, Verily I say unto you, that one of you shall betray me. And they were exceeding sorrowful, and began every one of them to say unto him, Lord, is it I?

When told one of their number would betray Jesus, did the disciples say, "It's the one with the black cape—it's Judas"? No. Everyone said, "Lord, is it I?"

Matthew 26:23 (a)

And he answered and said, He that dippeth his hand with me in the dish . . .

One element of the Passover meal was a paste-like dip made of ground dates, figs, and nuts that was eaten with bread. It was a reminder of the mud the Israelites used in Egypt to bake bricks before God sent Moses to deliver them.

Matthew 26:23 (b)–25

. . . the same shall betray me. The Son of man goeth as it is written of him: but woe unto that man by whom the Son of man is betrayed! it had been good for that man if he had not been born. Then Judas, which betrayed him, answered and said, Master, is it I? He said unto him, Thou hast said.

At the very moment Jesus said, "He who dips His hand with Me into the dish . . ." Judas had his hand right there. This is intriguing to me because in Jesus' day, the master of the home would sit in the center of a U-shaped table with the guest of honor to his left. We know from John's Gospel that John was seated to Jesus' right at this meal. Therefore, if Jesus and Judas were sharing the same bowl, Judas must have been seated to Jesus' left—at the place of honor. Thus, even at this point, we see Jesus affirming Judas, saying, "Son of perdition, I'm seating you in the place of honor because I still love you."

Matthew 26:26–29

And as they were eating, Jesus took bread, and blessed it, and brake it, and gave it to the disciples, and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he took the cup, and gave thanks, and gave it to them, saying, Drink ye all of it; for this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins. But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

The Passover became a new celebration—the Lord's Supper, the Eucharist, Communion. Now, if I were setting up the Lord's Supper, I would have reversed the order. I would have served the cup first. I would have said, "Before the Body of Christ can enter into us, the blood must first cleanse us." But Jesus didn't follow that pattern. He gave the bread first and followed it with the cup. And in so doing, He essentially said, "I will come into you just as you are. And then I will cleanse you with My blood."

Most people have the mistaken idea that they must clean up their act and get it together before they ask Jesus into their heart. But just the opposite is true. The bread is first. He comes in and He cleans us up. It's not perspiration—our trying harder. It's impartation—Jesus in us, the hope of glory.

Matthew 26:30

And when they had sung an hymn, they went out into the mount of Olives.

Notice that the worship service Jesus led after the Passover meal consisted of a single hymn. Don't fall into the trap of thinking, "If I'm really going to worship, I've got to worship to the point of exhaustion." The strength of worship is not necessarily related to the length of worship.

Matthew 26:31

Then saith Jesus unto them, All ye shall be offended because of me this night: for it is written, I will smite the shepherd, and the sheep of the flock shall be scattered abroad.

Jesus quoted a prophecy from Zechariah that referred to Him personally (Zechariah 13:7).

Matthew 26:32

But after I am risen again, I will go before you into Galilee.

"Even though you will be offended in Me, even though you will scatter from Me, I will rise again," Jesus said. "And when I do, I will go before you into Galilee and meet with you there." I love Jesus Christ for this aspect of His character. You see, even when we are flaky, even when we flee, even when we are fickle, Jesus the Good Shepherd never leaves or forsakes us. Instead, He says, "I will search you out. When I rise again, I will see you and go before you into Galilee."

Matthew 26:33–35

Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended. Jesus said unto him, Verily I say unto thee, That this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. Peter said unto him, Though I should die with thee, yet will I not deny thee. Likewise also said all the disciples.

On the night of the Last Supper, Jesus said, "When I am betrayed and apprehended, you'll all scatter."

"Not me," said Peter. "You can count on me, Lord. I'm solid as a rock."

Matthew 26:36 (a)

Then cometh Jesus with them unto a place called Gethsemane . . .

The word "gethsemane" means "oil press." In an oil press, olives were crushed, broken, and ground up so that oil might be produced. Scripturally, oil is symbolic of the Holy Spirit. The picture is clear: before the Holy Spirit could be given, Someone had to be crushed and broken. And that Someone was Jesus Christ. It is not coincidental that it was in the Garden of Gethsemane where He felt the crushing, the heaviness, and the burden of what was about to happen when He who knew no sin would become sin for us (2 Corinthians 5:21).

- In the Garden of Eden, man's relationship with the Father was broken because of rebellion.

  In the Garden of Gethsemane, man's relationship with the Father was restored through submission.

- In the Garden of Eden, the first Adam tried to hide from God.

  In the Garden of Gethsemane, the last Adam bared His soul to God.

- In the Garden of Eden, a sword was unsheathed and man was driven out.

  In the Garden of Gethsemane, a sword was put away and a man was healed.

Matthew 26:36 (b)–38

. . . and saith unto the disciples, Sit ye here, while I go and pray yonder. And he took with him Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, and began to be sorrowful and very heavy. Then saith he unto them, My soul is exceed ing sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here, and watch with me.

Jesus began to feel sorrowful and very heavy. Why? Because He knew what lay ahead. Should He go through with this plan to pay for our sins, He would not only feel the wrath of God poured upon Him as He died in our place, but His suffering would go much farther and longer than what we could possibly imagine. Jesus didn't suffer for just a few hours on a Friday afternoon. Revelation 13:8 speaks of the Lamb slain even before the foundation of the world. In the Garden of Eden a decision was made that resulted in damnation. In the Garden of Gethsemane a decision was made that resulted in salvation. But the price was incredible.

Matthew 26:39 (a)
And he went a little further . . .

That's Jesus—always going a little further. He didn't stop at Gethsemane. He went all the way to Calvary for you and for me.

Matthew 26:39 (b)
. . . and fell on his face, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass from me . . .

"Is there any other way people can be saved, Father? Can they join a church? Can they give canned goods at Christmas time? Can they treat their pets nice?" People think that if they're just a "good person" or a "nice guy" they'll be saved. In reality, it took nothing less than the death of Jesus Christ to save anyone from any one sin.

Matthew 26:39 (c)
. . . nevertheless not as I will, but as thou wilt.

You who are interested in prayer and faith, take note: The key to prayer is not so much "name it and claim it." Rather, the key to prayer is "request and rest." That's the way Jesus prayed. "Father, if it be possible let this cup pass from Me. That's My request. Nevertheless, not My will, but Thy will be done. That's where I will rest."

Matthew 26:40–42

And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour? Watch and pray, that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done.

Even while in prayer, Jesus began to understand and receive confirmation that it was the will of His Father that He be slaughtered as the Lamb of God for the sins of the world.

Matthew 26:43

And he came and found them asleep again: for their eyes were heavy.

I can relate to this. I can read TIME Magazine and be fine. But when I open the Bible or start to pray, my eyes get heavy. Why? Because Satan knows there is power in prayer and profit in Bible study. He doesn't care if you're reading the newspaper. But read the Word or pray, and you can count on your eyes getting heavy, the telephone ringing, the baby crying, and your stomach rumbling. When I kneel by the couch in prayer and find myself "resting in the Lord" a little too literally, I go for a walk and pray along the way. It's much tougher to fall asleep when you're walking!

Matthew 26:44, 45 (a)

And he left them, and went away again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest . . .

Understanding their humanity and frailty, Jesus looked at His disciples and said, "Sleep on." But while His disciples were sleeping, His enemies were plotting. You can always be sure of that. There are meetings in hell to cause havoc in your family, your ministry, your occupation, and your marriage. Keep that in mind next time you opt for sleep over prayer. It's not that the Lord condemns you for lack of prayer. It's that the Enemy will exploit the situation. You see, prayer is not only for petition. It's also for protection. When you pray, there is a wall of protection round about you, your family, your ministry, and your marriage that is absent when you fail to pray. Jesus didn't collapse in this moment of temptation. The disciples did. He was praying. They were sleeping.

Matthew 26:45 (b), 46 (a)

. . . behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners. Rise . . .

Jesus could rise because He had been kneeling. He could stand before His enemies because He had been kneeling before His Father.

Matthew 26:46 (b)

. . . let us be going . . .

"Let us be going," Jesus said. If I were Jesus, I would have said, "You guys are a bunch of losers. You're not coming with Me." Not Jesus. Even after His disciples failed Him, He still included them.

Matthew 26:46 (c), 47 (a)

. . . behold, he is at hand that doth betray me. And while he yet spake, lo, Judas, one of the twelve, came, and with him a great multitude . . .

John tells us this "great multitude" was a "cohort," or literally six hundred Roman soldiers. Six hundred Roman soldiers came to apprehend the meekest Man on the face of the earth and a handful of sleepy disciples.

Matthew 26:47 (b)–49

. . . with swords and staves, from the chief priests and elders of the people. Now he that betrayed him gave them a sign, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he: hold him fast. And forthwith he came to Jesus, and said, Hail, master; and kissed him.

The Greek language indicates that Judas kissed Jesus repeatedly. Why? First, it was as a sign of identification. Jesus' appearance was so ordinary that neither the soldiers nor the company of religious leaders could pick Him out of the small crowd of twelve men. We tend to think of Jesus as glowing, huge in stature, or somehow standing out. Not so. Judas said, "He's so ordinary I'll have to identify Him with a kiss." Second, perhaps Judas continued to kiss Jesus not only to identify Him, but to occupy Him, hoping that Jesus wouldn't pull a fast one and do a miracle or call down some angels.

Matthew 26:50

And Jesus said unto him, Friend, wherefore art thou come? Then came they, and laid hands on Jesus, and took him.

Jesus called Judas "Friend" even at the moment of betrayal. Even here, Jesus gave Judas the opportunity to turn away and to change his mind. First Corinthians 10:13 makes it clear that in every temptation there's always a way out provided by God Himself. Here, Jesus is giving Judas a way out as He asks, "Friend, why are you here?" In other words, Jesus was giving Judas one last chance to change his mind.

Matthew 26:51, 52 (a)

And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest's, and smote off his ear. Then said Jesus unto him, Put up again thy sword into his place . . .

John tells us the one who drew his sword was Peter. In an attempt to protect Jesus, Peter—a better fisherman than a swordsman—lopped off the ear of Malchus, a servant of the high priest. Luke writes that following Peter's show of force, Jesus touched Malchus' ear and healed him. I think that's perhaps the miracle Jesus does most: healing people who have been needlessly wounded by His followers who have used the sword of Scripture foolishly. How often we hurt one another in our attempts to protect Jesus. Ears fly everywhere, and the body of Christ is maimed because well-meaning Christians like Peter unsheathe their Bibles and start chopping away at each other. Listen to the words of Jesus. If you are using the Sword of the Spirit to slice other people up and put other people down, put it away.

Matthew 26:52 (b)

. . . for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword.

You might want to remember this verse next time you feel inclined to chop up some believer. Jesus said, "Blessed are the merciful, for they shall receive mercy. But those who are unsheathing the sword indiscriminately and causing injury needlessly will die by the sword eventually."

Matthew 26:53

Thinkest thou that I cannot now pray to my Father, and he shall presently give me more than twelve legions of angels?

A legion being six thousand, Jesus was talking about seventy-two thousand angels at His disposal—quite a force, considering it took only one to wipe out 185,000 Babylonians (2 Kings 19:35). What a glorious day it is when you learn you don't have to defend Jesus Christ, when you realize that He is perfectly capable of defending Himself. Our job is not to protect, defend, or avenge. Jesus calls us to do one thing: to love.

Matthew 26:54–56 (a)

But how then shall the scriptures be fulfilled, that thus it must be? In that same hour said Jesus to the multitudes, Are ye come out as against a thief with swords and staves for to take me? I sat daily with you teaching in the temple, and ye laid no hold on me. But all this was done, that the scriptures of the prophets might be fulfilled.

Jesus made it clear that He didn't need Peter's protection and that what was happening was in accordance with prophecy in Scripture as well as with the heart of His Father.

Matthew 26:56 (b), 57

Then all the disciples forsook him, and fled. And they that had laid hold on Jesus led him away to Caiaphas the high priest, where the scribes and the elders were assembled.

The disciples split and Jesus was led alone from the Garden of Gethsemane to stand before Caiaphas. Jesus was not dragged before Caiaphas unwillingly. Rather, He was "brought as a lamb to the slaughter," just as Isaiah had prophesied (53:7).

Matthew 26:58

But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace, and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end.

You're always headed for trouble when you start following Jesus afar off. Peter followed Jesus afar off right into the high priest's palace, where Luke tells us he warmed himself by the enemy's fire.

Matthew 26:59–60 (a)

Now the chief priests, and elders, and all the council, sought false witness against Jesus, to put him to death; But found none . . .

A meeting of the Sanhedrin was immediately called. The Sanhedrin was the seventy-one-member Jewish Supreme Court. From the very outset, however, the trial was illegal, since Jewish Law forbade evening meetings of the Sanhedrin.

Matthew 26:60 (b), 61

. . . yea, though many false witnesses came, yet found they none. At the last came two false witnesses, and said, This fellow said, I am able to destroy the temple of God, and to build it in three days.

The Ninth Commandment forbids bearing false witness. We have the mistaken idea that "bearing false witness" means telling big lies. But this account makes it clear that bearing false witness consists of giving the right information with the wrong implication. A false witness is not one who makes up a big fib. A false witness is simply one who is tricky with the truth. A false witness gives the right information, knowing the wrong implication will be drawn. Jesus did indeed say, "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up" (see John 2:19). But He was speaking of the temple of His own body.

Matthew 26:62–66

And the high priest arose, and said unto him, Answerest thou nothing? what is it which these witness against thee? But Jesus held his peace. And the high priest answered and said unto him, I adjure thee by the living God, that thou tell us whether thou be the Christ, the Son of God. Jesus saith unto him, Thou hast said: nevertheless I say unto you, Hereafter shall ye see the Son of man sitting on the right hand of power, and coming in the clouds of heaven. Then the high priest rent his clothes, saying, He hath spoken blasphemy; what further need have we of witnesses? behold, now ye have heard his blasphemy. What think ye? They answered and said, He is guilty of death.

When Jesus said, "Thou hast said . . ." He was saying, "I am the Son of God." Then He went on to say, "And you will see Me in the place of exaltation." Hearing this, the high priest did what was customary at that time when one experienced great grief or pain. Even as Jacob rent his clothes when he heard Joseph was dead and David rent his clothes when he heard Saul had died in battle, if one was really grieved, he would tear his robe from the bottom up. What's happening here is tremendously symbolic. Unbeknownst to him, as Caiaphas rent his priestly garments with his own hands, he was in fact symbolizing the end of the old Levitical priesthood. A new priesthood is about to be established—the priesthood of Melchizedek.

First mentioned in Genesis 14, "Melchizedek" means "prince of righteousness." He was called the Prince of Salem, or, "Prince of Peace." He came to Abraham with bread and wine. He had no beginning and no end. Who was Melchizedek? The Book of Hebrews tells us he was a picture of Jesus Christ (Hebrews 7).

Matthew 26:67, 68

Then did they spit in his face, and buffeted him; and others smote him with the palms of their hands, saying, Prophesy unto us, thou Christ, Who is he that smote thee?

So brutal was the beating Jesus endured, Isaiah prophesied He would be more disfigured than any man who ever lived (Isaiah 53:2). His beard was plucked; His face was swollen. The spit of His accusers ran down His cheeks. He could have called ten thousand times ten thousand angels. But He didn't.

This really happened. We're not talking about a fairy tale. We're not talking about poetic mythology or esoteric theology. We're talking about a real Man who absorbed the blows, who felt the pain, who endured the spit, the insult, and the agony because He was thinking about you.

"Oh, Jon, you're being dramatic," you say. "He wasn't thinking about me. How could He be? We're only talking about a few hours of suffering and dying. There wasn't enough time to think about everyone individually."

Not true. You see, we're talking about an event that took place before the foundation of the world and that continues on into eternity. The biggest problem we who are familiar with the Gospel story face is thinking of Jesus dying generically for the whole world. We need to understand that He died for each of us individually and for each of our sins specifically.

How do I know this? Because in the Old Testament, every single sin had to be atoned for specifically (Leviticus 1:4). Forgiveness had to be meted out individually. Spend some time contemplating that. Listen to Jesus praying, "Father, if it's possible that people can be saved any other way, let this cup pass from Me. Nevertheless, Thy will be done." See Him with blood-soaked face leaving the Garden of Gethsemane, His disciples fleeing in fear. Watch as He is led blindfolded before Caiaphas, lied about by false witnesses, beat up, battered, and humiliated—for you.

Matthew 26:69–73

Now Peter sat without in the palace: and a damsel came unto him, saying, Thou also wast with Jesus of Galilee. But he denied before them all, saying, I know not what thou sayest. And when he was gone out into the porch, another maid saw him, and said unto them that were there, This fellow was also with Jesus of Nazareth. And again he denied with an oath, I do not know the man. And after a while came unto him they that stood by, and said to Peter, Surely thou also art one of them; for thy speech betrayeth thee.

Once you become a believer, if you go back to the fires of the world, you won't fit in. Your speech will betray you. You can try and tell dirty jokes again or try and be suggestive with your innuendoes, but people will say, "It doesn't ring true. Your speech betrays you." If you've really been born again, you can't go back to the old fires. It doesn't work.

Matthew 26:74 (a)

Then began he to curse and to swear, saying, I know not the man.

"My speech betrays me? I'll show you some speech," said Peter as he began to curse and swear. At that time, fishermen had the roughest language of anyone. Why? Perhaps because as their nets became entangled in the bottom of the Sea of Galilee, they had ample reason to swear. At any rate, all tangled up himself, Peter began to curse and swear once again.

Matthew 26:74 (b)

And immediately the cock crew.

Because the priests felt that birds would make a mess and defile the holy city, according to city ordinances, no roosters or hens were allowed in Jerusalem. Therefore, when Peter heard the sound of a rooster crowing, it would not only remind him of Jesus' words to him previously, but of his own sin. For just as a rooster had no place in the holy city, Peter must have known immediately that his denial of Jesus had defiled and polluted his relationship with Him.

Matthew 26:75

And Peter remembered the word of Jesus, which said unto him, Before the cock crow, thou shalt deny me thrice. And he went out, and wept bitterly.

Luke tells us that at this moment, as Jesus was led out of the house of Caiaphas, He "turned and looked on Peter" (see Luke 22:61) with a look that must have said, "Peter I told you this would happen. I told you that you would deny Me three times. But, Peter, I'm not through with you. I love you."

For topical study of Matthew 26:75, see "The Pathway to Pain" below.

THE PATHWAY TO PAIN

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 26:75

Maybe you've said or heard the phrase, "I fell into sin." In reality, there is no such thing. A person never "falls" into sin but rather walks into sin one step at a time. In chapter 26, we see five steps Peter took that led to his sin and sorrow.

Step One—Overconfidence in the Flesh

> Peter answered and said unto him, Though all men shall be offended because of thee, yet will I never be offended.
>
> Matthew 26:33

"I won't leave You, Lord," Peter boldly declared. "Others might be offended in You. Others might turn their backs on You. But not me."

> Two ducks and a frog hung out at the pond in Farmer Brown's field. One summer, however, a drought caused the pond to dry up. For the ducks, able to fly elsewhere, this was no problem. But the frog, knowing he would literally croak if he didn't find water soon, said to the ducks, "I'm in trouble here. But I've got a plan. You guys hold a stick in your bills, and I'll jump up and grab it with my mouth. Then you start flying. I'll hang on. And we'll keep going until we find another pond."
>
> The ducks said, "Sure. Sounds good." So they put a stick between their bills. The frog jumped up and grabbed it tightly in his mouth. The ducks began to flap their wings, and suddenly the trio was airborne.
>
> Taking in the whole scene, Farmer Brown watched in amazement below. "What a brilliant idea," he said. "I wonder who thought of it?"—to which the frog opened his mouth wide and proudly answered, "I di—."

Pride says, "Look what I did!" It's an "I" problem.

"Lord, I will never deny You," said Peter. But, like the frog, even as he opened his mouth, he started going down.

Step Two—Sleeping Instead of Praying

> And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them asleep, and saith unto Peter, What, could ye not watch with me one hour?
> Matthew 26:40

Once I am full of pride and feel like I can make things happen, I see no reason to pray. Thus, pride and prayerlessness go hand in hand. We must never forget that prayer is not only for petition, but for protection. Prayer not only gives us what we want but also protects us from what we don't want. I have seen things enter into my own life that otherwise wouldn't have whenever I have stopped praying and started sleeping. And that's what Peter discovered.

Step Three—Replacing Devotion with Action

> And, behold, one of them which were with Jesus stretched out his hand, and drew his sword, and struck a servant of the high priest's, and smote off his ear.
> Matthew 27:51

Catch the scene: Judas comes into the Garden of Gethsemane with a cohort of Roman soldiers behind him. Peter wakes up, sees a need, and grabs his sword. A better fisherman than a swordsman, Peter manages only to lop off the ear of the high priest's servant. Jesus healed the severed ear as much for Peter as for Malchus, for if Jesus hadn't healed Malchus, there would have been four crosses on Calvary the next day instead of three as Peter would have been crucified for attempted murder. But just as the Lord does with us, He healed Peter's mistake, making it impossible for Malchus to press charges.

The same thing happens in the heavenly courtroom. But Jesus has forgiven the very sins of which Satan accuses us. Therefore, there is no record of them because His blood has cleansed us from all sin (1 John 1:7).

Step Four—Following Afar Off

But Peter followed him afar off unto the high priest's palace . . .

Matthew 26:58 (a)

I have known so many people who have slowly but surely drifted away because they began to follow Jesus from afar. At one time, the desire of their heart was to know the Lord and to walk with Him. But then something happened. That is why Hebrews says: Therefore we ought to give the more earnest heed to the things which we have heard, lest at any time we should let them slip" (see Hebrews 2:1).

The word "slip" means "drift." As we sail along spiritually, the danger is not that a bomb will sink us, but that we will slowly drift away. How does that happen? It happens when we fail to "give heed to the things which we have heard." In other words, we drift when we fail to read the compass of God's Word. There was a time, perhaps, when you needed, desired, and enjoyed getting your bearings by reading the Scriptures. But eventually you began following Jesus afar off, and the Word was no longer important.

When that happens to me, I find myself drifting slowly and imperceptibly until suddenly I wonder, Where am I? How in the world did I get here? My faith didn't sink. I just started drifting away. You and I need to set our anchor deeply in the "things which we have heard"—the truths, doctrines, and principles of Scripture. Otherwise we too will be vulnerable to drifting away and following Jesus afar off.

Step Five—Getting Warm by the Enemy's Fire

> . . . and went in, and sat with the servants, to see the end . . . and when they had kindled a fire in the midst of the hall, and were set down together, Peter sat down among them.
> Matthew 26:58 (b), Luke 22:55

After following Jesus afar off, perhaps Peter thought, Maybe my old life wasn't so bad after all. I'll go back to the old places, the old ways, the old things and maybe I could even be a witness there.

The Christian trying to warm himself by the fires of the enemy will always find misery in the world because, although he may have too much of the world to enjoy the Lord, he also has too much of the Lord to enjoy the world. Feeling estranged from the Lord, yet a stranger to the world, Peter began to swear and curse vehemently—until he heard the cock crow. Then he wept bitterly. The Greek phrase, "wept bitterly," speaks of an emotion stemming from the intestines. In other words, it refers to a deep, gut-wrenching weeping.

What caused Peter to weep so bitterly? According to Luke's Gospel, at the moment Peter said, "Blankety blank, I don't know the man," the doors of Caiaphas' house suddenly swung open and Jesus was led out to the courtyard where He saw Peter sitting by the fire. "And the Lord turned, and looked upon Peter," writes Luke (see Luke 22:61). Jesus looked on Peter and Peter was broken. The look was not one of anger, but of understanding; not one of condemnation but one of sympathy. It was a look that touched Peter's heart deeply.

Jesus knew Peter would go through this, for He had told him only hours earlier, "Simon, Simon, Satan has desired to have you and sift you like wheat, but I have prayed for you and when you are converted (not "if you are converted" but "when"), strengthen the brethren" (Luke 22:32).

Three days later, when Jesus rose from the dead, the angel in the tomb told Mary Magdalene, "Go tell His disciples and Peter" (Mark 16:7, emphasis mine). In 1 Corinthians 15, Paul tells us that when Jesus rose from the dead, before He appeared to the other disciples, He sought out Peter. In John 21, Jesus ministered to Peter specifically when He gave him the opportunity to say, "I love You, Lord," three times—just as Peter had denied Him three times.

Maybe you've been weeping bitterly today. Maybe you've ignored the Word, drifted away, and like Peter, walked into sin. Know this, precious friend: Jesus comes by you at your lowest point, and He looks upon you not in anger but in understanding. "I have prayed for you," He says, "and when you're converted—when you get through this time of pain and sorrow—strengthen your brethren as I anoint you and continue to use you."

Return to Jesus, and watch what our loving Lord will do with the mess you've made. He'll turn it around for His glory.

You watch. You'll see.

27 Chapter 26 came to a close as Jesus was led out of the palace of Caiaphas after an illegal midnight meeting of the Sanhedrin, the Jewish Supreme Court.

Matthew 27:1, 2

When the morning was come, all the chief priests and elders of the people took counsel against Jesus to put him to death: And when they had bound him, they led him away, and delivered him to Pontius Pilate the governor.

It was now five o'clock in the morning. After a night of agony in the Garden of Gethsemane followed by a beating at the hands of the palace guards, Jesus was led before Pontius Pilate. Why? To fulfill prophecy. You see, when the Jews put a man to death, they stoned him. Old Testament prophecies, however, all depict the Son of God being crucified. "Cursed," the Old Testament Law declares, "is everyone that hangs on a tree" (see Deuteronomy 21:23). Thus it was in fulfillment of prophecy that Jesus was brought before a Roman governor in order that He might die a Roman death. Keep in mind, however, that Roman soldiers were drafted from all countries throughout the empire. So, although it was the Jews who sentenced Jesus to die, and although it was the Romans who devised His method of execution,

He who died for the sins of the whole world did, in fact, die by the hands of the whole world.

Matthew 27:3, 4

Then Judas, which had betrayed him, when he saw that he was condemned, repented himself, and brought again the thirty pieces of silver to the chief priests and elders, saying, I have sinned in that I have betrayed the innocent blood. And they said, What is that to us? see thou to that.

If Judas had seen any fault, any inconsistency, any hypocrisy, or any sin in Jesus, he could have justified the betrayal in his own mind. He could have said, "He makes Himself out to be the Son of God, but I've seen Him lose His temper," or "I remember the time He stretched the truth," or "I heard Him gossip." Instead, Judas realized Jesus was exactly who He declared Himself to be—the Lamb of God, the Sinless One.

Matthew 27:5

And he cast down the pieces of silver in the temple, and departed, and went and hanged himself.

It intrigues me that Judas hung himself on a tree. Deuteronomy 19:16–19 says that if a man bears false witness and someone suffers because of the lie, the false witness must share the same fate as the one about whom he lied. Do you see what's happening? As Judas realized Jesus would soon be crucified on a tree, it's as if he got as close as he possibly could to sharing the same fate as the One about whom he lied. This is further proof that Judas realized perhaps more clearly than any other man that Jesus was completely flawless and totally innocent.

Matthew 27:6–10

And the chief priests took the silver pieces, and said, It is not lawful for to put them into the treasury, because it is the price of blood. And they took counsel, and bought with them the potter's field, to bury strangers in. Wherefore that field was called, The field of blood, unto this day. Then was fulfilled that which was spoken by Jeremy the prophet, saying, and they took the thirty pieces of silver, the price of him that was valued, whom they of the children of Israel did value; and gave them for the potter's field, as the Lord appointed me.

What was a potter's field? In Bible times, if a potter discovered cracks or chips in something he had made, he would throw the marred vessel outside of his shop. Over time this area would become full of broken pottery. Because nothing would be able to grow in this portion of land, it was good for nothing except to use as a cemetery for strangers and travelers who had no other place to be buried. Now, think with me for a moment. The blood money of Jesus Christ was used to buy the place where broken pottery and dead bodies were. That's us. Without Jesus we were shattered, dead, and good for nothing.

What hope is there for broken pottery? Only this: If it is reheated and placed in water once again, it will become pliable and able to be reshaped and restored. So, too, if we as broken pieces of pottery become heated by the trials our Master Potter allows in our lives, if we're warmed by the love He has for us and washed by the water of the Word He gives to us, we can be reshaped and used for His glory.

Matthew 27:11 (a)

And Jesus stood before the governor: and the governor asked him, saying, Art thou the King of the Jews?

Jesus stood before Pilate who was at this point in big trouble politically. Pilate had already made three big blunders and had been warned by Tiberius Caesar that if he made one more, he would be removed from his post.

Pilate made his first mistake when he initially came into Jerusalem. As his soldiers carried their standards topped with eagles of gold and silver into the temple area, the Jews saw the eagles as idols and became so infuriated that they rioted on the temple mount. Wanting to quell the rebellion immediately, Pilate ordered the riotous Jews held in an amphitheatre outside Jerusalem where they would be slaughtered unless they repented. These courageous Jews laid their heads down on the ground and said, "Chop off our heads, but there will be ten thousand others to take our places if your images ever come on temple property again." Foreseeing a bloody rebellion and a political strike against him, Pilate backed off. But word got back to Rome that Pontius Pilate had been beaten by some obstinate Jews.

A short time later, Pilate wanted to make up for his bad start with the Jews by bringing in a fresh supply of water. So he built an aqueduct that would carry water from the north down to Jerusalem. It was a great engineering feat. But he financed the undertaking with money from the temple treasury. This infuriated the Jews and blood was shed as Pilate put down the ensuing rebellion.

When Pilate ordered new armor for his soldiers, the new shields bearing the image of Emperor Tiberius Caesar incensed the Jews. Considering them to be a form of idolatry, the Jews rebelled yet again. And when Tiberius heard of it, he was incensed and sent the message to Pilate that if there was one more rebellion, he'd be out of a job.

Matthew 27:11 (b)–14

And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest. And when he was accused of the chief priests and elders, he answered nothing. Then said Pilate unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly.

The accusations were being hurled against Jesus, but He answered not a word—just as Isaiah had prophesied seven hundred fifty years earlier (Isaiah 53:7). Jesus could have blown His accusers away. He could have given brilliant legal defense. But He said nothing. Maybe this week you've been defending yourself against accusations or slander. I am learning that the problem with defending yourself is that you'll never be able to stop. Start defending yourself, and that's all you'll do all day long. David found a better solution: Let the Lord be your Defender, your Rock, your Shield, your Fortress, and your high Tower (Psalm 18:2). He who chose not to defend Himself lives to defend you (Hebrews 7:25).

Matthew 27:15–18

Now at that feast the governor was wont to release unto the people a prisoner, whom they would. And they had then a notable prisoner, called Barabbas. Therefore when they were gathered together, Pilate said unto them, Whom will ye that I release unto you? Barabbas, or Jesus which is called Christ? For he knew that for envy they had delivered him.

The name "Barabbas" or "Bar Abba" means "son of the father." From other Gospel accounts, we know Barabbas was an insurrectionist and a murderer. He was despicable, brutal, and hated by the people. As Pilate brought out Barabbas, he must have been certain that the crowd wouldn't want a man like him back on the streets. Pilate must have thought that surely the Jews would want Jesus instead—the true Son of the Father.

Matthew 27:19

When he was set down on the judgment seat, his wife sent unto him, saying, Have thou nothing to do with that just man: for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of him.

Claudia Procula, the daughter of Augustus, had married Pontius Pilate. History not only tells us she had converted to Judaism, but also that, following this event, she became a convert to Jesus Christ.

Matthew 27:20–22 (a)

But the chief priests and elders persuaded the multitude that they should ask Barabbas, and destroy Jesus. The governor answered and said unto them, Whether of the twain will ye that I release unto you? They said, Barabbas. Pilate saith unto them, What shall I do then with Jesus which is called Christ?

"What shall I do with Jesus?" That's the key question for every person throughout history. Pilate had a choice to make right then. He could either stand up for what he knew was right, or he could follow the crowd and save his political skin. So, too, there are those who truly know in the bottom of their hearts that Jesus Christ is the only Way, even though the crowd all around them says, "Don't be so restrictive. Don't be so narrow. You don't want to be a fundamentalist do you?"

Matthew 27:22 (b), 23 (a)

They all say unto him, Let him be crucified. And the governor said, Why, what evil hath he done?

Listen carefully and you'll hear the torment in the voice of Pontius Pilate, who examined Jesus and said, "I find no fault with Him."

Matthew 27:23 (b), 24

But they cried out the more, saying, Let him be crucified. When Pilate saw that he could prevail nothing, but that rather a tumult was made, he took water, and washed his hands before the multitude, saying, I am innocent of the blood of this just person: see ye to it.

This Roman governor who was constantly at odds with the Jews now followed a Jewish practice taken from Deuteronomy 21 that stated that if a man was murdered outside a city and no one knew who the murderer was, the elders were to wash their hands as an illustration of their innocence in the matter.

Matthew 27:25

Then answered all the people, and said, His blood be on us, and on our children.

They got their way. But the Jews—a beautiful, blessed people—would feel the effects of this statement for centuries.

Matthew 27:26

Then released he Barabbas unto them: and when he had scourged Jesus, he delivered him to be crucified.

We know from the other Gospels that the scourging Pilate ordered was his attempt to incite some kind of compassion for Jesus in the hearts of the Jews. Scourging was brutal. It was done with a Roman instrument of torture called a "flagellum"—a whip made of twelve or thirteen leather thongs. Lead balls were attached to the ends of these thongs, and pieces of glass and metal were embedded between the lead balls and the handle. The accused would be tied by his wrists and dangled about a foot off the ground, rendering him helpless to protect himself in any way. Then the beating would begin—usually thirty-nine lashes. The first blows would cause welts to form on his shoulders and back. By the seventh or eighth blow, the glass would begin to cut open these large welts, not only reducing the back to the consistency of hamburger, but also exposing the internal organs. At the end of the beating, the accused would be cut down and he would fall to the ground where he would lay in a pool of his own blood.

Most men died under the beating of the flagellum. But Jesus, of course, did not die here. Soldiers stood Him up, brought Him out, and presented Him to the crowd. "Behold the Man," Pilate said (see John 19:5) as if to say, "Look at this Man. Isn't this enough?"

Matthew 27:27–30

Then the soldiers of the governor took Jesus into the common hall, and gathered unto him the whole band of soldiers. And they stripped him, and put on him a scarlet robe. And when they had platted a crown of thorns, they put it upon his head, and a reed in his right hand: and they bowed the knee before him, and mocked him, saying, Hail, King of the Jews! And they spit upon him, and took the reed, and smote him on the head.

Taking the mock scepter out of Jesus' hand, the soldiers beat the crown of thorns into His skull. With a single word, Jesus could have wiped out these soldiers and ascended into heaven, saying, "If this is the verdict of Israel, if this is the cruelty of the Gentiles, you're on your own." But He didn't.

We're not talking about a myth or a story, a novel or a movie. This really happened. And in the process of His scourging and beatings and ultimately His crucifixion, Jesus was thinking of and absorbing it all for you and me.

Matthew 27:31, 32

And after that they had mocked him, they took the robe off from him, and put his own raiment on him, and led him away to crucify him. And as they came out, they found a man of Cyrene, Simon by name: him they compelled to bear his cross.

Because he carried the Cross of Christ, Simon of Cyrene became a convert to Christ (Mark 15:21; Romans 16:13).

Matthew 27:33, 34 (a)

And when they were come unto a place called Golgotha, that is to say, a place of a skull, they gave him vinegar to drink mingled with gall . . .

In the Greek language, "gall" and "myrrh" are the same word. Since myrrh was used as a narcotic to deaden pain, were the soldiers showing mercy to Jesus by offering Him myrrh? Probably not. More likely, it was because they didn't want Him to die too quickly. They wanted to lengthen His suffering.

Myrrh was a costly substance. Exodus 30 says it was used to anoint prophets, priests, and kings. Psalm 45 refers to it as a perfume. John 19 tells us it was used for embalming. At His birth, Jesus was given myrrh (Matthew 2:11). Why? Because He is the Anointed One, because His Name is as ointment poured forth (Song of Solomon 1:3), because He came to die.

Matthew 27:34 (b)

. . . and when he had tasted thereof, he would not drink.

Perhaps it was because He knew it was a drug to deaden the pain, Jesus refused to take it.

Matthew 27:35

And they crucified him, and parted his garments, casting lots: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophet, they parted my garments among them, and upon my vesture did they cast lots.

Each Jewish male wore five articles of clothing: a headband, sandals, an inner cloak sort of like a nightshirt, a belt, and an outer tunic, or robe. The soldiers divided Jesus' clothing among themselves. But when it came to the outer tunic, they threw dice to see who would get it. Why? Because "without seam" (see John 19:23), it was a beautifully constructed garment. As God Himself in the Person of Jesus Christ died for their sins, the soldiers played games on Golgotha.

Matthew 27:36–38

And sitting down they watched him there; And set up over his head his accusation written, THIS IS JESUS THE KING OF THE JEWS. Then were there two thieves crucified with him, one on the right hand, and another on the left.

The pain from the nails piercing Jesus' hands would cause His pectoralis major muscles to go into spasms and His lungs to no longer operate properly. The only way one being crucified could breathe would be to straighten his legs, place his full weight on the nail driven through his feet, and stand straight, thereby forcing air into his lungs. To exhale, he would bend his knees, causing the full weight of his body to hang on the nails in his hands. That is why when they wanted to finally kill a man being crucified, the Romans would break his legs. It was the most cruel, torturous death ever devised by man. Cicero said it was not fit for even the most common criminal.

Matthew 27:39–42 (a)

And they that passed by reviled him, wagging their heads, and saying, Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save thyself. If thou be the Son of God, come down from the cross. Likewise also the chief priests mocking him, with the scribes and elders, said, He saved others . . .

"He saved others," said the chief priests, scribes, and elders. They had denied this previously, saying that if Jesus had helped anyone, it had been only through the power of the devil (Matthew 12:24). Now comes the moment of truth. When they think they've got Him, they admit He saved others. How could they do otherwise? The lepers were healed. The dead were raised. The blind saw. The deaf heard.

Matthew 27:42 (b)

. . . himself he cannot save.

Jesus could have come down from the Cross and saved Himself. But had He saved Himself, He could not have saved you.

Matthew 27:42 (c)

If he be the King of Israel, let him now come down from the cross, and we will believe him.

This is what the world still wants. The world wants Christ—but not crucified. The world wants a Jesus figure, a Christ-consciousness, a cosmic spirituality, a harmonic convergence, teachings on love, truth, and global unity. The world still says, "Give us Christ—but not on the Cross." Why? Because Christ crucified means we have to acknowledge the part we played in His horrific death. We have to acknowledge that we are murderous sinners in need of a Savior. And the world doesn't want to do that. They want Jesus as a Hero, but not as a Lamb slain for their sin.

Matthew 27:43

He trusted in God; let him deliver him now, if he will have him: for he said, I am the Son of God.

"What's wrong, Jesus?" the crowd heckled. "You trusted in God—now look at You." You'll hear the same thing today. People will say to you—or perhaps you'll hear the enemy whisper in your ear—"I thought you trusted in God. How come you're in this mess?"

But, as the old sermon says, "This is Friday. But Sunday's a-comin'."

Matthew 27:44, 45

The thieves also, which were crucified with him, cast the same in his teeth. Now from the sixth hour there was darkness over all the land unto the ninth hour.

The Greek word translated "land" is ge, from which we get our word "geography." It means "earth." In other words, the whole world was blanketed with darkness. As you study literature and mythology, you find that a three-hour darkness is referred to in virtually every culture. At Jesus' birth, a star shone over the manger and light flooded the sky. At His death, darkness covers the earth because when man rejects the Light of the world, darkness covers his world.

Matthew 27:46

And about the ninth hour Jesus cried with a loud voice, saying, Eli, Eli, lama sabachthani? that is to say, My God, my God, why hast thou forsaken me?

Every other time Jesus addressed God, it was always as "Abba." But here He speaks from a distance to His Father as He says, "My God, My God." Why? Of God, Habakkuk declared, "Thou art of purer eyes than to behold evil, and canst not look on iniquity" (Habakkuk 1:13). Yet Paul writes that Jesus not only bore our sin, but actually became sin for us (2 Corinthians 5:21). Therefore, unable to behold evil or look on iniquity, the Father had no other choice but to turn His back on His Son—and Jesus felt the agony of that isolation.

Hear not only the agony of isolation, but a word of information. Those who taunted Him as He paid for their sin should have known Jesus was quoting Psalm 22, the classic psalm that described crucifixion. Thus, even as He was dying, Jesus was clueing people in. As they mocked Him, He was saying, "Psalm 22 is being fulfilled in your very presence." But they didn't understand. They were in the dark not only physically but spiritually because they chose not to see the Light.

Matthew 27:47–50

Some of them that stood there, when they heard that, said, This man calleth for Elias. And straightway one of them ran, and took a spunge, and filled it with vinegar, and put it on a reed, and gave him to drink. The rest said, Let be, let us see whether Elias will come to save him. Jesus, when he had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost.

Jesus didn't die—He dismissed His Spirit. His life wasn't taken away—He gave it away. And at last, the price was paid.

Matthew 27:51 (a)

And, behold, the veil of the temple was rent in twain from the top to the bottom . . .

As the veil in the temple was rent in two, the Holy of Holies became open for anyone to come into the presence of God at any time concerning any matter.

For topical study of Matthew 27:50–51 entitled "Open House," turn to page* 209.

Matthew 27:51 (b)

. . . and the earth did quake . . .

When God gave the law to Moses on Mount Sinai, the earth shook (Exodus 19:18) because the Law was meant to shake people up. "You think you're righteous?" the law asked. "You think you're okay? Try this on for size and see how you match up." Paul wrote in Galatians that the law was given as a schoolmaster to make us see that we're sinners in need of a Savior (Galatians 3:24). Here, the earth is shaking again—this time not to shake man up, but to shake him loose. We're free! It is finished. The veil is rent. The price is paid.

Matthew 27:51 (c), 52

. . . and the rocks rent; And the graves were opened; and many bodies of the saints which slept arose.

The word "arose" literally means "appeared." I believe what happened here is this: The earthquake caused the stones that covered the tombs to roll away. The bodies within those tombs then became exposed and visible.

Matt 27:53 (a)

And came out of the graves after his resurrection . . .

Although the stones shook loose, exposing the bodies at the time of the crucifixion, they could not come out of the graves until after Jesus' Resurrection. Why? Because Paul says in 1 Corinthians 15 that Jesus is the Firstfruit. Jesus rose first.

Matthew 27:53 (b)

. . . and went into the holy city, and appeared unto many.

These chosen saints who were resurrected after Jesus arose on Easter Sunday began to walk around the Holy City. What a trip it would have been to see people who were dead for ten years cruising around Jerusalem!

Matthew 27:54

Now when the centurion, and they that were with him, watching Jesus, saw the earthquake, and those things that were done, they feared greatly, saying, Truly this was the Son of God.

Centurions were in command of one hundred men. Centurions were tough men—fighters and warriors—chosen for their bravery. This centurion saw the darkened sky, felt the earth quaking, listened as Jesus said, "Father, forgive them; for they know not what they do," and heard Him cry, "It is finished." And the only conclusion he could make was, "Truly this was the Son of God."

Matthew 27:55, 56 (a)

And many women were there beholding afar off, which followed Jesus from Galilee, ministering unto him: Among which was Mary Magdalene . . .

Mary Magdalene was the woman from whom Jesus cast seven demons (Luke 8:2).

Matthew 27:56 (b)

. . . and Mary the mother of James and Joses and the mother of Zebedee's children.

In Matthew 20, James and John's mother had come to Jesus saying, "I have a favor to ask. Could one of my boys be on Your right hand and one on Your left hand in the kingdom?"

"You don't know what you ask," He had answered.

As she looked at Jesus now—with a man hanging on His right and another on His left—I wonder if her heart stopped as she realized how little she had understood.

Matthew 27:57–60

When the even was come, there came a rich man of Arimathaea, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple: He went to Pilate, and begged the body of Jesus. Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered. And when Joseph had taken the body, he wrapped it in a clean linen cloth, and laid it in his own new tomb, which he had hewn out in the rock: and he rolled a great stone to the door of the sepulchre, and departed.

John tells us Nicodemus accompanied Joseph of Arimathaea. Both Nicodemus and Joseph were secret disciples of Jesus. What were they risking by burying the body of Jesus? Everything. They could potentially have been sentenced to death for siding with this One who was crucified. They could have lost their prominent positions in the temple and in society if they were discovered to be sympathizers of this itinerant Rabbi from Nazareth. At the very least, they were risking ritual defilement, which meant they couldn't celebrate Passover after touching the dead body of Jesus.

We often hear Nicodemus and Joseph of Arimathaea criticized for being secret disciples. But where were the prominent disciples? Where were Peter, James, and John? They were hiding. It was the heretofore secret disciples—Nicodemus and Joseph—who were at the Cross, ministering to the body of their Lord.

Perhaps you feel like you don't do much. You don't walk on water very often. You haven't healed a whole lot of lepers lately. You're not real vocal on the job about your belief in Christ. Listen—like Joseph and Nicodemus, you'll have your opportunity. Quite frankly, I think sometimes the secret disciples are the ones who really shine when the way gets dark. The quiet ones, the unknown ones, are often the strongest. So it was with Joseph and Nicodemus. Their moment had arrived.

Matthew 27:61–64

And there was Mary Magdalene, and the other Mary, sitting over against the sepulchre. Now the next day, that followed the day of the preparation, the chief priests and Pharisees came together unto Pilate, saying, Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while he was yet alive, After three days I will rise again. Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest his disciples come by night, and steal him away, and say unto the people, He is risen from the dead: so the last error shall be worse than the first.

These skeptics remembered what Jesus said. With Jesus' words about rising again in three days ringing in their memories, Jesus' enemies were worried about what might happen. The believers? They were skeptics. Had they really believed Jesus would rise, they would have been camped out around the tomb to see it happen.

Have you found that sometimes the unbeliever believes more than we do? The unbeliever often has more of an understanding of the power and reality of God than do we who have "theologized" or "dispensationalized" Him away with our doctrinal systems. Clarification would help.

Matthew 27:65

Pilate said unto them, Ye have a watch: go your way, make it as sure as ye can.

It's almost as if Pilate is saying, "You have a watch—fifty soldiers—at your command. Make it as sure as you can, but good luck." What happened to Pilate? Tradition has it that a year after this event, upset emotionally and in trouble politically, he resigned his position and went to Gaul (Germany), where he committed suicide.

Matthew 27:66

So they went, and made the sepulchre sure, sealing the stone, and setting a watch.

The seal of the imperial sign of Rome was embedded in wax upon the rope in front of the stone. Anyone who tampered with the rope or touched the stone would be executed. The stone was sealed. The watch was set. Chapter 27 ends on Friday.

But Sunday's "a-comin'."

THE GOVERNMENT UPON HIS SHOULDERS

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 27:31–32

Approximately seven hundred fifty years before Jesus was born as the Babe of Bethlehem, the prophet Isaiah wrote these words, "For unto us a child is born, unto us a son is given: and the government shall be upon his shoulder: and his name shall be called Wonderful, Counselor, The Mighty God, The Everlasting Father, The Prince of Peace" (Isaiah 9:6).

Shortly after Isaiah gave this prophecy, the Assyrians, a bloodthirsty people, swooped into Israel and conquered the ten northern tribes. As they carried their captives back to Assyria, they did so with extreme cruelty, leading the Jews across the desert with fishhooks in their mouths. Along the way, the Assyrians would skin many of the Jews alive. They would cut off the heads of those who complained and stack the heads in large pyramids to be left in the desert as a warning to any would-be rebels.

"When would the One come of whom Isaiah wrote?" Israel must have wondered as she longed for release from her torment. But the time was not yet.

About one hundred years after the Assyrian aggression, another invasion was launched against Israel. This time it was the Babylonians. Beginning in 605 B.C., the Babylonians launched a series of attacks against the southern part of the country. These attacks climaxed in the year 586 B.C., when the soldiers of Nebuchadnezzar, led by Nebuzaradan, marched into the Holy City of Jerusalem, raped the women, tortured the children, and destroyed the temple.

The people were terrified. Their hearts cried for the day when He might come of whom Isaiah spoke: the Wonderful Counselor, the Mighty God, the Everlasting Father, the Prince of Peace who would carry the government on His shoulders. But the time was not yet.

The Babylonians were followed by the Greeks. On his deathbed, Alexander the Great turned over control of Israel to the Seleucid family.

From that dynasty came a man named Antiochus Epiphanes, a picture of the coming anti-Christ. His hatred for the Jews was so great that one day he went into the temple, sacrificed a pig on the altar, made the priests drink the blood, and smeared the remainder on the temple walls.

How the people longed for the day when Messiah would come and the government would be borne upon His shoulders. But the time was not yet.

The Greeks were followed by the Romans. When the Romans descended upon that region of the world and beat it into bloody submission, the people of Israel must surely have wondered if Messiah would ever come. Then news began a to circulate throughout the country about an itinerant Rabbi from Nazareth whose words were so gracious that the common people hear Him gladly (Mark 12:37). "Truly, He must be the Wonderful Counselor," some might have said.

Others might have said, "Did you hear what He did? He spoke a word and the storm ceased. He calls the dead from their graves. He heals those afflicted with leprosy. Truly, He's the Mighty God."

Others might have said, "Did you see the way He took the little children on His lap, laid His hands on them, and pronounced blessing upon them? Truly, He must be the Everlasting Father."

Others might have said, "Did you hear that when His disciples were out at sea, struggling against the storm, He was asleep in the hold of the boat? Such peace we've never seen, never heard of, never known. Truly, He must be the Prince of Peace."

"Could He be the fulfillment of Isaiah's prophecy?"

After He fed five thousand men with just a few loaves and fishes, the people gathered around Him to make Him King. No wonder! Just think—a King who could not only free them from Rome's tyranny, but could feed them as well! "We place the government upon Your shoulders," they cried. "Be our King!" But when He heard that, John tells us Jesus departed from the crowd and went up into a mountain alone (John 6:15).

Time went on and people still wondered. Then, after three years of working miracles, giving wonderful counsel, and radiating peace, Jesus rode into Jerusalem. He was greeted by the cries of hundreds of thousands of people gathered in the city to celebrate Passover. They waved palm branches and cried, "Hosanna. Save Now. Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord. This is the time! Take the government upon Your shoulders!"

But as the week went on and as the people realized that Jesus was not going to take control politically, their hearts began to turn. By the end of the week, their cry was, "We will not have this Man rule over us. We will not allow the government to rest upon His shoulders. Crucify Him."

They didn't know that on that very day, the government would indeed be placed upon His shoulders. What was upon His shoulders? What is His government? The Cross. The Cross was His symbol, His proof, His method, His government. Putting the Gospel accounts together, we get the scene in totality . . .

As thousands lined the Via Dolorosa, Jesus was preceded by a man carrying a sign reading "King of the Jews" and by two soldiers in full armor. Two additional soldiers followed Him. Along the way, He collapsed. Not wanting Jesus to die on the street, wanting to see Him make it to Calvary where He could be crucified and tortured further, one of the soldiers stopped and rested the point of his spear upon the shoulder of a man named Simon. Simon was now compelled by Roman law to carry the Cross the rest of the way to Calvary.

Simon was from Cyrene—or present-day Libya. We know he was a proselyte, one who had converted to Judaism. Simon of Cyrene, desiring as all Jews did, to celebrate at least one of the feasts in the Holy City, saved all of his money and made all of the necessary plans and preparations. At last the day arrived when he crossed the Mediterranean to celebrate Passover in Jerusalem! But when he arrived, he realized it was an unusual festival. Controversy abounded. At the beginning, people cried, "Hosanna." At the end, they cried, "Crucify." And Simon didn't know what to make of it.

Lined up along the street with hundreds of thousands of others, Simon watched a Man carrying a Cross to Calvary. On the way, the Man stumbled right in front of him. Simon then felt the unmistakable sensation of iron pressed upon his shoulder—the spear of a Roman soldier—and probably wondered, Why me? Of all the hundreds of thousands of people here, why do I have to carry this criminal's cross up the hill? But he had no choice. So he put the Cross on his shoulder. The procession continued on to Calvary and Jesus was crucified—with Simon probably watching and wondering.

What happened to Simon? He became a believer. How do I know? Mark writes, "And they compel one Simon a Cyrenian, who passed by, coming out of the country, the father of Alexander and Rufus, to bear his cross" (Mark 15:21).

Mark, writing his Gospel from the city of Rome identified Simon as the father of Rufus and Alexander—the implication being that Rufus and Alexander were well known in the Christian community in Rome. Forty or fifty years later, in Romans 16:13, Rufus' name again is mentioned when Paul, writing to the church in Rome, salutes Rufus and his mother.

The implication of this is very meaningful to me. Simon of Cyrene, who carried the Cross—the government of Christ—became governed by Christ. Jesus said, "All who are weary, come to Me and I will give you rest. Take My yoke upon you and learn of Me and you'll find rest in your souls" (Matthew 11:28, 29). What is the yoke Jesus places upon our shoulders? Surprise. It's the Cross.

"Wait a minute," you say. "That's contradictory. How could a cross be easy? How could a cross give rest to my soul?"

Jesus knew and demonstrated as no one else could that the key to life truly lies in death. The key to life lies in taking up the cross and dying to self. Even as Jesus died for our sin, so we too are to die to self. Live for yourself and you'll end up dying. Life will be a drag. You'll be unhappy, cynical, bitter, and mean. But die to self and you'll find His burden easy and His load light. The cross is a sweet yoke. Ask Simon.

This week, I encourage you to say, "Lord, I'm going to take up the cross. I'm going to quit worrying about why I am misunderstood or why no one is helping me. I'm going to die to myself, reach out to others, and reach up to You." If you do, you will have a fabulous week, for whoever loses his life will find it. That's the beautiful mystery of Christianity.

"Oh, Jon, you're manipulating me," you say. "You're trying to motivate me and I resent it."

That's okay. Simon probably resented the touch of the spear upon his shoulder, too. But the spear compelled him to carry the Cross.

And the Cross drew him to Christ.

OPEN HOUSE!
A Topical Study of
MATTHEW 27:50–51

Sometimes we have a "boys will be boys" attitude toward sin. Human nature being what it is, we wonder what the big deal is about messing up. So what if we miss the mark? We're just human aren't we? What's the problem?

The problem is, being a personal God and loving Father, God is grieved by the sin we commit so easily and nonchalantly. Why? Is it because He's hypersensitive? No. Is He upset that we're not behaving like "good little boys and girls"? No. The Father hates sin because He sees the devastating effects it brings about. He sees the sorrow and the suffering, the problems and the pain that sin leaves in its wake. Thus, contrary to popular opinion, sin is not bad because it's forbidden. Sin is forbidden because it's bad. Sin is serious—deadly serious. In Leviticus 17, God declared there can be no remission of sin, no forgiveness of sin, without the shedding of blood. You see, it's not a matter of "boys will be boys" or "accidents happen." Sin is a deadly matter, and God is deadly serious about it. That's why there can be no forgiveness without bloodshed.

The nation of Israel could experience forgiveness of sin on only one day each year: Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement. On that day, the high priest would go through a great ceremonial cleansing before robing himself in his priestly garments. He would then take the blood of the bulls and goats and lambs that had been sacrificed on the altar in the courtyard and would walk into the Holy Place, the area of the temple where all priests were allowed.

Beyond the Holy Place was a veil separating it from the Holy of Holies. This veil was massive: sixty feet high, thirty feet wide, and ten inches thick. It was made of seventy-two braids, each consisting of twenty-four cords. The veil was so heavy that it took three hundred priests to hang it. Beyond the veil was the Holy of Holies—a small room only the high priest could enter only on the Day of Atonement. The Holy of Holies contained the Ark of the Covenant. Covering the Ark was the mercy seat, and filling the Holy of Holies was the shekinah glory of God—the visible, tangible presence of the Lord. On one day each year, the high priest went from the altar in the courtyard, into the Holy Place and then through the veil into the Holy of Holies, where he sprinkled the blood and interceded on behalf of the people. If, however, the high priest was not properly cleansed—if he was not right with God—he would die in the Holy of Holies. In Exodus we read that hanging from the hem of the high priest's robes were hung bells and pomegranates, signifying the gifts and the fruit of the Spirit. As long as the priests in the Holy Place could hear the bells on the high priest's robes ringing behind the veil, they knew everything was all right. But if the bells stopped ringing, they knew there was trouble. In later years, a rope was tied around the ankle of the high priest so that if he dropped dead, he could be pulled out of the Holy of Holies without placing anyone else's life in jeopardy.

It was a powerful, awesome, and, in a very real sense, terrifying moment when the high priest entered the Holy of Holies to intercede for the people. With this in mind, can you imagine how the priests in the Holy Place must have felt on the day Jesus died?

First, there was darkness. Then the massive veil was ripped from top to bottom as if it were a piece of paper. Suddenly, these priests who would never have been allowed into the Holy of Holies could look right in. The way was now open.

> For the law having a shadow of good things to come, and not the very image of the things, can never with those sacrifices which they offered year by year continually make the comers thereunto perfect. For then would they not have ceased to be offered? because that the worshipers once purged should have had no more conscience of sins. But in those sacrifices there is a remembrance again made of sins every year. For it is not possible that the blood of bulls and of goats should take away sins.
> Hebrews 10:1–4

The shedding of blood and the application of the blood in the Holy of Holies could not really make one right with God. If it could, there would have been no need to do it year after year. But the continued sacrifices were a constant reminder that the blood of bulls and goats and lambs was simply a shadow, a picture that pointed to One who was to come—the Lamb of God who would take away the sin of the world forever.

> By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all. And their sins and iniquities will I remember no more. Now where remission of these is, there is no more offering for sin. Having therefore, brethren, boldness to enter into the holiest by the blood of Jesus, by a new and living way, which he hath consecrated for us, through the veil, that is to say, his flesh; and having an high priest over the house of God; let us draw near with a true heart in full assurance of faith, having our hearts sprinkled from an evil conscience, and our bodies washed with pure water.
> Hebrews 10:10, 17–22

Even as the veil in the temple was ripped from top to bottom, so the body of the Lamb of God was ripped for us. He paid the price for all of my sin, rebellion, and foolishness. "It is finished," He cried. The work is complete. Therefore, Hebrews says, come boldly into the presence of God. You have been cleansed by the blood. The veil is rent. No longer is the Holy of Holies for the high priest only. Every person who simply believes Jesus Christ died for his or her sin can come boldly into the presence of God. That's revolutionary! Not only the high priest, not only the pastor, not only a certain Bible study teacher or prayer warrior or singer can come. "Everyone come," God is saying. "The price has been paid by one offering. So come—not hesitantly, fearfully, or reluctantly. Come boldly. It's Open House!"

> During the Gulf of Tonkin crisis, Henry Kissinger asked one of his eager young assistants at the State Department to research the area. The assistant labored round the clock for six days to prepare what he felt was a thorough and profound paper. Proudly, he put it on Kissinger's desk. It came back fifteen minutes later with this note scribbled at the top: Please redo. HK.
> I've got to do it over? the assistant thought. I gave it my all. But he worked doubly hard on the rewrite. He placed the second paper on Kissinger's desk. Fifteen minutes later, it was again returned with these words at the bottom: Please redo. HK.

The weary assistant took his paper and spent yet a third week working feverishly to get it done. Again it went to Kissinger's desk. Again it came back with the same note. Finally, the young man stormed into Henry Kissinger's office and declared, "Mr. Kissinger, I've barely slept in three weeks. This is the very best I can do."

"Well, in that case, I'll read it now," replied Kissinger.

Sometimes I think we picture our Father like that, saying to us, "Pray harder. Study longer. Sacrifice deeper. Give more. And if you continue to give, pray, sacrifice, and give—maybe I'll read your paper. Maybe I'll listen to your prayer. Maybe I'll respond to your question." But, gang, the issue is not trying harder. The issue is realizing Jesus completed the work once and for all.

The Father says to us, "Come boldly into My presence. Whether you have devotions or not is immaterial. Whether you study My Word or not is irrelevant. My Son opened the way for you. His body was torn. He was the ripped veil."

Yet what do we do? We get out our little scissors and say, "I realize there's a big opening in the veil, but I'm going to try to cut my own way through with my works of righteousness—my devotion, my prayer, my witnessing."

Listen, precious people, the work is done. The price is paid. The way into God's presence is open to everyone who believes. It is open to any person at any time at any place. Thus, any time and any place, every time and every place can be holy. Changing a diaper can be just as much an act of devotion and worship as reading your Bible if you do it to the glory of God, celebrating the fact that you can come into His presence anywhere. That's what the Samaritan woman heard from Jesus when, in answer to her question concerning the proper place to worship, He said, "The Father is seeking those who will worship Him in spirit and in truth" (John 4:24). In other words, it's not where your body is that matters. It's where your heart is that counts.

Working out at the YMCA can be an act of worship if you say, "Lord, I thank You for the fact that I can exercise. Help me to somehow reflect something of You as I'm doing this. May this be a time, Lord, when I can encourage someone and really be thankful to You for what You've given me today." You are in the Holy of Holies at that time, even though there's not a pew in sight. Does this mean you should never read your Bible, never pray, never tithe, or never come to church? Of course not. It means, however, that your motivation for doing those things changes. Instead of feeling responsible to demonstrate your spirituality, you realize the work has already been done, the price paid, the veil rent. And your motivation to worship, tithe, pray, and study the Word changes from one of responsibility to one of response.

When my wife gives me a Valentine, I don't say, "I better read this. In fact, I'll have to discipline myself to do it. I'll carve out time tomorrow morning. Hope I can stay awake. Hope she's impressed that I read it." That's crazy! And yet we take the Valentine of God's Word—His love letter to us—and say, "Well, I better discipline myself. Hope I can stay awake. Where should I start?" When you're in love with someone, you want to know what she's saying, what he's thinking, what they're feeling. You want to know her mind; you want to hear his heart. Why do I study the Bible? Because I am so impressed with my Father that I want to know more about Him.

He has torn the veil from top to bottom. And we can enter into His presence—anyone, any place, any time. Glory be to God! The price was paid. The veil was rent. The way is open. Come on in!

28 Matthew is the gospel of the King—the King revealed in chapters 1 through 10; the King resisted in chapters 11 through 13; the King retreating in chapters 14 through 20; the King rejected in chapters 21 through 27; and here in chapter 28—the King resurrected!

Matthew 28:1

In the end of the sabbath, as it began to dawn toward the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene and the other Mary to see the sepulchre.

Mary Magdalene and Mary, the mother of James the Less, are not coming in a spirit of expectancy or faith. Rather, they are coming to anoint the dead body of Jesus. Doctrinally, they had missed the point entirely by assuming He would still be in the tomb. But devotionally, they were right on the mark in wanting to minister to Him.

Matthew 28:2 (a)

And, behold, there was a great earthquake . . .

I read about a man who was caught in a severe earthquake. "No matter where I looked," he said, "everything was in motion. Then I looked up through the hole in my roof and saw the stars. They became my fixed points of reference."

How true! This world is constantly quaking, trembling, and shaking. We need a fixed reference point—and we have one in the bright and morning star, Christ Jesus (Revelation 22:16). You see, everything I believe and everything I do must be measured by who He is. If we're going to be stabilized in an ever-quaking, shifting world, we must fix our eyes upon the fixed One, Jesus Christ—the same yesterday, today, and forever (Hebrews 13:8).

Matthew 28:2 (b)

. . . for the angel of the Lord descended from heaven, and came and rolled back the stone from the door, and sat upon it.

Sometimes movies depict the angel moving the stone so Jesus could come out. Believe me, folks, Jesus did not need the help of an angel to get out of the tomb. He's the same One who, a few hours later, would walk through walls. No, the stone was rolled away not to let Jesus out of the tomb, but to let the disciples look in and see that it was empty.

When General Gordon, a godly man, discovered this tomb in 1885, he did a very wise thing. He took a jar of soil gathered from the floor of the tomb to some chemists and asked if there was any trace of decomposition in the soil. The analysis found that there was no trace of decay in the tomb. Indeed, there never was.

Matthew 28:3, 4

His countenance was like lightning, and his raiment white as snow: And for fear of him the keepers did shake, and became as dead men.

Members of the finest fighting force in the known world were wiped out. Why? Because they saw the angel of the Lord draw a flaming sword? No. Because the angel spoke a word and they fell down? No. I suggest to you it was the awesome power of purity that caused these Roman soldiers to become as dead men.

Gang, do you know where power truly lies? Do you know from whence effectiveness really comes? It doesn't come from being strong and assertive, proving your point, or standing up for your rights. That's not what Jesus taught. He said, "Blessed are the meek. The whole world will be theirs" (see Matthew 5:5). Meekness, holiness, and purity are what cause the Roman soldiers of this world to collapse. When Jesus taught us to turn the other cheek, it was not so we would become lifeless doormats. No, whether it concerns your husband, your wife, your children, your employer, your relatives, or your neighbors, change comes not through asserting yourself. It comes through the power of purity.

Matthew 28:5 (a)

And the angel answered and said unto the women, Fear not ye . . .

"Fear not" was the angelic injunction to the shepherds on the hillside at His birth, to the women at the tomb at His death, and to us today.

Matthew 28:5 (b), 6 (a)

. . . for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified. He is not here: for he is risen, as he said.

"As he said." I like that phrase. It is a subtle reminder, a gentle rebuke. In other words it's as if the angel said, "You should have known He wouldn't be here. Didn't He tell you He would rise?"

Matthew 28:6 (b)–8

Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

Notice the wording. First: "Come and see." Then: "Go and tell." Sincere in their desire to see missionary work accomplished or evangelism explode, many say, "We're going to win the world for Christ." But it won't happen until they first "come and see." Not until we get a clear vision of the "place where He lay"—of His work on the Cross and His resurrection from the grave—do we have a message to "go and tell."

"Come and see. Then go and tell." That is the message of the angel to these women who were first entrusted with the biggest news story in history. . . .

Matthew 28:9

And as they went to tell his disciples, behold, Jesus met them, saying, All hail.

"All hail" was a very common expression. Slang of that day, it meant, "Howdy." I like that! When the women came to the tomb, their doctrine was wrong. They thought Jesus was dead. But He Himself came to them because although they were doctrinally wrong, they were devotionally right. I'm convinced a lot of us take pride in our doctrine when what the Lord desires is our affection. We are committed to precepts about Christ, but are we committed to the Person of Christ? Many believers are doctrinally right, but they're dead right because their doctrine lacks devotion. On the other hand, your knowledge may be limited and your doctrine not perfectly accurate, but if your affection for Him is real, Jesus will appear to you time and time again, saying, "All hail! Howdy!"

Matthew 28:9, 10

And they came and held him by the feet, and worshiped him. Then said Jesus unto them, Be not afraid: go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee, and there shall they see me.

When Jesus was arrested in the Garden of Gethsemane, His disciples split the scene. When He was being tried, Peter was cursing and denying he even knew Him. If you were in Jesus' sandals, would you have said, "Go tell my brothers I'm going to meet them in Galilee"—or would you have said, "Go tell those losers I'm back and they're in hot water"?

After He died, Jesus descended into hell. Then He ascended on high and gave gifts to men (Ephesians 4:8, 9). If I went to hell for people who forsook and denied me, I would go to heaven and say, "Father, let's deal with them. They've got some lessons to learn. Didn't You say in Your Word that whom You love You chasten? Well, this is the time to chasten."

We have such a tendency to want to teach people lessons, straighten them out, shake them up, and set them right. But that's not the heart of our Lord, our Hero, Jesus Christ. When He ascended He didn't say, "Father, let's punish these guys." He said, "Father let's give gifts to them."

Matthew 28:11

Now when they were going, behold, some of the watch came into the city, and shewed unto the chief priests all the things that were done.

The Roman soldiers who had stood watch at the tomb came into Jerusalem saying to the priests, "You won't believe what happened. The earth shook. We saw an angel. The stone is gone. Things are happening!" And what did these "holy" men do?

Matthew 28:12–14

And when they were assembled with the elders, and had taken counsel, they gave large money unto the soldiers, saying, Say ye, His disciples came by night, and stole him away while we slept. And if this come to the governor's ears, we will persuade him, and secure you.

After employing deceitfulness, treachery, and mob psychology to bring about the death of Jesus, the chief priests and elders finally resorted to bribery to cover up His resurrection. "Here's some money," they said to the Roman soldiers. "We want you to say that while you slept, the disciples came and stole Jesus' body." This was a ridiculous lie for two reasons. First, if the soldiers were sleeping, how could they have known who took the body? Second, if these soldiers had indeed fallen asleep, they would have been executed according to Roman military law for their failure to keep watch. Far from dying, however, these guys showed up the next day driving BMWs.

Matthew 28:15

So they took the money, and did as they were taught: and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day.

On college campuses today, some so-called intellectuals still parrot this two thousand-year-old lie. Jesus' disciples took His body? That's pretty hard to swallow when you realize James was sawn in half embracing the Resurrection; Thomas had his brains beaten out with a club; Peter was crucified upside down; and John was placed in a cauldron of boiling oil. To a man, the disciples died violent deaths. Many of them saw their families tortured and killed because they continued to preach the Resurrection. I don't have enough faith to believe that eleven men suffered brutally, watched the annihilation of their families, and died violently for a lie. Certainly one of them would have cracked.

If you do not believe Jesus resurrected, I challenge you to explain to me where His body went. If the Romans had stolen it, why didn't they produce it? Christianity was ultimately the force that led to the destruction of the entire Roman Empire. If His disciples were merely hiding Jesus' body, why did they give their lives believing He had ascended?

You see, I would be a Christian even if I had no emotional feelings about it. Intellectually, when I look at all the evidence, I have no other choice. The body is not there. The Resurrection is the most analyzed event in history. I also believe it is the most provable. That's why Jesus said, "One sign I'll give you. Destroy this body and in three days I will rise again." Truly, the Resurrection verifies that Jesus is exactly who He claimed to be.

Matthew 28:16

Then the eleven disciples went away into Galilee, into a mountain where Jesus had appointed them.

According to 1 Corinthians 15:6, it would seem this was also the time when Jesus appeared to the five hundred.

Matthew 28:17

And when they saw him, they worshiped him: but some doubted.

On any given Sunday, we sense the Lord's presence and we worship Him. But some doubt. Even then, some doubted.

Matthew 28:18, 19 (a)

And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in heaven and in earth. Go ye therefore, and teach all nations. . . .

In this verse, the word "go" is a participle and literally means "as you are going." In other words, "As you are going to the grocery store, as you are going to school, as you are going to Mexico—wherever you're going—share the gospel." In this light, the Great Commission takes on a much broader perspective. We're to be sharing and teaching wherever we're going, whatever we're doing.

Matthew 28:19 (b), 20 (a)

. . . baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost: Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you . . .

Jesus didn't say, "Baptizing them in the names of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." He said, "Baptizing them in the name of the Father, Son, and Holy Ghost." Thus, here is another picture of the reality of the great mystery called the Trinity.

Matthew 28:20 (b)

. . . and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

"As you're going, as you're baptizing, as you're teaching, as you're traveling together as disciples of Me, know that I am with you always even unto the end of the world." That is what Jesus says to you today. That is why the Resurrection is so important. He's with us!

I am crucified with Christ: nevertheless I live; yet not I, but Christ liveth in me: and the life which I now live in the flesh I live by the faith of the Son of God, who loved me, and gave himself for me.

Galatians 2:20

"Christ liveth in me." That's the beauty of the Resurrection and the genius of Christianity.

FREEDOM FROM FEAR

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 28:5–6

June 18, 1815 was one of the decisive days in world history. Napoleon had just left the island of Elba, where he had been rebuilding his army in exile. Sailing back to the mainland of Europe with him were seventy-five thousand soldiers, including the Old Guard—perhaps the finest fighting men in the world. Although the Duke of Wellington, Commander -in Chief of the British forces, offered to do his best to stop Napoleon, it seemed like a futile assignment. At Waterloo, with only sixty-seven thousand allied troops, Wellington engaged Napoleon in battle. If Napoleon was indeed victorious, there would have been no stopping him in his drive to reclaim all of Europe. The people in England waited for hours as the battle raged. Eager for news, they positioned a ship in the Channel that would signal the outcome of the contest to watchmen stationed in towers along the shores of Dover.

Finally, before it became enshrouded in fog, the signal ship signaled this message to the towers: Wellington defeated. Although the hearts of the watchmen sank, they relayed the word quickly to the waiting messengers. And word spread like wildfire throughout England that Wellington had been defeated.

Hopelessness and despair set in as the British knew it would only be a matter of time before Napoleon would sail across the Channel and lay claim to their country. However, when the fog lifted, the ship fired a cannon to get the attention of those in the tower and the third and final word of the message was relayed. The word was “Napoleon.” What a difference the third word made, for the completed message read: Wellington defeated Napoleon. Suddenly, the hearts of the British people rejoiced. Napoleon had been stopped. They would remain a free people. The third word filled their hearts with great joy.

But the followers of Jesus experienced far greater joy and liberty on the third day when the rest of His message came through. On the third day, the fog lifted and the third word came forth: He is risen!

In Hebrews 2 we see a passage that will hopefully give you new insight into the glory of the Resurrection.

> Forasmuch then as the children are partakers of flesh and blood, he also himself likewise took part of the same; that through death he might destroy him that had the power of death, that is, the devil.
> Hebrews 2:14

God Himself became a Man in the Person of Jesus Christ. He became like us that He might die for us and give hope to us.

> And deliver them who through fear of death were all their lifetime subject to bondage.
> Hebrews 2:15

Why did God become flesh and blood? To deliver us from the fear of death. You see, the Bible says that, although man might deny it on the surface, he is in bondage to the fear of death deep within. We don't like to talk about death, but we know it's inevitable. After all, the statistics on death are pretty conclusive: ten out of ten people die.

Fear of Physical Death

The Bible says the fear of death is bondage. Regardless of what the commercial says, we're not getting better. We're getting older. We can fight it with surgery. We can eat health foods all day. But the fact is, we're not going to win. We're dying. If you're a believer, you've probably already settled the issue of physical death. Because of what Christ did for you on the Cross, you know you're going to heaven. But maybe you're afraid of another kind of death. I suggest this text paints a much broader picture than simply the fear of physical death . . .

Fear of Financial Death

- "Will I have enough money to live comfortably after I retire?"
- "If inflation hits double digits again, what will happen to me?"
- "What if Alzheimer's strikes me?"
- "How will I afford medical costs?"
- "Will Social Security be enough?"
- "Will Social Security be there at all?"

Fear of Relational Death

- "What if he tells me he's seeing someone else?"
- "What if she says she just wants to be friends?"
- "What if the relationship crumbles?"

Fear of Vocational Death

- "What if I get fired?"
- "What if there's a lay-off?"
- "What if there's a cut-back?"
- "What if I can't make the grade?"

Jesus, who became like us, died for us. But it seemed like everything was hopeless and lost. Then suddenly, He came back to life. And because He conquered death, the ultimate enemy, nothing can stand in His way—not physical infirmities, not finances, not relationships, not vocations. How we need to hear the message of the Resurrection. Jesus Christ has risen from the dead. Therefore nothing can conquer Him. And guess where He is. The One who conquered death now lives in my heart by His Holy Spirit. The resurrected One now indwells me.

Physically, if I get sick, the One who lives in me will see me through. He's going to see me through. Either I'll get well and live a few more years or I'll go to heaven—where I long to be.

Financially, He has promised to see us through. He has promised to supply all of our needs (Philippians 4:19) and that no good thing would He withhold from those who walk with Him (Psalm 84:11).

Relationally, maybe your friends have left you or your marriage has collapsed. Know this, dear friend: Jesus is in you. He is the Resurrection. And He has promised in His Word to restore unto you the years the locust has eaten (Joel 2:25). As Jonah discovered, He is the God of the second chance. He is the One who works all things together for good (Romans 8:28). Thus, we have nothing to fear.

"If Christ Jesus be not raised from the dead," Paul said, "then we are of all men most miserable" (1 Corinthians 15:19). But if Christ is raised from the dead, we are free from the fear of death. How does this work practically?

You might be saying, "I believe Jesus died for my sins. I believe He rose again and lives in me. But I am still afraid of this, that, or the other. I'm in bondage to the fear of death. What can I do?" Do what Mary Magdalene and the other Mary did. The next verse in Matthew tells us that they came to the place where Christ lay. They came to where they thought He was. They came to the tomb. Even though they thought He was dead, they longed to be with Him.

So, too, if you find yourself in bondage to the fear of death, go to the place where you last saw Him—even if you're not sure He's still there. And like the women at the tomb, perhaps when you least expect it, you'll feel His touch upon your shoulder and you'll hear Him say, "You came seeking Me. Thank you. Now what can I do for you?"

I'm so thankful for Jesus Christ because, like you, I have experiences of wondering. "Is this going to die? Is that going to die? What's going to happen over here?" But then I go to the place where I last saw Him, and sure enough, I hear His voice again.

And I'm free.

BEING USED BY BEING THERE

A Topical Study of MATTHEW 28:8

The greatest news story in the history of humanity broke on a spring morning in A.D. 32. The news? Jesus of Nazareth, an itinerant Preacher, had risen from the dead just as He had predicted. An angel told the story and entrusted it not to an investigative journalist from 60 Minutes, not to a network anchorman, not to an editor of TIME or even Christianity Today, not to a theologian, not to one of the remaining disciples. No, the ones who were entrusted with the most profound and incredible story in all history were two women. Why? Here are some possible reasons. . . .

Because God Loves to Use the Weak to Confound the Strong

Peter tells us in his first epistle that the woman is the weaker vessel (1 Peter 3:7). Biblically, the concept of the "weaker vessel" speaks not of inferiority but of sensitivity. Innately, a woman has greater sensitivity than a man. Instead of using Peter, James, John, or any of the boys who hung out with Him, roughing it and sleeping on the hillsides of Galilee, God initially used two women to spread the gospel, seemingly delighting in using the weaker vessel to confound the strong.

Because They Were the Last Ones at the Cross

In Matthew 27:55, we read that a number of women were at the Cross beholding Jesus afar off. The two Marys, mentioned at the end of chapter 27 are the same two Marys who are named at the beginning of chapter 28. It remains true, precious people, that those who go through the deepest sorrow will often be those who experience the greatest joy.

Because Thousands of Years Earlier, Death Had Come by a Woman

Seduced by the serpent to eat of the forbidden fruit, Eve shared with Adam in the fall of humanity. It was in a Garden that death came by a woman. Here, it is at a garden tomb that life is announced to a woman. That's so often the way of the Lord. He takes those of us who have missed the mark or messed up in a certain area and delights in using us to minister to others at a later time. He heals the hurts. He restores, rebuilds, renews, and revives. And then He releases powerful ministry in the very area where we blew it previously. That's Good News. That's the gospel.

Because the Greatest Love Brings the Greatest Privilege

We know from John's Gospel that when Mary Magdalene came to the tomb and found it empty, she initially thought someone had moved Jesus' body to another sepulcher. Seeing a Man she supposed to be the gardener, she asked, "Where have they laid my Lord? If you have moved Him, tell me where you have laid Him and I will take Him away," (see John 20:15). How did Mary think she could move the body of Jesus all by herself? I suggest the answer is that when you love someone, you don't weigh the heaviness of the difficulties or the obstacles. When you love someone, you just find a way. And Mary loved Jesus deeply.

Women are special to God's heart and indispensable to His church. I believe that the Lord entrusted women first with the gospel message because He delights to use the weak to confound the strong; because they suffered the deepest sorrow at the Cross and would therefore experience the greatest joy at the tomb; because death came by a woman and life was announced through women; because their great love brought great privilege.

But I think there is one more reason . . .

Because They Were There

Who came to the tomb? A couple of women. So God said, "I'll use them. They will be the first messengers of the gospel." I believe God uses people who are there. The people who are used are the ones who gather around the body of Christ and desire to minister to the body of Christ even as these women did. Start saying, "I don't need to pray any more with believers. I don't have time for fellowship. I'm doing fine by myself,"—and you will increasingly miss the opportunity to move in the power of ministry and the effectiveness of revelation. If you start to pull away or kick back—watch out. Revelation will pass you by. Oh, God's love for you will still be the same. His grace will be upon you just as much as ever. Your place in heaven will remain secure. But your usefulness will be diminished proportionately to your moving away from the body.

"But the body's dead," you say. That's what the two Marys thought. When they came to the tomb to wrap Jesus' body in spices, they had no idea He would be resurrected. They were coming to minister to His dead body. That is why I don't believe it is ever excusable for a person to say, "I'm not going to minister at that place or to those people because they're spiritually dead." No, if you really want to be a servant, like the women at the tomb, you'll minister faithfully regardless of what seems to be.

Maybe you're thinking, Let someone else have the revelation. Let someone else carry the news. I don't care. But look at how the women left the tomb. Matthew says they left with great joy. How did the disciples, who were hiding out on their own, feel at this point? Discouraged and defeated.

So you have a choice. You can live like the disciples or like the women at the tomb. If you choose to live like the disciples—on your own and hidden away—your life will abound with discouragement and defeat.

But if you say, "I want to be where Jesus is, I want to be with His Body even if it seems dead. I want to be there listening and learning, serving and giving. I want to pray and worship. I want to be there"—you will have a life full of great, great joy.

MARK

Background to Mark

The shortest of the four gospels, Mark's is only sixteen chapters. It's a fast-moving presentation of the life of Christ. And that's appropriate, for Mark's primary audience was the Romans, a fast-moving people. This explains why there are only two Old Testament references in his entire Gospel. Contrast this with Matthew's account—written primarily to the Jews—in which we find numerous Old Testament references. Luke's Gospel was written for the Greek mind-set. John's was written for the world in totality. But because Mark writes to the Romans, we don't see an abundance of sermons and discourses in his Gospel. Instead, the emphasis is upon the works rather than the words of Jesus.

Mark's full name was John Mark (John his Hebrew name, and Mark his Roman name). John Mark was specifically suited to write this Gospel because of his background. We know from Acts 12 that he was the son of a wealthy woman in whose house the carly church met. And from Peter's reference to him as his son in the faith (1 Peter 5), it would seem as though Peter was influential in John Mark's conversion. If this be so, it would make Mark's Gospel actually Peter's Gospel—for it would have been Peter who informed Mark of the events contained therein. Thus, scholars believe they are hearing the words and feeling the heart of Peter as they study the Gospel of Mark.

Matthew presents Jesus as the King. Luke presents Him as the Perfect Man. And John presents Him as the Son of God. But in the Gospel before us, Mark presents Jesus as a Servant. Chapters 1—10 portray the Servant living His life in service; chapters 11—16 portray Him giving His life in sacrifice.

In Acts 13:5, Mark himself was called a servant as he accompanied his uncle Barnabas and the apostle Paul on their first missionary journey into Asia Minor, or present-day Turkey. Although translated "minister," the Greek word huperetes literally means "under-rower." Picture a Roman galley. On the top deck, all of the passengers are enjoying the cruise through the Mediterranean. But down below, away from the passengers on the upper deck, are the huperetes, the under-rowers. No one sees them as they toil hour after hour, day after day, week after week; stroking, stroking, stroking. Sixty, eighty, one hundred twenty in number, the huperetes would be underneath rowing, toiling, sweating, working in order that the ship might move.

What does it mean to be a servant? It doesn't mean to overlord, barking commands from the upper deck. No, to be a servant, to be a minister, means to be one who undergirds, who works behind the scenes, who toils steadily and faithfully—even though he might never be recognized or acknowledged. Too often, our idea of "minister" is wrong. If one wants to be a true minister, a servant, a huperetes, he will labor in obscurity if necessary, rowing, undergirding. In Mark's Gospel we see Jesus moving away from the crowd, working in quietness, ministering in relative obscurity.

As Mark accompanied Paul and Barnabas, something happened. The Scriptures don't say why, but simply that John Mark turned back from Barnabas and Paul and went home (Acts 13:13). Consequently, when Paul and Barnabas were preparing to embark on their second missionary venture and Barnabas said he would get John Mark, Paul said, "Not so fast. He turned back last time. We can't be slowed down by one who is so unfaithful." Barnabas, whose name means, "Son of Consolation," insisted, however, that John Mark come along. As a result, Scripture records that "the contention was sharp between them" (see Acts 15:39).

Instead, Barnabas took John Mark, while Paul teamed with Silas and twice headed in different directions. Who was right? I believe Paul was justified in his position because he had in view the ministry in totality. I also believe Barnabas did well in caring about John Mark because later on we see John Mark laboring with Paul (Philemon 24), recommended by Paul to the church at Colosse (Colossians 4:10), and requested by Paul (2 Timothy 4:11). In other words, so good a job did Barnabas in restoring and renewing John Mark that his young nephew went on to have a vital ministry—even to Paul in the apostle's last days.

This gives me great hope. Maybe, like me, you can think of times in your life when you dropped the ball, turned away, fell down. Following such times, the tendency is to think, It's over. I'll never be used. But I would encourage you to remember John Mark who, although he chickened out on his first journey, went on to minister effectively—not only to Paul, but also to us through the Gospel before us. . . .

Mark 1:1
The beginning of the gospel of Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

The gospel is neither a discussion nor a debate. It's not good views, but Good News. And Mark wastes no time in getting to its heart.

Mark 1:2, 3
As it is written in the prophets, Behold, I send my messenger before thy face, which shall prepare thy way before thee. The voice of one crying in the wilderness, Prepare ye the way of the Lord, make his paths straight.

Mark quotes only two prophecies in his entire Gospel: this one, from Malachi 3:1; and Isaiah 40:3, which refers, of course, to John the Baptist.

Mark 1:4
John did baptize in the wilderness, and preach the baptism of repentance for the remission of sins.

The baptism of John—this one who came to prepare the way for Jesus Christ—was not for salvation, but for preparation. It was for the one who knew he had missed the mark, the one who knew he was a sinner, the one who knew he needed a Redeemer. Thus, John's baptism was preparatory, but not complete, for Jesus had not yet died for their sins.

Mark 1:5–9
And there went out unto him all the land of Judaea, and they of Jerusalem, and were all baptized of him in the river of Jordan, confessing their sins. And John was clothed with camel's hair, and with a girdle of a skin about his loins; and he did eat locusts and wild honey; and preached, saying, There cometh one mightier than I after me, the latchet of whose shoes I am not worthy to stoop down and unloose. I indeed have baptized you with water: but he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost. And it came to pass in those days, that Jesus came from Nazareth of Galilee, and was baptized of John in Jordan.

As John called people to repent, suddenly Jesus showed up, requesting to be baptized. Jesus had no sin. What did He need to confess? Why would He ask to be baptized by John? I suggest two reasons . . .

Although baptism is indeed a symbol of death, burial, and resurrection (Romans 6), the word baptizo was initially used with regard to dyeing cloth. Material "baptized" in colored dye would assume the color of the dye. Therefore, baptism is not only a symbol of dying, but of dyeing. What is Jesus doing here? He's identifying with us. Dipped in the same water we are, not ashamed of us, but identifying with us, He meets us. We take on the same color in the water of baptism. Regardless of the fact that two thousand years separate us from this event chronologically and six thousand miles geographically, we identify with Jesus and He with us through baptism.

Not only does Jesus' baptism illustrate His identification with us, it shows His submission to the Father, for through baptism, Jesus said, "I have come to die." Every other teacher, philosopher, or guru came to live—and yet, their so-called "ministries" were interrupted by their deaths. Not so with Jesus. He came to die. Death didn't interrupt His ministry. It fulfilled it.

Mark 1:10

And straightway coming up out of the water, he saw the heavens opened, and the Spirit like a dove descending upon him.

Conceived as He was by the Spirit in the womb of Mary, the Spirit was already in Jesus. But here we see the Spirit coming upon Him at the beginning of His ministry, empowering Him for service.

Mark 1:11

And there came a voice from heaven, saying, Thou art my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased.

Although it seems too good to be true, if you're a believer, this word of the Father applies to you as well, for, according to 2 Corinthians 5:21, you are in Christ. I can go through the day praising the Lord, casting my burdens upon Him—not because of who I am, but because of where I am, not because of what I've done or haven't done—but because I'm in Christ.

Mark 1:12 (a)
And immediately . . .

Mark's use of the words "immediately" and "straightway" eight times in his first chapter alone illustrate the speed with which he moves through his account.

Mark 1:12 (b)
. . . the Spirit driveth him into the wilderness.

Directly following the glorious experience of hearing the voice of His Father, the Spirit led Jesus into the wilderness. Why? Not to do Him in, but to show Him off. . . .

> Suppose you go to the local Jeep dealer and say, "I'm thinking about buying a Jeep." After opening the door of his latest model, a salesman would say, "Hop in"—and proceed to drive you to some rough terrain, where he would shift into four-wheel drive and take you off-road—flying over hills, splashing through rivers. Why? Not to damage the car, but to show you what it can do.

So, too, in driving Jesus to the wilderness, the Father was saying, "Watch My Son. No matter what Satan throws at Him, He will come through beautifully." And the same thing is true of you and me. You see, only what the Father allows can come into our lives. Therefore, when temptations, trials, difficulties, wilderness experiences, hard times come our way, it is because the Father has allowed them in order to silence Satan's accusation that you only serve God in easy times, and to show you off to a doubting world.

Mark 1:13 (a)

And he was there in the wilderness forty days, tempted of Satan . . .

Forty days puts us in mind of the forty years God's people wandered in the wilderness. Because the law will never lead a man into the Land of Promise, Moses, who speaks of the law, was unable to lead the people into the land. No, it was Joshua, whose name is the Hebrew form of "Jesus," who brought the people into the land flowing with milk and honey.

Mark 1:13 (b)

. . . and was with the wild beasts; and the angels ministered unto him.

Because of his sin, the first Adam lost the dominion over nature given to him (Genesis 1:28). Contrast this with the Last Adam, Jesus Christ, to whom dominion is returned as evidenced by the wild beasts that surrounded Him in the wilderness—a sneak preview of the coming kingdom wherein the wolf shall lie down by the lamb (Isaiah 11:6). Where Adam failed in the garden, Jesus came through in the desert.

Mark 1:14–20 (a)

Now after that John was put in prison, Jesus came into Galilee, preaching the gospel of the kingdom of God, and saying, The time is fulfilled, and the kingdom of God is at hand: repent ye, and believe the gospel. Now as he walked by the sea of Galilee, he saw Simon and Andrew his brother casting a net into the sea: for they were fishers. And Jesus said unto them, Come ye after me, and I will make you to become fishers of men. And straightway they forsook their nets, and followed him. And when he had gone a little further thence, he saw James the son of Zebedee, and John his brother, who also were in the ship mending their nets. And straightway he called them . . .

Of the twelve men Jesus called, at least seven were fishermen. To be a fisherman, one must possess patience and perseverance—qualities as valuable in fishing for men as in fishing for fish. I find it interesting that Peter and Andrew were casting their nets into the sea when Jesus called them. On the other hand, James and John were mending nets. The ministry of Peter and Andrew was evangelism, as evidenced by Andrew repeatedly bringing people to Christ, and Peter preaching the sermon on the Day of Pentecost that "caught" three thousand people in the net of the gospel. The ministry of John and James, by contrast, was that of mending people through their emphasis on both the heartfelt and practical nature of love. Whatever your temperament personally, watch the Lord use it in your own ministry.

Mark 1:20 (b)

. . . and they left their father Zebedee in the ship with the hired servants, and went after him.

The fact that Zebedee had servants meant that he had money. Therefore, when James and John left their father and the nets, they were leaving a bright future vocationally and financially. Yet they could do no other, for they found a higher calling than simply money. Filet of sole failed in comparison to saving souls. They were "hooked" and their "net" worth skyrocketed when they chose to follow the One who would impact eternity through their lives.

Mark 1:21

And they went into Capernaum; and straightway on the sabbath day he entered into the synagogue, and taught.

The synagogue is not the temple. The temple—where sacrifices were made, where the priesthood served—was in Jerusalem. Synagogues, on the other hand, dotted the countryside of Israel, having come into being during the Babylonian captivity when Jews were unable to worship at the temple in Jerusalem. Usually small in structure, synagogues were established wherever ten or more Jewish males lived, and were not places of sacrifice, but of study, worship, and prayer. They were overseen not by the traditional priesthood, but by laymen through a council of elders—one of whom was appointed ruler. When a rabbi would come into the area, the ruler of the synagogue would invite him to come and speak on the Sabbath day. As we see in the Book of Acts, Paul took advantage of this, going from synagogue to synagogue preaching Jesus.

Mark 1:22

And they were astonished at his doctrine: for he taught them as one that had authority, and not as the scribes.

The scribes would speak from authorities, quoting rabbis in their teachings. Jesus, however, spoke with authority. "Ye have heard it said . . . but I say unto you . . . ." He declared (Matthew 5—6).

Mark 1:23, 24

And there was in their synagogue a man with an unclean spirit; and he cried out, saying, Let us alone; what have we to do with thee, thou Jesus of Nazareth? art thou come to destroy us? I know thee who thou art, the Holy One of God.

Although this man may have sat undetected in the synagogue week after month after year, it wasn't until Jesus showed up that all hell broke loose quite literally. This should not be surprising. Whenever the Son of God shows up, the forces of hell respond.

Mark 1:25–28

And Jesus rebuked him, saying, Hold thy peace, and come out of him. And when the unclean spirit had torn him, and cried with a loud voice, he came out of him. And they were all amazed, insomuch that they questioned among themselves, saying, What thing is this? what new doctrine is this? for with authority commandeth he even the unclean spirits, and they do obey him. And immediately his fame spread abroad throughout all the region round about Galilee.

The demon left, but not before he tore up this individual. So, too, when we rid evil from our lives—when we say, "Yes, Lord, have Your way," as old habits, relationships, patterns are forsaken—there may be some tearing initially, but we will also experience freedom and blessing eventually.

Mark 1:29

And forthwith, when they were come out of the synagogue, they entered into the house of Simon and Andrew, with James and John.

Peter took Jesus home with him after church—always a good thing to do. I hope we'll increasingly get to the place where, when we leave Bible studies and services, we won't be those who quickly move into the next activity, but will learn to bring the Lord home.

Mark 1:30

But Simon's wife's mother lay sick of a fever, and anon they tell him of her.

You who spend time in worship and Bible study, beware. Satan will attempt to discourage you by causing fever in your home, heat in your house. But bring Jesus home with you and watch a miracle happen.

Mark 1:31

And he came and took her by the hand, and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them.

Throughout his Gospel, Mark emphasizes the touch of Jesus. Jesus heals not only through the word He speaks, but through the touch He shares—not only telling us what to do, but touching us and encouraging us as well.

Mark 1:32–35

And at even, when the sun did set, they brought unto him all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils. And all the city was gathered together at the door. And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him. And in the morning, rising up a great while before day, he went out, and departed into a solitary place, and there prayed.

Jesus had been serving, touching, giving, teaching, praying, healing. And yet, as was His practice morning by morning, He woke early to receive instruction concerning the day before Him.

Mark 1:36, 37

And Simon and they that were with him followed after him. And when they had found him, they said unto him, All men seek for thee.

"This is great!" said the disciples. "All men seek You! Everyone wants You!" You will find yourself frazzled and fried if you listen to such voices. Your priorities will get mixed up; you'll feel wiped out; your ministry will be done in; your heart will be weighed down.

Mark 1:38

And he said unto them, Let us go into the next towns, that I may preach there also: for therefore came I forth.

It was having "come forth" from the place of prayer that Jesus could say with confidence, "Let's split. My Father has other plans for Me today."

For topical study of Mark 1:32–38 entitled "The Key to Keeping Focused," turn to page* 227.

Mark 1:39–41 (a)

And he preached in their synagogues throughout all Galilee, and cast out devils. And there came a leper to him, beseeching him, and kneeling down to him, and saying unto him, If thou wilt, thou canst make me clean. And Jesus, moved with compassion, put forth his hand, and touched him . . .

Jesus did the unthinkable when He reached out to touch the leper.

Mark 1:41 (b)–44

. . . and saith unto him, I will; be thou clean. And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed. And he straitly charged him, and forthwith sent him away; and saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, shew thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

By going to the priest, the leper would be able to confirm his healing, and Jesus would be insulated from the circus mentality that all too often typifies today's healing ministries.

Mark 1:45

But he went out, and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter, insomuch that Jesus could no more openly enter into the city, but was without in desert places: and they came to him from every quarter.

Over and over again in the Gospel accounts, we hear Jesus say, "Don't tell anyone." And yet, as did the leper, we see people spreading the word radically. Then, after His death and resurrection, we hear Jesus say, "Now go into all the world." And what do we do? We "say nothing to any man." We have it all backward.

Because the healed leper spoke too soon, Jesus was hindered from going into the city. But how many times do we speak too late and hinder someone from coming to Him? Whether we be over-eager ex-lepers, or staid and shy churchgoers, what we must do is God's will—nothing more, nothing less, nothing else.

THE KEY TO KEEPING FOCUSED

A Topical Study of MARK 1:32–38

They accused Him of being a glutton and a winebibber, of being born illegitimately and casting out demons by the power of Satan. But no one ever accused Jesus of being busy or unapproachable, uptight or upset. Our culture values busyness. In our society, the busier one is, the more important he is. But in reality, deep within our hearts, we know that barely making it here, narrowly making it there is not the way life was meant to be. Jesus moved in serenity and tranquility—opposite of what we value in our society, but what we desire innately.

How did He do this? As I read Mark's Gospel, I am increasingly convinced that Jesus' life focused on three things . . .

The Father's Will

In talking about His relationship with His heavenly Father, Jesus said, "Truly I say unto you, The Son can do nothing of himself, but what he seeth the Father do: for what things soever he doeth, these also doeth the Son likewise" (see John 5:19). "I'm not doing My own thing," Jesus said. "I'm not pursuing My own pleasure, toying with My own hobbies. My life is about one thing: What I see and hear the Father doing and speaking. My own will? I have none."

This was seen nowhere more clearly than in the Garden of Gethsemane, when Jesus prayed, "Father, if it be possible, let this cup of My suffering pass from Me. Nevertheless, not My will, but Thy will be done" (see Mark 14:36).

The Father's Heart

Regarding His earthly ministry, Jesus was able to say, "I always do those things which please the Father" (see John 8:29)—not simply keeping His commandments and following His instructions, but pleasing Him.

It's one thing if my kids obey me. But it's something altogether different if they hear my heart and want to please me. That's the way Jesus was. He heard His Father's heartbeat.

The Father's Time

"Son, they're out of wine," Mary said, implying He do something.

"Mine hour is not yet come," Jesus answered. "This isn't the right time" (John 2:4).

"Lord, come quickly," Mary and Martha said. "The one you love is sick" (see John 11:3). Yet Jesus wouldn't go until the time was right. He waited for His Father's timing before moving in any direction.

What did this do?

It freed Him completely from every other demand.

We feel frazzled because we're always trying to figure out, "Should I do this? Should I go there?" We see opportunities open before us, and we think that because we're busy, we're accomplishing a lot. But so does the chicken running in circles whose head has been cut off. People who don't know any better might look at him and say, "Wow! Look at all he's doing. He's really living." In reality, however, he's in the process of dying because he's disconnected from his head. So, too, when you and I lose contact with our Head, Christ Jesus, watch what happens. We'll run here and sprint there; do this and attempt that—but although the world may applaud us, in our hearts, we'll know something is inherently wrong.

Jesus didn't do this. There was a sense of tranquility and serenity about Him because He was focused intently on one thing singularly: pleasing His Father.

When I wake up every morning, I don't have to go through mental gymnastics or philosophical acrobatics concerning the question of whether or not I should brush my teeth. No, as did most of us, I decided a long time ago that I'd brush my teeth every morning. And because of that, I don't spend my day thinking about the question of doing so. The same should be true of spiritual disciplines. Many people think the practices of Christianity are legalistic and confining. Not true. They're freeing and liberating, for we are free from wondering whether or not whatever we consider a non-negotiable priority in our lives will fit into our schedules.

> The recent winner of the all-city handball championship in Portland was unusual because, at thirty-seven years of age, he was relatively > old for a handball champion. It was also unusual because he didn't start playing the game until he was thirty-five. But more unusual than his age or his newness to the sport was the fact that, having lost his right arm as a Vietnam War veteran, he played handball with only one hand. When asked how he had won, he pared his answer down to one word: decisions. "Every time the ball comes toward my opponents," he said, "they must decide right hand or left hand. I, however, am absolutely sure which hand I'm going to use. There's no debate."

I like that! When you simplify your life concerning certain nonnegotiable issues, you no longer ask, "Should I pray this morning? Should I go to Bible Study on Wednesday?" Should I be in church Sunday night?"—for the decision has already been made. The question then arises, "How do we discern the will, time, and heart of God?" Watch what Jesus does in our text . . .

After teaching the multitude in Capernaum, after healing the sick, and casting out demons, Jesus rose early the following morning to pray. Meanwhile, His disciples realized that everyone was looking for Him. In my imagination, I hear them saying, "Wow! Good job, Jesus! You came through perfectly! Everybody wants You now. Now You can establish Your kingdom —in a beach town no less!"

But Jesus said something remarkable when He said, "Let us go into the next towns." The word translated "town" is an interesting Greek word used only once in all of the New Testament. It refers to an un-walled town, a town with no protection, no identity, but rather just a place on the map. Thus, Jesus was saying, "Let's leave Surf City and go to Cow Town."

This amazes me. I mean, if, as an athlete with aspirations to make the pros, you heard that the 49ers and the Seahawks, the Giants and the Royals all wanted you, would you say, "What an answer to prayer!" or would you say, "Let's get out of here"? If, as a businessman, you realized every corporation in the career of your choice was on the phone saying, "Please come and work for us. We need you. Name your salary," would you disregard their calls?

Didn't Jesus come to reach people? Didn't He come to establish the kingdom? Wouldn't it be wise for Him to take advantage of the publicity and the opportunity in Capernaum? Wouldn't this be a great moment for "Christianity"? Why would Jesus leave Capernaum? The answer lies in the second half of verse 38: "for therefore came I forth." The place from which Jesus came was the solitary place of prayer (verse 35). As He talked to His Father, Jesus was given direction for the day. Thus, even when demands were placed upon Him or seemingly good opportunities opened before Him, He wasn't swayed. How often you and I get detoured and distracted by hearing, "All men seek for you." We spend time talking about a "great opportunity" and pursue it—only to find we're tired. Not so with Jesus. The will of the Father, the timing of the Father, the heart of the Father directed Him to go to the un-walled cities that day. And that's what He did.

> The Lord GOD hath given me the tongue of the learned, that I should know how to speak a word in season to him that is weary: he wakeneth morning by morning, he wakeneth mine ear to hear as the learned.
> Isaiah 50:4

Morning by morning, Jesus was awakened to hear the directions of His Father that He might know how to speak during the day. If Jesus needed to pray —day by day by day— to hear a word, to gain direction so that He might move in priority and peace and serenity, how much more do we?

Not only is prayer communion with God, but it is also a commandment from God. At least two hundred times in the Scriptures the command to pray is given. Thus, prayer is not a suggestion. It's a command. Why? I suggest two reasons . . .

Preparation

Because life is oh-so-short, our Father has a very big job to do in the seventy, eighty, or ninety years we're here in order to teach us the language we'll be speaking for eternity—the language of prayer.

> Is it because doctors were mean and brutal that they used to spank babies upon birth? No. Babies come out of a closed environment into a whole new world in which they must breathe immediately. Time is limited. So doctors used to spank them—causing them to cry out and breathe in. Mission accomplished.

So, too, our Father must get us breathing and communicating. So He spanks us. "Why are You doing this, God?" we sob. Then we inhale. And the process begins in which we are being prepared for the environment of eternity in which prayer is the language spoken. Because our ability to serve in the next billion years depends upon how we communicate with the Father now, He says, "I'm going to have to send you through some difficulty from time to time in order that you will cry out to Me and learn about prayer—for that is the only way you will be prepared for the ages to come."

Participation

And he did not many mighty works there because of their unbelief.

Matthew 13:58

The Lord not only prepares us for eternity through prayer, but He partners with us in prayer. This means that the relationships we're developing, the kids we're parenting, the places where we work will not be blessed without our partnering with the Lord. He has chosen to use you as a partner in what He desires to do.

I once read an article about a couple in South Africa who saved a seven-day-old puppy from the belly of a python after they heard the puppy yelping inside of the snake. The wife held the snake by the tail while the husband shook the snake's head and rubbed its bulging stomach until the snake's jaws opened and the puppy was forced out. After massaging the puppy's chest, the puppy started to breathe again.

I don't mean to be cute, but in this, I see a real parallel with what we're called to do. I hear the faint yelp of people in our communities, people who are trapped by the devourer, the serpent, the devil. They're caught up in all kinds of stuff, deceived by what the world has to offer. And here's our Hero, Jesus Christ, who will take the head of that serpent and begin to shake it even as Genesis foretold He would (Genesis 3:15). Our job, then, as His bride, is to join hand in hand with Him, binding the work of the Enemy, allowing our families and our communities to be free.

Do you hear the faint cry of people caught in the grasp of the Enemy? Will you say, "Yes, Lord, I will partner with You through prayer, through intercession, with a focus in my life and a determination in my heart to obey You."? If that be our heart, if that be our prayer, our lives will begin to take on the peace and purpose, the stability and tranquility, the flavor and focus of Jesus.

2 After seeing Jesus' work begun in chapter 1, here in chapter 2, we will see it belittled by the religious establishment that was jealous of the attention given to the radical Rabbi from Galilee.

Mark 2:1

And again he entered into Capernaum, after some days; and it was noised that he was in the house.

". . . And it was noised that he was in the house." I love this phrase. If people were to summarize the sounds they hear coming from your home, would they say, "Oh yes, Jesus is there. No doubt about it"?

The only thing that will alter the family is a return to the family altar—when fathers and mothers take the time to gather their families around the Word to worship the Lord. I know it's not always easy to find the time, but regardless of how young or old our kids might be, such a time is essential if our homes are to be known as those in which it is "noised" that Jesus is inside.

Mark 2:2

And straightway many were gathered together, insomuch that there was no room to receive them, no, not so much as about the door: and he preached the word unto them.

Hearing that Jesus did miracles—the sick were healed, the demonized liberated, blind eyes opened, lepers cleansed—no doubt people came to be touched by Him. Therefore, I suspect some were initially disappointed when He began preaching. Yet the ministry of Jesus Christ centered around the teaching and preaching of the Word because faith comes by hearing and hearing by the Word of God (Romans 10:17).

Mark 2:3–5 (a)

And they come unto him, bringing one sick of the palsy, which was borne of four. And when they could not come nigh unto him for the press, they uncovered the roof where he was: and when they had broken it up, they let down the bed wherein the sick of the palsy lay. When Jesus saw their faith . . .

In this story, we first see Jesus looking up. As He's preaching the Word, He hears commotion overhead and sees the faith of four men finding a way to bring their friend to Him.

Mark 2:5 (b)

. . . he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven thee.

After looking up, Jesus looked down at the man before him and said, "Son, your sins are forgiven."

I wonder if the four friends were initially disappointed. He's not here for forgiveness, they could have thought. He's here for healing. But Jesus was dealing with the root problem, the most important issue. Church historians suggest this man was paralyzed as a result of an immoral lifestyle. If this be so, forgiveness would be the gnawing need of his heart. Jesus always deals with the root. And the root issue is always sin. So although they might have frustrated the four friends on the roof, I believe Jesus' words were what the paralyzed man longed to hear more than anything else.

Mark 2:6, 7

But there were certain of the scribes sitting there, and reasoning in their hearts, Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive sins but God only?

Next we see Jesus looking around at the scribes, who judged Him with envy (Mark 15:10).

Mark 2:8–12

And immediately when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things in your hearts? Whether is it easier to say to the sick of the palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk? But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on earth to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house. And immediately he arose, took up the bed, and went forth before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

Finally, we see Jesus looking within, at the hearts of the scribes who were so eager to ensnare Him. "You will see that I have power to meet this man's greatest need now and eternally—the forgiveness of His sins—by My healing of His paralysis," Jesus declared.

Mark 2:13, 14

And he went forth again by the sea side; and all the multitude resorted unto him, and he taught them. And as he passed by, he saw Levi the son of Alphaeus sitting at the receipt of custom, and said unto him, Follow me. And he arose and followed him.

Levi, also known as Matthew, was a tax collector—despised by his countrymen due to the fact that he collected money for their dreaded oppressors, the Romans. But Matthew's occupation didn't prevent Jesus from calling him, because Jesus specializes in using the despised and rejected—people just like us!

Mark 2:15–17

And it came to pass, that, as Jesus sat at meat in his house, many publicans and sinners sat also together with Jesus and his disciples: for there were many, and they followed him. And when the scribes and Pharisees saw him eat with publicans and sinners, they said unto his disciples, How is it that he eateth and drinketh with publicans and sinners? When Jesus heard it, he saith unto them, They that are whole have no need of the physician, but they that are sick: I came not to call the righteous, but sinners to repentance.

The Good News for any of us who feel off the wall, out to lunch, or incapacitated is that Jesus, the Great Physician, came especially to help people like us.

Mark 2:18, 19

And the disciples of John and of the Pharisees used to fast: and they come and say unto him, Why do the disciples of John and of the Pharisees fast, but thy disciples fast not? And Jesus said unto them, Can the children of the bridechamber fast, while the bridegroom is with them? as long as they have the bridegroom with them, they cannot fast.

According to the Talmud, there is one time a man is absolved of duty, even prayer: at a wedding ceremony. The only duty a man had at a wedding ceremony was to rejoice. Thus, Jesus is saying, "This is not the time to be fasting." And He says the same thing today. I don't know when Christianity began being associated with grumpiness, for ours is not a call to religion, but to relationship, not to sadness, but to gladness, not to a funeral, but to a wedding.

Mark 2:20

But the days will come, when the bridegroom shall be taken away from them, and then shall they fast in those days.

If a church does not have the presence of Jesus, if the joy of the Lord is not there, services will be like funerals. But if the Lord is there, it's time to rejoice and celebrate the gospel and our great salvation. We're forgiven. We're on our way to heaven. The Lord is risen. Happy is the people whose God is the Lord! (Psalm 144:15).

Mark 2:21, 22

No man also seweth a piece of new cloth on an old garment: else the new piece that filled it up taketh away from the old, and the rent is made worse. And no man putteth new wine into old bottles: else the new wine doth burst the bottles, and the wine is spilled, and the bottles will be marred: but new wine must be put into new bottles.

There are those who suggest that Jesus came to reform Judaism. Jesus, however, says "I'm not talking about patching up the old system or refilling old wineskins. Something new is happening." The question then arises: What did He mean when He declared in Matthew 5 that He came not to destroy the old, but to fulfill it? Perhaps the answer is best illustrated with an acorn. If I set an acorn on the ground and hit it repeatedly with a hammer, it would soon be destroyed. If, on the other hand, I bury it in the ground, it would likewise be destroyed. But in the second case, its destruction would bring about fulfillment, for it would bring forth a whole new tree.

When Jesus said, "I have come to fulfill the Law," it was in the sense of the buried acorn. That is, once the law shows us we're sinners in need of a Savior, its work is complete—fulfilled in the Person of our Savior, Jesus Christ.

Mark 2:23, 24

And it came to pass, that he went through the corn fields on the sabbath day; and his disciples began, as they went, to pluck the ears of corn. And the Pharisees said unto him, Behold, why do they on the sabbath day that which is not lawful?

Although it was against Pharisaical tradition to pick grain, it was not against Old Testament Law, for Deuteronomy 23:25 allowed those who were hungry to pick grain no matter the day.

Mark 2:25, 26

And he said unto them, Have ye never read what David did, when he had need, and was an hungred, he, and they that were with him? How he went into the house of God in the days of Abiathar the high priest, and did eat the shewbread, which is not lawful to eat but for the priests, and gave also to them which were with him?

In appealing to the fact that, while fleeing from Saul, David ate the showbread from the tabernacle, Jesus is declaring that human need always has priority over religious ritual, that the law is fulfilled in love (Matthew 22:37–40).

Mark 2:27, 28

And he said unto them, The sabbath was made for man, and not man for the sabbath: Therefore the Son of man is Lord also of the sabbath.

The Old Testament regulations were not meant to be burdens, but to be blessings—given not for punishment, but for protection. When reading Old Testament Scriptures in this light, the law provides beautiful principles to free us to live life the way it was meant to be, the Sabbath—a day when man stops his work in order to reflect and relax—being a perfect example.

3 Before we will see Jesus' work blessed in verses 4–7, as chapter 3 opens, we see a continuation of His work belittled.

Mark 3:1, 2

And he entered again into the synagogue; and there was a man there which had a withered hand. And they watched him, whether he would heal him on the sabbath day; that they might accuse him.

Knowing it was Jesus' manner to seek out those in need, the Pharisees kept a close eye on the man with the paralyzed hand for the sole purpose of seeing if Jesus would break their law by healing him on the Sabbath.

Mark 3:3, 4 (a)

And he saith unto the man which had the withered hand, Stand forth. And he saith unto them, Is it lawful to do good on the sabbath days, or to do evil? to save life, or to kill?

"People die every day. Therefore, if evil and death don't take a rest, why should goodness and life cease on the Sabbath day? Your rules and regulations don't make sense," Jesus said to the Pharisees.

Mark 3:4 (b)

But they held their peace.

The Pharisees were learning not to argue with Jesus.

Mark 3:5

And when he had looked round about on them with anger, being grieved for the hardness of their hearts, he saith unto the man, Stretch forth thine hand. And he stretched it out: and his hand was restored whole as the other.

As the man with the paralyzed hand stretched it forth, he was able to do what the Lord had commanded him to do because God's commandments are always God's enablements.

Mark 3:6

And the Pharisees went forth, and straightway took counsel with the Herodians against him, how they might destroy him.

The Pharisees and Herodians had been enemies for years. But now the Pharisees, a religious group, and the Herodians, a political party, found themselves united in their opposition to Jesus. This was as unlikely as seeing the Pro-Choice and Pro-Life movements saying, "Let's join forces."

Yet even though Jesus' work was being belittled by the Pharisees, the Herodians, the scribes, and others, His work is about to be blessed by the Father . . .

Mark 3:7–12

But Jesus withdrew himself with his disciples to the sea: and a great multitude from Galilee followed him, and from Judaea, and from Jerusalem, and from Idumaea, and from beyond Jordan; and they about Tyre and Sidon, a great multitude, when they had heard what great things he did, came unto him. And he spake to his disciples, that a small ship should wait on him because of the multitude, lest they should throng him. For he had healed many; insomuch that they pressed upon him for to touch him, as many as had plagues. And unclean spirits, when they saw him, fell down before him, and cried, saying, Thou art the Son of God. And he straitly charged them that they should not make him known.

Why would Jesus forbid the "free advertising" of the unclean spirits? I believe part of the answer lies in the fact that demonic spirits are not only called unclean spirits, but lying spirits (1 Kings 22:22; 2 Chronicles 18:21). And of what use is the word of a liar?

Mark 3:13

And he goeth up into a mountain, and calleth unto him whom he would: and they came unto him.

The crowd was surrounding Him. Healing was flowing from Him. People were being touched and blessed by Him. And yet Jesus withdrew, no doubt following the directive of His Father.

Mark 3:14, 15

And he ordained twelve, that they should be with him, and that he might send them forth to preach, and to have power to heal sicknesses, and to cast out devils.

Matthew tells us Jesus spent the night in prayer before choosing His disciples. I used to think He did this to receive direction and confirmation from His Father in order that He might choose twelve men who would impact and influence the world most radically. But now I suspect He was praying, "Father, keep Me from choosing those who seem successful outwardly" because look who He chose:

Mark 3:16

And Simon he surnamed Peter.

Simon, whose name means "Shifting Sand," was given a new name, which means "Rock." If you could choose anyone in all of humanity to be your disciples, would you have chosen Peter—a man who would deny he even knew you?

Mark 3:17
And James the son of Zebedee, and John the brother of James; and he surnamed them Boanerges, which is, The sons of thunder.

Jesus called James and John sons of thunder no doubt because of their violent tempers. "Let's call down fire and destroy this city," they said (see Luke 9:54). "Those guys aren't part of our group, Lord, but they're preaching in Your name. Let's forbid them" (see Mark 9:38). Would you have chosen a couple of guys who wanted to blow people away and burn people up if your message was peace, grace, and love?

Mark 3:18 (a)
And Andrew, and Philip, and Bartholomew, and Matthew . . .

How about Matthew? Would you have wanted to spend three years with an IRS agent?

Mark 3:18 (b)
. . . and Thomas . . .

Would you have included a man who would doubt you were even alive?

Mark 3:18 (c)
. . . and James the son of Alphaeus . . .

James the son of Alphaeus is also called James the Less—not a very impressive description.

Mark 3:18 (d)

. . . and Thaddaeus, and Simon the Canaanite.

Simon is also called the Zealot (Acts 1:13). The zealots were those who wanted to violently overthrow the Roman government. If your message was that your kingdom was not of this world, would you choose a political radical like Simon?

Mark 3:19

And Judas Iscariot, which also betrayed him: and they went into an house.

Would you have chosen Judas? More importantly, would you have called him "Friend" even as he betrayed you? (see Matthew 26:50).

Yet with the exception of Judas, Jesus' disciples became men who did indeed turn the world upside down because of His Spirit within them. This means that when Jesus chose you and me, He knew we would also be changed and eventually would be those who impact the world now and eternally. He chose us not because of who we are, but because of who He sees we can be.

When I make choices, sometimes they're good; sometimes they're bad. Why? Because my knowledge is limited. God, however, has no limitations on what He knows. If my knowledge was limitless like God's, I would buy a lottery ticket. Because I would know exactly which numbers to choose, it wouldn't be gambling, but a wise investment. So, too, God picks winners.

You might feel like a loser. Those around you might even call you a loser. But the fact that you were chosen by God, who sees the big picture, means you are a winner. We need to realize that everyone who names the Name of Jesus—regardless of her personality, or of the doctrines he may embrace—is a winner because they have been chosen by Him. And we need to treat each other accordingly.

Mark 3:20, 21

And the multitude cometh together again, so that they could not so much as eat bread. And when his friends heard of it, they went out to lay hold on him: for they said, He is beside himself.

After seeing Jesus' work blessed, now we see it blasphemed. "He's out of His mind," said His friends. "He's so busy preaching and teaching and healing that He's not even eating."

But Jesus would say, "Doing My Father's will is that which sustains and refreshes Me" (see John 4:32–34). So, too, haven't you found that praying for someone, sharing with someone, doing something practical for the kingdom is that which energizes you?

Mark 3:22–26

And the scribes which came down from Jerusalem said, He hath Beelzebub, and by the prince of the devils casteth he out devils. And he called them unto him, and said unto them in parables, How can Satan cast out Satan? And if a kingdom be divided against itself, that kingdom cannot stand. And if a house be divided against itself, that house cannot stand. And if Satan rise up against himself, and be divided, he cannot stand, but hath an end.

"To say I'm casting out demons by the power of demons is illogical," said Jesus. "Why would Satan want to defeat himself?"

Mark 3:27

No man can enter into a strong man's house, and spoil his goods, except he will first bind the strong man; and then he will spoil his house.

In this one-verse parable, Jesus likens Satan to a strong man who, if allowed, seeks to control our families, friends, neighbors, joy, health, and blessings. What must we do? Before we can wrest goods from Satan's control, free people from his grasp, release resources from his restriction, we must first bind the strong man.

The binding of the strong man is done in prayer. Too often we rush in to rescue or reclaim without first binding Satan through prayer. We can do more than pray, but we can't do anything until we pray. To think you don't have time to pray is as foolish as thinking that, because you have places to go, things to do, people to see, you don't have time to stop for gas for your car—even though the needle on the gauge is to the left of "Empty." If you're witnessing or serving without praying, you're fighting a battle you're sure to lose. The strong man must be bound. Prayer must be given priority.

Mark 3:28–30

Verily I say unto you, All sins shall be forgiven unto the sons of men, and blasphemies wherewith soever they shall blaspheme: But he that shall blaspheme against the Holy Ghost hath never forgiveness, but is in danger of eternal damnation: Because they said, He hath an unclean spirit.

According to 1 John 2:2, Jesus died not only for our sins, but for the sins of the whole world. "All manner of sin shall be forgiven all men," He said (see Matthew 12:31). Every sin committed by any man or woman has already been paid for and forgiven because of Calvary. When Jesus said, "It is finished," the price was paid for all humanity.

But there is one sin that will lead to eternal damnation: failure to believe in Jesus Christ, the Provision for sin. The blasphemy of the Spirit is saying, "I don't need Jesus." That's the one and only sin that will damn a person. You'll never be held accountable for the candy bar you pocketed twenty years ago. You'll never be held accountable for the lustful thought you had five weeks ago. You'll never be held accountable for the lie you told ten minutes ago. But you will be held accountable if you blaspheme the Spirit.

I find it interesting that Jesus addresses the subject of the blasphemy of the Spirit in conjunction with the accusations that He had an unclean spirit. Like the scribes in Jesus' day, unable to deny the things he sees the Lord doing in the lives of others, he who refuses to receive Christ will eventually have no other choice but to attribute them to insanity or fanaticism. And it is then that he moves perilously close to eternal damnation.

Mark 3:31–35

There came then his brethren and his mother, and, standing without, sent unto him, calling him. And the multitude sat about him, and they said unto him, Behold, thy mother and thy brethren without seek for thee. And he answered them, saying, Who is my mother, or my brethren? And he looked round about on them which sat about him, and said, Behold my mother and my brethren! For whosoever shall do the will of God, the same is my brother, and my sister, and mother.

Chapter 3 has presented a new nation, no longer based upon the twelve tribes of Israel, but upon the twelve apostles; a new family; no longer comprised of Jesus' biological mother and brothers, but of anyone who does the will of God. And in establishing a new nation, and a new family, Jesus opens the door to a whole new understanding of true religion.

THE WITHERED HAND

A Topical Study of
MARK 3:5

Focus with me on four elements of this timeless account . . .

The Withered Hand

The historian Jerome tells us there is strong traditional evidence that the man with the paralyzed hand was a stonemason. If so, his paralysis would have very definitely affected his income, and, consequently, the well-being of his entire family. In addition, medicine being in the state that it was, there would have been no painkillers to help alleviate the pain he undoubtedly felt in his arm and through his chest.

Although our medicine and workmen's compensation are more sophisticated than in Jesus' day, our society is filled with people who feel as though they're paralyzed relationally, wounded financially, or withered emotionally. Thus, this account is as impacting today as it was then.

The Wicked Plan

Hearing stories about the Man from Galilee who worked wonders and miracles, the Sanhedrin in Jerusalem grew concerned, for it seemed as though He was getting far too much attention. So they sent a delegation composed of scribes and Pharisees—those devoted to interpreting the law and to keeping its most minute detail—to Capernaum in order to check out the situation. How did they know where to find Jesus? Could it be that, knowing this man with the paralyzed arm would be in that particular synagogue on the Sabbath, they figured Jesus would be there as well? The scribes and Pharisees did not come to worship. They came to watch. They did not come to commune with the Lord, but to confront the Lord. They did not come to find fruit, but to find fault. And they sat there waiting, knowing Jesus, moved with compassion, would surely do something that would violate their Sabbath rules.

The Wonderful Man

Jesus always shows up where people are hurting and needy. Such is the heart of our Lord. He desires to heal the hurts, to bind the wounds, to restore strength, to straighten out situations. The Lord is always present in the place of hurting, and He'll always move toward the one who is hurting the most. If you're hurting today, the Lord will find His way to where you're sitting and come alongside of you especially, singularly, particularly. Jesus likened Himself to the shepherd who leaves ninety-nine of his flock in order to find the one that's lost (Luke 15:3–7). That's our Lord.

Jesus told us that wherever two or three are gathered in His Name, He's in their midst (Matthew 18:20). And yet why is it in the Christian community that, although we believe this theoretically, we refer people away from the church consistently? If a person battles alcohol, we refer him to AA. If a marriage is in danger, we refer the couple to a seminar. If parents are having troubles with their teenagers, we refer them to counseling. I am not against AA or marriage seminars or counseling. However, I suggest that they have become substitutes because people no longer believe they can come into church with their withered hand and that Jesus will meet them there and touch them miraculously. Instead, they believe they must go through hours and hours of dialogue and deep inner searching before they can find an answer. I suggest to you that just as Jesus was in the synagogue dealing with the man with the withered hand, He is in this place, dealing with any of us who acknowledge our weakness, our paralysis.

The Powerful Command

"Stand forth," Jesus said to the man with the paralyzed hand, perhaps hoping to stir up some sense of compassion with the hard hearts of the Pharisees as they viewed a man whose right arm dangled helplessly at his side. And then He said something so essential when He said, "Stretch forth thine hand."

"Wait a minute," the man could have said. "That's easy for You to say. My hand is paralyzed. How can I stretch it forth?" The man could have argued with Jesus. After all, he didn't know who Jesus was. Instead, however, he simply obeyed. He didn't argue. He didn't debate. He simply said, "Okay," and as he stretched out his hand, the Lord met him in that place because in the Lord's declaration there is dynamic. When God speaks, power is released. In God's commandments are God's "enablements." If you can grab that simple concept, the Word will become extremely exciting to you.

To you who are saying, "I'm so depressed. I've had demons cast out. I've gone for inner healing. I've had counseling. I've read every self-help book, and followed every technique—all to no avail," this wonderful Man comes and says, "Rejoice evermore. This is the will of God" (see 1 Thessalonians 5:16–18).

You can either argue with Him, or you can say, "If the Word tells me to rejoice evermore, I will now start rejoicing." And in the very act of beginning to rejoice, you'll find reason to continue to rejoice.

The Word says, "Husbands, love your wives . . . ." (see Ephesians 5:25).

"Oh, but you don't know my wife. You don't know what we've been through," you might say. You can argue and debate and go to seminars and read books until you're blue in the face—or you can say, "The apostle Paul, inspired by the Spirit of God, simply tells me to love my wife. So I will love my wife." And because you're doing it, God will give you the power to carry it out.

"Wives, submit to your husbands . . . ." (see Ephesians 5:22).

You can argue and say why this is impossible. Or you can say, "Lord, in Your commandment is Your enablement. I will do it today." And you will receive power.

If you're struggling with drugs, alcohol, pornography, the Lord would say to you today, "Reckon yourself dead unto sin, but alive to Jesus Christ" (see Romans 6:11).

Therefore, if you go home, throw it away, and say, "I'm going to obey the command of Christ," you'll find power and victory.

Maybe you have a problem exaggerating or lying. The Word says, "Wherefore putting away lying, speak every man truth with his neighbor . . . ." (Ephesians 4:25). Simply do it today.

Dear precious people: Every one of us is withered in some area of our lives. We know that. But the solution does not lie in seminars or books. The solution is simply to obey the command of Christ. And as you do, He'll meet you at that point and give you the power to carry it out. Once I quit saying why I can't; once I quit arguing with the Word and saying, "It's not that easy"; once I quit saying, "I'm an exception to the rule," and instead say, "Lord, if You say it, I'll do it. Period,"—He meets me there and a miracle takes place.

The choice is yours. Stand forth. Stretch out your hand. And be made whole.

4 In Mark's portrayal of Jesus as Servant, in chapters 1—3, we saw the Servant's works. Here in chapters 4 and 5, we'll see the Servant's words. Although our Western belief is that "talk is cheap," Hebrew writers and thinkers viewed words as being arrows that, when shot, would carry packets of energy that would leave a lasting impression upon the hearers. This being the case, in the first part of chapter 4, we see insight from Jesus' words; and at the end of chapter 4 and into chapter 5, we see the impact of His words.

Mark 4:1

And he began again to teach by the sea side: and there was gathered unto him a great multitude, so that he entered into a ship, and sat in the sea; and the whole multitude was by the sea on the land.

Taking advantage of the natural acoustical properties of water, Jesus spoke from a boat offshore to the group of perhaps thousands who listened to Him on the beach.

Mark 4:2–11 (a)

And he taught them many things by parables, and said unto them in his doctrine, Hearken; Behold, there went out a sower to sow: And it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up. And some fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth; and immediately it sprang up, because it had no depth of earth: But when the sun was up, it was scorched; and because it had no root, it withered away. And some fell among thorns, and the thorns grew up, and choked it, and it yielded no fruit. And other fell on good ground, and did yield fruit that sprang up and increased; and brought forth, some thirty, and some sixty, and some an hundred. And he said unto them, He that hath ears to hear, let him hear. And when he was alone, they that were about him with the twelve asked of him the parable. And he said unto them, Unto you it is given to know the mystery of the kingdom of God . . .

Before explaining the meaning of the parable to His disciples, Jesus told them they were those to whom the mystery of the kingdom of God would be revealed. In the Bible, the Greek word musterion, or "mystery," refers to a truth previously hidden but now revealed. There are a number of mysteries of which the New Testament speaks, among them the mystery of iniquity, revealed through an understanding of spiritual warfare (2 Thessalonians 2:7), and the mystery of godliness, revealed in the Person of Jesus Christ (1 Timothy 3:16).

Here, Jesus is about to reveal to the disciples the mystery of the kingdom of God. . . .

Mark 4:11 (b), 12

. . . but unto them that are without, all these things are done in parables: That seeing they may see, and not perceive; and hearing they may hear, and not understand; lest at any time they should be converted, and their sins should be forgiven them.

Why would Jesus want to keep anyone from being converted? The answer lies in the fact that because He could have spoken so powerfully that people would have been forced to concede to the logic of His argument and converted against their will, Jesus chose to speak in a way that would not manipulate people or force them into a decision. Because He will not force His will upon anyone intellectually, emotionally, or spiritually, Jesus spoke in parables in order that only those who wanted to hear would hear, in order that only those who wanted to see would see.

Mark 4:13

And he said unto them, Know ye not this parable? and how then will ye know all parables?

This parable is a key to understanding them all.

Mark 4:14

The sower soweth the word.

The sower here is one who is scattering seed—which speaks of the Scriptures. "You're born again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible, that is, the Word of God," said Peter (see 1 Peter 1:23). The soil upon which the seed is sown speaks of the condition of men's hearts—not only of the hearts of four different individuals, but of the condition of our own hearts at any given time. When you read this parable, don't think you're automatically always the one who has the good soil and the abundant fruit. On any given day, in any given week, this can change. We don't remain in the same spot. This parable speaks to all of us, depending upon the current condition of our hearts.

Mark 4:15

And these are they by the way side, where the word is sown; but when they have heard, Satan cometh immediately, and taketh away the word that was sown in their hearts.

The first soil described here speaks of people who are hard-hearted. They hear the Word, and it doesn't penetrate at all. "That's for the birds," they say. And the birds come and pluck it away.

Mark 4:16, 17

And these are they likewise which are sown on stony ground; who, when they have heard the word, immediately receive it with gladness; and have no root in themselves, and so endure but for a time: afterward, when affliction or persecution ariseth for the word's sake, immediately they are offended.

This speaks not of hard hearts, but of shallow hearts. "Jesus is great!" say those with shallow commitments as they put bumper stickers on their cars. They spring up quickly—but their roots aren't very deep. And when the sun comes out, when persecution starts coming their way, when people start making fun of them, they begin to wither because their roots are shallow.

Mark 4:18, 19

And these are they which are sown among thorns; such as hear the word, and the cares of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, and the lusts of other things entering in, choke the word, and it becometh unfruitful.

This speaks not of a hard heart, nor a shallow heart, but of a crowded heart. The cares of the world speak primarily to the person who is poor financially, and thus, always worried about how he'll make ends meet. The deceitfulness of riches, on the other hand, speaks of the wealthy man who mistakenly thinks his new ski boat will make him genuinely happy.

If God blesses you financially, you have every right to freely receive and enjoy the blessings He's brought to you. But don't get caught up in thinking that if you just had one more thing, you'd really be happy. It's simply not true.

Mark 4:20

And these are they which are sown on good ground; such as hear the word, and receive it, and bring forth fruit, some thirtyfold, some sixty, and some an hundred.

Normally, a crop brings forth eight times the seed sown. So even thirty –to one is an incredible ration. Sixty –to one is astronomical. One hundred –to one is miraculous. Where are you? The fact that you have made a decision to receive the Word and allow it to penetrate the soil of your spirit even as you study right now is indicative of the potential for miraculous fruit in your life.

Mark 4:21–23

And he said unto them, Is a candle brought to be put under a bushel, or under a bed? and not to be set on a candlestick? For there is nothing hid, which shall not be manifested; neither was any thing kept secret, but that it should come abroad. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear.

People often use this verse to say everything you've done wrong, said wrong, thought wrong is going to be exposed. That's not what's being said here. Rather, the Lord is saying, "I don't want people to be in the dark concerning My ways or My heart."

Mark 4:24, 25

And he said unto them, Take heed what ye hear: with what measure ye mete, it shall be measured to you: and unto you that hear shall more be given. For he that hath, to him shall be given: and he that hath not, from him shall be taken even that which he hath.

Jesus isn't saying, "Take heed what you hear." He says, rather, "Take heed how you hear, the way you hear." In other words, when you receive truth, if you release it to others, more will be given. If, on the other hand, you simply take in truth without allowing it to flow through you to others, you'll begin to lose what was given to you previously, and find fresh revelation or insight no longer being given to you.

Mark 4:26–29

And he said, So is the kingdom of God, as if a man should cast seed into the ground; and should sleep, and rise night and day, and the seed should spring and grow up, he knoweth not how. For the earth bringeth forth fruit of herself; first the blade, then the ear, after that the full corn in the ear. But when the fruit is brought forth, immediately he putteth in the sickle, because the harvest is come.

As he sows seed, a farmer doesn't understand exactly how the seed grows. Yet one day he looks out the window and sees a crop. Keep in mind, Jesus is talking about the mystery of the effect of the Word. And, like the seed sown by the farmer, it's inexplicable how studying the Scriptures causes the kingdom to be established within us and among us. People who are not believers think we're crazy to come week by week to study a page or two from a book thousands of years old. Yet when we study the Word corporately and have devotions personally, something happens miraculously. We begin to look at life differently, and good fruit begins to grow. Oh, we're not perfect. We have a long way to go. But the process has begun.

Mark 4:30–32

And he said, Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? or with what comparison shall we compare it? It is like a grain of mustard seed, which, when it is sown in the earth, is less than all the seeds that be in the earth: But when it is sown, it groweth up, and becometh greater than all herbs, and shooteth out great branches; so that the fowls of the air may lodge under the shadow of it.

After teaching encouragingly about the kingdom, Jesus ends with a warning that the kingdom is like a mustard seed that grows to the point that birds lodge within its branches. Due to the fact that nowhere in the world now or historically has a mustard seed ever grown into a tree big enough to support birds and their nests, I believe Jesus is saying that as the kingdom grows, it will expand unnaturally in its organization and structure; that it will become bigger than it was ever intended to be, that birds—the Biblical symbol of evil—will lodge therein. We see this in so many systems throughout church history, as complexity replaced simplicity and hierarchy swallowed liberty.

Mark 4:33–35

And with many such parables spake he the word unto them, as they were able to hear it. But without a parable spake he not unto them: and when they were alone, he expounded all things to his disciples. And the same day, when the even was come, he saith unto them, Let us pass over unto the other side.

After teaching about the Word, Jesus now gives His word to the disciples that they would indeed pass over to the other side of the Sea of Galilee—a word Satan would soon test.

Mark 4:36

And when they had sent away the multitude, they took him even as he was in the ship. And there were also with him other little ships.

We have the tendency to think that no one faces the same temptations, challenges, or storms we do. Paul, however, tells us no temptation comes to us except that which is common to man (1 Corinthians 10:13). That is why there were with the disciples "other little ships" out on the Sea of Galilee.

Mark 4:37

And there arose a great storm of wind, and the waves beat into the ship, so that it was now full.

Jesus had taught about His Word, and had given His word that the disciples would make it to the other side. But whether regarding a promise Jesus gave to His disciples, or one He gives to you, after teaching comes testing. Always.

Mark 4:38

And he was in the hinder part of the ship, asleep on a pillow: and they awake him, and say unto him, Master, carest thou not that we perish?

If Jesus is in your boat, it can't sink. If He's in your life, you won't go down. He has promised to perfect that which concerns you (Psalm 138:8). And though the storm might rage, causing you to say, "Master, don't You care that I'm perishing?" He's not worried. He's sleeping—not in apathy, but with great security.

"The Lord thy God in the midst of thee is mighty . . . ." Zephaniah tells us, ". . . He will rest in His love . . ." (Zephaniah 3:17). Thus, concerning the storm you may be going through even now or perhaps will face tomorrow, the Lord is not wondering if you're going to make it. He's resting in His love. He knows He's going to see you through.

Mark 4:39 (a)

And he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, Peace, be still.

The Greek word translated "be still" literally means "be muzzled." This is the same command Jesus issued when He addressed demons, which implies that this storm was actually stirred by Satan.

Mark 4:39 (b)

And the wind ceased, and there was a great calm.

When Jesus thwarted Satan's plan and calmed the storm, not only were the disciples at peace, but all of the "other little ships" were spared as well. So, too, when Jesus makes His power known by the storms He calms for us, those around us benefit as they see His faithfulness to us.

Mark 4:40

And he said unto them, Why are ye so fearful? how is it that ye have no faith?

The One who calmed the storm was the One who had allowed the storm in order to teach the disciples to believe His Word.

Mark 4:41

And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey him?

It is not the outward circumstances we have to fear, but the inward waves of fear and faithlessness that well up within us. The Lord has given us His Word that He will never leave us or forsake us (Hebrews 13:5). Therefore, no matter how strong the storm might seem, no matter the force of the waves that beat upon our boat, if we love God and are called according to His purpose, all things will work together for good (Romans 8:28); He will complete that which He began in us (Philippians 1:6)—and we can be at peace.

Mark 5:1 (a)

And they came over unto the other side of the sea . . .

"Let us pass over unto the other side," Jesus had said in chapter 4. And here in chapter 5, we see the disciples doing just that, for His Word always comes to pass.

Mark 5:1 (b)

. . . into the country of the Gadarenes.

Leaving Capernaum on the north shore of the Sea of Galilee, it was a five-mile journey by water to Gadara, located on the eastern shore.

Mark 5:2

And when he was come out of the ship, immediately there met him out of the tombs a man with an unclean spirit.

Unlike God, Satan is not omnipresent; he can't be everywhere at once. So he carries out his work through demonic, or unclean, spirits—the angels who fell with him when he rebelled against God (2 Peter 2:4). And in this man of Gadara, we see the results of the demonization of an individual . . .

Mark 5:3 (a)
Who had his dwelling among the tombs . . .

He was robbed of his family and friends. Dwelling among the tombs, infatuated with death and darkness, he was as good as dead.

Mark 5:3 (b)
. . . and no man could bind him, no, not with chains.

Secondly, he was robbed of sanity and self-control, hell-bent on his own destruction.

Mark 5:4
Because that he had been often bound with fetters and chains, and the chains had been plucked asunder by him, and the fetters broken in pieces: neither could any man tame him.

Notice what society did with this man. First, they sought to bind him with chains. We do the same. Statistics show, however, that 72 percent of those released from prison return for similar or worse crimes.

Mark 5:5
And always, night and day, he was in the mountains, and in the tombs, crying, and cutting himself with stones.

Second, society sought to isolate him. Luke tells us a guard actually stayed with him. But even he couldn't stop the man's propensity for annihilation.

Mark 5:6

But when he saw Jesus afar off, he ran and worshipped him.

It is neither society's isolation nor its attempts at rehabilitation that will make a genuine, lasting difference in the lives of men—but only the hope of regeneration through this One who crossed through a storm to reach this man.

Mark 5:7, 8

And cried with a loud voice, and said, What have I to do with thee, Jesus, thou Son of the most high God? I adjure thee by God, that thou torment me not. For he said unto him, Come out of the man, thou unclean spirit.

James says the devils believe—and tremble (2:19). Demons know who Jesus is. And they quake in their boots when they are aware of His presence.

Mark 5:9, 10

And he asked him, What is thy name? And he answered, saying, My name is Legion: for we are many. And he besought him much that he would not send them away out of the country.

A legion is a Roman military term used to denote a unit of six thousand soldiers, so it is possible that there were thousands of demons within this man.

Mark 5:11–13 (a)

Now there was there nigh unto the mountains a great herd of swine feeding. And all the devils besought him, saying, Send us into the swine, that we may enter into them. And forthwith Jesus gave them leave.

Jesus did not command the demons to go into the pigs. Rather, the demons requested it, and Jesus simply allowed it. It makes no difference to demons whether they inhabit people or pigs because they can make people into pigs by getting them to trade their God-given natures for animal behavior.

Mark 5:13 (b)

And the unclean spirits went out, and entered into the swine: and the herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea, (they were about two thousand;) and were choked in the sea.

In light of the current epidemic of teen suicide, I find it more than coincidental that the demons caused the pigs to prefer suicide to life.

Mark 5:14, 15

And they that fed the swine fled, and told it in the city, and in the country. And they went out to see what it was that was done. And they come to Jesus, and see him that was possessed with the devil, and had the legion, sitting, and clothed, and in his right mind: and they were afraid.

Evidently, the fact that this man was torturing himself to death was less frightening to these people than the fact that he was now clothed and in his right mind.

Mark 5:16, 17

And they that saw it told them how it befell to him that was possessed with the devil, and also concerning the swine. And they began to pray him to depart out of their coasts.

Pigs were more important to these people than a man's soul. The fact that they prioritized pigs above people should not shock us, however, when we see people petition and protest today on behalf of the spotted owl or snowy plover while they allow babies to be aborted by the hundreds of thousands.

Mark 5:18

And when he was come into the ship, he that had been possessed with the devil prayed him that he might be with him.

How was this man delivered so completely that he wanted to stay with Jesus continually? By His Word. So, too, the weapons of our war are not carnal, but the Sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God (2 Corinthians 10:4; Hebrews 4:12).

Mark 5:19

Howbeit Jesus suffered him not, but saith unto him, Go home to thy friends, and tell them how great things the Lord hath done for thee, and hath had compassion on thee.

"You are the one who can witness most effectively to the people who knew you previously," Jesus said to the man delivered from demons. "I want you to go home to those who knew you before and let them see the reality of My touch upon your life."

Remember once again that we are called not to be defense lawyers, prosecuting attorneys, judges, or juries. We're called to be witnesses (Acts 1:8). What does a witness do? He doesn't argue the case. He doesn't try to persuade or judge. He simply reports what he has seen. All too often, I believe, we've been intimidated by thinking we have to defend the veracity of the Bible, prove the fallacy of evolution, or justify church history. No, we're simply called to be witnesses—to share what the Lord has done in and for us.

Mark 5:20

And he departed, and began to publish in Decapolis how great things Jesus had done for him: and all men did marvel.

There are three prayers offered in this story . . .

- "Let us go into the pigs,' the demons cried.
  And Jesus said, "Go."
- "Leave our region," said the Gadarenes.
  And Jesus left.
- "I want to follow You," said the previously demonized man.
  And Jesus said, "No."

When you and I wage war spiritually, when you and I petition and pray perhaps reverently, we must remember, even as this story illustrates so dramatically, that Jesus can say, "No," and "No" is just as much an answer as "Yes." In fact, "No" is sometimes what God reserves especially for those He loves.

Why?

In the case before us, Jesus answered the prayers of the demons and of an unbelieving, cynical, hostile society according to their request. But He answered the prayer of a believer in a way that changed his course rather than affirmed his request. No doubt, this once-demonized man was disappointed initially, but he realized he must keep the directive of his Deliverer and thus returned to speak to his community—his obedience brought to fruition in church history, which records the group of believers that began to surface in the region. The church had a powerful expression in the area—most likely birthed by the man Jesus sent home.

Take hope, dear friend. Your prayers not being answered in the way you desire are not indicative of God not hearing or not caring—for He only said, "No," to the one who loved Him.

Mark 5:21

And when Jesus was passed over again by ship unto the other side, much people gathered unto him: and he was nigh unto the sea.

One crowd sighed with relief when Jesus left. On the other side of the lake, however, another crowd was set to receive.

Mark 5:22–26

And, behold, there cometh one of the rulers of the synagogue, Jairus by name; and when he saw him, he fell at his feet, And besought him greatly, saying, My little daughter lieth at the point of death: I pray thee, come and lay thy hands on her, that she may be healed; and she shall live. And Jesus went with him; and much people followed him, and thronged him. And a certain woman, which had an issue of blood twelve years, and had suffered many things of many physicians, and had spent all that she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse.

Of the crowd set to receive Jesus, Mark draws attention to two individuals . . .

- The most visible member of the community, Jairus was famous.

  The woman was anonymous.

- Jairus was wealthy.

  The woman lived in poverty.

- Jairus was the leader of the synagogue.

  Because of her physical condition, the woman was forbidden from entering the synagogue.

- For twelve years, as his daughter grew, the house of Jairus was filled with laughter and joy.

  For twelve years, the house of the woman was filled with misery and despair.

And so these two people—at opposite ends of the spectrum—waited for Jesus.

Like Jairus, you might be riding high. Your business might be booming. Your marriage might be blessed. Your family might be growing. Your body might be healthy. But you don't know what the next moment holds. Before the clock strikes midnight tonight, you might find yourself totally, unexpectedly in the middle of a major tragedy. You and I do not know what the next moment holds. You who are Jairuses right now, realize this: Like this man, the next moment might bring tragedy into your world.

Conversely, if, like the woman, you have either been going through an endless stream of setbacks or one persistent problem, you don't know what the next hour holds. The next moment might bring you a miracle of astounding proportion. Pondering this keeps me from complacency when I feel like I'm in Jairus' sandals, and from despairing when it seems like I'm standing in the woman's shoes. Both of their stories remind me that the Lord is my Shield and my Protector. And if He allows difficulty, setback, or tragedy to come into my life, He will also be my Glory and the Lifter of my head (Psalm 3:3).

Mark 5:27–29

When she had heard of Jesus, came in the press behind, and touched his garment. For she said, If I may touch but his clothes, I shall be whole. And straightway the fountain of her blood was dried up; and she felt in her body that she was healed of that plague.

As the woman broke through the crowd of people, she didn't come to Jesus with great oration to impress Him. She simply reached out behind Him and touched the hem of His garment. But that was all it took. Why is it we think to receive from the Lord we have to impress Him with long prayers, lengthy fasts, or great discipline? If I can break through the crowd of my unbelief, apathy, and despair, and touch even the hem of His garment, I know I'll be helped in my difficulty.

Mark 5:30–33

And Jesus, immediately knowing in himself that virtue had gone out of him, turned him about in the press, and said, Who touched my clothes? And his disciples said unto him, Thou seest the multitude thronging thee, and sayest thou, Who touched me? And he looked round about to see her that had done this thing. But the woman fearing and trembling, knowing what was done in her, came and fell down before him, and told him all the truth.

Did Jesus ask who touched Him because He wanted to embarrass the woman? No. I believe it was because He wanted to encourage Jairus. . . .

Mark 5:34, 35

And he said unto her, Daughter, thy faith hath made thee whole; go in peace, and be whole of thy plague. While he yet spake, there came from the ruler of the synagogue's house certain which said, Thy daughter is dead: why troublest thou the Master any further?

Come on, Jesus. Let's get going. My daughter's dying, Jairus could have thought, not realizing that it was, in fact, the woman's testimony that would be used to buoy his own faith. You see, the fact that he had seen a miracle in her would allow him to believe Jesus could also help him, even though his situation looked hopeless. So, too, when I wonder if the Lord can help me with any given problem, when I hear what the Lord is doing in your life, my own faith begins to grow.

Mark 5:36

As soon as Jesus heard the word that was spoken, he saith unto the ruler of the synagogue, Be not afraid, only believe.

"Only believe," or, literally, "Keep on believing"—even though everything looks impossible.

Mark 5:37, 38

And he suffered no man to follow him, save Peter, and James, and John the brother of James. And he cometh to the house of the ruler of the synagogue, and seeth the tumult, and them that wept and wailed greatly.

The presence of professional mourners would indicate that Jairus was a man of means.

Mark 5:39

And when he was come in, he saith unto them, Why make ye this ado, and weep? the damsel is not dead, but sleepeth.

The word "sleep" is the exact word Paul uses in 1 Corinthians 15 referring to the death of believers. Perhaps Jesus would whisper in our hearts concerning those who have gone on to be with the Lord or concerning those who are in the process of doing so, "Why make ye this ado and weep?" It's not death the way the world thinks. "Today you shall be with Me in paradise," Jesus said to the thief on the Cross. At the moment of death for a believer, the body sleeps, but the spirit celebrates in the presence of the Lord.

Mark 5:40

And they laughed him to scorn. But when he had put them all out, he taketh the father and the mother of the damsel, and them that were with him, and entereth in where the damsel was lying.

Like Jairus, when I'm seeking the Lord for help, when I'm in need of a miracle, I come to Him. I pour out my heart before Him. My faith might falter—until I hear a testimony. Then it soars—until reports come in even more brutal than previous reports, my faith turns to fear. Then I hear Jesus saying, "Keep believing." And I do. But then in my own heart, a laughing, a scorning, a mocking begins.

Before Jesus could enter Jairus' house and do a miracle, the mockers had to be put out. Why? Not only because without faith, it is impossible to please Him (Hebrews 11:6), but because the Holy One of Israel is limited by unbelief (Psalm 78:41). Therefore, when the mockers start knocking, let faith answer the door. Don't allow them to set up shop in your heart, to chuckle knowingly, to question cynically. Instead, listen to the Lord saying, "I desire to do exceedingly abundantly above all that you can ask or think"—and put the mockers out.

Mark 5:41

And he took the damsel by the hand, and said unto her, Talitha cumi; which is, being interpreted, Damsel, I say unto thee, arise.

Although I've seen self-proclaimed faith healers use this phrase, there's nothing magical about it. It's not what was said which brought Jairus' daughter back to life. It was who said it.

Mark 5:42–43

And straightway the damsel arose, and walked; for she was of the age of twelve years. And they were astonished with a great astonishment. And he charged them straitly that no man should know it; and commanded that something should be given her to eat.

Divine miracles never replace common-sense care. A miracle was done, but then Jesus said, "Make sure she gets some chicken soup." I like that!

The Word of the Servant brought victory over danger in the storm, over demons at Gadara, over disease in a woman, and even over death in a little girl.

May we continue to believe in, embrace, speak out, and stand upon this glorious Word. For through it, like the disciples, we will indeed "pass over" no matter the storm.

6 As we come to Mark 6, we see the unfolding of unbelief: in Jesus' acquaintances (verses 1–6); in His adversaries (verses 14–28); and even in His own disciples (verses 35–37).

Mark 6:1–3 (a)

And he went out from thence, and came into his own country; and his disciples follow him. And when the sabbath day was come, he began to teach in the synagogue: and many hearing him were astonished, saying, From whence hath this man these things? and what wisdom is this which is given unto him, that even such mighty works are wrought by his hands? Is not this the carpenter, the son of Mary . . .

This is not an insight acknowledging Jesus' unique birth. Rather, it is an insult, for in that culture one was always identified as the son of his father, whether his father was living or dead. In this case, even if Joseph were indeed dead, as most Biblical scholars believe, Jesus would nonetheless be identified as being his son. But by calling Him the son of Mary, Jesus' countrymen were saying, "We do not even know who his father is," thereby accusing Him of being illegitimate.

It was imperative that Jesus be born of a virgin. At the moment of conception, although a baby draws nutrients and liquids from the mother, it draws blood from its own blood supply, which is determined by the father. Therefore, the fact that Jesus, being conceived supernaturally without a human father, and developing in the womb without drawing blood from His mother meant that His blood, unlike any other blood in human history, was free from human pollution of any kind—and was, therefore able to cleanse our sin.

Mark 6:3 (b)–4

. . . the brother of James, and Joses, and of Juda, and Simon? and are not his sisters here with us? And they were offended at him. But Jesus said unto them, A prophet is not without honour, but in his own country, and among his own kin, and in his own house.

After viewing the art in a renowned art museum, a man said to the guard, "I don't see any great value in this artwork."

"Sir," the guard answered, "the paintings are not what's on trial here. The visitors are."

That's true. If you look at a Rembrandt or a Monet, you're saying, "I don't see anything good about that," simply shows your ignorance concerning art.

So, too, these people saying, "We don't see anything so special about Jesus. He's just the carpenter, and we know his mother, brothers, and sisters," showed their ignorance concerning Him.

We are in danger of making the same mistake if we take for granted His proximity to us. Yes, He lives inside us. Yes, He will never leave nor forsake us. Yes, He is always available to us—but He is God nonetheless. And, as God, He has the right to our time, money, abilities, energy, life, and heart. As God, Jesus has the right to all we are.

When Peter at last realized that Jesus was Master of creation, he fell on his face before Him, saying, "Depart from me. I am a sinful man" (see Luke 5:8). So, too, as we cultivate a friendship with Jesus, let us never forget that because He is God, He deserves our utmost respect and devotion, submission and reverence.

Mark 6:5

And he could there do no mighty work, save that he laid his hands upon a few sick folk, and healed them.

Mark doesn't say Jesus should do no mighty work, but that He could do no mighty work because of their unbelief. Why? Because the Lord has placed Himself in a partnering position with us in order to prepare us for the next billion years when we will rule and reign with Him.

Mark 6:6

And he marvelled because of their unbelief. And he went round about the villages, teaching.

Scriptures record Jesus marveling on only two occasions. One is here—when He marveled at the unbelief of the Jews. The other is in Luke 7 and Matthew 9, when He marveled at the belief of a Gentile. I wonder what Jesus thinks about us. Does He marvel at our unbelief, saying, "Oh, there is so much more I could do if you would just believe and partner with Me in faith"?

Mark 6:7 (a)

And he called unto him the twelve, and began to send them forth by two and two . . .

Why did Jesus send His disciples out two by two? Perhaps it's because, as we've experienced, faith becomes bolder when ministering with someone else. But more likely, it's because one of the principles of the law was that in the mouth of two witnesses, every word would be established (Deuteronomy 19:15).

Mark 6:7 (b), 8 (a)

. . . and gave them power over unclean spirits; And commanded them that they should take nothing for their journey, save a staff only . . .

The connection between power and simplicity is undeniable. Jesus gave His disciples power as He sent them out in simplicity.

Mark 6:8 (b)
. . . no scrip . . .

"Scrip" refers to a beggar's bag. In other words, Jesus said, "Don't beg in ministry." This should be "scrip"-ted into all televangelism programming.

Mark 6:8 (c), 9
. . . no bread, no money in their purse: But be shod with sandals; and not put on two coats.

"Travel light," Jesus said because the urgency and nature of what His disciples were to do required that they move about freely and simply.

Mark 6:10
And he said unto them, In what place soever ye enter into an house, there abide till ye depart from that place.

In other words, "When you go into a house, stay there until you leave the town. Don't look around for better accommodations."

Mark 6:11
And whosoever shall not receive you, nor hear you, when ye depart thence, shake off the dust under your feet for a testimony against them. Verily I say unto you, It shall be more tolerable for Sodom and Gomorrha in the day of judgment, than for that city.

"Their sin shall remain upon those who don't receive you," Jesus said, "upon those who fail to respond to your message of repentance."

Mark 6:12, 13
And they went out, and preached that men should repent. And they cast out many devils, and anointed with oil many that were sick, and healed them.

This is the only reference in the Gospels to the practice of anointing with oil, which James will later talk about in his epistle. Throughout the Bible, oil is an emblem of the Holy Spirit, so when one is anointed with oil, it symbolizes his placing himself in submission to the work of the Spirit in his life.

Mark 6:14 (a)
And king Herod heard of him; (for his name was spread abroad:) . . .

Notice it was Jesus' name that was spread abroad—not the names of the disciples. This means that just as when Jesus ministered, all glory went to the Father, when the disciples ministered all of the attention went to Jesus.

Mark 6:14 (b), 15
. . . and he said, That John the Baptist was risen from the dead, and therefore mighty works do shew forth themselves in him. Others said, That it is Elias. And others said, That it is a prophet, or as one of the prophets.

Why would Herod think that Jesus was John the Baptist? Josephus tells us that, being second cousins, Jesus and John the Baptist had a remarkable physical resemblance. But more likely, it was because Herod's conscience was haunting him.

Mark 6:16, 17
But when Herod heard thereof, he said, It is John, whom I beheaded: he is risen from the dead. For Herod himself had sent forth and laid hold upon John, and bound him in prison for Herodias' sake, his brother Philip's wife: for he had married her.

Herod Antipas was one of the three sons of Herod the Great—the Herod who, following Jesus' birth, had ordered the deaths of all males less than two years of age. Herod Antipas took his brother Philip's wife—a union that John the Baptist had denounced as immoral.

Why didn't Herod call for this One he thought was John in order the he could investigate for himself? Perhaps it was because he thought John, Jesus, or whoever this was would be out to get him. People make this same mistake today. They look at Jesus as One who is sure to point His finger at them. But such is not the case, for Jesus is the One who dialogued freely with sinners (Matthew 11:19), who ate alongside sinners (Matthew 9:10), who stood up for sinners (John 8:7), who gave great hope to sinners. Jesus' rebukes, in fact, were reserved for the religious people—those who were pious and proud that they "weren't like other men" (see Luke 18:11). I believe had Herod called for Jesus at this time, he would have found Jesus to be exactly who He is to this day: meek and lowly in heart (Matthew 11:29), the Friend of Sinners.

Mark 6:18–20

For John had said unto Herod, It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife. Therefore Herodias had a quarrel against him, and would have killed him; but she could not: For Herod feared John, knowing that he was a just man and an holy, and observed him; and when he heard him, he did many things, and heard him gladly.

Realizing John was a man unlike himself—a man of integrity—Herod respected John the Baptist. Yet his wife, Herodias, was incensed by his insistence that Herod's marriage to her was unlawful.

Mark 6:21–29

And when a convenient day was come, that Herod on his birthday made a supper to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee; and when the daughter of the said Herodias came in, and danced, and pleased Herod and them that sat with him, the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And he sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said,

The head of John the Baptist. And she came in straightway with haste unto the king, and asked, saying, I will that thou give me by and by in a charger the head of John the Baptist. And the king was exceeding sorry; yet for his oath's sake, and for their sakes which sat with him, he would not reject her. And immediately the king sent an executioner, and commanded his head to be brought: and he went and beheaded him in the prison, and brought his head in a charger, and gave it to the damsel: and the damsel gave it to her mother. And when his disciples heard of it, they came and took up his corpse, and laid it in a tomb.

Herod was "exceeding sorry" to have to kill John the Baptist. Yet kill him he did because he was put on the spot at a party where wine and oaths flowed freely. Stay away from such places, dear people. You'll regret it if you don't because there's always a price to pay. Demands will be made. Peer pressure will mount. Things will happen you'll wish hadn't. Ask Herod. Historians tell us he was haunted all the days of his life by what he had done to John the Baptist.

Mark 6:30, 31

And the apostles gathered themselves together unto Jesus, and told him all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught. And he said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place, and rest a while: for there were many coming and going, and they had no leisure so much as to eat.

Jesus models something that a lot us are discovering. That is, if we don't come apart, we'll fall apart. There's an ebb and flow in ministry in which times of service alternate with times of quietness and solitude, prayer, and contemplation. We need to come apart daily and have a quiet, quality time with the Lord. We need to come apart weekly for a Sabbath rest in Him.

Mark 6:32–34

And they departed into a desert place by ship privately. And the people saw them departing, and many knew him, and ran afoot thither out of all cities, and outwent them, and came together unto him. And Jesus, when he came out, saw much people, and was moved with compassion toward them, because they were as sheep not having a shepherd: and he began to teach them many things.

As the true Shepherd, Jesus felt compassion for the sheep who were wandering and hurting; those in need of a Word from Him to set their lives and hearts in order.

Mark 6:35, 36 (a)

And when the day was now far spent, his disciples came unto him, and said, This is a desert place, and now the time is far passed: Send them away. . . .

• The disciples' heart was, "Send them away. We're weary."

• Jesus' heart is, "Come unto Me, all ye who are weary."

I relate to the disciples—but I long to be more like Jesus.

Mark 6:36 (b), 37 (a)

. . . that they may go into the country round about, and into the villages, and buy themselves bread: for they have nothing to eat. He answered and said unto them, Give ye them to eat.

"You saw the need. You meet the need," Jesus said, wanting to partner with them in faith.

Mark 6:37 (b), 38 (a)

And they say unto him, Shall we go and buy two hundred pennyworth of bread, and give them to eat? He saith unto them, How many loaves have ye? go and see.

"I can't do that," we say. "I don't have those kinds of gifts or money." We have all the reasons why nothing can be done. Jesus, however, takes no regard for what we lack. Rather He asks what we have.

Mark 6:38 (b)–41 (a)

And when they knew, they say, Five, and two fishes. And he commanded them to make all sit down by companies upon the green grass. And they sat down in ranks, by hundreds, and by fifties. And when he had taken the five loaves and the two fishes, he looked up to heaven, and blessed, and brake the loaves, and gave them to his disciples to set before them . . .

Blessing and breaking always precede true feeding. The Father must allow our lives to be blessed and broken, blessed and broken, blessed and broken before he can use us to nourish anyone else.

Mark 6:41 (b)–44

. . . and the two fishes divided he among them all. And they did all eat, and were filled. And they took up twelve baskets full of the fragments, and of the fishes. And they that did eat of the loaves were about five thousand men.

So much food did Jesus provide that the Greek word translated "filled" literally means "glutted." John gives us further insight when he says that, following the feeding of the five thousand, some of the men tried to take Jesus by force to make Him king (John 6:15). But their priority was wrong. They saw Jesus as being the king of the material in a physical kingdom. Jesus, however, departed from them because His kingdom is spiritual and eternal.

How easily we make this same mistake. Being so caught up in what is happening presently rather than seeing the big picture eternally, we want the Lord to comfort us now, to provide for us now, to heal us now. While the Lord is indeed a Comforter, a Provider, a Healer, those are not His highest priorities. The priority of God is not our present comfort, but our eternal state. Therefore, He will allow us to suffer presently—be it physically, emotionally, or financially—if that is what it takes to enrich us eternally.

Mark 6:45–48

And straightway he constrained his disciples to get into the ship, and to go to the other side before unto Bethsaida, while he sent away the people. And when he had sent them away, he departed into a mountain to pray. And when even was come, the ship was in the midst of the sea, and he alone on the land. And he saw them toiling in rowing; for the wind was contrary unto them: and about the fourth watch of the night he cometh unto them, walking upon the sea, and would have passed by them.

Jesus sent His disciples into the sea, where He knew a storm would be brewing. And such is the way He works with us today. He blesses us and then allows us to go into the midst of a storm. Why? Because He knows that storms will inevitably come into each of our lives without exception. And were we not seasoned veterans of the storm, we would be blown away.

Even as five thousand men were fed on the hillside of Galilee, five thousand would be saved in the city of Jerusalem (Acts 3—4). But what happened immediately after the five thousand were saved? A storm of fierce persecution arose. Knowing this, Jesus sent them into the storm in Mark 6 in order to develop the faith necessary to keep them from being blown away in Acts 5.

Mark 6:49, 50

But when they saw him walking upon the sea, they supposed it had been a spirit, and cried out: For they all saw him, and were troubled.

We know from the other Gospel accounts that Peter said, "Lord, if it's You, bid me come"—to which Jesus did indeed bid Peter to come to Him, and Peter walked on water. Why isn't that incident mentioned in this account? Because if Mark's Gospel is indeed comprised of Peter's account given to John Mark, perhaps Peter didn't want to draw unnecessary attention to himself.

Mark 6:50

And immediately he talked with them, and saith unto them, Be of good cheer: it is I; be not afraid.

Notice the order. Before Jesus identified Himself, He said, "Be of good cheer." That's always the way it is.

- We say, "Lord, if I can see You, I'll be of good cheer."
- Jesus, however, says, "In faith, be of good cheer first—and then you'll see Me."

Mark 6:51–56

And he went up unto them into the ship; and the wind ceased: and they were sore amazed in themselves beyond measure, and wondered. For they considered not the miracle of the loaves: for their heart was hardened. And when they had passed over, they came into the land of Gennesaret, and drew to the shore. And when they were come out of the ship, straightway they knew him, and ran through that whole region round about, and began to carry about in beds those that were sick, where they heard he was. And whithersoever he entered, into villages, or cities, or country, they laid the sick in the streets, and besought him that they might touch if it were but the border of his garment: and as many as touched him were made whole.

In simple faith and in need of a miracle, the needy ones simply touched Jesus. And as a result, they were made whole physically, spiritually eternally.

Mark 7:1, 2

Then came together unto him the Pharisees, and certain of the scribes, which came from Jerusalem. And when they saw some of his disciples eat bread with defiled, that is to say, with unwashen, hands, they found fault.

Although people were being healed and helped, delivered and fed, the scribes and Pharisees found fault with Jesus' disciples because they didn't wash their hands ceremonially as prescribed by sixty-five pages of the Mishnah, the written version of the traditional oral Jewish Law.

The sect of the Pharisees came into being during the period between the Old and New Testaments. Realizing there was a danger of Judaism becoming polluted and paganized, the Pharisees, whose name means "separated ones," were devoted to keeping the most minute detail of the law and the traditions of the elders. The problem is, the tradition of the elders became more important than the law itself. Ceremonial cleansing was a case in point. As seen in the Old Testament, God had given His people principles of hygiene that precluded the discovery of germs and infection. But as the years went by, a group of people called the scribes began to interpret the law and make application concerning, for example, the procedure for washing one's hands. Their findings were known as the tradition of the elders—a body of work so important to the scribes and Pharisees that one rabbi said, "He who expounds the Scripture in opposition to the tradition of the elders will have no part in the world to come."

Mark 7:3, 4

For the Pharisees, and all the Jews, except they wash their hands oft, eat not, holding the tradition of the elders. And when they come from the market, except they wash, they eat not. And many other things there be, which they have received to hold, as the washing of cups, and pots, brasen vessels, and of tables.

The scribes and Pharisees not only washed their hands ceremonially, but they also washed their cups and plates between the courses of a single meal.

Mark 7:5–8

Then the Pharisees and scribes asked him, Why walk not thy disciples according to the tradition of the elders, but eat bread with unwashen hands? He answered and said unto them, Well hath Esaias prophesied of you hypocrites, as it is written, This people honoureth me with their lips, but their heart is far from me. Howbeit in vain do they worship me, teaching for doctrines the commandments of men. For laying aside the commandment of God, ye hold the tradition of men, as the washing of pots and cups: and many other such like things ye do.

"You're involved in religious traditions that have nothing to do with what God desires," Jesus said. "With your lips you worship God, but your heart is a million miles away." And lest we be too quick to point fingers at the Pharisees, we would do well to search our own hearts during such times as we sing praise songs to the Lord with our lips while our minds are focused on the list of things we have to accomplish that day.

Mark 7:9–13

And he said unto them, Full well ye reject the commandment of God, that ye may keep your own tradition. For Moses said, Honour thy father and thy mother; and, Whoso curseth father or mother, let him die the death: But ye say, If a man shall say to his father or mother, It is Corban, that is to say, a gift, by whatsoever thou mightest be profited by me; he shall be free. And ye suffer him no more to do ought for his father or his mother; making the word of God of none effect through your tradition, which ye have delivered: and many such like things do ye.

The Pharisees had a tradition whereby whatever they declared to be "corban," or "dedicated," belonged to God. While this practice may have sounded pious, in actuality it provided a way for them to circumvent all charitable giving—even to their own parents, who they were commanded by God to honor (Exodus 20:12).

Again, while it is easy for us to point out the fallacies in the rituals of the Pharisees, I often wonder what Jesus would say concerning the traditions of our modern American Christianity. The test for any church practice—from baptism to Communion, from tithing to missions is threefold: Is it exhibited in the life of Christ? Does it extend into the Book of Acts? Is it expounded in the epistles?

I encourage you to ask yourself, "Is what I'm doing seen in Jesus' life, in Acts, in the Epistles?" If it isn't, you shouldn't be dogmatic about it or insistent that others practice it.

Mark 7:14–23

And when he had called all the people unto him, he said unto them, Hearken unto me every one of you, and understand: There is nothing from without a man, that entering into him can defile him: but the things which come out of him, those are they that defile the man. If any man have ears to hear, let him hear. And when he was entered into the house from the people, his disciples asked him concerning the parable. And he saith unto them, Are ye so without understanding also? Do ye not perceive, that whatsoever thing from without entereth into the man, it cannot defile him; because it entereth not into his heart, but into the belly, and goeth out into the draught, purging all meats? And he said, That which cometh out of the man, that defileth the man. For from within, out of the heart of men, proceed evil thoughts, adulteries, fornications, murders, thefts, covetousness, wickedness, deceit, lasciviousness, an evil eye, blasphemy, pride, foolishness: All these evil things come from within, and defile the man.

Although the scribes and Pharisees were oh-so-careful to follow all of their rituals and practices, Jesus made it clear that the real issue is not external, but internal. In other words, it's not the washing of hands, but the purity of the heart that matters.

Mark 7:24

And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of Tyre and Sidon, and entered into an house, and would have no man know it: but he could not be hid.

I like that phrase. You can't hide Jesus if He's in your house, if He's in your life.

Mark 7:25–29

For a certain woman, whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and fell at his feet: The woman was a Greek, a Syrophenician by nation; and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to cast it unto the dogs. And she an swered and said unto him, Yes, Lord: yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs. And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter.

Was Jesus being difficult with this brokenhearted mother? No. He was drawing from her an expression of faith in order that not only would her daughter be healed, but that she herself would develop a relationship with Him. So, too, you might wonder if the Lord is being difficult with you. Why isn't He answering your prayers immediately? Why isn't He helping you presently? It could be that He's doing something much deeper. It could be that He is allowing you to discover true faith, perseverance, and prevailing prayer—invaluable understandings that will help you not only in your present situation, but also in the next billion years to come.

Mark 7:30–32 (a)

And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her daughter laid upon the bed. And again, departing from the coasts of Tyre and Sidon, he came unto the sea of Galilee, through the midst of the coasts of Decapolis. And they bring unto him one that was deaf, and had an impediment in his speech. . . .

There is a linkage not only physically but spiritually between hearing and speaking. If I'm not hearing from the Lord on any given day, I'll not be able to speak clearly to the people who come my way. How can you help those who are hurting? It all begins with listening.

Mark 7:32 (b)–35

. . . and they beseech him to put his hand upon him. And he took him aside from the multitude, and put his fingers into his ears, and he spit, and touched his tongue; and looking up to heaven, he sighed, and saith unto him, Ephphatha, that is, Be opened. And straightway his ears were opened, and the string of his tongue was loosed, and he spake plain.

This seemingly small incident tells me a great deal about how I should minister to people if I want to minister the way Jesus did . . .

First, Jesus gave the deaf man individual attention as He took him aside from the multitude. Second, there was close association as Jesus put His fingers into the deaf man's ears.

Third, there was open utilization as Jesus used spit, which, in that day, was thought to contain medicinal value. In so doing, Jesus gave us justification to use the scientific knowledge He so graciously gave mankind to develop medicines and procedures. Fourth, we see heavenly glorification as Jesus looked up to heaven—thereby indicating to whom all glory is to go.

Fifth, Jesus demonstrated heartfelt compassion in His sigh. How will we feel this kind of compassion? I know of only one way: by going through difficulties ourselves. "Blessed be God who comforts us in our troubles that we may be able to comfort others with the comfort we ourselves have received," Paul would declare (see 2 Corinthians 1:3–4). Why does the Lord allow us to have migraine headaches or to be smitten with cancer, to lose a loved one or see a business fail? Did you ever pray, "Lord, use me"? Did you ever ask the Lord to make your life count, to keep it from becoming mundane and irrelevant? If so, part of His answer means having to go through difficulties in order that you might sigh for people, hurt with them, feel your heart go out to them. There's just no other way.

Finally, there was articulated expectation as Jesus said, "Be opened." I might feel for people, desire to minister to them, relate with them—but am I willing to go on record and speak the word of faith on behalf of them, to say,

"In Jesus' Name, may the depression flee, may He be your health, may He see you through"?

If you follow this pattern when you pray for people—even if circumstances don't unfold the way they wished it would or you thought they should—a person will never resent the fact that you expended the energy in prayer to push through spiritual barricades, to ignore the lies of the Enemy, saying that prayer accomplishes nothing, to speak out a word of faith and expectancy, to wage a spiritual battle on their behalf.

Mark 7:36

And he charged them that they should tell no man: but the more he charged them, so much the more a great deal they published it.

Not only did Jesus most likely want to avoid the circus atmosphere that can so easily accompany miracles of healing, but knowing it wouldn't be long before He would be on a Cross and that those who spread the word about Him would be candidates for the persecution to follow, perhaps Jesus was sparing them from coming oppression.

Mark 7:37

And were beyond measure astonished, saying, He hath done all things well: he maketh both the deaf to hear, and the dumb to speak.

He does all things well indeed—and because He does, whatever we do should be done to the best of the ability He gives us if we are to reflect Him (1 Corinthians 10:31).

Mark 8:1–3

In those days the multitude being very great, and having nothing to eat, Jesus called his disciples unto him, and saith unto them, I have compassion on the multitude, because they have now been with me three days, and have nothing to eat: And if I send them away fasting to their own houses, they will faint by the way: for divers of them came from far.

For three days, the multitude had hung on His every word. They had stayed at His side, taking in His teaching, receiving His ministry. And because they had done so, Jesus wanted to feed them lest, without nourishment, they be unable to return to their homes.

It is my opinion that this understanding has been somewhat lost. All too often, it seems, the church feels a responsibility to feed people physically before she can impact them spiritually. Scripture, however, gives us no such precedent. Jesus always fed those who were already being taught and instructed. And Paul says, "Do good to all men—but especially, particularly to those of the household of faith" (see Galatians 6:10).

"Silver and gold have I none," said Peter to the beggar asking for alms (see Acts 3:6). Yet because just a few verses earlier, we read that everyone in the early church sold all of their goods and laid the money at the apostles' feet, it is highly likely that Peter and John had access to a great deal of money. Why, then, would Peter say, "Silver and gold have I none"? It is my belief that he was saying to the beggar, "For you, we have neither silver nor gold. Your need is not silver and gold. Your need is to stand up and walk." And a great miracle followed.

So, too, sometimes we feel the need, or others ask us to pray on their behalf for a physical solution to a physical need. But what will it profit us if we gain the whole world but lose our soul (Matthew 16:26)? Because the fundamental issue is to be able to stand strong in the Lord and walk with Him, any other answer to prayer pales in comparison.

Mark 8:4–8

And his disciples answered him, From whence can a man satisfy these men with bread here in the wilderness? And he asked them, How many loaves have ye? And they said, Seven. And he commanded the people to sit down on the ground: and he took the seven loaves, and gave thanks, and brake, and gave to his disciples to set before them; and they did set them before the people. And they had a few small fishes: and he blessed, and commanded to set them also before them. So they did eat, and were filled: and they took up of the broken meat that was left seven baskets.

There's a remarkable similarity between this story and the one that took place in chapter 6, where we read that Jesus had miraculously fed five thousand people with five loaves and two fish. Yet here we see the disciples say to Jesus, "How are You going to satisfy these men?" Were the disciples that forgetful? I believe the answer lies in the term "these men"—the men of Decapolis. Decapolis was comprised of ten cities on the east side of the Sea of Galilee. The people of Decapolis had their own government, had adopted Greek culture, and willingly lived under Roman authority. This would mean that this crowd of four thousand—unlike the previous crowd of five thousand—was primarily Gentiles. And perhaps this explains the disciples' question when they said to Jesus, "How will You feed these men? We can see You doing a miracle for our people, the Jews, but not these guys!"

The Lord has a wonderful way of working through, working with, working on all kinds of people. Jesus, the Bread of Life, was given to the five thousand, to the Jews first, just as the promises were given to them when the covenant was established in the days of Abraham. But then, beginning with the Incarnation and into the birth of the church, the Bread of Life was made available to the four thousand, to the Gentiles, to us.

Mark 8:9

And they that had eaten were about four thousand: and he sent them away.

Four being the number of the earth, this speaks further of the Gentiles.

Mark 8:10–12 (a)

And straightway he entered into a ship with his disciples, and came into the parts of Dalmanutha. And the Pharisees came forth, and began to question with him, seeking of him a sign from heaven, tempting him. And he sighed deeply in his spirit . . .

Jesus had just fed four thousand men. Before that, he had opened blind eyes, healed lepers, worked powerfully. Yet the Pharisees had the audacity to say, "Show us a sign to establish Your validity." No wonder He sighed deeply.

Mark 8:12 (b)

. . . and saith, Why doth this generation seek after a sign? verily I say unto you, There shall no sign be given unto this generation.

Signs do not produce faith. They only produce a craving for more signs. Faith comes by hearing, and hearing by the Word of God (Romans 10:17). How does your faith grow? Not by seeing miracles, but by studying the Word.

Mark 8:13–15

And he left them, and entering into the ship again departed to the other side. Now the disciples had forgotten to take bread, neither had they in the ship with them more than one loaf. And he charged them, saying, Take heed, beware of the leaven of the Pharisees, and of the leaven of Herod.

The leaven of the Pharisees speaks of legalism. The leaven of Herod refers to the Herodians who were trying to bring about righteousness through political rule. Jesus would also speak of the leaven of the Sadducees, which is liberal theology. Legalism, politics, liberal theology—like leaven, each of these tendencies can start small and innocently, but grow to impact the entire Body.

Mark 8:16

And they reasoned among themselves, saying, It is because we have no bread.

"If any of you lack wisdom, let him ask of God," James tells us (see 1:5). Instead, these disciples reasoned among themselves, and came up with the wrong answer.

Mark 8:17–21

And when Jesus knew it, he saith unto them, Why reason ye, because ye have no bread? perceive ye not yet, neither understand? have ye your heart yet hardened? Having eyes, see ye not? and having ears, hear ye not? and do ye not remember? When I brake the five loaves among five thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? They say unto him, Twelve. And when the seven among four thousand, how many baskets full of fragments took ye up? And they said, Seven. And he said unto them, How is it that ye do not understand?

Jesus makes it clear that there is a direct correlation between a hardening of heart and a failing of memory. When does my heart become hardened toward the Lord? When does my heart begin to lack the fire of faith? When I forget the bread the Lord provides for me every day.

My faith is strengthened and my heart softened not only through an awareness of the daily bread He provides for me but also through the broken bread of His Body. "Do this in remembrance of Me," Jesus said (see Luke 22:19). Consequently, whenever I partake of the broken body, the bread of the Eucharist, the table of Communion, I am reminded once again of the Lord's provision for the greatest need I will ever have—the need of salvation.

Mark 8:22

And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they bring a blind man unto him, and besought him to touch him.

Like this man, we were once blind spiritually. Blinded by Satan, the god of this age, we could not see. Church seemed weird to us, the Bible incomprehensible, Christians bizarre. But then someone extended an invitation to us to come to Jesus—and a miracle was set in motion.

Mark 8:23 (a)

And he took the blind man by the hand, and led him out of the town . . .

As noted previously, I believe one of the main reasons Jesus led the man out of town was to avoid the frenzied atmosphere often associated with healing ministries.

Mark 8:23 (b)

. . . and when he had spit on his eyes, and put his hands upon him, he asked him if he saw ought.

In the Hebrew culture and much of the ancient world at this time, spit was thought to contain medicinal value. Therefore, in applying spit to this man's eyes, Jesus seems to be putting His seal of approval on the use of the medical technology of any given day.

Sometimes when I cut my finger and watch the blood coagulate, I marvel at the ability of my body to seemingly heal itself. Other times, when I have a pounding headache and down a couple of aspirin, I marvel at modern medicine. Still other times, when I'm hurting physically, a couple of brothers will lay hands on me and pray—and I marvel at the power of prayer. But it is not prayer that heals. It is not medicine that heals. It is not our own body processes that heal. It is God who heals. And as God, He can utilize prayer, medicine, and our natural body processes—or any combination of the three.

Mark 8:24

And he looked up, and said, I see men as trees, walking.

I love this man's honesty with Jesus. He saw the Lord, but he didn't yet have an ability to see people properly. And therein is a lesson. When you and I were touched by the Lord and saved, our eyes were opened. And yet even though we were now able to see Him, our healing was not complete until we could also see people clearly, for if we love God but hate our brother, we miss the mark entirely (1 John 4:20).

Many of us have no problem loving God. But there are some people who seem like trees to us. They "stump" us. We wish they would "leave." We try to cut them down. It might be a father who ignored you. It might be a husband who divorced you. It might be a boss who fired you. It might be a friend who deserted you.

"What is the greatest commandment?" they asked Jesus.

"Thou shalt love the Lord thy God with all your heart, mind, soul, and strength," He answered. "And the second is like unto it," or literally, "There's a second part to it: Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself" (see Matthew 22:35–40). Loving God and loving our neighbor are inextricably linked. But how are we to love those we see only as trees? Read on.

Mark 8:25 (a)

After that he put his hands again upon his eyes . . .

The fact that this man needed to be touched twice encourages me in my own areas of need. Be it with regard to physical healing, spiritual help, material provision—sometimes we need to pray for a second touch, a third touch, a tenth touch. Sometimes we must keep coming back to the Lord over and over and over again. You might have been doing well physically as a result of the Lord's help and healing touch. But then the difficulty returned. Seek Him again and continue on until you're totally healed—even if that total healing won't take place until you get to heaven.

Mark 8:25 (b)

. . . and made him look up . . .

When did the man see not only Jesus but also every man clearly? When Jesus lifted his head toward heaven in the posture of prayer. That's the key. Jesus told us to pray for our enemies—the people who bug us, bother us, or hurt us—to pray for those who despitefully use us (Matthew 5:44). I have found that when I pray for people, something begins to happen miraculously. My feelings towards them change. No longer can I hold a grudge against them. No longer can I get upset with them. When I'm lifting my head toward the heavens and communing with the Father, it's impossible for me to be bitter. Pray for the people who bug you. While they might not change, you definitely will!

Mark 8:25 (c), 26

. . . and he was restored, and saw every man clearly. And he sent him away to his house, saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

Will we be able to love people perfectly? No, for although we are to look up in prayer, it is not until we are called up to heaven at the moment of the Rapture that we will see perfectly the things that presently confuse and perplex us (1 Corinthians 13:12). What a day that will be!

Mark 8:27–29

And Jesus went out, and his disciples, into the towns of Caesarea Philippi: and by the way he asked his disciples, saying unto them, Whom do men say that I am? And they answered, John the Baptist: but some say, Elias; and others, One of the prophets. And he saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Peter answereth and saith unto him, Thou art the Christ.

"Christ" is the Greek word; "Messiah," the Hebrew word. They both mean "Anointed One."

Mark 8:30

And he charged them that they should tell no man of him.

Matthew tells us that Jesus said, "Blessed are you, Simon bar Jonah. Flesh and blood have not revealed this unto you, but My Father which is in heaven. And upon the rock of your confession—the revelation that I am Messiah—I will build My church" (see Matthew 16:17–18).

Mark 8:31

And he began to teach them, that the Son of man must suffer many things, and be rejected of the elders, and of the chief priests, and scribes, and be killed, and after three days rise again.

Jesus didn't begin to teach His disciples about rejection, suffering, or the Cross until it was first revealed to them that He is the Christ. So, too, in my opinion, it is a mistake to try to explain the necessity of the Cross to those who don't first understand that Jesus is the Christ. Our first objective in sharing with people must be that they understand who Jesus is.

Mark 8:32

And he spake that saying openly. And Peter took him, and began to rebuke him.

The original language makes it clear that Peter continually rebuked Him. "Come on, Lord," Peter could have said, "cut out this talk about crucifixion and rejection, suffering and pain. You're the Christ. Let's talk about health and wealth, prosperity and the kingdom!" But there is no crown without the Cross. Jesus knew the Cross was part of the plan from the beginning of the world to provide for our redemption. Jesus always sees the big picture.

Mark 8:33

But when he had turned about and looked on his disciples, he rebuked Peter, saying, Get thee behind me, Satan: for thou savourest not the things that be of God, but the things that be of men.

"You've got it all wrong, Peter . . .

- Men are concerned about the material.
  God is concerned about the eternal.
- Men are concerned about prosperity.
  God is concerned about sanctity.
- Men are concerned about power.
  God is concerned about purity."

Only moments earlier, Peter had been a heavyweight prophet, having been given revelation so substantial that the entire church would be built upon it. But here, he's totally off the wall. This encourages me greatly because sometimes I share things I believe are truly the heart of the Lord—only to turn around and say something else that makes me wonder why I even said it. Do you think the Father said, "Oh no! If I had known Peter would say that, I would have given revelation to James or John!"? No, He knew Peter. But because God the Father wasn't taken aback by Peter's mistake, I understand He makes room for our humanity. Peter would still go on. God was far from finished with him.

Mark 8:34

And when he had called the people unto him with his disciples also, he said unto them, Whosoever will come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross, and follow me.

Jesus spoke not of self-denial, but of denying oneself. And between the two lies a monumental difference.

Mark 8:35

For whosoever will save his life shall lose it; but whosoever shall lose his life for my sake and the gospel's, the same shall save it.

The more you live for yourself, the more miserable you'll be. We have all found this to be true to one degree or another. If you want to feel miserable, start thinking about yourself. Wonder how you're coming across, how you're doing, how you're feeling. When we take the temperature of how we're doing, what we're feeling, what we're thinking, we lose the very essence of what it means to truly live. It's in saving others that we so often save ourselves. It's in helping others that we help ourselves. It's in giving to others that we get ourselves. It's when we die to self that we find life.

For topical study of Mark 8:34–35, see "Self-Denial or Denying Self?" below.

Mark 8:36

For what shall it profit a man, if he shall gain the whole world, and lose his own soul? Or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul? Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

We wouldn't sell our soul to Satan for a billion dollars. And yet in actuality, we often give it away whenever we allow some cheap trinket, momentary pleasure, or earthly relationship to come between the Lord and us.

Mark 8:37, 38

Whosoever therefore shall be ashamed of me and of my words in this adulterous and sinful generation; of him also shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he cometh in the glory of his Father with the holy angels.

There is no such thing as closet Christians, secret saints, disguised disciples. It's always been this way . . .

- "Where are you?" God called to Adam—not because He couldn't find Adam, but because He wanted Adam to come forward to admit his sin and his need to get right (see Genesis 3:9).
- "Who is on the Lord's side?" Moses asked the Israelites. The sons of Levi stood with Moses publicly, even though to do so was out of sync with the rest of the tribes (see Exodus 32:26).
- "Who is on the Lord's side?" asked Joshua as the people were challenged publicly to make a stand (see Joshua 24:15).
- "How long will you halt between two opinions?" asked Elijah. "If Baal be god, serve him. But if Jehovah be God, serve ye Him," calling people to make a public decision (see 1 Kings 18:21).

Every man Jesus called, He called publicly.
And He does the same today.

SELF-DENIAL OR DENYING SELF?

A Topical Study of MARK 8:34–35

Jesus would have been a political campaign manager's nightmare. After all, because the common people heard Him gladly (Mark 12:37), thousands thronged around Him; thousands listened to Him; thousands loved to be with Him.

- Yet when told all men were seeking Him, what did Jesus say?

  "Let's depart" (see Mark 1:38).
- When told the masses wanted to make Him king, what did He say?

  "Unless you eat of My body and drink of My blood, you can have no part with Me" (see John 6:53).
- When it was revealed to Peter that He was indeed Messiah, what did Jesus say?

  "The Son of man must suffer many things and be killed" (see Matthew 16:21).
- When the multitude gathered around Him, what did Jesus propose?

  "If any of you intend to come after Me, you must deny yourself, take up your Cross, and follow Me" (see Matthew 16:24).

So it is that we see an apparent contradiction, a seeming tendency in Jesus to draw people to Himself and then repel them from Himself. This is why Jesus would drive the advisors crazy. He wasn't a politician.

There's a difference between a politician and a statesman. A politician looks toward the next election. A statesman looks toward the next generation. The latter is what Jesus does. He doesn't seize the moment politically. He doesn't use Peter's revelation as a new campaign slogan. Instead, He looks down the road at you and me and says, "Let the chips fall where they may.

This is truth. The Son of man came not to set up a material, political kingdom, but to suffer and die in order to provide mankind with salvation. "Whoever will come after Me," He continued, "let him deny himself, take up his Cross and follow Me."

We have sanitized the Cross. We imprint it on our Bibles, wear it on gold chains around our necks, and stamp it on our bulletins. The Cross is a very important and beautiful emblem to us now. But it wasn't in Jesus' day.

Jesus' declaration concerning the Cross would be equivalent in our day to someone standing up in a political rally and saying, "If anyone wants to vote for me, grab your hypodermic needle with a lethal injection and follow me," or, "Put a noose around your neck and follow me," or, "Bring your gas chamber and follow me."

"Whosoever will come after Me, let him deny himself, take up his Cross, and follow Me." You may have heard numerous sermons on this well-known, powerful proclamation of Christ. But all too often they are preached from a perspective of self-denial: Do this and don't do that. Give up this and forsake that.

However, I don't believe that is what Jesus is teaching. His call is not to self-denial. It's to deny self. Our Lord never asks, expects, or desires us to do anything He hasn't done first. Therefore, when He asks us to take up our cross, it means He took up the Cross as well—which He did. But how did He take it up?

As He bore the Cross on His bruised, lacerated, beaten shoulders, the burden caused Him to fall on His face. A Roman soldier leading the procession stopped, placed the flat part of his spearhead on the shoulders of a man named Simon, and ordered him to carry the Cross.

Thus, because Jesus could not carry His own Cross, He would never tell me to carry mine. As Jesus bore His Cross, it brought Him to the place of collapse where He could no longer make it in His own strength. And such is the meaning of denying self. It means coming to the place where we say, "I can't make it, Lord. The loneliness I'm feeling, the misunderstanding hurled in my direction, the pain of separation, the tension I'm experiencing is more than I can bear."

It's my love for Jesus that drives me to my knees—but it's the cross I bear that brings me to my face.

No matter how smart, clever, or capable I think I might be, the burdens, anxieties, worries, and fears I bear show me I'm not any of those things. The temptation, however, is for us to stand up and keep going. But that's not denying ourselves. That's glorifying ourselves and our ability to keep pressing on. It's when we say, "Lord, I want to follow You—but I can't," that we are denying any ability in ourselves to bring this to pass.

When Jesus collapsed under the weight of the Cross He carried, there was someone there for Him. The Father had already orchestrated that Simon be there. We don't have a Simon. We have Someone infinitely better. We have a Savior.

"Two are better than one," Solomon writes, "because they have a good reward for their labour. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up" (see Ecclesiastes 4:9, 10).

Our "Other" is Christ Jesus.

If you want to have life—real life, abundant life, eternal life the way it was meant to be lived—deny yourself as you take up your cross and follow Jesus. And when the Cross brings you, as it did our Savior, to your face, you will see standing next to you, standing available to you, standing ready to help you Jesus Christ Himself.

9 Mark 9:1

And he said unto them, Verily I say unto you, That there be some of them that stand here, which shall not taste of death, till they have seen the kingdom of God come with power.

I believe Jesus was speaking not of the Rapture or His Second Coming, but of the event that would take place six days later when Peter, James, and John would witness His Transfiguration.

Mark 9:2, 3

And after six days Jesus taketh with him Peter, and James, and John, and leadeth them up into an high mountain apart by themselves: and he was transfigured before them. And his raiment became shining, exceeding white as snow; so as no fuller on earth can white them.

His Transfiguration being a confirmation that He had led a sinless life, I believe that had He so chosen, Jesus could have gone directly to heaven at this point—leaving us with no explanation or justification for our sin before the Father. Instead, Jesus came down from Mount Hermon, the Mount of Transfiguration, to climb Mount Calvary, the Mount of Redemption.

Mark 9:4

And there appeared unto them Elias with Moses: and they were talking with Jesus.

Elijah representing the prophets, and Moses representing the Law, the Law and the Prophets were, in effect, conversing with Jesus.

Mark 9:5, 6

And Peter answered and said to Jesus, Master, it is good for us to be here: and let us make three tabernacles; one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. For he wist not what to say; for they were sore afraid.

Not knowing quite what to say, Peter blurted out, "Let's build three monuments—one for Moses, one for Elijah and one for You"—thereby putting Jesus on the same plane as the law and the prophets. The law, however, was given to drive people to Jesus. And the prophets gave predictions about Jesus. Therefore, Jesus is far above the law and the prophets.

Mark 9:7

And there was a cloud that overshadowed them: and a voice came out of the cloud, saying, This is my beloved Son: hear him.

Fortunately for Peter, the Father interrupted him, keeping him from making further mistakes.

Mark 9:8

And suddenly, when they had looked round about, they saw no man any more, save Jesus only with themselves.

This happens to us as well. There comes a time when, after looking around, you realize there is no one save Jesus who is worthy of your attention, your affection, your adulation. In all that He is, in all that He says, in all that He's done, He's perfect. So we come together not to celebrate our righteousness or to congratulate ourselves on our morality, activism or accomplishments, but because we have discovered there is none worthy of praise save Jesus only.

Mark 9:9–11

And as they came down from the mountain, he charged them that they should tell no man what things they had seen, till the Son of man were risen from the dead. And they kept that saying with themselves, questioning one with another what the rising from the dead should mean. And they asked him, saying, Why say the scribes that Elias must first come?

The scribes quoted Malachi, who predicted Elijah would come before the Messiah set up His kingdom (Malachi 4:5).

Mark 9:12, 13

And he answered and told them, Elias verily cometh first, and restoreth all things; and how it is written of the Son of man, that he must suffer many things, and be set at nought. But I say unto you, That Elias is indeed come, and they have done unto him whatsoever they listed, as it is written of him.

Caught up in a fiery chariot because his ministry was not yet over, Elijah didn't die. He is to come before the Second Coming of Christ and proclaim throughout the nation of Israel the truth concerning Christ Jesus. And yet, Jesus says, he is already come. In Matthew 11 we see Jesus saying that John the Baptist had come in the same spirit as Elijah. Yet when asked if he was Elijah, John the Baptist said, "No" (John 1:21). John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ at His first coming, came in the same spirit of Elijah. But Elijah himself will prepare the way for Christ's Second Coming.

Mark 9:14

And when he came to his disciples, he saw a great multitude about them, and the scribes questioning with them.

In the account that follows, we first see the disputing scribes. According to this account as recorded in Matthew 17, we know the scribes were arguing and debating with the disciples concerning the reality of demons. So here are the religious scholars debating theology even as a boy was suffering tragically. How true this is of our society today. People debate, argue, and question while all around us people are dying.

Mark 9:15–17

And straightway all the people, when they beheld him, were greatly amazed, and running to him saluted him. And he asked the scribes, What question ye with them? And one of the multitude answered and said, Master, I have brought unto thee my son, which hath a dumb spirit.

Second, we see the despairing father. Luke gives further insight when he tells us this son was the only son of this father (Luke 9:38). Catch the contrast: Up on the mountain, the heavenly Father said, "This is My beloved Son." Here in the valley, a heartbroken father says, "Please help my bedeviled son."

Mark 9:18

And wheresoever he taketh him, he teareth him: and he foameth, and gnasheth with his teeth, and pineth away: and I spake to thy disciples that they should cast him out; and they could not.

Third, we see the demonized son. When Jesus called Satan a murderer and a liar (John 8:44), He was not only identifying Satan's personality, but His job description as well. Murder and lying are all he does.

Mark 9:19

He answereth him, and saith, O faithless generation, how long shall I be with you? how long shall I suffer you? bring him unto me.

Fourth, we see our dynamic Lord. First, He issues a compassionate invitation when He says, "Bring the child to Me." The father had come seeking help from the disciples, but the disciples were unable to help. So, too, perhaps you have brought a child, a friend, a co-worker to church or Sunday School, but they were not helped. That's okay, for if you bring anyone to where the disciples of Jesus are, guess who will show up sooner or later. Jesus Himself. Through a testimony shared, a study given, a story told, a song sung—something will happen. Jesus will come.

"Bring your child to Me," Jesus said. How? Morning by morning in intercession, teaching him what you're learning from the Word as you do errands together, making sure he's growing through fellowship with other believers. The cause of destruction is Satan. The cure is Jesus. The question is: Will you bring your friends and family to Him?

Mark 9:20–22

And they brought him unto him: and when he saw him, straightway the spirit tare him; and he fell on the ground, and wallowed foaming. And he asked his father, How long is it ago since this came unto him? And he said, Of a child. And ofttimes it hath cast him into the fire, and into the waters, to destroy him: but if thou canst do any thing, have compassion on us, and help us.

Notice Jesus' command of the situation. As this one is frothing at the mouth, Jesus calmly asks, "How long ago was it when this began?" Jesus was not sweating, shaking, or working Himself into a Pentecostal fervor. Rather, He was simply carrying on a very normal conversation.

Mark 9:23–27

Jesus said unto him, If thou canst believe, all things are possible to him that believeth. And straightway the father of the child cried out, and said with tears, Lord, I believe; help thou mine unbelief. When Jesus saw that the people came running together, he rebuked the foul spirit, saying unto him, Thou dumb and deaf spirit, I charge thee, come out of him, and enter no more into him. And the spirit cried, and rent him sore, and came out of him: and he was as one dead; insomuch that many said, He is dead. But Jesus took him by the hand, and lifted him up; and he arose.

Notice Jesus' convicting exhortation. "You're asking Me if I can do anything," He says. "But let Me ask you, Can you do this one thing? Can you believe?" The Bible says without faith it is impossible to please God (Hebrews 11:6). Therefore, concerning the son who's not saved, the daughter you're wondering about, the parents you know are far from God, this is what Jesus asks you: "Can you believe? Will you believe?" Faith the size of the mustard seed can move mountains that seem insurmountable. But even though a mustard seed is small, it is also alive. Thus, the faith that moves mountains is not a remnant of leftover faith. It is a growing faith. The question is, Are you willing to plant it in the soil of hope, water it with the Word, and see it take root to move the mountain?

Mark 9:28, 29

And when he was come into the house, his disciples asked him privately, Why could not we cast him out? And he said unto them, This kind can come forth by nothing, but by prayer and fasting.

Finally, we see the disturbed disciples. "This kind of problem will not be solved by sharing pearls of wisdom, trying to be a better dad, or following some family program," Jesus told them. "This kind of spiritual warfare is won only through fasting and prayer."

How did we have time to fast and pray? the disciples must have wondered. After all, they certainly didn't know this problem would be laid at their feet that day. But that's the point. We never know when the moment for miraculous ministry will come our way or be needed in our families. Therefore, we must maintain a life of prayer and fasting because when the demonized boy is before you, it's too late to start.

Why were the disciples not maintaining a habit of prayer and fasting? I wonder if it wasn't due in part to the fact that they might have been feeling sorry for themselves. Thanks a lot, Lord, they could have thought. You take Peter, James, and John—your favorites—up on the mountain. They see You shine. They hear the voice from heaven. They get to see Elijah and Moses. Us? We're down here at the bottom, forsaken and forgotten. If so, how like us they would have been.

So often we think, I never get called to sing or to teach Bible studies. So why should I fast or pray? And because we feel we're not important or useful, we give up. But once a year, once every five years, once in a lifetime an opportunity comes our way that is essential, important—an opportunity to move in the miraculous, to see salvation. Something exceedingly important could take place, but we're impotent and powerless because we haven't been praying, fasting, reading the Word, or seeking the Lord.

As a father, I have no other recourse than to maintain a life of prayer and fasting because I never know when the Enemy will strike one of my kids. He has; he does; he will. And as a believer, I have no other recourse than to maintain a close walk with God because I never know the next conversation that will open up before me at the grocery store or in the park with a neighbor that will impact them for eternity.

"But I've never been used," you say. Ah, but you might have the greatest opportunity for earth-shaking, life-changing ministry in the next moment or the next day. Therefore be ready.

Mark 9:30

And they departed thence, and passed through Galilee; and he would not that any man should know it.

On His way to Jerusalem, His face set like a flint (Isaiah 50:7), Jesus didn't want to be slowed down nor derailed.

Mark 9:31–33

For he taught his disciples, and said unto them, The Son of man is delivered into the hands of men, and they shall kill him; and after that he is killed, he shall rise the third day. But they understood not that saying, and were afraid to ask him. And he came to Capernaum: and being in the house he asked them, What was it that ye disputed among yourselves by the way?

As Jesus was headed to Jerusalem to die, His disciples were arguing along the way.

Mark 9:34

But they held their peace: for by the way they had disputed among themselves, who should be the greatest.

No doubt the disciples were embarrassed to admit the subject of their discussion. But if I were Jesus, I would have rebuked them radically. Instead, rather than coming down on them for wanting to be the greatest, He gives them five foundational principles of true greatness . . .

Mark 9:35–37

And he sat down, and called the twelve, and saith unto them, If any man desire to be first, the same shall be last of all, and servant of all. And he took a child, and set him in the midst of them: and when he had taken him in his arms, he said unto them, Whosoever shall receive one of such children in my name, receiveth me: and whosoever shall receive me, receiveth not me, but him that sent me.

The first principle of greatness Jesus shares with His disciples is to treat all men equally. And to illustrate this, Jesus took a child in his arms. If you want to get ahead in life in the world's eyes, you don't take time to hang out with children. They can't do anything for your career. All they do is take from you and depend on you. I believe this refers to anyone who's little, anyone who's "less"—be it chronologically or economically, socially or mentally. The truly great person embraces them all in the name of Jesus.

Mark 9:38–41

And John answered him, saying, Master, we saw one casting out devils in thy name, and he followeth not us: and we forbad him, because he followeth not us. But Jesus said, Forbid him not: for there is no man which shall do a miracle in my name, that can lightly speak evil of me. For he that is not against us is on our part. For whosoever shall give you a cup of water to drink in my name, because ye belong to Christ, verily I say unto you, he shall not lose his reward.

Second, to be truly great, we are not only to treat everyone equally but also to be as magnanimous as we possibly can be—even toward those who are not traveling with us denominationally or theologically.

There are very few things we should take seriously in this life. And yet sometimes we want to fight and take issue over anything and everything. "Those guys are casting out demons and they're not with us," John said.

"Relax," Jesus said. "Anyone who even gives a cup of cold water in My name will be blessed."

Mark 9:42

And whosoever shall offend one of these little ones that believe in me, it is better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he were cast into the sea.

Third, the truly great person handles others with sensitivity. Paul says the same thing when he says, "Don't eat meat offered to idols if it will cause those weaker in their faith to stumble" (1 Corinthians 8:13). I have observed that truly great people are always aware of those weaker in faith around them and therefore won't flaunt their liberty if it will trip up someone else in his walk with Jesus.

Mark 9:43–48

And if thy hand offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter into life maimed, than having two hands to go into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thy foot offend thee, cut it off: it is better for thee to enter halt into life, than having two feet to be cast into hell, into the fire that never shall be quenched: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched. And if thine eye offend thee, pluck it out: it is better for thee to enter into the kingdom of God with one eye, than having two eyes to be cast into hell fire: Where their worm dieth not, and the fire is not quenched.

Fourth, the truly great person deals with himself radically—for although he is to be magnanimous and sensitive toward others, he is to be radical and ruthless concerning the sin in his own life. The world tells us to stand up for our rights and that we deserve a break—in other words, to be harsh with others, but to go easy on ourselves. The key to greatness, however, is to reverse the order.

Jesus says, "Deal radically with whatever it is in your life that's hindering you." And you and I know exactly what those things are. It doesn't take morbid introspection or hours of analysis to figure them out. No, you and I know at this moment what thing or things there might be in our lives that cause offense in us. And if we want to be great, we'll cut them out.

Mark 9:49, 50

For every one shall be salted with fire, and every sacrifice shall be salted with salt. Salt is good: but if the salt have lost his saltness, wherewith will ye season it? Have salt in yourselves, and have peace one with another.

The fifth and final secret to greatness is to live with all men peaceably. In the Middle East during Bible times—and even to a certain degree today—when a peace treaty is made, it's salted. That is, bread was salted, broken, and shared between the two parties. Theirs being a hot, desert climate, salt was invaluable in stemming the effects of dehydration.

Leviticus 2 dictates that the sacrifices offered to the Lord were to be salted as opposed to sweetened with honey. Why was honey not used? Isn't our fellowship with the Lord to be sweet? Honey was forbidden because in high temperatures it breaks down. So, too, my attempt to be "sweet" doesn't hold up in heat. The only way to have peace is to have Jesus Christ, the hope of glory within me.

Treat all men equally. Be as magnanimous as you possibly can be. Handle others with sensitivity. Deal with yourself radically. Live with all men peaceably. These are not prerequisites for us to be saved. If they were, we'd never make it. No, through the Spirit living within us, these are not requirements for salvation—but for greatness.

10 As a Master Teacher, our Lord Jesus employed many techniques by which He communicated truth. Sometimes He spoke in parables and proverbs. Sometimes He used miracles. Other times, He gave lengthy exhortation and instruction. In the chapter before us, we see Jesus employing a method of teaching called the paradox, a statement that turns conventional thinking on its head.

> Perhaps the best example of a paradox is the hypothetical story of the father and son who were in a tragic car accident in which the father was killed. The son, critically injured, was rushed to the hospital, where it was determined that surgery would be required. But upon seeing the patient, the surgeon said, "I can't operate on this boy. He's my son." How could this be if the boy's father was killed in the accident? The answer is that the surgeon was the boy's mother.

We will see in the chapter before us five such paradoxes—statements that appear to be impossible initially, but which change our thinking eventually.

> Mark 10:1
> And he arose from thence, and cometh into the coasts of Judaea by the farther side of Jordan: and the people resort unto him again; and, as he was wont, he taught them again.

Jesus never tired of teaching. When people came to Him or gathered around Him, He taught them. I hope we never tire of studying Scripture. It's the bread that sustains us, the fuel for our faith.

Mark 10:2

And the Pharisees came to him, and asked him, Is it lawful for a man to put away his wife? tempting him.

These Pharisees came trying to trip up Jesus with the most theologically controversial question of the day, an issue that remains controversial to this day: the issue of divorce.

Mark 10:3, 4

And he answered and said unto them, What did Moses command you? And they said, Moses suffered to write a bill of divorcement, and to put her away.

In Jesus' day, divorce was so common that in order to keep the rabbinical courts from being clogged with divorce proceedings, if a man simply said to his wife, "I divorce you," three times, she would be given a bill of divorcement.

Mark 10:5

And Jesus answered and said unto them, For the hardness of your heart he wrote you this precept.

The Greek word translated "hardness" is skleros—from which we get "sclerosis," a word most often used in conjunction with a hardening of the arteries. Whenever a divorce occurs, the reason is never what people say it is. The reason is always hardness of heart.

Mark 10:6

But from the beginning of the creation God made them male and female.

"Let's go back to the beginning," Jesus says.

Mark 10:7–9

For this cause shall a man leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife; And they twain shall be one flesh: so then they are no more twain, but one flesh. What therefore God hath joined together, let not man put asunder.

The first paradox is that two become one. In the marriage ceremony, when a man and woman stand before the Father, when prayer is offered for their relationship and blessing pronounced upon their marriage, the two of them become one in the eyes of the Father.

Mark 10:10–12 (a)

And in the house his disciples asked him again of the same matter. And he saith unto them, Whosoever shall put away his wife, and marry another, committeth adultery against her. And if a woman shall put away her husband . . .

This would have been a radical statement in the ears of the disciples. You see, nowhere in Levitical law or rabbinical thought could a woman divorce her husband. Thus, Jesus is placing woman on a level she had never before known—not only in the history of Israel, but in the history of the Roman and Grecian empires as well. Paul would go on to say that in Christ there is neither male nor female (Galatians 3:28). We have different functions and responsibilities, to be sure—but there is a wonderful equality in Christ.

Mark 10:12 (b)

. . . and be married to another, she committeth adultery.

This doesn't say the person who remarries after divorce will live in adultery, but that theirs is an act of adultery, the missing of God's best. After a failed marriage, there can be a second opportunity—but it must be approached with great sobriety. No matter how innocent they think they might be, both parties must accept responsibility for their part in the failure. For where sin abounds, grace abounds more.

Mark 10:13

And they brought young children to him, that he should touch them: and his disciples rebuked those that brought them.

The word "they," being masculine in Greek, it was the fathers who brought their children to Jesus.

Mark 10:14–16

But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased, and said unto them, Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily I say unto you, Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, put his hands upon them, and blessed them.

The second paradox is that adults must become as children to enter the kingdom. This doesn't mean we are to be childish. It means we must be childlike. One of the most obvious characteristics of children is their trust. My kids never ask me if there will be food in the refrigerator next week. They have absolute confidence that when it's dinnertime, they'll be able to eat. Secondly, although children can't explain a lot, they sure enjoy a lot. As adults, on the other hand, we want to explain everything, but enjoy very little, if anything. The way of the kingdom is not explaining. The way of the kingdom is enjoying—just trusting that our Father will see us through, that He'll provide for us and never give up on us.

Mark 10:17

And when he was gone forth into the way, there came one running, and kneeled to him, and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?

This is the only instance in the Bible where a man comes and kneels before Jesus and leaves worse off than when he came. Matthew 19 tells us this man was young. Luke 18 tells us he was a ruler. Mark tells us he was rich. But he comes running to Jesus because he's aware there's something wrong inside. He's everything our society values. He's rich, he's young, he's a ruler—but he's empty.

Mark 10:18

And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God.

"If you're calling Me good," Jesus says, "is it because you understand that I must indeed be God?"

Mark 10:19–21 (a)

Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy father and mother. And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth. Then Jesus beholding him loved him . . .

This man was not only rich, young, and a ruler—but he was also religious. His morals were impeccable. He was a man of integrity. And when he said, "I've done these things from my youth," Jesus didn't disagree.

Mark 10:21 (b)

. . . and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, sell whatsoever thou hast, and give to the poor, and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, take up the cross, and follow me.

The third paradox is that the poor will be rich. "You may have kept certain commandments," Jesus said to the rich young ruler, "but the problem is that you are controlled and dominated by money. Be free. Get rid of it." I don't believe the point was for this man to divest himself of all of his money, but rather to recognize his wrong priority.

Throughout Scripture, there are four hundred ninety verses that deal directly with faith, five hundred or more that deal with prayer, and two thousand that deal with money. Two hundred eighty-eight verses in the Gospels alone—one in every ten—concern money. The Bible contains more verses dealing with our use and handling of money than it does concerning prayer and faith combined.

Mark 10:22–24

And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved: for he had great possessions. And Jesus looked round about, and saith unto his disciples, How hardly shall they that have riches enter into the kingdom of God! And the disciples were astonished at his words.

Because at this time it was believed that a man who walked with God would be blessed by God financially, it is no wonder the disciples were astonished.

Mark 10:24–27

But Jesus answereth again, and saith unto them, Children, how hard is it for them that trust in riches to enter into the kingdom of God! It is easier for a camel to go through the eye of a needle, than for a rich man to enter into the kingdom of God. And they were astonished out of measure, saying among themselves, Who then can be saved? And Jesus looking upon them saith, With men it is impossible, but not with God: for with God all things are possible.

It's impossible for a rich man to be saved. It's impossible for a poor man to be saved. It takes a miracle for any man to be saved.

Mark 10:28–30

Then Peter began to say unto him, Lo, we have left all, and have followed thee. And Jesus answered and said, Verily I say unto you, There is no man that hath left house, or brethren, or sisters, or father, or mother, or wife, or children, or lands, for my sake, and the gospel's, but he shall receive an hundredfold now in this time, houses, and brethren, and sisters, and mothers, and children, and lands, with persecutions; and in the world to come eternal life.

If my house burned down tonight, I know there are believers who would take my family and me in. If I walked out into the church parking lot and discovered my car wouldn't start, I know someone would take me home. Thus, I have hundreds of houses and cars and family members. So do you. The more we give, the more we enjoy the benefits of the entire kingdom—the hospitality, love, support, networking, strength, and community of our brothers and sisters in Christ. Yes, there is sometimes persecution. But the extent to which we give is the extent to which our needs will be met in this life, and to which heaven will be enjoyed.

Mark 10:31
But many that are first shall be last; and the last first.

The fourth paradox is that the last shall be first. This statement runs cross current to that which our culture propagates. Our society is becoming increasingly competitive in its orientation. And yet those who win society's competition seem to be increasingly disillusioned with the prize. This explains why top athletes, for example, often find themselves being sucked into the drug scene. They got the prize—but the prize was too small. Jesus comes on the scene and calls us away from competition. How does this work out practically? In your mind's eye, travel back two thousand years ago to a place called Bethesda . . .

There you see hundreds of people with all sorts of physical ailments positioned around a pool of water. Why are they there? The understanding of the day was that the first one in the water after an angel supposedly stirred it would be healed. Consequently, these blind, lame, hurting people jockeyed for position in order that they might be first in the pool. But what does Jesus do when He arrives at Bethesda? He finds a lame man seemingly at the back of the pack and says, "Do you want to be made whole?"

"I have no man to help me into the water," the man answers. "I don't have a network. I don't have the skills. My college education is outdated. I don't have connections. How can I compete in this culture? I have no one to help me."

This man had no stock options. He wasn't a member of the health club, nor on the city softball team. He wasn't competitive. Yet it was he and he alone who captured Jesus' attention that day.

"Arise," Jesus said. "Take up your bed. I'm freeing you from this pool of competition." And the man was healed (John 5:9).

I believe Jesus says the same thing to us today. Maybe we've been jockeying, struggling, planning, conniving, attempting to get the edge, to make it happen, to get ahead—be it financially or relationally, in ministry or in spirituality. But Jesus would remind us that the paradox of the kingdom is that the first shall be last and the last first.

Mark 10:32–40

And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem; and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid. And he took again the twelve, and began to tell them what things should happen unto him, saying, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be delivered unto the chief priests, and unto the scribes; and they shall condemn him to death, and shall deliver him to the Gentiles: And they shall mock him, and shall scourge him, and shall spit upon him, and shall kill him: and the third day he shall rise again. And James and John, the sons of Zebedee, come unto him, saying, Master, we would that thou shouldest do for us whatsoever we shall desire. And he said unto them, What would ye that I should do for you? They said unto him, Grant unto us that we may sit, one on thy right hand, and the other on thy left hand, in thy glory. But Jesus said unto them, Ye know not what ye ask: can ye drink of the cup that I drink of? and be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with? And they said unto him, We can. And Jesus said unto them, Ye shall indeed drink of the cup that I drink of; and with the baptism that I am baptized withal shall ye be baptized: But to sit on my right hand and on my left hand is not mine to give; but it shall be given to them for whom it is prepared.

James was martyred. John was placed in a cauldron of boiling oil and then exiled on the island of Patmos. They did indeed drink of Jesus' cup of suffering and were baptized into His baptism.

Mark 10:41–43

And when the ten heard it, they began to be much displeased with James and John. But Jesus called them to him, and saith unto them, Ye know that they which are accounted to rule over the Gentiles exercise lordship over them; and their great ones exercise authority upon them. But so shall it not be among you: but whosoever will be great among you, shall be your minister:

"Unlike Gentile rulers who dominate, manipulate, and control, the great among you shall be your minister," or, literally, "your waiter," said Jesus.

Mark 10:44–45

And whosoever of you will be the chiefest, shall be servant of all. For even the Son of man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give his life a ransom for many.

The fifth paradox is that the servant shall rule. The easiest way to know if you're a servant is by how you react when people treat you like one. All too often, I'm afraid, my heart is, "Yes, Lord, I want to be a servant as long as people realize I'm serving. I want to be a slave as long as I become Slave of the Year." If you're gladly slaving in the nursery, in the kitchen, or in the Sunday-school class without being noticed, appreciated, or thanked—yours is the heart of a true servant.

Does the Lord want us to be slaves because He likes to see us grovel? No, it's because He's preparing us for the kingdom—for the next billion years—and He knows that the best exercise for strengthening your heart is stooping down to pick up someone else. Others might not acknowledge you.

You might not be rewarded presently. But when you move into the kingdom, and the Lord says, "Well done, good and faithful servant. Enter into the joy of the Father," you'll do so with a large heart and a huge capacity to enjoy eternity.

When we get to heaven, gang, not one of us will regret the times we weren't applauded by people for serving the Lord. Instead, we'll say, "Thank You, Father, for sparing me from getting my reward on earth where it passes away so quickly." If you want to rule, become a slave. It's a paradox indeed. But it's true.

Mark 10:46 (a)
And they came to Jericho . . .

Historians tell us that at this time Jericho was the most trafficked intersection in the world due to the fact that all commerce, travel, and movement of troops between Europe to the north and Africa to the south passed through Jericho.

Mark 10:46 (b)
. . . and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimaeus, the son of Timaeus, sat by the highway side begging.

It has been said that there are three basic categories of people: those who make things happen, those who watch things happen, and those who wonder what happened. Bartimaeus, I believe, would fit into the third category. No doubt he would hear the creaking of the wagon wheels being pulled by snorting oxen. He would hear the shuffle of sandals on rocky roads, the sounds of camels, the conversations of people—everyone moving, while he sat still. Maybe you can identify. Maybe you feel like all around you things are happening, people are moving, times are changing. But you? You're just sitting, wondering, begging.

Bartimaeus sat by the side of the road because he was blind. Perhaps he was blind due to vitamin deficiencies common in that day. But it is more likely that his blindness was the result of heredity. You see, "Bartimaeus" literally means "son of the unclean one." Thus, it is very possible that Bartimaeus was so named because his mother or father passed on a disease that produced blindness in their son.

Mark 10:47, 48

And when he heard that it was Jesus of Nazareth, he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou Son of David, have mercy on me. And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou Son of David, have mercy on me.

Bartimaeus heard that Jesus had come to Jericho. The name "Jesus" is the Greek transliteration of the Jewish name "Joshua," so it was actually "Joshua" who came to Jericho that day.

Thousands of years previously, another Joshua had come into the city of Jericho—not for salvation, but for destruction—for it was his job to bring the people of God into the Promised Land. And here, standing before Bartimaeus, was "Joshua," whose job it was to bring the people of God into the Land of Promise not physically, but eternally—to bring mankind to heaven.

As the feet of the priests and Levites touched the water, the Jordan River parted, and Joshua entered into the Promised Land to begin his ministry. Jesus also began His ministry in the Jordan River when He was baptized at the age of thirty. The water didn't part. Instead, the heavens opened, a dove descended, and the Father declared, "This is My beloved Son in whom I am well pleased."

Joshua's ministry was preceded by Moses, who prepared the people in the wilderness as he gave them the law. Jesus' ministry was preceded by a prophet of the wilderness named John the Baptist who preached repentance (Mark 1:15).

After circling the city, Joshua told the people to shout. And the walls came down. When Jesus came into the city, Bartimaeus was told not to shout, but to keep quiet. But he would soon stand up.

Mark 10:49 (a)

And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called.

Joshua's greatest victory took place on the day he commanded the sun to stand still (Joshua 10:12). So, too, Bartimaeus' life would miraculously change the day the Son stood still.

You who are sitting by the highway of life, saying, "I'm blind. I don't get it. I'm not seeing properly. I'm not going anywhere. Does Jesus care about me, or is He just passing by quickly?" take hope. Bartimaeus cried out—and the Son stood still. Why? I suggest three reasons . . .

Bartimaeus cried out in humility. All too often, we say, "Poor me. Life isn't fair. Why do bad things always happen to me?" Humility, on the other hand says, "I'm a sinner. I deserve judgment. But, Lord, I thank You for Your mercy." And such is the voice the Lord hears most clearly.

Bartimaeus cried out tenaciously. "Keep quiet!" the crowd said to Bartimaeus. It's amazing to me how often perhaps well-meaning people try to get us to quiet down. "Don't keep bothering the Lord," they say. "Just accept your blindness. Accept your confusion. Accept the fact that you don't know what's happening." Bartimaeus, however, kept crying—with humility, yes—but also with tenacity.

Mark 10:49 (b), 50

And they call the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee. And he, casting away his garment, rose, and came to Jesus.

Bartimaeus cried out expectantly, for when Jesus called him, he left his garment behind. The garment beggars wore was specially striped in order that people would know the wearer was legitimately begging, that he had no other means of financial support. Therefore, in throwing his garment down, Bartimaeus was saying, "I know Jesus will heal me." Truly, without faith it is impossible to please God (Hebrews 11:6)—for it is faith that sees the invisible, believes the impossible, and receives the incredible.

Mark 10:51, 52

And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

Bartimaeus was "changed in the twinkling of an eye"—just as we all will be one day. It is no wonder he followed the One who had opened His eyes and given him life.

May today be the day you do what Bartimaeus did: May today be the day you receive the direction, instruction, revelation you need. May you cry out until Jesus stops in front of you. May you cry out until the Son stands still.

And may you join Bartimaeus in following Him anew.

11 Having seen Jesus as the Servant living His life in service in chapters 1—10, chapter 11 marks the beginning of the second section of Mark's Gospel, wherein we see the Servant giving His life in sacrifice. In so doing, Jesus will make a presentation of Himself as King in verses 1–11, followed by provocation as He drives the moneychangers from the temple in verses 15–18, and finally by examination as the political and religious leaders question Him in verses 27 to 12:37.

Mark 11:1 (a)

And when they came nigh to Jerusalem . . .

The population of the city of Jerusalem would have been three times its normal number due to the influx of people who had come to celebrate Passover. In addition, Josephus tells us there were ten times the normal amount of Roman soldiers in the city, guarding against any potential uprising from the zealots—the group of radicals determined to overthrow Roman rule in Israel. Consequently, it was with soldiers watching, people bustling, and the city almost bursting at the seams that Jesus made His way toward Jerusalem.

Mark 11:1 (b)

. . . unto Bethphage and Bethany . . .

"Bethphage" means "House of Figs." "Bethany" means "House of Dates." Bethany is located two and a half miles outside of Jerusalem; Jesus passed through these two small towns on His way there.

Mark 11:1 (c)
. . . at the mount of Olives . . .

Two thousand six hundred feet in elevation, the Mount of Olives offered a commanding view of the city of Jerusalem below.

Mark 11:1 (d)–3 (a)
. . . he sendeth forth two of his disciples, and saith unto them, Go your way into the village over against you: and as soon as ye be entered into it, ye shall find a colt tied, whereon never man sat; loose him, and bring him. And if any man say unto you, Why do ye this? say ye that the Lord hath need of him . . .

The Lord hath need? Why would the Creator of all things have need of anything? The reason He borrowed a manger, a boat, a donkey, an upper room, and a tomb is because He who was rich for our sakes became poor (2 Corinthians 8:9). Why? He chose to place Himself in a position where He would need to partner with us in order to see His will worked out through us.

This is incredible to me. God didn't have to go that route. But He's chosen to place Himself in a position where He will not do what He desires to do in our families, communities, workplaces, marriages, or schools without our partnering with Him. Why? He's getting us ready for the next billion years when we will be ruling and reigning with Him.

"Why should I bother to pray or to study the Word, to worship or to fellowship with other believers?" you might ask. "It doesn't really matter." Oh, but it does. Somehow in God's economy, His blessing and moving in this world are dependent upon our participation. I wonder if one of the mind-blowing moments in heaven might not be when we see what could have happened in the lives of our relatives, friends, and communities had we taken seriously the possibility of partnering with God instead of acting as if the Lord didn't need us.

Mark 11:3 (b)

. . . and straightway he will send him hither.

As the margin of your Bible may render it, this phrase is more properly translated, "He will send him back." That's always the way of the Lord. Anything we give Him—be it our energy or money, our time or abilities—He returns it to us with interest.

Mark 11:4–7

And they went their way, and found the colt tied by the door without in a place where two ways met; and they loose him. And certain of them that stood there said unto them, What do ye, loosing the colt? And they said unto them even as Jesus had commanded: and they let them go. And they brought the colt to Jesus, and cast their garments on him; and he sat upon him.

When a Roman general was victorious over an army of five thousand or more, he made a triumphal entry upon his return in which he rode a golden chariot pulled by white stallions. Behind him would be the conquered general or king of the nation, followed by the conquered soldiers in chains. At the end of the procession would be the Roman soldiers marching in pomp and pageantry.

Their numbers swollen in order to keep watch on the crowded city, the Roman soldiers in Jerusalem must have chuckled to see Jesus enter the city riding on a donkey, followed by twelve ragtag disciples, the majority of whom smelled like fish. And yet even by Rome's own standards, He warranted a triumphal entry indeed, for the number of those who would believe in Him after His resurrection would be five thousand (Acts 4:4)—con-quered not by force or shame, but by love.

Mark 11:8, 9

And many spread their garments in the way: and others cut down branches off the trees, and strawed them in the way. And they that went before, and they that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna; Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord.
